IN THE JUDICIAL COMMISSION OF INQUIRY INTO ALLEGATIONS OF STATE CAPTURE, CORRUPTION AND FRAUD IN THE PUBLIC SECTOR INCLUDING ORGANS OF STATE

SWORN STATEMENT BY NKOSINATHI
PHIWAYINKOSI THAMSANQA NHLEKO

I, the undersigned,

NKOSINATHI PHIWAYINKOSI THAMSANQA NHLEKO

do hereby make oath and state that:

1. I am an adult male person and I am the former Minister of Police and I was later also appointed Minister of Public Works, the position I occupied until the cabinet reshuffle by the current President of the Republic in 2018.
2. I hold a Master of Science Degree in Leadership and Change Management with Leads Metropolitan University, United Kingdom, as well as a National Diploma in Labour Law rated at an Honours Degree level with the Global Institute of Management Technologies. I am a member of the African National Congress in good standing. I am currently unemployed. My term as a member of Parliament ended with the fifth parliament during the national elections on 8 May 2019.

APPLICATION IN TERMS OF RULE 3.3.6 READ WITH RULE 3.4 OF THE COMMISSION'S RULES

3. This statement is submitted to the Commission of Inquiry in terms of Rule 3.3.6 of the Commission's rules, published in Government Gazette No. 41772 of 13 July 2018 ("the Rules").
4. The Commission communicated to me by notice in terms of Rule 3.3, dated 8 April 2019 that Mr Robert McBride ("McBride"), the former Executive Director of Independent Police Investigative Directorate ("IPID") has implicated me in the affidavit that he submitted to the Commission. The portions of the paragraphs where it is alleged McBride implicates me in wrongdoing were attached to the notice, and the paragraphs implicated were also identified in the notice. Subsequently McBride testified before the Commission, although I was not notified, and I only saw him when he was already testifying.
5. Rule 3.3.6 allows a person implicated to:
 - 5.1 give evidence;
 - 5.2 call any witness(es) to give evidence on his/her behalf;
 - 5.3 cross examine the witness (the person who has implicated him/her).
6. I, therefore, in terms of Rule 3.4, submit an application in terms of Rule 3.3.6 to:
 - 6.1 cross examine Mr Robert McBride (McBride);
 - 6.2 give evidence myself;
 - 6.3 call witnesses where appropriate on my behalf, to corroborate my version.

CP2

7. Rule 3.4 requires the application to be made within 14 calendar days from the date of the notice in terms of Rule 3.3. This application is out of time and an application for condonation will be made on grounds of interest of justice, prejudice and good cause having been shown.
8. The statement serves two purposes. First, to support my application to cross examine McBride as contemplated by Rule 3.3.6 .3 and secondly, to ask leave of the Commission to give evidence myself, as contemplated by Rule 3.3.6.1. Thus, the statement is a statement contemplated in Rule 3.4 responding to McBride's statement insofar as it implicates me.
9. In responding to some allegations, I rely on matters that do not fall within my personal knowledge, and the probative value of such evidence is dependent upon the person from whom they emanate, hence the request to call such persons, failing which the Commission would exercise its powers to invite such persons to testify. In certain instances, although I may not have personal knowledge of what I say, such evidence is corroborated by objective evidence from the documents which are not disputed and could not be disputed thus making it unnecessary to call anybody to corroborate.
10. For instance, the Werksmans report exists as a matter of fact and law and is not been challenged or set aside by a court. The interviews conducted by Mr. Sandile July (Mr July), of Werksmans and his team of investigators were mechanically recorded and subsequently transcribed. McBride does not dispute the transcripts of the interviews as accurately recording what was said by him and other interviewees. The Werksmans report and the transcript of the interviews conducted by Werksmans will be submitted to the Commission in separate files and be incorporated as forming part of the record of my evidence as contained in the statement. The files will accordingly be paginated and indexed.

by

11. The disciplinary proceedings record of Mr. Mathews Sesoko (Sesoko) is in the custody of IPID. Similarly, the guilty plea of Mr. Innocent Khuba (Khuba), reduced to writing and signed by Khuba himself, acknowledges that himself, Sesoko and McBride unlawfully altered the final report. When Khuba pleaded guilty, he was properly represented by an attorney and did so freely and voluntarily.
12. However, it is necessary for the Commission to invite Khuba to explain why he deposed to an affidavit uninvited two days after he had pleaded guilty trying to distance himself from his guilty plea. Khuba's guilty plea will also form part of the file once it is procured. Advocate Anthony Mosing, of the National Prosecuting Authority testified at the disciplinary inquiry of Sesoko. That record is with IPID.
13. Importantly, advocate Mosing authored a memorandum in which he confirmed that the investigation was completed and submitted the final report signed by Khuba dated 22 January 2017 for a decision to prosecute. Khuba also confirmed that the report dated 22 January 2017 signed by him was the final report. As such, McBride say so evidence that the 22 January 2017 report was a provisional report is neither corroborated by documentary evidence nor Khuba himself. That evidence is patently false.
14. In this statement I also deal with condonation at the end.

15. I have therefore structured the statement as follows. In section A, I first deal with the chronology of facts as part of the evidence I intend to give if leave to do so is granted. Secondly I deal in section B with the allegations in McBride statement paragraph by paragraph. Thirdly I deal with condonation for the late submission of this statement.

SECTION A

BACKGROUND

16. I have 33 years of experience in managing people and organisations. These years exclude a period of social activism in student and youth politics; which is an account of and on its own. I essentially started off as a young student activist, interested in turning around our learning and teaching conditions that obtained at the time under an apartheid colonial system.
17. I joined the African National Congress in 1983 which also coincided with the formation of the United Democratic Front. Two years later, in June 1985, I was recruited into Umkhonto WeSizwe, the People's Army. Functioning at these levels led to a number of activities and other developments dictated to by operational needs and requirements obtaining at the time. It is not my intention to delve into the detail thereof in this submission.
18. In 1987, I joined the Transport and General Workers Union as a Branch Organiser in Northern Natal; an affiliate of the Congress of South African Trade Unions. In March of 1987, I began to serve as a Branch Secretary of the same union. Briefly; my tasks were coordination and management of trade union operations within the geographical scope of the branch. These activities entailed:

- 18.1 Supervision of branch staff members; Organisers and Administrators
- 18.2 Staff development and maintenance of discipline.
- 18.3 Principal liaison officer on behalf of the union.
- 18.4 Administrative coordination in the branch.
- 18.5 Ensuring proper books of account and reporting.

19. In December 1989, I was elected General Secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union; a responsibility which entailed the following: -

- 19.1 Enforcing compliance with all the Union's policies and its Constitution.
- 19.2 National administrative responsibility and accounting.
- 19.3 Financial management and budget holding.
- 19.4 Coordinating policy development, monitoring and review.
- 19.5 Strategic planning of the union, including sector and industrial analysis.
- 19.6 Ensuring synergy, effectiveness and efficiency.
- 19.7 Performance management of both the organisation and staff.
- 19.8 Establishing and maintenance of effective relationships throughout the organisation.
- 19.9 Maintaining external relations and being chief spokesperson to external stakeholders, including representing the union at Executive Committee meetings of COSATU.

20. In August 1993, I stepped down as General Secretary, as I wanted to go back to KZN. It is during this period that, in September 1993, I got elected at a Special

CP2.

COSATU Congress for ANC candidature for parliament. I was among the 20 COSATU delegates so identified by the said congress.

21. During the period of September 1993 and April 1994, I was assigned to be part of setting up a COSATU election machinery in support of the advent of democracy and the ANC taking over. Activities included: -
- 21.1 Ongoing critical analysis of the political and security situation in KZN.
 - 21.2 Participated in efforts to negotiate peace.
 - 21.3 Coordinating broader political activities and programmes, including mass activities such as the Worker's Forum.
 - 21.4 Integrating a COSATU election machinery into the ANC's at a provincial level.
22. After the April 1994 elections, I was sworn in as a Member of Parliament. Soon after this, portfolios of government were constituted. I was appointed to chair the ANC study group on transport. In that regard, I was responsible for coordinating of work plans and programmes, chairing and directing weekly meetings of the study group; as well as drawing up of annual programmes and plans and reports for consideration by the Chief Whip and the ANC national caucus.
23. In fulfilling section 236 of the Constitution, I was, in 1998, assigned to chair an Adhoc committee on funding of represented political parties in parliament.
24. This meant developing policy with regard to funding of political parties; coordinating consensus and agreement among parties represented in parliament on a funding formula. Developing a funding model for political parties; reporting and accounting to the Joint Rules Committee.

25. In 1999, I chaired the Public Service and Administration Portfolio Committee; whose responsibilities were: -
- 25.1 Drawing up of annual programmes and plans.
 - 25.2 Directing work programmes of the portfolio committee.
 - 25.3 Presentation of reports for consideration by parliament and other structures.
 - 25.4 Liaison with stakeholders; Ministers, Departments, Institutions Supporting Democracy, Civil Society and others.
 - 25.5 Ensuring weekly meetings of the committee.
26. In 2001, I was appointed Chairperson of the ANC Parliamentary Caucus, a function that required that I had to serve as a point of contact between ANC MP's and the leadership of the organisation. Enabling discussion on the work of study groups, which play a role of portfolio committee work and are sub-structures of the national caucus. Enabling Members of Parliament to discuss and agree on the approach pertaining to all matters on the parliamentary agenda. I also had to represent the ANC caucus at the ANC NEC.
27. In 2002, I was appointed Chief Whip of the ANC, whose responsibility was political and financial resource management of the ANC in parliament. It is a function that required coordination between relevant structures of parliament, Cabinet Ministers and ANC Headquarters. I had to liaise between political parties, Presiding Officers and the Programming Committee.
28. In 2004, I served as the House Chairperson in the National Assembly, in fulfilling section 55(2) of the Constitution, I was responsible for oversight and accountability, parliamentary villages, labour relations, information, communication and technology, and the public participation unit.

29. I resigned from parliament in September 2005. In February 2006, I started working for the Department of Correctional Services as KZN Regional Commissioner; which meant managing and coordination of correctional services and programmes in KZN province. Duties also involved: -

- 29.1 Coordinating a security programme as constitutionally mandated.
- 29.2 Ensuring adherence to policies and guidelines of DCS in all management areas.
- 29.4 Setting standards to ensure high quality services.
- 29.5 Promoting coordination of stakeholders within the Criminal Justice System.
- 29.6 Promoting community involvement and awareness in correctional matters.
- 29.7 Managing the KZN Region in accordance with the Public Finance Management Act.
- 29.8 Reporting to the Accounting Officer, the National Commissioner.

30. In November 2008, I started working for Umhlathuze Municipality. I was hired as Deputy Municipal Manager; however, 75% of the time, due to other circumstances in the municipality, I functioned as an Acting Municipal Manager.

My responsibilities were the following: -

- 30.1 Implementation of the Integrated Development Plan.
- 30.2 Maintaining Organisational Management System.
- 30.3 Coordinating human resources activities and industrial relations.

CP2.

- 30.4 Risk management
- 30.5 Strategically, direct and manage the IDP, PMS and Internal Audit functions.
- 30.6 Strategic management of local Economic Development initiatives.
- 30.7 Public Relations and Communication.

31. In the period under review, I also served in other structures; such as in 2002 to 2005, a period in which I served as a member of the Judicial Services Commission. A structure primarily concerned with courts and the administration of justice, as well as the appointment of judges.
32. In the same period, I served as Deputy Chairperson of the ANC Political Committee; a committee whose task was to give political direction to the work of the ANC in parliament. It is a sub-structure of the ANC National Executive Committee.
33. I left uMhlathuze Municipality at the fall of 2010; as I had to take up a position with the Department of Public Service and Administration in 2011. The Minister of Public Service and Administration, Minister Baloyi requested me to come in and assist him in setting up a Special Anti-Corruption Unit.
34. I then became Head of the Special Anti-Corruption Unit in DPSA. This unit was at a conceptual stage with the view to structure it up as a government entity. I served DPSA in this capacity for only four months.
35. In May 2011, I was hired as Director General of the Department of Labour. Essentially, I was the accounting officer of the department. I held onto this position until May 2014 when I was appointed Minister of Police

36. In summation, my work in KZN as a student and political activist, trade unionist, ANC MP and senior management experience equipped me with an ability to constructively deal with community needs, as well as issues of institutional support and reform of structures of governance.
37. Chairing the Public Service and Administration Portfolio Committee provided a legislative and policy formulation processes of government, as an experience. On the other hand, the Judicial Services Commission experience, enhanced my understanding of the challenges of transforming not only the judiciary but also the criminal justice system in its entirety. An experience that served me well in later assignments.
38. Post the May 2014 general elections, I was appointed Minister of Police by the then President Jacob Zuma. Section 206 of the Constitution states that; - ‘A member of the Cabinet must be responsible for policing and must determine national policing policy...’ Furthermore Section 207 states that: - ‘The National Commissioner must exercise control over and manage the police service in accordance with the national policy and the directions of the Cabinet member responsible for policing’.
39. I was indeed the Cabinet member responsible for policing.
40. I relinquished this responsibility, soon after the then President reshuffled his Cabinet, as a result of which, in 2017, I assumed a new role as Minister of Public Works. A position I held onto until another Cabinet reshuffle by the current President, President Ramaphosa, in 2018.
41. Democracy is a social construct, established through elections, societal institutions and an active citizenry. All institutions arising from the democratic process are established and controlled by civilians as an expression of democratic practice. The SAPS is part of the institutions established by democracy.

42. This viewpoint is also galvanized by the fact that the constitutional and legal framework governing the security environment is informed by the ANC's final submissions on the Constitution. These proposals were published on 15 June 1995 as a basis for the liberation movement's engagement with the Constituent Assembly. The African National Congress said:

42.1 The fundamental approach of the ANC is that the final responsibility for security should be taken out of the hands of the security apparatuses.

42.2 Final responsibility for security should be placed squarely in the jurisdiction of the democratically elected Parliament and Executive.

42.3 The security services are to be bound explicitly.

42.4 Civilian control over the security services at ministerial level and through other mechanisms should be constitutionally enshrined.

42.5 The right of the public to access information must be provided for constitutionally, with limitations in the interests of national security – a reasonable balance between democratic transparency and secrecy.

42.6 Security institutions should not act on their own authority, but under the guidance of Parliament and the Executive.

42.7 Threats to security are not limited to military aggression but also include poverty, social justice, social economic deprivation, abuse of human rights and disjunction of the environment.

43. The existing Constitution is underpinned by the principles of the liberation movement, as the ANC essentially spoke of the need for:

- 43.1 Final responsibility to be given to democratically elected representatives.
- 43.2 Explicit binding of security services.
- 43.3 Civilian control of security services; and
- 43.4 These find expression in the Constitutional provision giving the Executive Authority powers in regard to both the Defence Force and the Police Service and enhancing their respective capacity through civilian secretariats.
44. I firmly believe that these principles are fundamental. They need to be jealously guarded as they talk to the realization of a democratic society. They also, when firmly upheld, would ensure stability of our society.
45. This part of the statement is sequenced in the following manner:
- A. The appointment of Leon Mbangwa as the Chief of Staff;
 - B. The Reference group;
 - C. Werksmans report on rendition of Zimbabweans;
 - D. McBride's disciplinary process;
 - E. Suspensions and eventual dismissals of Mr Innocent Khuba and Mr Matthews Sesoko;
 - F. Appointment of Mr Israel Kgamanyane;
 - G. Condonation
 - H. Conclusions.

A. MR LEON ABEDNIGO MBANGWA

46. Largely two issues have been raised in the past and before the Commission on State Capture; by both Mr Robert McBride and others at public ventilated levels. These are that he is: -

46.1 a fraudster, and

46.2 a foreigner.

47. After assuming the office of the Police Ministry, I had a Chief of Staff, Ms Cathy Hendriks; who left my office to assume another role with the South African Police Service. This left me with a gap as I then had no one to head my office as Chief of Staff. I started a process of recruitment.

48. That process led me to KwaZulu/Natal Legislature, where in I located Mr Mbangwa, who held a position of Senior Manager which was an equivalent of a Chief Director in the Public Service. I went through his profile and found him suitably qualified for the position in my office.

49. Mr Mbangwa holds a master's degree in Business Administration with Regent Business School, a Diploma in Human Resources Management, a Diploma in Industrial Marketing with UNISA, a Diploma in Public Relations Practice with the Public Relations Institute of South Africa, a Teachers Diploma with the University of Zimbabwe, Program and Project Management with The American Graduate University. He is awaiting results of his dissertation for his Master's in Public and Development Management with Wits University.

50. On the work experience, Mr Mbangwa has a range of work experience which started with him:

42.

- 50.1 Teaching in Zimbabwe, Zambia, Botswana, and South Africa between 1986 and 1995;
- 50.2 Heading Communications: Mpumalanga Provincial Government, 1995 to 1998;
- 50.3 Being a Director: Independent Electoral Commission of South Africa, 1999 to 2001;
- 50.4 Being a Director: Department of Justice, 2001 to 2002;
- 50.5 Being Chief Director: KZN Department of Health, 2005 to 2010;
- 50.6 Being Senior Manager: KwaZulu Natal Legislature, 2011 to 2015
51. The above work experience shows that Mr Mbangwa has been with the South African public service for over twenty years. He was awarded a Merit Certificate by the Mpumalanga Provincial Government; as Director for IEC, together with Judge Kriegler represented South Africa in East Timor as an Electoral Officer of the United Nations. He was in the Minister of Justice office dealing with the implementation of the eJustice project.
52. I was satisfied that Mr Mbangwa was the correct candidate for Chief of Staff position in my office and I accordingly arranged for a lateral transfer from the KZN legislature to the Ministry of Police. At this point nothing was ever said about his possessing a criminal record or having been convicted for identification fraud. Understandably so, because any of these matters, would have been declared at the initial point of employment and not transfer.
53. On one particular occasion, I participated in a Power FM talk show. The focus was on the police portfolio. The anchor of the show asked a question relating to Mr Mbangwa's employment and citizenship, particularly that he had a criminal record. I undertook to make a follow up on issues raised. On further enquiries on my part from Mr Mbangwa; indeed, he declared that he had a criminal record which occurred in 2002. He was arrested in connection with information on his South African identity document and charged with fraud. His identity document did not accurately reflect details of his birth. It recorded that his place of birth was Transkei and did not give the correct name of his birth mother; as well as his name was not properly recorded.

54. He was sentenced to 36 months imprisonment, for which he served 18 months and released from prison in 2004. At which point, he was given a letter to apply for citizenship by descent. He was not deported. Mr Mbangwa informed me that in all positions of employment, post his prison sentence, he declared his criminal record and completed his Z204 form for security clearance.

55. Upon his release in 2004, he took steps to rectify his citizenship and identity document, in accordance with Section 3(1) of the South African Citizenship Act, No. 88 of 1995. However, to date the Department of Home Affairs has not been forthcoming, as a result of which the Pietermaritzburg High Court was approached to give force to this attempt. The following was the result: -

55.1 The Pietermaritzburg High Court, Case Number 6840/09, ordered that an oral evidence be held on 16, 17, 18 March 2011 on determining descendency for Mr Mbangwa.

55.2 On 17 March 2011, a settlement agreement was entered into before the Pietermaritzburg High Court for a DNA test between Mr Mbangwa and a surviving sibling in South Africa.

55.3 Such a DNA test results were in Mr Mbangwa's favour.

56. The Department of Home Affairs has continuously reneged from this Court Order.
57. In any case, it is strange and anomalous to refer to an African person as a foreigner in the African Continent. At issue here, is what European powers did in 1884, on account of being white and considering themselves as being supreme to humankind, to carve and dissect Africa in pursuance of their exploitative interests.

B. THE REFERENCE GROUP

The establishment of the reference group

58. Following the announcement of the new Cabinet by the then President, in May 2014, I as Minister of Police then, embarked on a programme aimed at familiarising myself with the policing environment. This included meeting with senior management of the institutions for which I was responsible; as well as studying the Constitutional and legal framework governing the environment.
59. I met with various stakeholders to solicit their views and perceptions on what was required to improve the delivery of the policing function aligned to the National Development Plan – Vision 2030, which seeks to: -
- 58.1 Strengthen the criminal justice system
 - 58.2 Make the police service professional
 - 58.3 Demilitarise the police service
 - 58.4 Build safety using an integrated approach and
 - 58.5 Build community participation in community safety.

60. During the familiarisation process many critical issues were brought to the fore. In this regard a number of legal and disciplinary issues and long outstanding matters relating to institutional reform and transformation were identified as requiring urgent intervention and resolution as they impacted negatively on the morale, efficiency, effectiveness and image of the Service.

61. The burning and topical matters were: -

60.1 Human Resources Management

60.1.1 In this category, appointments, suspensions, disciplinary and criminal proceedings involving senior management, was a specific focus.

60.2 Operational Issues

60.2.1 The focus here was the alleged involvement of police members in illegal renditions of Zimbabwean nationals.

60.3 Crime Intelligence

60.3.1 At the time, there were lots of matters that were publicly ventilated. Those matters ranged from management and leadership instability to perpetual suspension of Mr Richard Mdluli.

60.4 Integration and Transformation Issues

60.4.1 There were allegations pertaining to rank structure including promotions and perceived salary discrepancies.

Lack of progress with regards to integration of non-statutory forces.

60.5 Reviewal of the National Key Points Act.

60.6 The Secure in Comfort report by the Public Protector (anticipated referral by parliament at the time)

62. As Minister of Police, I had to objectively deal with the dynamic issues in the policing environment, as well as respond objectively to the critical issues dominating the public discourse. Thence the establishment of the Reference Group.

The legal framework in establishing the reference group

63. The Civilian Secretariat for Police, in terms of Section 3(e) and (j) of the South African Police Act, 1995, must: -

(e) “provide the Minister with legal services and advice on constitutional matters”

(j) “evaluate the functioning of the Service and report to the Minister thereon”

64. Section 9 (b) of the Civilian Secretariat for Police Act, 2011, further states, that the Secretary may do all that is necessary to perform the functions of the Secretariat, including; “requesting and obtaining information and documents relating to any matter under the control of the police service”

65. Section 12A of the Public Services Act, 1994 states that:

EAR

"...executive authorities as the Cabinet may appoint one or more persons under a contract, whether in a full-time or part-time capacity –

- (a) To advise the executive authority on the exercise or performance of the executive authority's powers and duties;*
- (b) To advise the executive authority on the development of policy that will promote the relevant department's objectives; or*
- (c) To perform such other tasks as may be appropriate in respect of the exercise or performance of the executive authority's powers and duties"*

66. Part III G of the Public Service Regulations, 2001 states that:

"An executive authority may, within the relevant budget, employ persons additional to the approved establishment where... (b) a temporary increase in work occurs; or it is necessary for any other reason to temporarily increase the staff of the department"

67. These are the legal prescripts that, I, as Minister then, had to follow to the letter in establishing a Reference Group. In this instance, the Reference Group, under the auspices of the Civilian Secretariat for Police, was to provide legal services and advice on constitutional matters and evaluate the functioning of the service and report to the Minister thereon. I accordingly proceeded to establish the Reference Group guided by our law.

The composition of the reference group

68. The Reference Group was made of five (5) individuals who possessed a variety of skills that were required for the task at hand. Members possessed legal, strategic planning management, organisational development, intelligence and security work, as well as institutional reform skills. In approaching its work, the Reference Group was to:

- 67.1 Gather all necessary background information and material in relation to each of the identified areas.
- 67.2 Invite inputs on the specific issues from police management and directly or indirectly from affected or involved individuals from within the service.
- 67.3 Interview any relevant person/s who may provide any information in connection with identified matters.
- 67.4 Conduct research, examine and analyse any written material, document or media article relevant to each identified matter.
- 67.5 Conduct research and analyse the implications of the legal, regulatory or governance environment pertaining to the identified matters.
- 67.6 Compile reports in respect of each identified matter.

69. Essentially, in its work, the Reference Group, was to interrogate and review the legal and disciplinary implications in respect of specific matters that required urgent intervention and resolution. It also had to interrogate and review good corporate governance issues in relation to such identified matters. Consequently, the Reference Group was to advise the Minister as to the best course of action to be taken to resolve the issues so identified and bring about closure with the view to impact positively on the creation of stability within SAPS.

The process followed

70. On or about the 30 September 2014 and 01 October 2014, I called in the National Commissioner of Police at the time, General Riah Phiyega, and hours later her top management team; to advise and inform them of my decision to constitute the Reference Group. Such a meeting was held at the SAPS College on 01 October 2014. On the same day, I addressed the media and released a statement in this regard.

71. This was followed by an official communique' of 03 October 2014, addressed to the National Commissioner, which among other things, called upon:

"The National Commissioner and the Administration will be required to cooperate fully with the Reference Group and is particularly required to timeously provide all documentation requested, to ensure that the Reference Group completes its responsibilities within the stipulated time-frame. All necessary steps have been undertaken to safe-guard the confidentiality and security of information obtained."

72. Communication was also distributed to all structures within the Police portfolio, including all agencies reporting to the Minister of Police.

The work of the reference group

73. The Reference group commenced with its work and continued functioning. It produced reports on a variety of issues. In the execution of its tasks, the Reference Group was at liberty to co-opt any other person/s that would have been resourceful and of value to its work. It also focused itself on different streams. In certain areas of work, the Reference Group was able to rope in experts for opinions and guidance.
74. In its existence, the Reference Group produced reports in the following areas: -
- 73.1 Fitness of the National Commissioner of Police to hold office.
 - 73.2 Secure in Comfort – the four aspects of the main report referred to the Minister of Police by Parliament.
 - 73.3 The illegal rendition of the Zimbabwean nationals.
75. The Reference Group, in dealing with unlawful rendition of Zimbabwean nationals, identified that there was an investigation report by IPID conducted earlier and signed off on the 22 January 2012. It also identified that there was another report by IPID, soon after Mr Robert MacBride had assumed function as Executive Director of IPID in March 2012. The predicament with this was that, there were now two (2) reports on the same subject matter of the rendition of the Zimbabwean nationals; each report with recommendations that were in contradiction with one another, save the last recommendation on both reports.

76. The initial report by the Reference Group also pointed out to the seriousness of this matter. The report pointed to the violation of the Extradition Act, the African Union Protocol and the United Nations Convention, among others.

77. It must also be remembered that the Criminal Justice Cluster was also seized with this matter in 2012 as this matter attracted media and public interest, after the expose' by the Sunday Times publication. In 2014, when I appeared on SABC talk channel for the presentation of crime statistics, the show anchor jumped me with a sudden question on the renditions and asked as to why disciplinary steps were not instituted against senior police personnel, such as General Dramat and others, as they were implicated in the said report. I undertook right there and then that I was going to follow up on the said complaint.

78. Given all these matters as they were brought to the fore, I felt the need for more detailed investigation to clarify ourselves on these issues. I then proceeded to appoint the Werksmans Attorneys to conduct an investigation.

C. THE WERKSMANS REPORT

79. The investigation was guided by the following terms of reference: -

78.1 Who and under what circumstances was the original report altered or how the second report came about with both reports signed by the same person? i.e. Mr Khuba;

- 78.2 Whether any misconduct or offence has been committed and if so by whom?
- 78.3 Whether there is prima facie evidence of misconduct and criminal liability by Lieutenant General Dramat; Major-General Sibiya; and any other officers mentioned in the original report;
- 78.4 The circumstances under which report, and the docket handed in the NPA and what happened to the docket whilst in the NPA possession;
- 78.5 Any other matter that might come to your attention during the investigation which is relevant to your conclusions and findings.
80. The report with its conclusions and findings was given to me as the Minister of Police for information. The Werksmans report is attached hereto and marked "NN1". It is on the basis of this report that I commenced further disciplinary processes against the implicated individuals. I now set to deal with the investigation report. The report is in four separate sections as follows:
- 79.1 Section A: Circumstances surrounding the compiling of each report;
- 79.2 Section B: Deletion of evidence from the First Report;
- 79.3 Section C: Analysis and findings; and
- 79.4 Section D: Recommendations.
81. For the sake of brevity, I do not intend to reproduce the Werksmans report verbatim herein but to only highlight those salient aspects thereof.

Factual background of the rendition

82. During the period November 2010 until January 2011, a number of Zimbabwean nationals were arrested by SAPS together with Zimbabwean police officials. The arrest of these individuals was explained by the DPCI, in response to a parliamentary question posed by a member of the Congress of the People. The DPCI, through Dramat, advised parliament that the individuals in question were deported as illegal immigrants and had been arrested on suspicion of having committed or been involved in certain crimes, such as ATM bombings. The DPCI in its parliamentary response, further stated that when it came to light that the arrested individuals could not be linked to specific crimes, the individuals were deported to Zimbabwe.
83. The circumstances surrounding the arrests appeared to be questionable and raised a number of legal considerations relating to, inter alia, the lawfulness of the process followed by the SAPS in deporting the relevant Zimbabwean nationals.
84. The arrests of the five Zimbabwean nationals was effected in three (3) stages which will be summarised briefly, below.

83.1 The first operation

- 83.1.1 The first operation relating to the arrest of Zimbabwean nationals took place on 5 November 2010 where four Zimbabwean nationals (Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maqhawe Sibanda and Shepard Tshuma) were arrested in Diepsloot and detained in the Orlando police station in Soweto.

83.1.2 The reasons stated for their detention was that they were illegal immigrants. The operation was conducted by the Directorate for Priority Crime Investigation (DPCI) head office and DPCI provincial office Tactical Operations Management Section (TOMS). It was alleged that DPCI and TOMS were accompanied by two Zimbabwean police officers. The members of the operation were informed during a briefing meeting that they were tracing suspects involved in a robbery committed in Zimbabwe during which a Zimbabwean police superintendent was fatally shot.

83.1.3 After the four Zimbabwean nationals referred to were booked into Orlando police station, Dumisani Witness Ndeya was booked out of Orlando police station in order to assist the SAPS with the tracing of a certain individual named John. John could not be traced and Dumisani Witness Ndeya was returned to Orlando police station. The four Zimbabwean nationals were detained over the weekend as illegal immigrants and on the morning of 8 November 2010 they were booked out of Orlando police station by Maluleke.

83.1.4 Maluleke indicated that the Zimbabwean nationals were to be transported to Beitbridge border post. Two of the Zimbabwean nationals were released and the remaining two were transported to Beitbridge border post and handed over to a contingent of Zimbabwean police.

CPD

83.1.5 The circumstances under which the Zimbabwean nationals were deported, was circumspect. The docket which was used during the deportation did not belong to the Department of Home Affairs, as it was required to be in the case of deportations.

83.1.6 Although there were documents which were presented as being documents issued under the auspices of the Department of Home Affairs in order to authorise the deportation, it appeared from an analysis of such documentation by an expert in that regard, that the documents which purported to be issued by the Department of Home Affairs, were forged.

83.1.7 Maqhawe Sibanda was later released by Zimbabwean police after allegedly spending eleven days in custody and being tortured. Dumisani Witness Ndeya died while in the custody of the Zimbabwean police.

83.2 Second operation

83.2.1 A second operation was conducted on or about 22 November 2010 by the same police units which conducted the first operation. In the second operation, Prichard Chuma was arrested in Diepsloot and detained at Alexandra police station under a Zimbabwean police reference number, being Bulawayo case number: 1337/11 and was booked out on 23 November 2010 and taken to Silverton police station.

83.2.2 It would appear that on 24 November 2010 W/O Selepe of the Gauteng TOMS unit of the DPCI, on instruction by Maluleke, booked out Prichard Chuma from Silverton police station and transported him to Beitbridge border post, accompanied by Maluleke, where Prichard Chuma was handed to Zimbabwean police.

83.2.3 Prichard Chuma was never seen again. It is presumed that he also died in Zimbabwe under police custody.

83.3 Third operation

83.3.1 Maluleke conducted this part of the operation with the assistance of the CIG (Crime Intelligence Gathering) members of Pretoria. Gordon Dube ("Dube"), a Zimbabwean national was arrested in conjunction with two other individuals. Dube had a number of criminal cases pending against him. During his arrest, which took place in Diepsloot on or about 11 January 2011, Dube was shot and injured.

83.3.2 Due to the fact that Dube was being treated at hospital instead of being held at Wierdabrug police station, he did not appear in court with the two other individuals who were arrested with him. He was, however, due to appear in court on 28 January 2011.

83.3.3 Dube did not appear in court as he was booked out of hospital on Maluleke's instructions. At the same time, Maluleke retrieved the gun that was found in Dube's possession when he was arrested from Weirbrug police station. The same gun was allegedly used in the robbery in Zimbabwe which resulted in the death of the Zimbabwean superintendent.

83.3.4 Maluleke informed the investigating officer, Lean Meyer, that Dube would be dealt with through immigration channels. Maluleke then transported Dube to Beitbridge and Dube never returned to South Africa.

83.3.5 Maluleke once again enlisted the services of CIG in order to trace an additional Zimbabwean national, Johnson Nyoni ("Nyoni"). Nyoni was traced in Diepsloot and arrested by the CIG members and the TRT unit of the Johannesburg Central police station, on 26 January 2011.

83.3.6 Nyoni was taken to the DPCI head office where the members who participated in the arrest of Nyoni were congratulated by Dramat. Photographs depicting the members involved in the arrest, Nyoni, two Zimbabwean police members and their vehicle, and the gun retrieved from Dube's possession, were taken by a third Zimbabwean police officer.

83.3.7 Nyoni was thereafter booked out on 28 January 2011 by Maluleke and taken, together with Dube, to Beitbridge border post. The entry in the registers at the relevant police station reflect that Nyoni was booked out for the purpose of extradition to Zimbabwe through the Beitbridge border post. Nyoni was killed while in the custody of the Zimbabwean police.

Circumstances surrounding the compiling of each report

First Report (January Report)

85. Prior to Khuba conducting any investigations into the Rendition, there were two investigations into the Rendition that had already been undertaken, by: –
- 84.1 the DPCI, in terms of which the DPCI members involved in the Rendition were exonerated from any wrongdoing in the Rendition; and
- 84.2 a member of Crime Intelligence, Colonel Moukangwe. According to the investigation conducted under the auspices of Crime Intelligence was never concluded, instead it was done jointly with IPID.
86. The First Report was compiled by Khuba with the assistance of Moukangwe and the guidance of Advocates Mosing and Moeletsi.
87. The Special Projects Division in the office of the NDPP was tasked to provide guidance to Khuba and Moukangwe during the course of their investigation. The Special Projects Division was headed by Mosing assisted by Moeletsi. The role of Mosing and Moeletsi was never to make a decision on whether to prosecute or not.

88. On 23 October 2012 Khuba received a docket from Sesoko and an appointment letter to conduct an investigation of all cases of alleged assault in relation to Sibiya. Upon perusal of the docket of Diepsloot 390/07/2012 he discovered that the DPCI had received a complaint relating to the Rendition.
89. Khuba was instructed by the former Acting Executive Director of IPID Koekie Mbeki to conduct an investigation into the Rendition. He was further instructed to liaise with Moukangwe so that the latter could assist him to conduct the investigation.
90. Khuba briefed Moukangwe on the intended investigation and it was agreed that Moukangwe will assist Khuba in conducting the investigation into the Rendition. What was further agreed was that Moukangwe's name would not appear in the report once the investigation is finalised as the investigation was commissioned by IPID and Moukangwe was employed by Crime Intelligence.
91. Khuba began his investigation by interviewing certain members of the Department of Home Affairs. At this stage the docket already had statements obtained from the TOMS, Crime Intelligence and the Zimbabwean nationals who had been subject to the Rendition.
92. On 7 March 2013, Khuba visited the office of Dramat. Moukangwe was a party to this meeting as well. At this meeting, Dramat stated that he did not recall meeting with the Zimbabwean Police. Khuba requested certain documents, including statements and documents related to the internal investigation into the Rendition conducted by DPCI, from Dramat. Dramat instructed Khuba that such request be made in writing.

93. When Khuba was finally provided with the requested documents, it appeared as if the statements provided recorded that the internal investigation conducted by DPCI was conducted properly and that everything was in order. Khuba, however, was unconvinced as to the correctness of the statement of a particular individual, being Madilonga, which statement was signed but not commissioned. Khuba met with Madilonga who provided a new statement detailing the actual events regarding his involvement in the Rendition.
94. Khuba conducted further investigations relating to the passage of individuals through the Beitbridge border post on the dates relevant to the Rendition. In addition, Khuba spoke to Leonie Verster who was Maluleke's supervisor. Leonie Verster indicated that Maluleke did not respect the chain of command and would communicate directly with Sibiya. Leonie Verster also drew Khuba's attention to the success reports directed to Dramat, Lebeya, Hlatswayo and others. Khuba perused the three success reports with which he had been provided and noted that one report dealt with the deportation or the arrest of Ndeya, and others that were connected in relation to the murder of a Zimbabwean police officer in Zimbabwe.
95. One success report recorded that the Zimbabwean police came and met with Dramat on 5 November 2010 and requested assistance. The success report further recorded Maluleke's appointment to head the assignment to trace the Zimbabwean fugitives. Khuba obtained a laptop belonging to Maluleke and found that the success reports were generated from this laptop. The laptop also contained photographs of the operation as well as correspondence to Zimbabwean police officers.

96. As part of the investigation, Khuba met with members of crime intelligence. At their offices. He noticed that the photographs obtained from Maluleke's laptop relating to the operation were posted on the office walls of some members of crime intelligence. He was informed by a member of crime intelligence, Mkasibe that during January 2011 when the arrests were completed, they went to DPCI's offices and Dramat personally came to the offices at House No. 3 and congratulated them for a job well done.
97. According to Mkasibe, Dramat requested that they not tell anyone about the details of the operation. According to Khuba, Mkasibe confirmed that he has a historical relationship with Dramat due to their mutual involvement in Umkhonto We Sizwe.
98. Mkasibe's statement was corroborated by Mngwenya who confirmed that Dramat addressed the officers and congratulated them; however, Mngwenya did not mention Dramat telling them not to divulge the details of the operation. In addition, a third officer, Mokgobu, stated that she was out of the office at the time that Dramat attended to congratulate them; however, upon her return, she was informed that Dramat was congratulating the officers at House No.3.
99. Information about the investigation was leaked and was published in the Sunday Times. At this time, Khuba and Mosing began drafting questions to Dramat enquiring about Dramat's involvement in the Rendition.
100. Khuba also interviewed Maluleke specifically regarding his promotion from captain to colonel. Khuba was not successful in obtaining the file regarding Maluleke's promotion.
101. Khuba recorded that Dramat sent a report, in response to the parliamentary question posed by a member of Congress of the People (COPE) regarding the Rendition, explaining the circumstances of the Rendition, by stating that the Zimbabwean nationals were deported as illegal immigrants. This caused Khuba to investigate the matter further. He considered expense claims relating to the travelling to Beitbridge border post, as well as cell phone and vehicle tracker records positioning of Maluleke, Makoe, Nkosi and constable Radebe at Diepsloot on the night of the arrests.

102. The booking in and out of certain police stations of the relevant Zimbabwean nationals following their arrests at Diepsloot was also examined by Khuba. He then began finalising the report but did so in the absence of an analysis of the cell phone records of Sibiya. Although Khuba was in possession of cell phone records in relation to Sibiya, they required to be interpreted by an expert.
103. According to Khuba, as he was conducting the investigation with Moukangwe they would consult with Mosing and Moeletsi who were providing guidance in the process regarding the evidence to be collected in finalising the investigation.
104. At some point during 2013, Mosing and Moeletsi advised Khuba and Moukangwe as to which information in their draft investigation report dated October 2013 needed to be added. This information was the warning statements from Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke, Leonie Verster and analysis of cell phone records by an expert.
105. Subsequent to the advice by Mosing and Moeletsi, Khuba and Moukangwe conducted further investigations to address the concerns raised by Mosing and Moeletsi. According to Khuba, Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke and Leonie Verster, refused to provide warning statements.
106. In light of their refusal to provide warning statements, Khuba and Moukangwe finalised their investigation and provided a report with recommendations. This report was submitted to Mosing and Moeletsi on 22 January 2014. This report, being the first report, was, in the opinion of Moukangwe and Khuba, final. The recommendations made in this report were that Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke, Makoe, Radebe and Nkosi be criminally charged with defeating the ends of justice and kidnapping.

107. According to Khuba, the First Report was submitted as a final report and they expected the NPA to take further action as required by law, on the basis of their recommendations set out therein.
108. Moukangwe corroborated Khuba's version regarding his (Moukangwe's) involvement in the investigation and the compilation of the First Report when interviewed by Werksmans.
109. Moukangwe explained why he, as a member of SAPS, was tasked with conducting an investigation on behalf of IPID. He said that the majority of the work had already been done by Crime Intelligence and that his superiors were of the view that he should assist Khuba in finalising the investigation.
110. According to Moukangwe, when they (Moukangwe and Khuba) finalised the First Report on 22 January 2014, the only outstanding information was the warning statements from Dramat, Sibiya, Verster and Maluleke who had all refused to provide these warning statements.
111. Moukangwe, corroborated Khuba's testimony that Dramat, Sibiya and Maluleke had refused to provide warning statements when they approached them pursuant to the advice of Mosing and Moeletsi:
- 110.1 Dramat told them that he wants to involve his attorney and would only give a statement after discussing same with his attorney;

110.2 Sibiya requested that he be sent questions and would thereafter respond to such questions; and 110.3 Maluleke refused and advised them that he will answer all the questions in Court. Vester, who in their view was quite knowledgeable about the operation, was also refusing to provide them with a statement.

112. According to Moukangwe this was the only outstanding information in the First Report and that in their view, nothing further could be done to obtain this information. As such, the First Report was not contemplated to be subject to any further amendment or revision.

113. Moukangwe went on to say that the report of 22 January 2014 was final as they could not force anyone to make statements or give evidence. He did not know anything about the Second Report and was not involved in the drafting of the said report.

114. Khuba and Moukangwe's evidence in relation to their involvement of Mosing's office in the investigation into Rendition was corroborated by him. Mosing explained that the Preliminary Report was prepared on 22 October 2013, compiled by Khuba and Moukangwe and was presented to Mosing and Moeletsi for consideration. This was a draft report. Mosing and Moeletsi advised Khuba and Moukangwe to conduct further investigations.

115. On 12 November 2013 Mosing addressed an NPA internal memorandum to Nxasana and Jiba updating them on the status of the investigation conducted by IPID. Mosing attached the Preliminary Report to this memorandum. In this memorandum Mosing, inter alia, summarised the evidence gathered at that stage and stressed the need for further investigation to be conducted in relation to certain aspects of the investigation.

116. Paragraph 4 of Mosing's memorandum specified the outstanding investigations required at that stage to finalise the report. That included: -

115.1 The reports of analysis of cell phone records;

115.2 The report on analysis of vehicle tracking information of the members involved during the operations and;

115.3 The statements from Dramat, Sibiya and Maluleke.

117. On 22 January 2014 Khuba met with Mosing and Moeletsi to submit the report as a final report. According to Mosing, Khuba and Moukangwe felt that they had now completed their work and that it was up to Nxasana to make a decision on the merits of the case.

118. Mosing advised Khuba to include his (Khuba's) statement as the investigator in order to explain how he conducted the investigation. This was the only outstanding statement in the report of 22 January 2014. This was done two days after 22 January 2014. The report was subsequently signed by Khuba. Khuba did not change the date of the report to signal the exact date that the report was signed. The First Report was complete and submitted to Mosing for further action.

119. On 13 February 2014, Mosing addressed an internal memorandum to Jiba and Chauke, indicating that the investigations have been finalised and that the report from IPID has been submitted for the purposes of considering the merits of the case. The First Report was attached to this memorandum. Mosing further stated that the docket comprising of two lever arch files, together with other files containing the cell phone data and evidence obtained from a computer belonging to the DPCI, was also enclosed.
120. Jiba confirmed that the internal memorandum was drafted on her advice and she confirmed receipt of both internal memorandums from Mosing.
121. After the docket was sent to Chauke, Chauke handed the docket to Adv. Van Zyl. On 7 March 2014, Khuba accompanied by Angus removed the docket from the possession of Adv. Van Zyl.
122. The First Report contains, inter alia, a summary of the material statements provided by the individuals interviewed during the investigation as well as an analysis of the evidence. It recommends that Dramat, Sibiyi, Maluleke, Radebe, Nkosi and Makoe be prosecuted for their involvement in the Rendition, specifically in relation to the crimes of kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice. It further recommends that Maluleke, Radebe, Nkosi and Makoe be prosecuted for assault and theft.
123. After the submission of the First Report, on 3 March 2014, McBride was appointed as Executive Director of IPID. He requested an update of all the high-profile matters that were handled by IPID, including the Rendition.
124. Sesoko, McBride and Khuba began working on the Second Report. This was done in the absence of any consultations in this regard with Moukangwe and/or Mosing who were both active in the investigation and the submission of the First Report.

125. A careful perusal and analysis of the First and Second Reports reveal that the Second Report is actually a version of the First Report which was altered by the deletion of certain evidence in order to arrive at a conclusion which was far removed from the conclusion of the First Report. There was no valid explanation for the deletion of evidence.
126. The Second Report differs from the First Report in respect of the recommendations made by each report and the summary of evidence contained in each report.
127. While the First Report was signed by Khuba, the Second Report was signed by Khuba, McBride and Sesoko. It was Khuba's version that the submission of the Second Report was necessitated by two things, namely the addition of new evidence and as a result of discussions with Sesoko.
128. Both Moukangwe and Mosing confirmed that even though they were part of the investigation team in respect to the submission of the First Report, they were not consulted in the decision to amend the findings and recommendation of the First Report, which subsequently resulted in the drafting of the Second Report.
129. In his interview with Werksmans Khuba said that he met with McBride in order to discuss his investigation, however, prior to meeting with McBride, he provided Sesoko with an email copy of his report to pass along to McBride so that McBride would be able to prepare for their meeting. Sesoko confirmed receipt of such email from Khuba. He was unclear of whether he provided McBride with a hard copy or a soft copy of the report.

130. Khubafurther stated that he emailed a copy of the First Report to Sesoko for McBride's attention, and Sesoko confirms that he provided the report to McBride. However, both Sesoko and McBride were adamant in stating that they did not have knowledge of the First Report. This version by McBride was contradicted by Khuba who said that in his first meeting with McBride, it was evident from their discussion regarding the Rendition, that McBride had had regard to the First Report. On 5 March 2014, McBride met with Khuba.
131. The following day, on 6 March, Khuba met with McBride, Sesoko and Angus. It was on that day that McBride requested Khuba to retrieve the docket from the NPA and to provide him with every document he possessed regarding the Renditions matter.
132. On 7 March 2014, Khuba attended at the offices of the DPP with Angus and specifically to Advocate Van Zyl who was in possession of the docket at the time. Khuba and Angus then removed the docket from the possession of Advocate Van Zyl.
133. The first draft of the Second Report went to and fro amongst the Khuba, Sesoko and McBride.
134. Khuba stated that he signed the last page of the Second Report once it was finalised and did not initial each page; as such, he was not in a position of knowing if any information was added or removed. He said the Second Report was then submitted and dated 18 March 2014.
135. When the discrepancies between the recommendation of the First Report was drawn to Khuba's attention during his interview, his initial explanation for certain deletions was related to the fact that an evaluation of the evidence in relation to Sibiya and in conjunction with his discussions with Sesoko, it was decided that it would not be possible to prove that Sibiya was guilty of assault beyond a reasonable doubt.

136. Khuba later stated that he was strongly concerned about the removal of certain information, specifically the deletion of evidence which implicates Dramat. He stated that the Second Report only went through three hands, being the three co-signatories to the report, including himself and that all that he did in respect of the report was to add information which was outstanding at the time.
137. Khuba could not adequately address the issue as to why the recommendation in respect of Dramat was changed, when initially the recommendation in the First Report was based on Dramat's knowledge of the events and not his physical participation.
138. Khuba stressed that if there were changes to the First Report; he had no way of knowing if the Second Report reflected such changes. According to him he did not check whether the final version of the report was the same document that he emailed to Sesoko. Furthermore, he signed the Second Report and provided it to the other two co-signatories for signature after which, he cannot advise as to how the report was presented to the NPA.
139. McBride's version was that the only input he had into the Second Report related to grammatical changes he made and that he did not see the First Report, nor did he make substantive changes. This version was contradicted by Khuba who stated that McBride had seen the First Report and had given input into the report which was not just grammatical.
140. According to McBride, he was provided with the Second Report which was already signed by both Khuba and Sesoko.

141. The First and the Second Reports differed in a number of aspects.
142. In summary, the most dramatic differences between the two reports are the difference between the recommendations contained in each report. While the First Report recommends that Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke, Radebe, Nkosi and Makoe be charged criminally for their participation in the Rendition, the Second Report recommends that only Maluleke be charged criminally for his participation in the Rendition: -
- 141.1 While the Second Report contains summaries of the statements given by all the relevant individuals whose statements were summarised in the First Report (but for the addition of statements from Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke and Jennifer Irish Qhobosheane), the manner in which certain statements are summarised in the Second Report has been changed insofar as the portions of certain statements and/or evidence and even the analysis of findings which are reflected in the First Report, have been altered to remove wording which implicates Dramat as having knowledge of the Rendition.
- 141.2 Although Khuba states that one of the reasons for the necessity of drafting the Second Report is the addition of new evidence, it is clear from an analysis of both reports, that the only addition to the Second Report relates to the addition of the statements mentioned above, and the addition of the analysis of Dramat's cell phone records. Other than the above, nothing additional was added. More importantly, as noted above, is that certain material portions of the individual statements found in the First Report were removed from the Second Report.

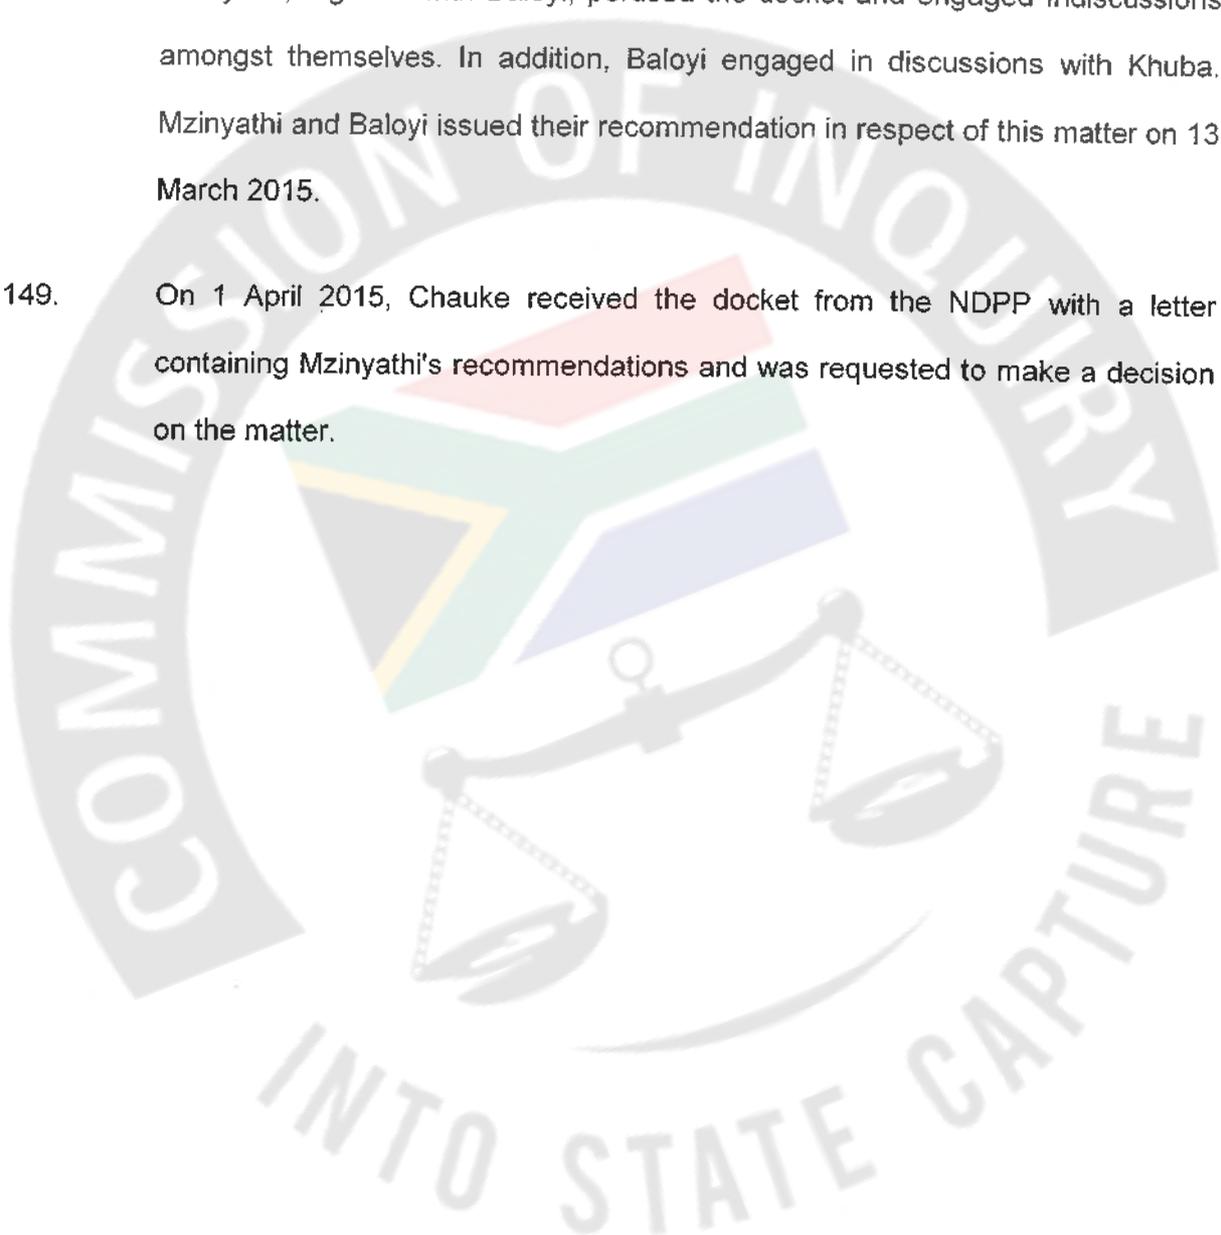

141.6 Pertinent information relating to the analysis of cell phone records were removed and the records were analysed in a way that falls short of the scrutiny contained in the First Report and which was required in an investigation process.

The docket

143. On 18 June 2014 Advocate Van Zyl telephonically requested the docket from Khuba. Khuba's response was that McBride had instructed him to return the docket to the NDPP and that, that had been done.
144. Chauke addressed a letter on 3 July 2014 to Nxasana informing him about the above sequence of events regarding the docket. The NDPP responded to the letter on 20 August 2014 indicating that the NDPP is in a process of considering the matter and that Advocate Chauke may close his file.
145. In December 2014, after the suspension of Dramat, according to Chauke he received a call from the NDPP enquiring about the Rendition matter and was informed that Dramat had been suspended. The NDPP requested Chauke to proceed with dealing with the matter. Chauke advised the NDPP that he had since closed his file on the matter and was not dealing with it anymore.
146. Subsequently, on or about January 2015, the NDPP contacted Mzinyathi and advised Mzinyathi that the NDPP had received the docket from Chauke and that the matter fell under Mzinyathi's jurisdiction because Diepsloot, wherein the arrests of the Zimbabwean nationals took place, fell under the jurisdiction of the North Gauteng DPP. According to McBride, it was IPID (and not Chauke) that took the docket to the NDPP after McBride had signed the Second Report on 9 April 2014.

147. Shortly after his return from leave and on 13 January 2015, Mzinyathi was furnished with the docket by the NDPP. At the time, Diepsloot did not fall under the jurisdiction of Mzinyathi which the NDPP was aware of.
148. Mzinyathi, together with Baloyi, perused the docket and engaged in discussions amongst themselves. In addition, Baloyi engaged in discussions with Khuba. Mzinyathi and Baloyi issued their recommendation in respect of this matter on 13 March 2015.
149. On 1 April 2015, Chauke received the docket from the NDPP with a letter containing Mzinyathi's recommendations and was requested to make a decision on the matter.

Deletion of evidence from the first report

He then called him on his cell phone and explained to him that there are police from Zimbabwe who are intending to have a meeting with General Dramat. Brigadier Makushu told him that he was not aware of the visit but if the people are saying that they are going to meet the General, he should call General Dramat directly. Page 21: para 5.2 readsSuccess report dated 04/02/2011:*This report is addressed to Dramat, Hlatshwayo and Toka

The relevant paragraph of the Success report reads as follows:

"The report bears reference 14/02/01 and was signed by Col Leonie Verster. Paragraph "A1" of the report states that on 05/11/2010, General Dramat held a meeting with Zimbabwean police at DPCI offices about the Nationals who shot and killed one of their senior officers. Paragraph "3" states that Captain Maluleke was tasked to trace and arrest the said Nationals. The report also covers the arrest of Gordon Dube and appreciation of TRT members and members of Crime Intelligence."

In page 20 para 5.2

In this report, this is what is deleted:

The paragraph beginning with "The report bears reference 14/02/01 .." from the first report is deleted in the second report.

Page 21 para 5.3 Emails by Captain Maluleke:

The quoted email states the following:

"He sent emails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. The emails were sent to the PA of Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime intelligence".

The same paragraph in this report does not mention all the individuals to which the emails were sent to, it reads:

He sent e-mails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. He sent email to Zimbabwean police trying to find out how they travelled back home and that he is still tracing the remaining suspects..."

Page 22 Letter to Stakeholders dated 20/08/2012:

The said letter states thus:

"Letter to stakeholders dated 20/08/2012:
The letter was generated the same day indicating that in August 2010 General Sibiya and General Dramat went to Zimbabwe to discuss matters of cooperation on cross border crimes. General Sibiya was appointed as the coordinator on the cooperation issue between two countries. Other letters about the arrest of Zimbabwean national in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police refers to the cooperation agreed during the same meeting.

Page 21: Letter to stakeholders

In this report, the names of the people involved in the cooperation with Zimbabwean Police are no longer mentioned; The letter reads thus in this report:

"Letter to stakeholders dated 20/08/2012: The letter was generated the same day indicating the trip to Zimbabwe to discuss matters of cooperation on cross border crimes."

Towards the end of this paragraph, Maluleke stated the following in a letter:

"In a letter routed to General Dramat he stated that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011. Moyo was subsequently shot at transported to the border with the help of Zimbabwean police".

The letter referred to by Maluleke does not disclose to whom the letter was addressed: In this report, this is what is stated:

" In a letter he states that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011

Evidence of Sibiya's cell records show that he communicates with officers involved including Dramat, the analysis is put thus:

"Cell phone record of Major General Sibiya (0725953168): Upon perusal of the cell phone records it was discovered that Major General Sibiya communicated with officers who were involved in the operation, e.g. Captain Maluleke and sent more than 20 SMS to Major General Dramat (0825515311). However Major General Dramat never responded to the SMS. The same automated SMS were sent to Lt General

The analysis of Sibiya's cellular phone records now only analyses Sibiya's presence at the crime scene, not communicating with the officers involved, the analysis is as follows in this report:

Cell phone Records of Maluleke are analysed in the following manner:

"Cell phone records of Captain "Cowboy" Maluleke (08277295181 The interaction between Major General Sibiya and Captain Maluleke was also found in a form of received and outgoing calls. Captain Maluleke also communicated with General Dramat in terms of outgoing SMS at a very important milestone of the operation. However General Dramat never responded to the SMS which he received from Captain Maluleke at 23:12:15 on 05/11/2010.

There is no analysis of Maluleke's cell-phone records, only that there is a prima facie case against him

Khuba's findings on Dramat Page 29.

Analysis and Findings of Dramat's cell-phone records is recorded by Khuba as such:

"Evaluation of the above findings: In the entire cell phone records of Lt General Dramat requested for the period 20/10/2010 to 28/02/2011, the number 0155346300 only appears once which rules out any form of communication before 04/11/2010 and after the said date. This supports his version that he called Lt General Dramat in connection with the Zimbabwean police.

Since the Zimbabwean Police where at Bel Bridge between 20h00 and 21h00, it is logical that they arrived in Gauteng late at night, leaving them with the, opportunity to have the meeting with General Dramat in the morning of the 5th of November 2010 as stated in the Success Report."
Committed Government Resources into the Operation Khuba makes the following finding: "Evaluation of the above findings: Despite the fact that General Dramat as an Accounting Officer did not sign any claim of Captain Maluleke, delegating responsibility to Major General Sibiya to assist the Zimbabwean Police in tracing • wanted suspects invariably commit government resources into an unlawful operation that amount to a criminal offense	<input type="checkbox"/> Committed Government Resources into the Operation Nothing is said of this aspect

Lieutenant-General Anwar Dramat

151. Khuba's analysis of findings in respect of Dramat and Sibiya in the first report recommended that Dramat be criminally prosecuted. His findings were based on the following, amongst others: -

Dramat met with the Zimbabwean police prior to the commencement of the operation

- 150.1 Madilonga's statement reflects that he was stationed at the border when Zimbabwean police officers attempted to cross into South Africa for the purposes of meeting with Dramat. Madilonga placed a call to Radzilani and Makushu, who both corroborate this evidence, in order to verify the averments by the Zimbabwean police.

150.2 Madilonga was even provided with Dramat's cell phone number by Superintendent Ncube of the Zimbabwean police who identified himself to Madilonga as the leader of the group. Madilonga contacted Dramat in order to confirm the averment by the Zimbabwean police that they were going to meet with Dramat, and according to Madilonga, Dramat confirmed that he was aware of the Zimbabwean police's presence and that Madilonga should let them cross the border into South Africa.

150.3 The success report dated 4 February 2011, addressed to, inter alia, Dramat and signed by Leonie Verster, recorded as its first point that on 5 November 2010, the Zimbabwean police visited the office of DPCI met with Dramat regarding Zimbabwean nationals who allegedly shot and killed a senior Zimbabwean police officer.

224.4 The success report furthermore gave information relating to the arrest of two of the wanted Zimbabwean nationals. This success report was addressed to Dramat and there was no record of Dramat contradicting any statement of fact in the success report.

Dramat received communications during and after the commissioning of the Rendition

150.5 The cell phone records of Sibuya showed that 30 SMSs were sent to Dramat at various milestones in the operation. Dramat also received an SMS from Maluleke shortly after the arrest of the Zimbabwean nationals. Although Dramat never responded to the SMSs, when viewed in the context of Dramat's meeting with the Zimbabwean police, the success reports received after the operation and Dramat's congratulating of the crime intelligence officers, the SMSs led to the conclusion that he was aware of the operation as it unfolded.

- 150.6 The evidence of that emails circulating 20 photos of both the Zimbabwean nationals and the police members involved in the operation, were sent by Maluleke to Dramat's personal assistant.

Dramat congratulated members of crime intelligence after completion of the operation

- 150.7 According to Mkasibe and Ngwenya, Dramat attended at the offices of the DPCI and thanked the officers present for their participation in arresting the Zimbabwean nationals. Mkasibe went further to state that Dramat warned them not to tell anyone about the operation.

Dramat's statement to Acting National Commissioner of SAPS

- 224.8 According to former Acting National Commissioner of SAPS, Lieutenant General Mkhwanazi ("Mkhwanazi"), in late 2011, news of the Rendition came to light. He contacted Dramat who confirmed that members of his unit transported the Zimbabwean nationals as illegal immigrants.

- 150.9 Mkhwanazi then summoned Dramat to his office. Dramat arrived with Maluleke. Maluleke informed Mkhwanazi that he was investigating a case of ATM bombings which led him to the Zimbabwean nationals.

Once he realised that they were not linked to the ATM bombing case, he decided to deport them after getting the necessary documentation from Home Affairs. When Mkhwanazi asked whether it was necessary to transport illegal immigrants, Dramat could offer no explanation.

Sibiya

152. Sibiya was the head of the TOMS unit. Its main objective was to fight priority crimes, which included inter alia, combating armed robberies by dangerous criminals, investigating and arresting those responsible for ATM bombings.

153. Sibiya stated as follows:

"The reality of the matter is that the operation in question was conducted under the auspices of DPCI National Head Office and they requested the services of my team because of their training and capacity".

154. This confirmed Sibiya's knowledge of the operation that led to the Rendition of Zimbabwean Nationals. He provided TOMS personnel to assist DPCI National Head Office to carry out the Rendition. Furthermore, Maluleke carried out the operation on instructions of his superiors.

155. The Rendition was carried out by the members of TOMS under the leadership of the Maluleke. The First Report suggested that Sibiya not only sanctioned the operation, but also that he actually participated in the Rendition. Several statements and affidavits from various witnesses confirming the participation of Sibiya in the Rendition were obtained. These were the statements by:

154.1 Bongani Henry Yendewho stated that:

"During October 2010 I was nominated to be part of the Task Team called "TOMS". In full TOMS means Tactical Operations Management Section led by Major Sibiya who is the Provincial Commander of Hawks in Gauteng Province. The members of Crime Intelligence who worked with me at the Task Team were W/O Jawuke, W/O Ndobe and Constable Campbell.

On 2010-11-05 in the evening I received a phone call from W/O Makwe of DPCI in Gauteng who was also part of the Task Team "TOMS" that Major General wanted us to meet at Fourways to go and search for suspects in a case which a colonel was killed....

At our arrival at Fourways Shopping Centre W/O Makwe introduced two African Males as our police counterparts from Zimbabwe Police.

At the time W/O Makwe introduced the two policemen from Zimbabwe, I realised that the Colonel that was killed was from Zimbabwe and not from South African Police. W/O Makwe informed us that the two police officers came to us via the office of Dramat who is National Head of DPCI. Maj Sibiya was sitting in a navy BMW vehicle busy on his cell phone and I could not greet him".

154.2 Petros Jawukewho said at paragraphs 2, 9 and 10 of his statement, that:

"During 2010 I was nominated to be part of a Task Team called TOMS" in Gauteng Province and the team operated under the command of Major Sibiya who is the Head in Gauteng Province.

Four suspects were detained at Orlando SAPS on 2010-11-06. I do not know how Pritchard TSHUMA and Shepherd TSHUMA are related. The operation of the 2010-11-23, started during the night of the 2010-11-22 until early hours of the 2010-11-23.

I saw Maj Gen. SIBIYA in the second operation, however I also heard that he was present in the first one. I also never saw Maj. Gen SIBIYA assaulting any of the suspects. That's all I can state at this stage."

- 154.3 Shepard Tshumawho gave an account as to what transpired during the operation of 5 November 2010. Shepard stated the following in relation to Major-General Sibiya:

'Few minutes Cowboy asked where must we be detained and one police office said we must be taken to Randburg and the other one said we must be taken to Krugersdorp. Whilst they were busy arguing about the place to be detained, one police officer said they better ask Sibiya at that time, I didn't know who Sibiya is, but later I saw him coming out from a certain black BMW and he gave them instructions to take us to Orlando SAPS."

- 154.4 Maqhawe Sibanda who stated the following in relation to Sibiya's involvement in the operation of that 5 November 2010.

"I later knew some of the police officers who were busy assaulting us. They call themselves with their name, it was cowboy the one who was wearing a cowboy hat, Nkosi, Leburu who was a coloured. I only manage to know the above but I can able to identify others if given permission to do that.

After we were beaten by the police, they started arguing about the place to be detained. One of the police mentioned Randburg the other mentioned Krugersdorp until the other decided that Sibiya must give directions."

I saw Sibiya coming out from the Black BMW and gave instructions to be taken to Orlando SAPS and they took us to Orlando SAPS. Arrived at the Police station in the yard I was following Shepard and saw Leburu (coloured police officer) taking the money at the back pocket of the trouser of Shepard."

156. The above statements by eyewitnesses from Crime Intelligence confirmed that the operations on 5,22 and 23 November 2010 were carried out in connection with the murder and robbery case that took place in Zimbabwe where a Police Superintendent was killed. This conclusion was confirmed by the presence of Zimbabwean Police officials during operations.
157. The statements were made under oath and were from the Zimbabwean nationals as well as members of Crime Intelligence who claimed that they all saw Sibiya at either the first or the second operation of the Rendition.
158. The assessment of Sibiya's cell phone records revealed that Sibiya communicated with officers who were involved in the operation, one of which was Maluleke and he sent 30 SMSs to Dramat at the 0825515311 number during various milestones of the Rendition. Khuba recorded in the First Report that Dramat never responded to any of the SMSs from Sibiya.

Handling of the Second Report and the docket to NPA

159. According to Mosing the NPA's involvement in the matter was called for in the early possible stages of the investigation into the Rendition. Further, the former Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development, the Honourable Jeff Radebe addressed a conference of Senior Managers of the NPA during 2012 wherein he called for the allegations into the Rendition to be investigated, as the Government was concerned about the possible violation of international law during the Rendition.

160. It was against that backdrop that the Special Projects Division in the office of the NDPP was requested to provide guidance to the IPID investigating team led by Khuba. The Special Projects Division team was headed by Mosing assisted by Moeletsi. The team met with Khuba sometime in July 2013. The team produced the Preliminary Report into the Rendition on 22 October 2013. Mosing and Moeletsi advised Khuba to conduct further investigations into certain aspects of the report.
161. On 12 November 2013, Mosing addressed an internal memorandum to the NDPP and the DNDPP. This memorandum sought to provide an update on the progress made by the Special Projects team and the investigating team led by Khuba. The memorandum goes on to say that there was outstanding evidence that Khuba and the team had to obtain or gather in order to finalise the Preliminary Report.
162. According to Mosing, the outstanding information related to the warning statements from Dramat, Sibiya and Maluleke, an analysis of the cell phone data, as well as a report on the analysis of vehicle tracking information of the members involved in the operation during the Rendition.
163. The investigation team finalised its investigation on or about 22 January 2014 and compiled a report with final recommendations. That was a final report on the investigation in the Rendition. It was handed to the Special Projects team so that the NDPP could make a decision to either prosecute or not prosecute those implicated in the report.
164. On 13 February 2014 Mosing addressed another internal memorandum to Jiba and Chauke, indicating that the investigations had been finalised and that the report from IPID had been submitted for the purposes of considering the merits of the case. This internal memorandum also enclosed the docket comprising of two lever arch files, together with other files containing the cellular phone data and evidence obtained from a computer belonging to the DPCI.

165. According to Chauke the receipt of the internal memorandum from Mosing on or about 14 February 2014 was preceded by a meeting wherein the NDPP advised Chauke to consider the docket and take a decision in regard to same. Chauke was assisted by Advocate Van Zyl who was the Deputy Director of Public Prosecutions for South Gauteng.
166. Subsequent to the internal memorandum from Mosing, the docket was handed to the office of Chauke for a decision on whether to prosecute on the matter. According to Chauke, before his office could even make a decision on the matter, Khuba and Angus from IPID collected the docket from Advocate Van Zyl's office on 7 March 2014 and signed a receipt thereof. It bears mentioning that this occurred shortly after McBride was appointed as the executive director of IPID. According to Khuba, he collected the docket following an instruction from McBride for him to do so.
167. On 18 June 2014 Advocate Van Zyl telephoned Khuba requesting the docket from the latter. Khuba told him that McBride had instructed him to return the docket to the NDPP and that it had been done. Khuba did not give or specify the date by which the docket was returned to the NDPP by himself.
168. Advocate Van Zyl telephoned Mosing to enquire whether the docket had been returned to the office of the NDPP. Mosing advised him that the dockets were never returned to him.
169. Chauke addressed a letter on 3 July 2014 to the NDPP informing him about the above sequence of events regarding the docket. The NDPP officially responded to the letter on 20 August 2014 indicating that the NDPP is in a process of considering the matter and that Chauke may close his file.

170. Sometime in December 2014, the NDPP enquired from Chauke about the case and wanted to know whether he was still involved in the matter. Chauke was surprised by this enquiry from the NDPP as according to him (Chauke) he was instructed by the same NDPP to close his file on the matter. Chauke advised the NDPP that he had since close his file on the matter and was not dealing with it anymore.
171. Mzinyathi told Werksmans that he received a telephone call from the NDPP on or about 10 January 2015 asking him about his knowledge of the Rendition. Mzinyathi told the NDPP that he did not have a clue of what the NDPP was talking about. According to Mzinyathi the NDPP told him that he had received the docket in the matter from Chauke and that the matter fell under Mzinyathi's jurisdiction because Diepsloot was under Atteridgeville which fell under North Gauteng DPP. On the day this call was made, Mzinyathi was on leave. He only returned from leave on or about 13 January 2015. Shortly after his return, the docket was delivered to his offices.
172. Mzinyathi spoke to his colleague the DDPP for North Gauteng, Baloyi regarding the docket and informed him that they must formulate a view on the matter. According to Mzinyathi sometime in March 2015 he received a report (being the Second Report) from the NDPP. This report summarised the statements in the docket and made its own recommendations as to who should be charged.
173. Before Mzinyathi made his own recommendations, he approached the NDPP to understand certain things. The NDPP told him that there was a First Report and that he should read it as well. The NDPP provided him with a copy of the First Report. Mzinyathi shared this First Report with Baloyi and they discussed the potential charges to be brought against those implicated in the report.

174. Mzinyathi and Baloyi finalised their reading of the docket and the two reports and made recommendations on who should be charged and prosecuted. They sent their recommendations to the NDPP on 13 March 2015.

175. On 31 March 2015 the NDPP wrote another letter to Chauke informing him that matter has been referred to Mzinyathi, who has recommended that all the accused including Dramat and Sibiya be prosecuted for inter alia kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice. This letter attached the letter addressed by Mzinyathi to the NDPP on 13 March 2015.

176. The letter from the NDPP, inter alia, stated that the matter must be returned to the DPP South Gauteng because it now falls under the jurisdiction of the DDP South Gauteng since 1 December 2014. As from that date Diepsloot fell under the South Gauteng in terms of the Government Notice No 861 of 31 October 2014.

D. MCBRIDE'S DISCIPLINARY PROCESS

177. On or about 10 March 2015 I wrote a letter to Mr McBride inviting him to make written representations as to why I should not place him on precautionary suspension pending an investigation of certain various acts of serious misconduct. Chief amongst those various serious acts of misconduct was the altering of the IPID report which recommended that Lieutenant General Dramat and Major General Sibiya be criminally charged with kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice.

178. Mr McBride denied the allegations I had put forward in my letter of intention to place him on precautionary suspension. He launched an urgent application before the High Court in which he sought to interdict me from suspending him from his position as Executive Director. The interim interdict was sought pending the final determination of Part B of the application in which he sought the declaration of my decision to initiate a process to suspend him from his position to be unlawful and invalid and it be set aside. He also wanted the court to declare certain provisions of the IPID Act to be unconstitutional and unlawful to the extent that they purport to authorise me to suspend or remove him from office. These provisions were section 6(6) of the IPID Act, section 17(1) and 17(2) of the Public Service Act, as well as paragraph 2.7(2) of chapter 7 and paragraph 18 of chapter 8 of the Senior Management Service Handbook, 2003.
179. Part A of the application was heard on 13 March 2015 and on 18 March 2015 judgment was handed down in which the application was struck off the roll for lack of urgency.
180. After the application was struck off the roll for lack of urgency and on 24 March 2015, I placed Mr McBride on suspension. His suspension was effected in terms of section 6(3)(a) and (6) of the IPID Act; section 16A (1), 16B, 17(1) and (2) of the Public Service Act and Regulation 13 of the IPID Regulations.
181. On or about 6 May 2015 Mr McBride was served with a notice to attend a disciplinary enquiry. The charges proffered against him included amongst others:
- 180.1 Alteration of recommendations in the 22 January 2014 report which report recommended that Lieutenant General Dramat and Major General Sibiya of the DPCI be charged with kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice;

- 180.2 The deletion/omission of evidence in the original 18 March 2014 incriminating Lieutenant General Dramat and Major General Sibiya in which it was recommended that no criminal charges be brought against the two;
- 180.3 Misrepresentation of facts surrounding the two reports to me;
- 180.4 Interference with the investigation by instructing Mr Khuba not to attend an interview with Werksmans Attorneys;
- 180.5 Misrepresentation that Lieutenant General Dramat and Major General Sibiya had been cleared by the IPID investigation;
- 180.6 Dishonesty in that he advised Werksmans Attorneys that he had only seen the March 2015 report and not the January 2014 report;
- 180.7 Gross insubordination and contravention of the PFMA in that he made a payment of R500 000.00 towards his legal fees by IPID for services relating to his High Court urgent application.”
182. The enquiry was scheduled to sit for the first time on or about 21 May 2015. Advocate Phillip Mokoena SC from the Johannesburg Bar was appointed to chair the enquiry. A day before the scheduled sitting of the enquiry Mr McBride launched an application before Advocate Mokoena to have the disciplinary enquiry stayed pending the final determination of the constitutional challenge of certain provisions of the IPID Act in the High Court, or alternatively that the enquiry be stayed pending Cabinet's decision of a chairperson in terms of clause 7(3)(b) of the Disciplinary Code and Procedure of the Public Service.

183. Advocate Mokoena ruled against Mr McBride on or about 14 July 2015 and by agreement between the parties the enquiry was scheduled to reconvene on 27 to 31 July 2015.
184. Around 16 July 2015 Mr McBride launched an urgent application before the Labour Court wherein he sought to interdict the disciplinary enquiry pending the final determination of the constitutional challenge in the High Court. He also challenged the appointment of Advocate Mokoena in terms of clause 3(c)(i) of the Public Service Collective Bargaining Council Resolution 1 of 2003 as he alleged that the presiding officer for the enquiry ought to have been appointed by Cabinet.
185. Advocate Mokoena's ruling in which he declined to stay the disciplinary proceedings pending the Constitutional Court challenge in the High Court by Mr McBride was also sought to be reviewed. The Labour Court granted the interdict pending the final determination of Mr McBride's Constitutional Court challenge in the High Court.
186. Before the High Court, Mr McBride's case rested solely on the constitutionality of the removal provisions. The initial allegations of me acting in bad faith and with an ulterior motive were abandoned and did not feature in court. He persisted with an order declaring the removal provisions to be unconstitutional as they did not permit the necessary security of tenure for the executive of the IPID and as a result they also did not afford the IPID with the standards of independence required by section 206(6) of the Constitution.

187. Judgment was handed down on 4 December 2015 and it basically held that the removal provisions were unconstitutional to the extent that they purport to empower me to unilaterally suspend, institute disciplinary proceedings or remove the executive head. The order to suspend the declaration of invalidity to allow Parliament to rectify the defects in the IPID Act was made and an interim measure was that section 6(6) would be replaced by sections 17DA (3) to (7) of the South African Police Service Act 68 of 1995.
188. Mr McBride applied to the Constitutional Court for confirmation of the order of the High Court in terms of section 172(2)(d) of the Constitution and Rule 16(4) of the Constitutional Court Rules.
189. Before the Constitutional Court the issue was narrow and was whether the Minister's powers to suspend and remove the executive head as contained in section 6(6) of the IPID Act were constitutionally permissible or unduly impeded on the independence of the IPID as required by section 206(6) of the Constitution.
190. The Constitutional Court made the following order:
- *1. It is declared that the following provisions are invalid to the extent that they authorise the Minister of Police to suspend, take any disciplinary steps pursuant to suspension, or remove from office the executive director of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate –
 - 1.1 Section 6(3)(a) and section 6(6) of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act 1 of 2011;
 - 1.2 *Sections 16A (1) and 16B, 17*1) and 17(2) of Public Service Act, Proclamation 103 of 1994;*
 - 1.3 Regulation 13 of the IPID Regulations for the operation of the Independent Police Investigate Directorate (GNR98 of Government Gazette 35018 of 10 February 2012), (IPID Regulations).

2. Parliament is directed to cure the defects in the legislation within twenty-four months from the date of this order.

3. Pending the correction of the defects:

3.1 Section 6(6) of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act 1 of 2011 is to be read as providing as follows:

“Subsections 17DA (3) to 17DA (7) of the South African Police Service Act 68 of 1995 apply to the suspension and removal of the executive director of IPID with changes as may be required by context.”

3.2 Section 16A (1), 16B, 17(1) and 17(2) of the Public Service Act, Proclamation 103 of 1994 and Regulation 13 of the IPID Regulations are declared inconsistent with section 206(6) of the Constitution and shall not apply to the executive director of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate.

4. It is declared that the decision of the Minister of Police to suspend Mr McBride from his position as executive director of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate is invalid and is set aside.

5. The order in paragraph 4 is suspended for thirty days in order for the National Assembly and the Minister of Police, if they so choose, to exercise their powers in terms of the provisions referred to in paragraph 3.1 above.

6. It is declared that the sin of the Minister of Police to institute a disciplinary enquiry against Mr Robert McBride, which was to commence on 21 May 2015, is invalid and is set aside.

7. The Minister of Police is directed to pay the costs of Mr Robert McBride including the costs of two counsel.”

191. As is evident from paragraph 5 of the order of the Constitutional Court, the invalidity of my decision to suspend Mr McBride was suspended for a period of thirty days in order to allow the National Assembly and myself, if we so chose, to exercise our powers in terms of the provisions of the South African Police Service Act.

192. It is noteworthy that in all the forums that Mr McBride approached, none of them set aside his suspension and ordered his reinstatement.
193. In compliance with paragraph 5 of the Constitutional Court order in paragraph 5, I referred the matter to Parliament through its Parliamentary Portfolio Committee on police for Parliament to make a decision on whether to press on with the misconduct charges against McBride. I submitted the charge sheet and files containing portfolio of evidence in order to enable Parliament to make a decision.
194. Despite repeated follow ups to the Parliament whether a decision to charge McBride with misconduct had been taken, nothing happened until the 30 das prescribed by the Constitutional Court order had lapsed and McBride returned to work. In essence, Parliament blatantly violated the Constitutional Court order.
195. Subsequent to the lapse of the thirty-day period stipulated in the order of the Constitutional Court, there was no legal impediment to Mr McBride resuming his duties as the executive head of IPID.
196. Mr McBride resumed his duties as the executive head of IPID not as a result of being exonerated from the charges that were preferred against him, but because of a failure to take a decision to pursue the preferred charges against him by the committee authorised to do so pursuant to the Constitutional Court order. The merits or otherwise of the charges preferred against him were never tested and he also never had to place his version of events and contradict the prima facie evidence of altering the January report.
197. It is also noteworthy that there was no finding by any of the courts that I acted in bad faith, mala fide or for ulterior purpose in suspending and instituting disciplinary proceedings against Mr McBride. What was found by the court was that the provisions (which were the law then) that I relied on in suspending and instituting disciplinary proceedings against Mr McBride unduly impeded on the independence of the IPID as required by section 206(6) of the Constitution and nothing else.

E. KHUBA AND SESOKO'S DISMISSALS

198. I have already stated and demonstrated that Mr McBride was not truthful when he, amongst others, alleged that he did not even know about the existence of the January report as it pre-dated his appointment as IPID Executive Director. He further alleges that the Werksmans report was the only evidence against him, Khuba and Sesoko, and it ultimately led to Khuba and Sesoko's dismissals.
199. Khuba was placed on precautionary suspension on or about 21 May 2015 and was notified to attend a disciplinary enquiry on or about 7 July 2015. The charges preferred against Mr Khuba related to gross dishonesty and defeating the ends of justice.
200. On 23 September 2015, the date of the disciplinary enquiry, Mr Khuba was represented by an attorney. He freely and voluntarily pleaded guilty to the charges preferred against him. IPID and Mr Khuba reached an agreement with regards to the sanction to be imposed on Mr Khuba for pleading guilty to serious charges of gross dishonesty and defeating the ends of justice. IPID agreed to impose a sanction of a final written warning valid for a period of six (6) months and to uplift Mr Khuba's suspension allowing him to resume his duties on or about 28 September 2015.

201. In pleading guilty to the charges preferred against him Mr Khuba essentially admitted that he in collaboration with Sesoko and McBride altered the January report. Despite the serious charges preferred against him, IPID agreed to a lenient sanction because the then Acting Executive Director, Mr Kgamanyane, believed that Mr Khuba was candid in accepting his wrongdoing.
202. On or about 25 September 2015 Mr Khuba deposed to an affidavit which contradicted what he pleaded guilty to. In IPID's view this was a perpetuation of Mr Khuba's dishonesty and defeating the ends of justice. In the affidavit he deposed to on behalf of Mr Sesoko, Mr Khuba sought to assert that Mr Sesoko and McBride were not aware of the existence of the January report and that the January report was not a final report. This was in stark contrast to what he pleaded guilty to. When interviewed by Werksmans he admitted that he regarded the January report as the final report and that in submitting the January report to the NPA, he was accompanied by Sesoko.
203. Mr Khuba was given an opportunity to make written representations as why he should not be dismissed in light of his dishonest conduct of deposing to a contradictory affidavit in favour of Mr Sesoko. Subsequent to a consideration of the written representations by him, IPID decided to summarily dismiss Mr Khuba on the grounds of the employment relationship having irretrievably broken down as a result of his dishonest conduct. A continued employment relationship in light of his dishonest conduct would have been intolerable and would have invariably put IPID into disrepute. IPID was of the view that the public would lose confidence in it if it knew that IPID kept in its senior ranks dishonest people such as Mr Khuba.

204. Subsequent to his dismissal, Mr Khuba approached the Labour Court on an urgent basis seeking, amongst others, payment of his salary pending the outcome of an unfair labour practice dispute that he had declared with the Bargaining Council. He effectively sought reinstatement. The application was dismissed by the Labour Court.
205. After the dismissal of his application by the Labour Court he declared a dispute with the Bargaining Council which was also dismissed. The arbitrator found that Mr Khuba's misconduct was serious and constituted a breach of the trust relationship. He also found that the trust in the employment relationship between Mr Khuba and IPID had been destroyed and that rendered the continued employment intolerable. He concluded that he could not interfere with the sanction that was imposed by IPID and considered it appropriate under the circumstances.
206. The same charges that were preferred against Mr Khuba were also preferred against Mr Sesoko. Both Mr Khuba and Mr Sesoko were scheduled to appear on the same day for the disciplinary enquiry, being 23 September 2015. However, Mr Sesoko did not attend the enquiry on the scheduled date.
207. Mr Sesoko's disciplinary enquiry ultimately commenced on or about 20 June 2016 and it was scheduled to run the entire week ending on 24 June 2016. Mr Sesoko was represented by attorney and counsel in the enquiry.
208. He raised certain preliminary objections which included, amongst others, the challenge of Mr Kgamanyane's appointment as Acting Executive Director as well as seeking the stay of the disciplinary proceedings until Mr McBride's case was heard in the Constitutional Court and judgment delivered. The preliminary objections were dismissed on or about 3 June 2016 by the appointed chairperson, Advocate Mxolisi Zondo.

209. While the disciplinary enquiry was proceeding, Mr Sesoko launched an urgent application before the Labour Court in which he sought the stay of the disciplinary proceedings on the basis that he was challenging the Acting Executive Director's appointment by me. In essence Mr Sesoko's challenge was that the appointment of the Acting Executive Director, Mr Kgamanyane, by me was unconstitutional and invalid and consequently the basis upon which Mr Kgamanyane had initiated disciplinary proceedings against him was equally invalid. The application was dismissed with costs.
210. The enquiry proceeded and the evidence of Advocate Mosing was led and he testified, amongst other things, that the January report was in fact the final report. Advocate Mosing was cross examined by Mr Sesoko's counsel. The chairperson of the enquiry, Advocate Mxolisi Zondo, found that the January report was the final report and that Mr Sesoko's conduct in co-authoring the March report amounted to alteration of the January report which constituted misconduct on his part. He found Mr Sesoko guilty of misconduct.
211. On the last day of the enquiry Mr Sesoko elected to waive his right to be heard. He did not give his version of the events and did not attend the proceedings. He instead, through his legal representative, provided the enquiry with what purported to be a sick note with the hope that the chairperson would allow for another postponement and thereby delaying and frustrating finalisation of the proceedings.
212. The chairperson of the enquiry gave an ex tempore ruling with regard to Mr Sesoko's guilt. He thereafter invited the parties to address him with regards to aggravation and mitigation. Mr Sesoko's counsel declined to address the chairperson on mitigating factors as he was of the view that it would serve no purpose as Mr Sesoko was not there. IPID's counsel proceeded to advance aggravating factors where after consideration by the chairperson of the enquiry, he ruled that the appropriate sanction to be imposed in respect of Mr Sesoko's serious misconduct was that of a dismissal.

F. APPOINTMENT OF MR KGAMANYANE

213. Mr. Kgamanyane was appointed by me to act as Executive Director after I had suspended McBride. At the time of his appointment as acting Executive Director he was the provincial head of IPID in the Free State. I appointed him in an acting capacity and nothing more. He was a suitable candidate to be appointed as an acting Executive Director by virtue of his experience as well as his qualifications which include a Masters degree. His curriculum vitae will be made available with all corroborating documentation that will be provided to the commission once received.

SECTION B

AD SERIATIM RESPONSE TO CERTAIN PARAGRAPHS OF MCBRIDE'S STATEMENT

Ad paragraph 16

214. The allegation that IPID issued a progress report on 22 January 2014 is false. It is also false that McBride did not know about the 22 January 2014 report. The report dated 22 January 2014, which was signed by Khuba, the lead investigator was the final report. This was not only confirmed by Khuba, but the Werksmans investigation also came to the conclusion that the 22 January 2014 report was the final report.

215. This conclusion on every conceivable basis, cannot be faltered. Prior to the final report of 22 January 2014, Khuba produced two draft reports, to the best of my recollection, one was produced in October 2013 and the other in November 2013. Those were drafts, hence Khuba never signed them. Any suggestion that one would sign a draft or so-called progress report is absurd. The final report which implicates Mr Anwar Dramat (Dramat) and Mr Shadrack Sibiya (Sibiya) is the one which McBride deleted crucial and material information from it in order to unlawfully exonerate Dramat and Sibiya.

Ad paragraph 17

216. I admit that McBride was appointed on Friday March 2014 by my predecessor. However, he did not resume his duties on that day. He assumed his duties on or about 6 March 2014. On his arrival, on his first day of duty, he wanted the files pertaining to the "rendition" investigation. Prior to his appointment Ms. Koekie Mbeki was the acting Executive Director of IPID. She resigned shortly after McBride's arrival at IPID.
217. If Ms. Koekie Mbeki is invited to testify, she would shed light on the final report of 22 January 2014 because when the investigation was finalized, she was the acting Executive Director of IPID.

218. Whilst McBride said he wanted to be briefed on all high-profile matters, I understand that the only matter that he was interested in was the rendition matter and never thereafter asked about other high-profile matters.

219. This paragraph confirms that McBride was not only briefed about the rendition matter on the first day in office, but he was told about the final report, hence he concluded that he was rejecting the outcome of the investigation as being not conducted independently and impartially in line with the IPID Act. Thus, McBride's evidence that he did not see the 22 January 2014 report is false and should be rejected outright.

Ad paragraph 19

220. This paragraph confirms that McBride was briefed with a case file and that he looked at the case file. Otherwise, it would have been absurd for McBride to be briefed about the investigation in the absence of the file and without him asking to look at the file before concluding that the investigation was not conducted independently and impartially and before he could formulate his view that the evidence contained in the file was not satisfactory, fair and credible.

221. It follows that during the briefing, Khuba told him about the report that he had already submitted to the NPA and that the investigation was finalized. It also follows that once he told him about the report that he had submitted to the NPA, McBride asked for it. That is logical, otherwise it would not make sense for McBride to reject the evidence in the file without wanting to see how Khuba dealt with the evidence in the report and the recommendations Khuba had made in the report. Besides, neither the report by Khuba and the Werksmans report say that Dramat and Sibiya were at the crime scene.

222. McBride's understanding seems to be that in order for Dramat and Sibiya to be guilty of anything, they ought to have been at the scene of the assault, kidnapping and transportation of the Zimbabwean nationals. Such a proposition by McBride is absurd.

Ad paragraph 20

223. The contents of this paragraph are denied.

224. There was no additional investigation that was undertaken which Khuba was not aware of when he submitted the final report to the NPA. The issue of the analysis of the cell phone records was already been alluded to by Khuba in his report. It matters not whether the cell phone records analysis placed them at the scene of the crime. The available evidence according to Khuba and supported by Mosing's memorandum established that Dramat and Sibiya were implicated in the unlawful rendition and that they were aware of it, hence Khuba and advocate Mosing proceeded to submit the report for a decision to prosecute.

Ad paragraph 21

225. I deny the contents of this paragraph.

226. The 18 March 2014 report is the unlawful report which is the product of unlawful tempering with the original report (final report) of 22 January 2014. The 18 March 2014 report is word for word the same as the 22 January 2014 report save for the paragraphs which McBride deleted in order to exonerate Dramat and Sibiya and also altering the conclusion.

227. McBride deleted information from the 22 January 2014 report which confirmed that he (McBride) was aware of the 22 January 2014 report, saw it, read it and made alterations from it. The Werksmans report also correctly found that McBride deleted information from the final report in order to exonerate Dramat and Sibiya thus defeating the ends of justice. This conclusion cannot be faltered having regard to the overwhelming documentary evidence and common cause facts.

228. When interviewed by Werksmans, McBride confirmed that he was making deletions on the computer. What else was he deleting if it was not the information from the final report? Werksmans has tabulated the paragraphs deleted in the final report and those added in the doctored report of 18 March 2014.

Ad paragraph 22

229. This paragraph is false and misleading.

230. The IPID final report signed by Khuba is the one which recommends that Dramat and Sibiya be criminally charged. McBride unlawfully altered the report in order to exonerate them. McBride has not explained in his statement why he instructed Khuba and Angus to collect the docket from the NPA.

231. The docket was indeed collected from the Director of Public Prosecutions, South Gauteng from the office of advocate Van Zyl. When they collected the docket they phoned McBride to find out whether they should deliver the docket to him at Benoni where he was attending a conference/workshop or whether they should take it to his office. McBride informed them to take it to his office. Mosing had confirmed that the final report was in the docket submitted for a decision to prosecute. Khuba also confirmed as such.

232. They (Khuba and Angus) gave the docket to McBride when they took it to his office. McBride does not say that he did not read the docket. It is logical that he read the docket. When reading the docket, he also read the report which was in the docket. Khuba said that McBride had requested him to email the report to him in soft copy which he did. This is to make it easy in order to effect changes in the report electronically, hence McBride's concession that he deleted or worked on the document.

233. The evidence am told is that he was physically sitting in front of the computer making the changes to the report. This again, demonstrate without a shadow of doubt that McBride is misleading this Commission when he says that he did not see the 22 January 2014 report.

Ad paragraph 23

234. I deny the contents of this paragraph.

235. The 22 January 2014 report was the final report. That is why it was signed by Khuba. Ms. Koekie Mbeki if called to testify would explain as she did to Werksmans Mr. July that she told Khuba to sign the report alone and submit it to the NPA for a decision which he did. She also told Sesoko not to be directly involved in the investigation because the outcome could be challenged by those implicated on grounds of Sesoko's criminal record which at the time he was in the process of trying to have it expunged.

236. There is no legislative provision which requires the final report to be signed by three people. That was not the case during the time of Ms. Koekie Mbeki. This requirement was introduced by McBride himself after his appointment.

Ad paragraph 24

237. I confirm that I suspended McBride in terms of the powers vested in me by the then statute before the provisions of section 6 of the IPID Act was declared unconstitutional by the court.

Ad paragraph 25

238. To the best of my knowledge, McBride has not in any of the affidavits he filed in the courts, challenged the Werksmans report. Hence no application to set it aside has ever been made.

Ad paragraph 26

239. The judgment was only confined to my powers as conferred by the impugned provisions. McBride has failed to motivate his allegations of ulterior motive and had faith and abandoned them before the High Court and the Constitutional Court. Both the High Court and the Constitutional Court declined to lift his suspension. He remained suspended until after 30 days had lapsed since the Constitutional court's judgment and after the Portfolio Committee of Parliament failed to take the decision as mandated by the Constitutional court order.

Ad paragraph 27

240. I deny the allegations in this paragraph.

Ad paragraph 28

241. I deny the contents of this paragraph. The allegation is not even substantiated, and neither is it supported by any evidence.

Ad paragraph 29

242. I deny the contents of this paragraph.

243. Werksmans was not appointed to look into the rendition, but it was appointed to investigate thereto, report and make a finding on which of the two reports was the final report. The terms of reference that I gave to Werksmans are self-explanatory.

Ad paragraph 30

244. I deny the contents of this paragraph.

Ad paragraph 34

245. McBride was at all material times legally represented, that he knew the legal process available to him if he was not happy with the Werksmans report and he chose not to follow the legal process to challenge the report.

246. I accepted the findings and recommendations of Werksmans report because they were both factually and legally sound. The process they followed was procedurally and substantively fair and they afforded those they interviewed including McBride a fair opportunity to deal with the questions put to them as is evident from the transcripts.
247. It is also disconcerting that McBride seeks to impugn the integrity of a reputable and respected lawyer, Mr. July without producing any shred of evidence of impropriety. It is also disconcerting that this issue was not taken further with McBride when he testified to produce evidence of impropriety.
248. McBride made no allegations of impropriety in any of the affidavit he filed in the High Court, Labour court and the constitutional court and never in those affidavit and in argument presented on his behalf in those courts attack the Werksmans report as flawed and illegitimate.

Ad paragraph 35

249. The report was in the very docket that McBride instructed Khuba and Angus to collect from the NPA. It is false that I got the report from the NPA. It is correct that the report signed by Khuba was submitted to the NPA with the docket and it was part of the docket. The statement that McBride said he considered to formulate a view that he was not satisfied with the evidence, were attached to the report. How did he consider the statements but at the same time not having seen the report? There is no doubt that McBride was attempting to mislead this Commission when he said he did not see the 22 January 2014 report.

Ad paragraph 36

250. It is again disconcerting that McBride simply without evidence makes defamatory allegations that Werksmans was in cahoots with me to conduct a sham investigation and he was not called upon to produce evidence to back up his defamatory allegations when testifying.

251. Rule 3.8 of the Commission's rules requires a member of the Commission's legal team to put questions to any witness who gives evidence, including putting questions aimed at assisting the Commission in assessing the truthfulness of the evidence of that witness.

252. I deny that Werksmans was in cahoots with me to conduct a sham investigation. I deny that I wanted to get rid of McBride. It would have been improper and reckless of me if I simply turned a blind eye to the serious allegations of tampering and defeating the ends of justice when people died during this illegal rendition. Werksmans is one of the largest reputable law firms in the country.

Ad paragraph 37

253. I admit the contents of this paragraph.

Ad paragraph 38

254. I have no knowledge of the contents of this paragraph.

255. Even if that could have happened, there was nothing wrong in the supervisor advising his subordinates to cooperate with an investigation.

Ad paragraph 39

256. I deny that McBride strongly contested the Werksmans report.

257. McBride never contested the Werksmans report at all. In the High Court, and the constitutional court, McBride was contesting my powers to suspend and institute disciplinary proceedings against him as he was challenging the constitutionality of section 6 of the IPID Act. I have no knowledge of the leakage of the report to the media and I deny that I was involved in a false narrative to discredit "them" publicly. McBride has produced no evidence to back this false allegation.

Ad paragraph 40

258. The Werksmans report was the investigation report, the evidence is in the documents and the statements taken from the people who were interviewed, being the people upon whom the probative value of the evidence depends. McBride interdicted the disciplinary inquiry at the Labour Court, and the witnesses never got the opportunity to testify and advise evidence which implicated him in support of the charges that were levelled against him.

Ad paragraph 41

259. I deny the contents of this paragraph.

260. I have never instructed Kgamanyane to suspend Khuba and Sesoko. This is yet another unfortunate allegation which McBride has not backed up with evidence.

Ad paragraph 42

261. The contents of this paragraph are patently false.
262. I have already demonstrated that McBride knew about the report and deleted certain paragraphs from it.

Ad paragraph 43

263. I have already stated that McBride did not challenge the Werksmans report in any of the court processes that he had embarked upon.

Ad paragraph 44

264. The contents of this paragraph are a blatant misrepresentation of what transpired between Mr. July and the prosecutor.
265. Mr. July told the prosecutor that it would serve no purpose in a criminal trial for the prosecutor to call him because whatever evidence he would have tendered would have been hearsay. He told the prosecutor that he should call those persons mentioned in the report as witnesses.

Ad paragraph 45

266. The contents of this paragraph are patently false. This is yet another unfortunate allegation made by McBride without providing proof.

Ad paragraph 46

267. The contents of this paragraph of false.

268. McBride has not provided evidence to back up this allegation that Khuba and Sesoko were suspended on my instruction. I have already demonstrated without a shadow of doubt that not only did McBride knew about the 22 January 2014 report but that he read it and then deleted some crucial information from it.

Ad paragraph 47

269. Mr Israel Kgamanyane (Kgamanyane) stabilized IPID during McBride's absence and managed it professionally and efficiently.

Ad paragraph 48

270. The constitutional court did not pronounce on the substantive merits of McBride's misconduct.

Ad paragraph 53

271. I have already stated that Kgamanyane performed exceptionally well at the helm of IPID during McBride's absence. The contents of this paragraph are denied.

Ad paragraph 54

272. The settlement aforesaid was unlawful because Sesoko was dismissed following a properly constituted disciplinary inquiry. Sesoko approached the Labour court unsuccessfully during the disciplinary inquiry to interdict it. The settlement was to circumvent the court process so that the arbitrator and the courts do not pronounce on the fairness or otherwise of Sesoko's dismissal.

Ad paragraph 55

273. Khuba pleaded guilty to unlawfully altering the report together with McBride and Sesoko.

Ad paragraph 56

274. The contents of this paragraph are denied.

Ad paragraph 58

275. I have no knowledge of any discussion between Mr Berning Ntlemeza (Ntlemeza) and Khuba.

Ad paragraph 60

276. McBride unfortunately does not say which were those disparaging remarks that I made about the judiciary. I deny that I have ever made disparaging remarks about the judiciary.

Ad paragraph 61

277. I deny any interference with the IPID's independence. At the time I suspended McBride I acted on the strength of the law that empowered me to do so until that provision of the IPID Act was declared unconstitutional by the court.

Ad paragraph 72

278. I have never instructed that IPID should pay for the legal costs incurred by the police.

Ad paragraph 73

279. I have no knowledge of these allegations.

Ad paragraph 74

280. I deny the contents of this paragraph.

Ad paragraph 75

281. I am unaware of any instability which was occasioned by the transfers in IPID.

Ad paragraph 76

282. I have no knowledge of the interactions between Kgamanyane and McBride. Kgamanyane is better placed to deal with this allegation, should the Commission grant me permission to call witnesses or the Commission mero motu call him

Ad paragraph 77

283. I deny that Kgamanyane was irregularly transferred.

Ad paragraph 131

284. The contents of these paragraphs are not worthy of a response as they are ridiculous and far-fetched. Legal practitioners place their expertise and services at the disposal of all who need their services without discriminating against anyone.

Ad paragraph 135

285. Mr Leon Mbangwa is not a foreigner nor is he an illegal immigrant. He is a South African citizen. His dispute with the Department of Home Affairs ended in court and it was resolved in his favour. The appointment of Mbangwa was a transfer from another organ of State. Mbangwa would be available to give evidence. He was transferred from KwaZulu Natal legislature, where he was a senior manager.

Ad paragraph 138

286. The reference group was a legitimate structure or group which was established in terms of the relevant provisions of the Public Service Act.

Ad paragraph 139

287. I deny that there was an ulterior purpose to the establishment of the reference group.

G. CONDONATION

288. The commission's legal team served me with a notice in terms of rule 3.3 of the rules of the commission. My attention was drawn to the fact that the commission's legal team intends to present the evidence of McBride from 11 April 2019.

289. In paragraph 5 of the notice the commission's legal team advised me that if I wish to give evidence, call any witnesses to testify on my behalf or cross examine McBride I had to apply within 14 calendar days of the notice in writing to the commission for leave to do so. Such application was to be submitted to the secretary of the commission.

290. Unfortunately, I have not been able to meet the 14 days given to me. It is for this reason that I apply for condonation. The reasons for the lateness are the following. Firstly I had to apply for legal assistance from the State through the office of the State Attorney. I engaged the services of a private attorney, a senior counsel and a junior counsel. I requested that the State carry the legal costs of my legal team. It took some time for the legal funding to be approved. In order not to be way out of time, I requested my legal team to start working on the matter so that by the time legal funding is approved, they do not have to start from the beginning. Indeed my legal team started requesting relevant documents from the Department, Werksmans Attorneys and Hogan Lovells Attorneys.

291. It was only on 23 May 2019 that I had my first consultation with my legal team to consider the statement by McBride as well as the supporting documentation to his statement. This was to enable me to give my legal representatives instructions with regards to the allegations by McBride that seek to implicate me.
292. Further documentation is still in possession of IPID whilst others is in the archives at Hogan and Lovells and Werksmans attorneys. It has not been easy to obtain all the required documentation. The legal team had commenced to peruse the documents received whilst awaiting others. Confirmation of legal funding was communicated on 25 June 2019. I then arranged a further consultation with my legal team to finalise the statement.
293. My legal team finalised the statement on 30 June 2019 for me to consider, make comments and then sign before Commissioner of oath. I had to arrange for my attorneys to travel to KwaZulu Natal where I currently reside to collect the statement.
294. I submit that I took all reasonable steps to minimize the delay. This is evidenced by me instructing my legal team to commence working on the matter despite having no confirmation of me being legally funded. This was on the understanding that when the approval for funding is granted, it would retrospectively apply from the date the legal team started working on the matter.
295. This Commission performs an important function, thus the interest of justice is paramount requiring the Commission to hear my version in rebuttal to the unfounded allegations by McBride.

296. It is in the interests of the work of the commission that I be granted condonation, and then leave to cross examine, testify and call witnesses is necessary.

297. Neither the Commission nor the evidence leaders or McBride have been prejudiced by the late submission of the statement. Non have suffered prejudice. The Commission is still dealing with other matters arising from time to time and continues to hear evidence of other witnesses. Its work is not hamstrung by the delay. Beside, the delay is not excessive. It is compensated by fairness and interest of justice.

298. The delay was not deliberate. It was simply beyond my powers.

H. CONCLUDING REMARKS

299. In one of his judgments, the then Chief Justice of the Constitutional Court, Justice Arthur Chaskalson once said, "The rights to life and dignity are the most important of all human rights. By committing ourselves to a society founded on the recognition of human rights we are required to value these two rights above all others. And this must be demonstrated by the State in everything that it does, including the way it punishes criminals. This is not achieved by objectifying murderers and putting them to death to serve as an example to others in the expectation that they might possibly be declared thereby."

300. The right to life stands at the apex of all the rights in the Bill of Rights. It ensures the continued existence of humanity, and awareness of all life. Without it, there is no one to say, "This is life," and therefore no concept of life itself.

301. Our social experience as South Africans recognizes also, the sanctity of life – the idea of the ultimate importance and inviolability of human life. In our faith-based traditions the concept of the sanctity of life transcends its “inviolability”, to include the view that, because people are made in God’s image, human life as an inherently sacred attribute that should be protected and respected at all times.

302. And thus, to entrench the full measure of the protection of human life, clauses 9 – 11 of our Constitution ensure:

301.1 Protection for everyone before the law and the rights to equal protection and benefit of the law;

301.2 Protection and respect of everyone’s dignity; and 301.3 Protection of the rights to life itself.

Primitive communism

303. In 1877, Lewis Henry Morgan describes “liberty, equality and fraternity of the ancient gentes.” He details how “communism in living” was reflected in the village architecture of native Americans.

304. In this “communism in living” – which is as he defines it, as, “the collective right to basic resources, the absence of hereditary status or authoritarian rule, and the egalitarian relationships that preceded exploitation and economic stratification in human history.” Thus, humanity, by and large, enjoys equality, dignity and lives in solidarity.

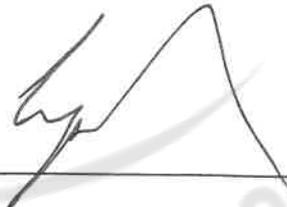

305. The transition from production for use to production for commodities for exchange – from slave owning to feudal and capitalist system of production; which transforms and reduces human life to a tradable economic asset in the labour market. The lesser the economic value of the individual, the lesser their value as a human being. The intersection of race and class in South Africa, determined that the life of an African, in particular, would be viewed by many as worthless.

Rights in practice

306. Applied in lived reality, the clauses on equality, the right to life, dignity of the human person, etc. in our Bill of Rights, stand at the apex of rights, the “continued existence of humanity, and awareness of all life, as well as the sanctity of life.”
307. What is the value of the bill of rights if we do not make it part of our lived reality and experience? What are the implications thereof, for our country’s future stability and peace? Can our country’s best interests ever be best served by us taking tactical detours even in relation to the bill of rights? Can you do so and still maintain the people’s faith in the Constitution? We do not think so.
308. If we do not attend to issues affecting the rights to life, equality and human dignity, we will slowly but surely, be eroding the very foundations of our just order, and planting the seeds of future generalized turmoil.
309. One life lost is one too many. We must protect it ferociously. The issues relating to the former Executive Director of IPID, McBride must be dealt with fairly and honestly, for they go to the very heart of the struggle for justice and the future of our country. The matter at issue resulted in a number of African lives being lost, some foreign nationals and others, South African. The two South Africans were both key witnesses on the renditions case.

310. For centuries, African lives have been brutalized, emasculated and molested particularly by people claiming to hold the highest of moral virtue. This destruction and dehumanization of African lives must be brought to a stop. The few of us, that still remain true and committed to the cause for humanity, with all our might, shall ensure a stop to this anti-human behaviour.
311. The issues in question irrevocably, put an end to some people's rights to life, and to all their other personal rights. Nothing of the people was left, except the memory in others. The issues resulted in human lives being treated like objects to be eliminated. This is the issue that inevitably required to be investigated, but most importantly, the conduct of McBride in interfering with the cause of justice by deleting crucial information from a final investigation report which was already in the hands of the NPA, awaiting the NPA's decision. The mere fact that McBride never got to answer to these serious charges because Parliament decided to do nothing, is on its own a miscarriage of justice, and lessons should be learned from it so that it is never to be repeated.
312. And, as Chief Justice Moegoeng Moegoeng once said during one of his interviews, "if the proper application of the Constitution and the law caused the heavens to fall, then let them fall."

2 INTRODUCTION

The offices of Werksmans have been mandated by the Honourable Minister of Police, Mr Nathi Nhleko, to conduct an investigation into the reports submitted by IPID which deal with the Rendition.

2.1 Terms of reference for the investigation

In conducting the aforesaid investigation, the Minister has provided Werksmans with the following terms of reference:

"5. Your terms of reference in the investigation are the following:

5.1 who and under what circumstances was the original report altered or how the Second Report came about with both reports signed by the same person; i.e Mr Khuba;

5.2 whether any misconduct or offence has been committed and if so by whom?;

5.3 whether there is prima facie evidence of misconduct and criminal liability by Lieutenant-Dramat; Major-Sibiya; and any other officers mentioned in the original report.;

5.4 the circumstances under which report and the docket handed in the NPA and what happened to the docket whilst in the NPA's possession;

5.5 any other matter that might come to your attention during the investigation which relevant to your conclusions and findings."

2.2 Factual background of the rendition

2.2.1 Based on an evaluation of the First and Second Reports as well as the documents and evidence before us, we have summarised the sequence of events of the Rendition as set out below.

- 2.2.2 During the period November 2010 until January 2011, a number of Zimbabwean nationals were arrested by SAPS together with Zimbabwean police officials. The arrest of these individuals was explained by the DPCI, in response to a parliamentary question posed by a member of the Congress of the People. The DPCI, through Dramat, advised parliament that the individuals in question were deported as illegal immigrants and had been arrested on suspicion of having committed or been involved in certain crimes, such as ATM bombings. The DPCI in its parliamentary response, further stated that when it came to light that the arrested individuals could not be linked to specific crimes, the individuals were deported to Zimbabwe.
- 2.2.3 From the documentation provided for our review, it appears that The DPCI was aware that the response to the parliamentary question was not factually correct. It is our view that they deliberately misled parliament in this regard.
- 2.2.4 The circumstances surrounding the arrests appeared to be questionable and raised a number of legal considerations relating to, inter alia, the lawfulness of the process followed by the SAPS in deporting the relevant Zimbabwean nationals.
- 2.2.5 The arrests of the five Zimbabwean nationals was effected in three stages which will be summarised briefly, below.
- 2.2.5.1 The first operation
- 2.2.5.1.1 The first operation relating to the arrest of Zimbabwean nationals took place on 5 November 2010 where four Zimbabwean nationals (Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maqhawe Sibanda and Shepard Tshuma) were arrested in Diepsloot and detained in the Orlando police station in Soweto. The reasons stated for their detention was that they were illegal immigrants. The operation was conducted by the DPCI head office and DPCI provincial office (TOMS). It is alleged that DPCI and TOMS were accompanied by two Zimbabwean police officers. The members of the operation were informed during a parliamentary briefing meeting that they were tracing suspects involved in a robbery committed in Zimbabwe during which a Zimbabwean police superintendent was fatally shot.

After the four Zimbabwean nationals referred to in 2.2.5.1.1 were booked into Orlando police station, Dumisani Witness Ndeya was booked out of Orlando police station in order to assist the SAPS with the tracing of a certain individual named John. John could not be traced and Dumisani Witness Ndeya was returned to Orlando police station. The four Zimbabwean nationals were detained over the weekend as illegal immigrants and on the morning of 8 November 2010 they were booked out of Orlando police station by Maluleke. Maluleke indicated at this time that the Zimbabwean nationals were to be transported to Beitbridge border post. Two of the Zimbabwean nationals were released and the remaining two were transported to Beitbridge border post and handed over to a contingent of Zimbabwean police.

The circumstances under which the Zimbabwean nationals were deported, is circumspect. The docket which was used during the deportation did not belong to the Department of Home Affairs, as it is required to in the case of deportations. Although there were documents which were presented as being documents issued under the auspices of the Department of Home Affairs in order to authorise the deportation, it appears from an analysis of such documentation by an expert in this regard, that the documents which purported to be issued by the Department of Home Affairs, were forged.

Maghawe Sibanda was later released by Zimbabwean police after allegedly spending eleven days in custody and being tortured. Dumisani Witness Ndeya died while in the custody of the Zimbabwean police.

2.2.5.2 Second operation

2.2.5.2.1 A second operation was conducted on or about 22 November 2010 by the same police units which conducted the first operation. In this second operation, Prichard Chuma was arrested in Diepsloot and detained at Alexandra police station under a Zimbabwean police reference number, being Bulawayo case number: 1337/11 and was booked out on 23 November 2010 and taken to Silverton police station.

2.2.5.2.2 It would appear that on 24 November 2010 W/O Selepe of the Gauteng TOMS unit of the DPCI, on instruction by Maluleke, booked out Prichard Chuma from Silverton police station and transported him to Beitbridge border post, accompanied by Maluleke, where Prichard Chuma was handed to Zimbabwean police.

2.2.5.2.3 Prichard Chuma was never seen again. It is presumed that he also died in Zimbabwe under police custody.

2.2.5.3 Third operation

2.2.5.3.1 Maluleke conducted this part of the operation with the assistance of the CIG (Crime Intelligence Gathering) members of Pretoria. Gordon Dube ("Dube"), a Zimbabwean national was arrested in conjunction with two other individuals. Dube had a number of criminal cases pending against him. During the arrest, which took place in Diepsloot on or about 11 January 2011, Dube was shot and injured.

2.2.5.3.2 Due to the fact that Dube was being treated at hospital instead of being held at Wierdabrug police station, he did not appear in court with the two other individuals who were arrested with him. He was, however, due to appear in court on 28 January 2011.

- 2.2.5.3.3 Dube did not appear in court as he was booked out of hospital on Maluleke's instructions. At the same time, Maluleke retrieved the gun that was found in Dube's possession when he was arrested from Weirdabrug police station. The same gun was allegedly used in the robbery in Zimbabwe referred to at 2.2.5.1.1 which resulted in the death of the Zimbabwean superintendent.
- 2.2.5.3.4 Maluleke informed the investigating officer, Lean Meyer, that Dube would be dealt with through immigration channels. Maluleke then transported Dube to Beitbridge and Dube never returned to South Africa.
- 2.2.5.3.5 Maluleke once again enlisted the services of CIG in order to trace an additional Zimbabwean national, Johnson Nyoni ("Nyoni"). Nyoni was traced in Diepsloot and arrested by the CIG members and the TRT unit of the Johannesburg Central police station, on 26 January 2011.
- 2.2.5.3.6 Nyoni was taken to the DPCI head office where the members who participated in the arrest of Nyoni were congratulated by Dramat. Photographs depicting the members involved in the arrest, Nyoni, two Zimbabwean police members and their vehicle, and the gun retrieved from Dube's possession, were taken by a third Zimbabwean police officer.
- 2.2.5.3.7 Nyoni was thereafter booked out on 28 January 2011 by Maluleke and taken, together with Dube, to Beitbridge border post. The entry in the registers at the relevant police station reflect that Nyoni was booked out for the purpose of extradition to Zimbabwe through the Beitbridge border post. Nyoni was killed while in the custody of the Zimbabwean police.

2.3 Relevant legislation

2.3.1 In conducting our investigation and for the purposes of drawing any legal conclusions, we have considered the following pieces of relevant South African legislation:

2.3.1.1 Immigration Act

2.3.1.1.1 The deportation of a fugitive must be dealt with in terms of an extradition agreement between South Africa and the country of nationality of the fugitive. If no such extradition agreement exists and the individual is an illegal; immigrant, the Immigration Act applies.

2.3.1.1.2 In the circumstance, there is no extradition agreement between Zimbabwe and South Africa. Notwithstanding that there exists an organisation formed in Zimbabwe in order to facilitate international police cooperation (namely, Southern African Regional Police Chiefs Co-operation Organisation) this organisation does not govern the deportation of Zimbabwean nationals who are illegal immigrants in South Africa. As such, the Immigration Act governs the deportation of Zimbabwean nationals who are illegal immigrants in South Africa.

2.3.1.1.3 The process which is required to be followed in deporting an illegal immigrant is governed by Section 34 of the Immigration Act. In terms of the aforementioned Section -

"34(1) Without the need for a warrant, an immigration officer [our emphasis] may arrest an illegal foreigner or cause him or her to be arrested, and shall, irrespective of whether such foreigner is arrested, deport him or her or cause him or her to be deported and may, pending his or her deportation, detain him or her or cause him or her to be detained in a manner and at a place determined by the Director-General, provided that the foreigner concerned -

- (a) shall be notified in writing of the decision to deport him or her and of his or her right to appeal such decision in terms of this Act;
- (b) may at any time request any officer attending to him or her that his or her detention for the purpose of deportation be confirmed by warrant of a Court, which, if not issued within 48 hours of such request, shall cause the immediate release of such foreigner;
- (c) shall be informed upon arrest or immediately thereafter of the rights set out in the preceding two paragraphs, when possible, practicable and available in a language that he or she understands;
- (d) may not be held in detention for longer than 30 calendar days without a warrant of a Court which on good and reasonable grounds may extend such detention for an adequate period not exceeding 90 calendar days, and
- (e) shall be held in detention in compliance with minimum prescribed standards protecting his or her dignity and relevant human rights."

2.3.1.1.4

It is evident from the above that an immigration officer is mandated to follow a particular process when dealing with illegal immigrants.

The Immigration Act defines 'immigration officer' to mean –

"an officer appointed by the Director-General to perform the functions of either the permitting office, port of entry or inspectorate as contemplated in the [Immigration] Act."

2.3.1.1.6 None of the police officers involved in the Rendition are or were, at the time, immigration officers in terms of the Immigration Act and as such, none of these persons were legally authorised to conduct a deportation of any Zimbabwean nationals.

2.3.1.1.7 The Immigration Act further provides in terms of Section 49 that-

"(2) Anyone who knowingly assists a person to enter or remain in, or depart [our emphasis] from the Republic in contravention of this Act, shall be guilty of an offence and liable on conviction to a fine or to imprisonment not exceeding five years;

(7) Anyone participating in a conspiracy of two or more persons to conduct an activity intended to contravene this Act, shall be guilty of an offence and liable on conviction to a fine or to imprisonment not exceeding seven years: Provided that if part of such activity is conducted or intended to be conducted in a foreign country, the offence shall be punishable by imprisonment not exceeding eight years without the option of a fine.

(8) Anyone who wilfully or through gross negligence produces a false certification contemplated by this Act, shall be guilty of an offence and liable on conviction to a fine or to imprisonment not exceeding three years.

(9) Anyone, other than a duly authorised public servant, who manufactures or provides or causes the manufacturing or provision of a document purporting to be a document issued or administered by the Department, shall be guilty of an offence and liable on conviction to imprisonment not exceeding 10 years without the option of a fine. "

2.3.1.1.8 It is evident that the procedure to be followed in respect of deporting an illegal immigrant is governed by the Immigration Act. The fact that the Immigration Act was not complied with in the Rendition, was part of the impetus giving rise to an investigation of the Rendition.

2.3.1.1.9 It is further evident that a deliberate contravention of the Immigration Act is a crime, subject to the penalties stipulated in the Immigration Act.

2.3.1.1.10 As already stated above, the Immigration Act was contravened during the Rendition.

2.3.1.2 The Act

2.3.1.2.1 The objectives of the Act are set out in Section 2 of the Act which provides-

- "(a) to give effect to the provision of Section 206(6) of the Constitution establishing and assigning functions to the Directorate on national and provincial level;*
- (b) to ensure independent oversight of the South African Police Service and Municipal Police Services;*
- (c) to align provincial strategic objectives with that of the national office to enhance the functioning of the Directorate;*
- (d) to provide for independent and impartial investigation of identified criminal offences allegedly committed by members of the South African Police Service and Municipal Police Services;*

- (e) to make disciplinary recommendations in respect of members of the South African Police Service and Municipal Police Services resulting from investigations conducted by the Directorate;
- (f) to provide for close co-operation between the Directorate and the Secretariat; and
- (g) to enhance accountability and transparency by the South African Police Service and Municipal Police Services in accordance with the principles of the Constitution."

Regulation 5(i) to the Act states:

"after collecting all evidence, statements and technical or expert reports, if applicable, submit a report on the investigation of the offence to the Executive Director or the relevant provincial head, as the case may be, containing recommendations regarding further action, which may include disciplinary measures to be taken against a member of the South African Police Service or the Municipal Police Service or criminal prosecution of such member." [own emphasis]

From a reading of the Act, and the above regulation, it is evident that both criminal and disciplinary recommendations may be made in relation to the conduct of members of SAPS and its directorates. This includes the DPCI as a directorate within SAPS. In addition, it appears that in terms of the regulations, the investigator must submit a report on the investigation of the offence to the executive director of IPID.

2.3.1.4 Relevant crimes and elements of such crimes

2.3.1.5 The criminal offences referred to below are not statutorily defined but are understood in common law to constitute the conduct set out below.

2.4 Methodology in conducting the investigation

2.4.1 In conducting the investigation and preparing this report we have-

2.4.1.1 had access to and have considered the First and Second Reports;

2.4.1.2 interviewed the following people:

2.4.1.2.1 Khuba;

2.4.1.2.2 Moukangwe;

2.4.1.2.3 Angus;

2.4.1.2.4 Sesoko;

2.4.1.2.5 Mosing;

2.4.1.2.6 Mzinyathi;

2.4.1.2.7 Baloyi;

2.4.1.2.8 Chauke;

2.4.1.2.9 McBride;

2.4.1.2.10 Jiba,

and

2.4.1.3 we have had access to and have considered the documentation listed in annexure A attached hereto.

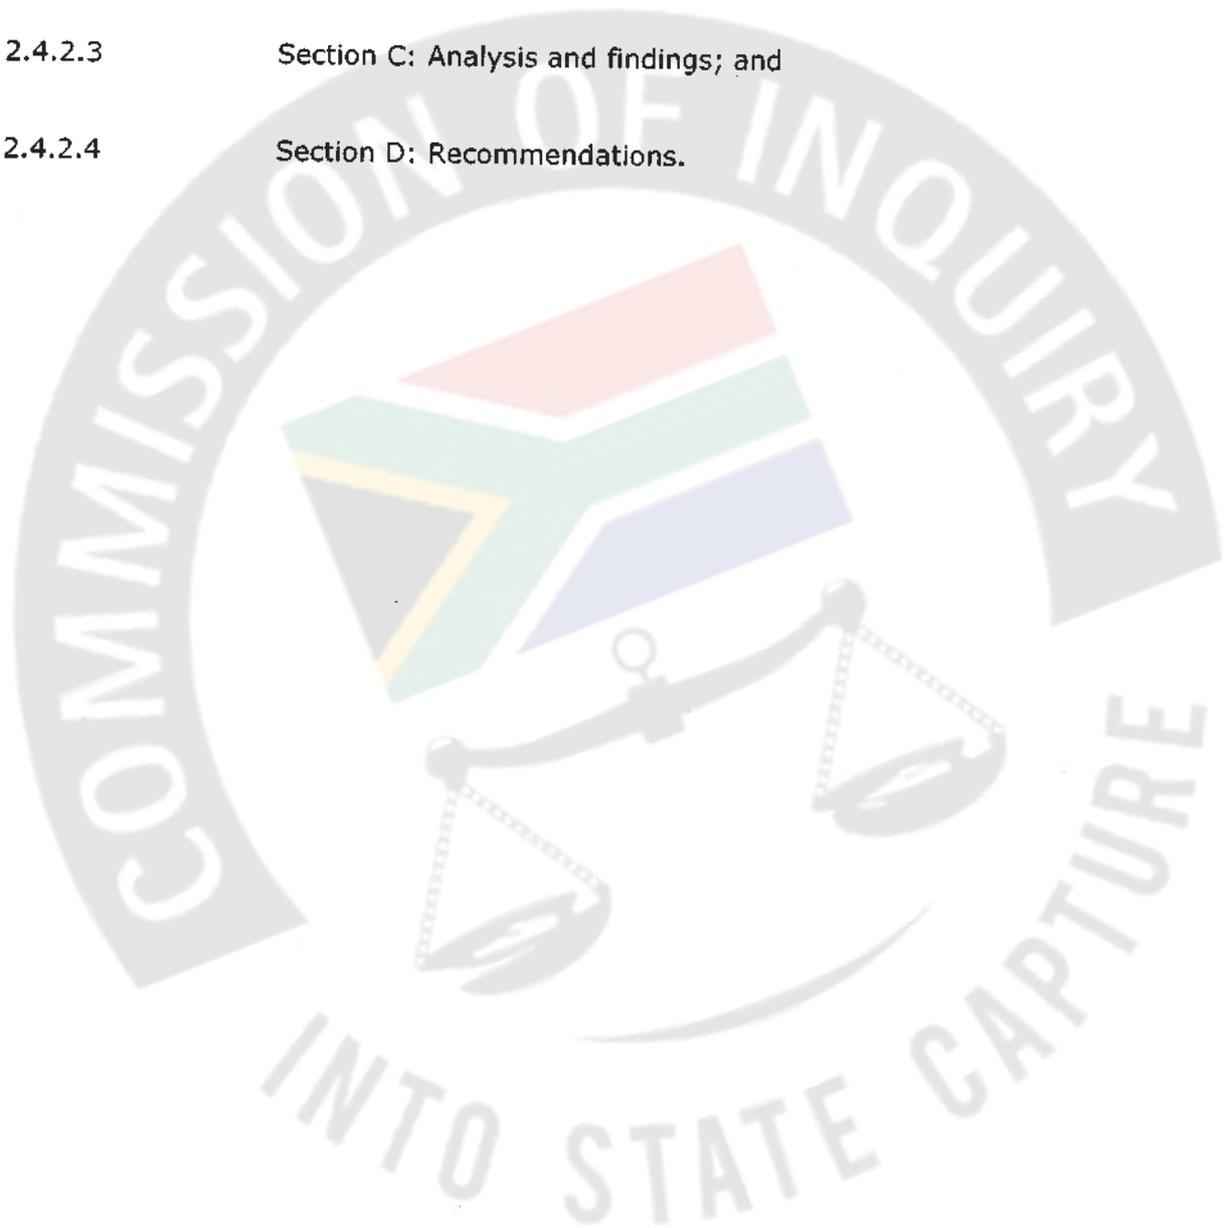

2.4.2 For ease of reference, we have divided the report into separate sections as follows-

2.4.2.1 Section A: Circumstances surrounding the compiling of each report;

2.4.2.2 Section B: Deletion of evidence from the First Report;

2.4.2.3 Section C: Analysis and findings; and

2.4.2.4 Section D: Recommendations.

3 SECTION A: CIRCUMSTANCES SURROUNDING THE COMPILING OF EACH REPORT

3.1 Section A1: First Report

3.1.1 At the outset, it is critical to mention that prior to Khuba conducting any investigations into the Rendition, there were two investigations into the Rendition that had already been undertaken, as follows –

3.1.1.1 the DPCI had conducted and concluded an internal investigation into the Rendition, in terms of which the DPCI members involved in the Rendition were exonerated from any wrongdoing in the Rendition; and

3.1.1.2 a member of Crime Intelligence, Moukangwe, had commenced an investigation into the Rendition. According to the investigation conducted under the auspices of Crime Intelligence was never concluded, instead it was done jointly with IPID.

3.1.2 The First Report was compiled by Khuba with the assistance of Moukangwe and the guidance of Mosing and Moeletsi. In this section we elucidate the circumstances under which this report was produced by Khuba and Moukangwe. Our explanation of the circumstances under which this report was produced is based on the interviews conducted with Khuba, Moukangwe and Mosing.

3.1.3 It is important to state that the Special Projects Division in the office of the NDPP was tasked to provide guidance to Khuba and Moukangwe during the course of their investigation. The Special Projects Division is headed by Mosing assisted by Moeletsi. The role of Mosing and Moeletsi was never to make a decision on whether to prosecute or not.

3.1.4 On 23 October 2012 Khuba received a docket from Sesoko and an appointment letter to conduct an investigation of all cases of alleged assault in relation to Sibiyá. Upon perusal of the docket of Diepsloot 390/07/2012 he discovered that the DPCI had received a complaint relating to the Rendition.

- 3.1.5 In light of the above, Khuba was instructed by the former Acting Executive Director of IPID Koekie Mbeki to conduct an investigation into the Rendition. He was further instructed to liaise with Moukangwe so that the latter could assist him to conduct the investigation.
- 3.1.6 Khuba briefed Moukangwe on the intended investigation and it was agreed that Moukangwe will assist Khuba in conducting the investigation into the Rendition. What was further agreed was that Moukangwe's name would not appear in the report once the investigation is finalised as the investigation was commissioned by IPID and Moukangwe was employed at Crime Intelligence.
- 3.1.7 Khuba began his investigation by interviewing certain members of the Department of Home Affairs. At this stage the docket already had statements obtained from the TOMS, Crime Intelligence and the Zimbabwean nationals who had been subject to the Rendition.
- 3.1.8 Subsequently, on 7 March 2013, Khuba visited the office Dramat. Moukangwe was a party to this meeting as well. At this meeting, Dramat stated that he did not recall meeting with the Zimbabwean Police. Khuba requested certain documents, including statements and documents related to the internal investigation into the Rendition conducted by DPCI, from Dramat. Dramat instructed Khuba that such request be made in writing.
- 3.1.9 When Khuba was finally provided with the requested documents, it appeared as if the statements provided recorded that the internal investigation conducted by DPCI was conducted properly and that everything was in order. Khuba, however, was unconvinced as to the correctness of the statement of a particular individual, being Madilonga, which statement was signed but not commissioned. Khuba met with Madilonga who provided a new statement detailing the actual events regarding his involvement in the Rendition.
- 3.1.10 Khuba conducted further investigations relating to the passage of individuals through the Beitbridge border post on the dates relevant to the Rendition. In addition, Khuba spoke to Leonie Verster who was Maluleke's supervisor. Leonie Verster indicated that Maluleke did not respect the chain of command and would communicate directly with Sibiya. Leonie Verster also drew Khuba's attention to the success reports directed to Dramat, Lebeya, Hlatswayo and others. Khuba perused the three success reports with which he had been provided and noted that one report dealt with the deportation or the arrest of Ndeya, and others that were connected relation to the murder of a Zimbabwean police officer in Zimbabwe.

3.1.11 One success report recorded that the Zimbabwean police came and met with Dramat on 5 November 2010 and requested assistance. The success report further recorded Maluleke's appointment to head the assignment to trace the Zimbabwean fugitives. Khuba obtained a laptop belonging to Maluleke and found that the success reports were generated from this laptop. The laptop also contained photographs of the operation as well as correspondence to Zimbabwean police officers.

3.1.12 Khuba's investigation continued. As part of the investigation, Khuba met with members of crime intelligence. At their offices, Khuba noticed that the photographs which he obtained from Maluleke's laptop relating to the operation were posted on the office walls of some members of crime intelligence. Khuba was informed by a member of crime intelligence, Mkasibe that during January 2011 when the arrests were completed, they went to DPCI's offices and Dramat personally came to the offices at House No. 3 and congratulated them for a job well done. According to Mkasibe, Dramat requested that they not tell anyone about the details of the operation. According to Khuba, Mkasibe confirmed that he has a historical relationship with Dramat due to their mutual involvement in Umkhonto We Sizwe.

3.1.13 Mkasibe's statement was corroborated by Mngwenya who confirmed that Dramat addressed the officers and congratulated them; however, Mngwenya did not mention Dramat telling them not to divulge the details of the operation. In addition, a third officer, Mokgobu, stated that she was out of the office at the time that Dramat attended to congratulate them; however, upon her return, she was informed that Dramat was congratulating the officers at House No.3.

- 3.1.14 Subsequently there was a leak of information regarding the investigation which was published in the Sunday times. At this time, Khuba and Mosing began drafting questions to Dramat enquiring about Dramat's involvement in the Rendition.
- 3.1.15 Khuba also interviewed Maluleke specifically regarding his promotion from captain to colonel. Khuba was not successful in obtaining the file regarding Maluleke's promotion.
- 3.1.16 Khuba records that Dramat sent a report, in response to the parliamentary question posed by a member of Congress of the People (COPE) regarding the Rendition, explaining the circumstances of the Rendition by stating that the Zimbabwean nationals were deported as illegal immigrants. This caused Khuba to investigate the matter further. He considered expense claims relating to the travelling to Beitbridge border post, as well as cell phone and vehicle tracker records positioning Maluleke, Makoe, Nkosi and constable Radebe at Diepsloot on the night of the arrests.
- 3.1.17 Khuba then investigated the booking in and out of certain police stations of the relevant Zimbabwean nationals following the arrests at Diepsloot. Khuba then began finalising the report but did so in the absence of an analysis of the cell phone records of Sibiya. Although Khuba was in possession of cell phone records in relation to Sibiya, such cell phone records had to be interpreted by an expert.
- 3.1.18 According to Khuba, as he was conducting the investigation with Moukangwe they would consult with Mosing and Moeletsi who were providing guidance in the process regarding the evidence to be collected in finalising the investigation. At some stage during 2013, Mosing and Moeletsi advised Khuba and Moukangwe as to which information in their draft investigation report dated October 2013 needed to be added. This information was the warning statements from Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke, Leonie Verster and analysis of cell phone records by an expert.

- 3.1.19 Khuba advised that subsequent to the advice by Mosing and Moeletsi, he and Moukangwe conducted further investigations to address the concerns raised by Mosing and Moeletsi. According to Khuba all the individuals mentioned above refused to provide warning statements.
- 3.1.20 In light of that which is stated in the preceding paragraph, Khuba and Moukangwe finalised their investigation and provided a report with recommendations. This report was submitted to Mosing and Moeletsi on 22 January 2014. This report, being the first report, was, in the opinion of Moukangwe and Khuba, final. The recommendations made in this report were that Dramat, Sibiyi, Maluleke, Makoe, Radebe and Nkosi be criminally charged with defeating the ends of justice and kidnapping.
- 3.1.21 According to Khuba, the First Report was submitted as a final report and they expected the NPA to take further action as required by law, on the basis of their recommendations set out therein.
- 3.1.22 In our interview with Moukangwe, Moukangwe corroborated Khuba's version regarding his (Moukangwe's) involvement in the investigation and the compilation of the First Report.
- 3.1.23 Moukangwe explained why he, as a member of SAPS, was tasked with conducting an investigation on behalf of IPID. In this regard he stated that the majority of the work had already been done by Crime Intelligence and that his superiors were of the view that he should assist Khuba in finalising the investigation.
- 3.1.24 According to Moukangwe, when they (Moukangwe and Khuba) finalised the First Report on 22 January 2014, the only outstanding information was the warning statements from Dramat, Sibiyi, Verster and Maluleke who had all refused to provide these warning statements.
- 3.1.25 Moukangwe corroborated Khuba's testimony that Dramat, Sibiyi and Maluleke had refused to provide warning statements when they approached them pursuant to the advice of Mosing and Moeletsi:

- 3.1.25.1.1 Dramat told them that he wants to involve his attorney and would only give a statement after discussing same with his attorney:
- 3.1.25.1.2 Sibiya requested that he be sent questions and would thereafter respond to such questions.
- 3.1.25.1.3 Maluleke refused and advised them that he will answer all the questions in Court. Vester, who in their view was quite knowledgeable on the operation, was also refusing to provide them with a statement.
- 3.1.26 According to Moukangwe this was the only outstanding information in the First Report and that in their view, nothing further could be done to obtain this information. As such, the First Report was not contemplated to be subject to any further amendment or revision.
- 3.1.27 Moukangwe went on to say that the report on 22 January 2014 was final as they could not force anyone to make statements or give evidence.
- 3.1.28 Moukangwe informed us that he does not know anything about the Second Report and was not involved in the drafting of the said report.
- 3.1.29 Mosing corroborated Khuba and Moukangwe's evidence in relation to the involvement of his office in the investigation into Rendition. Mosing explained that the Preliminary Report was prepared on 22 October 2013, compiled by Khuba and Moukangwe and was presented to Mosing and Moeletsi for consideration. This was a draft report. Mosing and Moeletsi advised Khuba and Moukangwe to conduct further investigations.
- 3.1.30 On 12 November 2013 Mosing addressed an NPA internal memorandum to Nxasana and Jiba updating them on the status of the investigation conducted by IPID. Mosing attached the Preliminary Report to this memorandum. In this memorandum Mosing, inter alia, summarised the evidence gathered at that stage and stressed the need for further investigation to be conducted in relation to certain aspects of the investigation as per paragraph 5.6 of the Preliminary Report.

- 3.1.31 We are not able to confirm as to whether or not Nxasana had ever received a copy of the internal memorandum mentioned at 3.1.30 as he has failed to respond to our requests to meet.
- 3.1.32 Paragraph 4 of Mosing's memorandum specifies the outstanding investigations required at that stage to finalise the report. This includes-
- 3.1.32.1 the reports of analysis of cell phone records;
- 3.1.32.2 the report on analysis of vehicle tracking information of the members involved during the operations and;
- 3.1.32.3 the statements from Dramat, Sibiya and Maluleke.
- 3.1.33 Khuba and Moukangwe continued with their investigation and requested warning statements from the above individuals, all of which refused to provide warning statements. The investigators thereafter obtained the analysis of cell phone records and finalised their report.
- 3.1.34 On 22 January 2014 Khuba met with Mosing and Moeletsi to submit the report as a final report. According to Mosing, Khuba and Moukangwe felt that they had now completed their work and that it was up to Nxasana to make a decision on the merits of the case.
- 3.1.35 Mosing advised Khuba to include his (Khuba's) statement as the investigator in order to explain how he conducted the investigation. This was the only outstanding statement in the report of 22 January 2014. Mosing further advised us that two days after 22 January 2014, Khuba included his statement into the report and subsequently signed same. Khuba did not change the date of the report to signal the exact date that the report was signed. The First Report was complete and submitted to Mosing for further action.
- 3.1.36 On 13 February 2014, Mosing addressed an internal memorandum to Jiba and Chauke, indicating that the investigations have been finalised and that the report from IPID has been submitted for the purposes of considering the merits of the case. The First Report was attached to this memorandum. Mosing further stated that the docket comprising of two lever arch files, together with other files containing the cell phone data and evidence obtained from a computer belonging to the DPCI, was also enclosed.

3.1.37 Jiba confirmed that the internal memorandum was drafted on her advice and she confirmed receipt of both internal memorandums (being the memorandums mentioned at 3.1.30 and 3.1.36) from Mosing.

3.1.38 After the docket was sent to Chauke, Chauke handed the docket to Adv. Van Zyl. On 7 March 2014, Khuba accompanied by Angus removed the docket from the possession of Adv. Van Zyl.

3.1.1 The First Report contains, inter alia, a summary of the material statements provided by the individuals interviewed during the investigation as well as an analysis of the evidence. This First Report recommends that Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke, Radebe, Nkosi and Makoe be prosecuted for their involvement in the Rendition, specifically in relation to the crimes of kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice. The report further recommends that Maluleke, Radebe, Nkosi and Makoe be prosecuted for assault and theft.

3.2 Section A2: Second report

3.2.1 How the Second Report was compiled

3.2.1.1 Subsequent to the submission of the First Report, on 3 March 2014, McBride was appointed as executive director of IPID. At this stage, McBride requested an update of all the high profile matters that were being handled by IPID, including the Rendition.

3.2.1.2 As such, after McBride was appointed, Sesoko, McBride and Khuba began working on the Second Report. This was done in the absence of any consultations in this regard with Moukangwe and/or Mosing who were both active in the investigation and the submission of the First Report.

- 3.2.1.3 At the outset, we believe that it is important for us to note that although we make reference to the so-called Second Report, we are of the view that this term is a misnomer. The Second Report is not an additional report in the matter of the Rendition, nor does it appear to be an update of the First Report, as implied by Khuba.
- 3.2.1.4 It is clear upon perusal of the First and Second Reports that the Second Report is actually a version of the First Report which has been altered by the deletion of certain evidence in order to arrive at a conclusion which is far removed from the conclusion of the First Report. There appears to be no valid explanation for this deletion of evidence, nor are we able to ascertain who is responsible for such deletions, even after having interviewed each of Khuba, Sesoko and McBride, being the co-signatories to the Second Report.
- 3.2.1.5 The First Report was drafted and submitted as set out in Section A1. As mentioned previously, the Second Report differs from the First Report in respect of the recommendations made by each report and the summary of evidence contained in each report.
- 3.2.1.6 While the First Report was signed by Khuba, the Second Report was signed by Khuba, McBride and Sesoko. It is the version of Khuba that the submission of the Second Report was necessitated by two things, namely the addition of new evidence and as a result of discussions with Sesoko.
- 3.2.1.7 Both Moukangwe and Mosing confirm that even though they were part of the investigation team in respect to the submission of the First Report, they were not consulted in the decision to amend the findings and recommendation of the First Report, which subsequently resulted in the drafting of the Second Report.
- 3.2.1.8 The sequence of events which led to the issuing of a Second Report are suspicious insofar as the dramatic change in the conclusion and recommendations of each report does not appear to have been occasioned by a substantial addition to the evidence, but instead, seems to be occasioned by a deletion of evidence.

- 3.2.1.9 Khuba states that he met with McBride in order to discuss his investigation, however, prior to meeting with McBride, Khuba provided Sesoko with an email copy of his report to pass along to McBride so that McBride would be able to prepare for the meeting with Khuba. Although Sesoko confirms receipt of such email from Khuba, he is unclear of whether he provided McBride with a hard copy or a soft copy of the report.
- 3.2.1.10 Notwithstanding that Khuba states that he emailed a copy of the First Report to Sesoko for McBride's attention, and Sesoko confirms that he provided the report to McBride, both Sesoko and McBride are adamant in stating that they did not have knowledge of the First Report. This version by McBride is contradicted by Khuba who states that in his first meeting with McBride, it was evident from a discussion regarding the Rendition, that McBride had had regard to the First Report.
- 3.2.1.11 According to Khuba on 5 March 2014, McBride met with Khuba. It was evident from the discussions held between Khuba and McBride during this meeting, that McBride had had regard to the First Report. Subsequently Khuba briefed Sesoko on the matter.
- 3.2.1.12 The following day, being 6 March, Khuba met with McBride, Sesoko and Angus. It is alleged that McBride requested Angus to review the process of the investigation to ensure that the investigation had been conducted appropriately. Angus, however, advised McBride that he did not believe that it was appropriate for him to get involved at that stage of the investigation. It was on this day that McBride requested Khuba to retrieve the docket from the NPA and to provide McBride with every document Khuba possessed regarding this matter.
- 3.2.1.13 On 7 March 2014, Khuba attended at the offices of the DPP with Angus and specifically to Advocate Van Zyl who was in possession of the docket at the time. Khuba and Angus then removed the docket from the possession of Advocate Van Zyl. During our interview with Angus, he failed to disclose the fact that he attended at the offices of the NPA with Khuba in order to retrieve the docket. When this issue was subsequently raised with him, Angus states that he merely signed for the docket in the capacity of witness but he was allegedly not aware of the fact that he was signing for the removal of the docket. This is directly contradicted by Khuba who states that Angus was aware of the request by McBride for the docket to be retrieved, attended at the NPA and spoke with Advocate Van Zyl directly requesting the docket.

3.2.1.14 The first draft of the Second Report went to and fro amongst the Khuba, Sesoko and McBride. Khuba states that at no stage did McBride request that Khuba exonerate any particular individual in the Second Report.

3.2.1.15 Khuba states that he signed the last page of the Second Report once it was finalised and did not initial each page; as such, he would be incapable of knowing if any information was added or removed. He The Second Report was then submitted, and dated 18 March 2014.

3.2.1.16 During our interview with Khuba, his attention was drawn to the discrepancies between the recommendation of the First Report and the Second Report. Khuba's initial explanation for certain deletions was related to the fact that an evaluation of the evidence in relation to Sibiya and in conjunction with his discussions with Sesoko, it was decided that it would not be possible to prove that Sibiya was guilty of assault beyond a reasonable doubt.

3.2.1.17 Khuba later stated that he is strongly concerned about the removal of certain information, specifically the deletion of evidence which implicates Dramat. He states that the Second Report only went through three hands, being the three co-signatories to the report, including himself and that all that he did in respect of the report was to add information which was outstanding at the time.

3.2.1.18 Khuba is not able to adequately address the issue as to why the recommendation in respect of Dramat was changed, when initially the recommendation in the First Report was based on Dramat's knowledge of the events and not his physical participation.

3.2.1.19 Khuba stressed that if there were changes to the First Report; he had no way of knowing if the Second Report reflected such changes. According to Khuba he did not check whether the final version of the report was the same document that he emailed to Sesoko.

3.2.1.20 Furthermore according to Khuba, he signed the Second Report and provided it to the other two co-signatories for signature after which, he cannot advise as to how the report was presented to the NPA.

3.2.1.21 McBride's version is that the only input he had into the Second Report related to grammatical changes made by McBride and that he did not see the First Report nor did he make substantive changes. This version is contradicted by Khuba who states that McBride had seen the First Report and had given input into the report which was not just grammatical.

3.2.1.22 According to McBride, he was provided with the Second Report which was already signed by both Khuba and Sesoko.

3.2.1.23 As stated above, Sesoko alleges that he never had regard to the First Report and was not responsible for the deletion of evidence.

3.2.1.24 As will be further elucidated in Section B, below, the First Report and the Second Report differ in a number of aspects. In summary, the most dramatic differences between the two reports are the difference between the recommendations contained in each report. While the First Report recommends that Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke, Radebe, Nkosi and Makoe be charged criminally for their participation in the Rendition, the Second Report recommends that only Maluleke be charged criminally for his participation in the Rendition;.

3.2.1.24.1 while the Second Report contains summaries of the statements given by all the relevant individuals whose statements were summarised in the First Report (but for the addition of statements from Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke and Jennifer Irish Qhobosheane), the manner in which certain statements are summarised in the Second Report has been changed insofar as the portions of certain statements and/or evidence and even the analysis of findings which are reflected in the First Report, have been altered to remove wording which implicates Dramat as having knowledge of the Rendition..

although Khuba states that one of the reasons for the necessity of drafting the Second Report is the addition of new evidence, it is clear from an analysis of both reports, that the only addition to the Second Report relates to the addition of the statements mentioned above, and the addition of the analysis of Dramat's cell phone records. Other than the above, nothing additional was added. More importantly, as noted above, is that certain material portions of the individual statements found in the First Report have been removed from the Second Report

3.2.1.25

Pertinent information relating to the analysis of cell phone records has been removed and the records have been analysed in a way which falls short of the scrutiny contained in the First Report and which is required in an investigation process.

3.2.2

How the docket was dealt with after the submission of the Second Report

3.2.2.1

On 18 June 2014 Advocate Van Zyl requested the docket from Khuba telephonically. Khuba's response was that McBride had instructed him to return the docket to the NDPP and that this had been done.

Chauke addressed a letter on 3 July 2014 to Nxasana informing him about the above sequence of events regarding the docket. The NDPP responded to the letter on 20 August 2014 indicating that the NDPP is in a process of considering the matter and that Advocate Chauke may close his file.

- 3.2.2.3 In December 2014, after the suspension of Dramat, according to Chauke he received a call from the NDPP enquiring about the Rendition matter and was informed that Dramat had been suspended. The NDPP requested Chauke to proceed with dealing with the matter. Chauke advised the NDPP that he had since closed his file on the matter and was not dealing with it anymore.
- 3.2.2.4 Subsequently, on or about January 2015, the NDPP contacted Mzinyathi and advised Mzinyathi that the NDPP had received the docket from Chauke and that the matter fell under Mzinyathi's jurisdiction because Diepsloot, wherein the arrests of the Zimbabwean nationals took place, fell under the jurisdiction of the North Gauteng DPP. According to McBride, it was IPID (and not Chauke) that took the docket to the NDPP after McBride had signed the Second Report on 9 April 2014.
- 3.2.2.5 Shortly after his return from leave on 13 January 2015, Mzinyathi was furnished with the docket by the NDPP. At the time, Diepsloot did not fall under the jurisdiction of Mzinyathi which the NDPP was aware of. As such, this referring of the docket by the NDPP to Mzinyathi amounted to a transfer of jurisdiction, in terms of section 22(3) of the National Prosecuting Authority Act, from one DPP to another DPP.
- 3.2.2.6 Mzinyathi, together with Baloyi, perused the docket and engaged in discussions amongst themselves. In addition, Baloyi engaged in discussions with Khuba. Mzinyathi and Baloyi issued their recommendation in respect of this matter on 13 March 2015. In light of the transfer of jurisdiction mentioned at 3.2.2.5, the 'recommendation' made by Mzinyathi was a decision.
- 3.2.2.7 A decision as to whether or not to prosecute taken by a DPP is subject to review only by the NDPP, in terms of section 22(2)(c) of the National Prosecuting Authority Act. There is no authority in the National Prosecuting Authority Act which allows a DPP to review a decision taken by another DPP.

3.2.2.8

Subsequently, on 1 April 2015, Chauke received the docket from the NDPP with a letter containing Mzinyathi's recommendations and was requested to make a decision on this matter. This amounts to a review of the decision taken by Mzinyathi which is contrary to the provisions of section 22(2)(c) of the National Prosecuting Authority Act.

Success report dated 04/02/2011:

This report is addressed to Dramat, Hlatshwayo and Toka

The relevant paragraph of the Success report reads as follows :

"The report bears reference 14/02/01 and was signed by Col Leonie Verster. Paragraph "A1" of the report states that on 05/11/2010, General Dramat held a meeting with Zimbabwean police at DPCI offices about the Nationals who shot and killed one of their senior officers. Paragraph "3" states that Captain Maluleke was tasked to trace and arrest the said Nationals. The report also covers the arrest of Gordon Dube and appreciation of TRT members and members of Crime Intelligence."

In page 20 para 5.2

In this report, this is what is deleted:

The paragraph beginning with "The report bears reference 14/02/01 .." from the first report is deleted in the second report.

The quoted email states the following : "He sent emails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. The emails were sent to the PA of Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime intelligence".	The same paragraph in this report does not mention all the individuals to which the emails were sent to, it reads: He sent e-mails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. He sent email to Zimbabwean police trying to find out how they travelled back home and that he is still tracing the remaining suspects..."

Other letters about the arrest of Zimbabwean national in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police refers to the cooperation agreed during the same meeting.	In this report, the names of the people involved in the cooperation with Zimbabwean Police are no longer mentioned; The letter reads thus in this report : "Letter to stakeholders dated 20/08/2012: The letter was generated the same day indicating the trip to Zimbabwe to discuss matters of cooperation on cross border crimes."

Towards the end of this paragraph, Maluleke stated the following in a letter:

"In a letter routed to General Dramat he stated that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011. Moyo was subsequently shot at transported to the border with the help of Zimbabwean police".

The letter referred to by Maluleke does not disclose to whom the letter was addressed: In this report, this is what is stated:

" In a letter he states that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011

Evidence of Sibiya's cell records show that he communicates with officers involved including Dramat, the analysis is put thus:

"Cell phone record of Major General Sibiya (0725953168): Upon perusal of the cell phone records it was discovered that Major General Sibiya communicated with officers who were involved in the operation, e.g. Captain Maluleke and sent more than 20 SMS to Major General Dramat (0825515311). However Major General Dramat never responded to the SMS. The same automated SMS were sent to Lt General Lebeya at 0825751899. These SMS were sent at various milestone of the operation as deduced from witnesses' statements and documentary proofs."

The analysis of Sibiya's cellular phone records now only analyses Sibiya's presence at the crime scene, not communicating with the officers involved., the analysis is as follows in this report:

"Findings

Major General Sibiya was never at the crimes scenes or planning area as alleged by members of Crime Intelligence."

Dramat's cellular phone records are not scrutinised nor mentioned in this report	According to this report Dramat's entire cellular phone record does not show any interaction between him and the Zimbabwean police. The findings are formulated thus :
Cell phone Records of Maluleke are analysed in the following manner :	"The entire cell phone record of Lt General Dramat does show any interaction with the Zimbabwean counterparts. However the fact that Zimbabwean police might have entered the country is confirmed by photographs but there is no evidence that they were with Lt. General Dramat. The photos show them with members of the TRT, Captain Maluleke and members of Crime Intelligence
"Cell phone records of Captain "Cowboy" Maluleke (08277295181 The interaction between Major General Sibiya and Captain Maluleke was also found in a form of received and outgoing calls. Captain Maluleke also communicated .with General Dramat in terms of outgoing SMS at a very important milestone of the operation. However General Dramat never responded to the SMS which he received from Captain Maluleke at 23:12:15 on 05/11/2010.	There is no analysis of Maluleke's cell-phone records, only that there is a prima facie case against him
Cellular phone records of Col Neethling are analysed thus in this report : "Cell phone records of Lt Colonel Neethling (0827787624): He was directly reporting to Major General Sibiya. He contacted General Sibiya telephonically and in his statement he stated that he believed he reported the operation	There is no mention of this information and statement by Neethling in this report. to Major General Sibiya".

Telephone call made by Madilonga to Dramat. : "Cell Phone records of Lt Col Madilonga: He is police officer who was posted at the border during the operation. He assisted Captain Maluleke to cross the border with the suspects. He contacted Lt General Dramat when he welcome the Zimbabwean police the first time. His cell phone records his interaction with Captain Maluleke in line with his statement.	The report only tests the version of Madilonga making contact with Maluleke, the version by Madilonga in the first report that he contacted Dramat is obliterated and not discussed in the analysis.
This report does not contain the cellular phone records of these employees.	This report contains the cellular phone records of the above employees: " The record confirms that they were at the scene even though the allegation of theft is not corroborated"
Statement by Khuba explaining his findings, the relevant deleted paragraph in the second report is as follows " On 28/01/2013 he was called by the former Executive Director who gave him the following documents stating that she received them from the Secretary of Police, report on Illegal Renditions dated 25/06/2012 accompanied by Warrants of Detention (BI-1725) for the following Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Shepard Chuma, Nelson Ndlovu and three Notification of the Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DNA-1689) for Nelson Ndlovu, Shepherd Chums and t1.4aghwawe Sibanda. The documents are file in the docket as per A36. An enlarged copy of death

certificate was made from a copy of Sunday Times Newspaper he received from Brigadier Zangwa dated 23/10/2011 titled " journey to death in an unmarked car' and is filed as per A35.
Khuba's findings on Dramat Page 29.	Khuba's findings on Dramat
Analysis and Findings of Dramat's cell-phone records is recorded by Khuba as such: "Evaluation of the above findings: In the entire cell phone records of Lt General Dramat requested for the period 20/10/2010 to 28/02/2011, the number 0155346300 only appears once which rules out any form of communication before 04/11/2010 and after the said date. This supports his version that he called Lt General Dramat in connection with the Zimbabwean police.	Nothing is said about this issue
• Dramat held a meeting on 05/11/2010 with Zimbabwean police planning the operation. Khuba finds the following in this respect : "Evaluation of the above findings: The success report signed by Leonie Verster was traced to Lt Col Maluleke's laptop as picked from the retrieved deleted data. The report was amended on 26/01/2011 and 31/01/2011 before it could be emailed to a female officer, Warrant Officer Thabiso Mafatla on 09/02/2011 at 14h32. There is no material difference between the document retrieved from the laptop and that found at the Hawks offices during investigation. This proves that Leonie Verster did not generate success report but only signed the report drafted by Captain Maluleke. The date of the meeting	•Dramat held a meeting on 05/11/2010 with Zimbabwean police planning the operation Khuba states the following in respect of this allegation in this report: •"The success report that claim that Lt General Dramat had a meeting with the Zimbabwean police lacks detail about the meeting itself. There is no indication of what was discussed and who was part of the meeting. It is on that basis that a prima facie case cannot be premised on speculation, but need corroborated facts".

between Zimbabwean Police and General Dramat which took place on 05/11/2010 coincide with the date of the 4th of November 2010 which according to cell phone records, General Dramat was called at 20h56 by Lt Col Madilonga seeking permission to allow Zimbabwean Police to enter into the country. Since the Zimbabwean Police where at Bel Bridge between 20h00 and 21h00, it is logical that they arrived in Gauteng late at night, leaving them with the, opportunity to have the meeting with General Dramat in the morning of the 5th of November 2010 as stated in the Success Report."
• Committed Government Resources into the Operation Khuba makes the following finding : "Evaluation of the above findings: Despite the fact that General Dramat as an Accounting Officer did not sign any claim of Captain Maluleke, delegating responsibility to Major General Sibiya to assist the Zimbabwean Police in tracing • wanted suspects invariably commit government resources into an unlawful operation that amount to a criminal offense	• Committed Government Resources into the Operation Nothing is said of this aspect
Congratulating the officers for the arrest of John Nyoni . Khuba makes the following finding in this regard: "Evaluation of the above findings: Words of appreciation from General Dramat show both interest in the arrest of the Zimbabwean Nationals and his knowledge of the operation. if the operation was lawful he would not have	•Congratulating the officers for the arrest of John Nyoni. Nothing is said about this issue

warned them not to tell anyone about it".
He received communication regarding success reports and photos of the operation through his personal assistant Phumla "According to the information retrieved from the seized laptop, Captain Maluleke sent e-mails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. The emails where sent to the PA of General Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime Intelligence.	Nothing is said about this issue
• He was kept informed of the developments in the operations that led to the arrest of wanted Zimbabwean Nationals. • "The cell phone records of General Sibiya shows 30 SMS sent to General Drama! at various milestones of the operation. He also received an SMS from Captain Maluleke shortly after the arrest of Zimbabwean Nationals. He never responded to any of the SMS which may suggest that they were only informing him of the progress". •
Report to parliament in response to the allegation: "A copy of the letter sent by Zimbabwean authority to Col Ntentseni clearly mention the names of people whom General Dramat in his report to parliament stated that they were deported for being illegal immigrants. The letter clearly indicates that the suspects were wanted for murdering Superintendent Chatikobo of Bulawayo on 18th September 2010. It goes further to state that there was

Innocent Khuba's findings on Sibiya page 32
• The meeting held between IPID and Dramat on 2013/03/07 "There is evidence and witnesses corroborate each other that General Sibiya was both at the scene and planning venue. The meeting held between IPID and General- Dramat on 201-3/03/07 confirmed that General-Sibiya was appointed to be the Head of TOMS which he created to trace wanted suspects.
• Sibiya's presence at the scene "Witness stated that he was seen during the operation that took place on 22/11/2010 which led to the arrest of Prichard Chuma" Cell phone Records Analysis "In other operations cell phone record of Warrant Officer Makoe, Captain Maluleke and Col Neethling clearly show continuous contacts with General Sibiya during and shortly after the operation. Col Neethling also stated that he should have reported progress to General Sibiya during the operation. However the cell phone records of General Sibiya does not place him at the scenes and planning venues as claimed by witnesses. It is also clear that some of the witness claim to have heard that General Sibiya was in the car rather than seeing him personally"
• The meeting with Zimbabwean Police for Cross-Border Crimes

"The meeting held in Zimbabwe wherein General Sibiya was appointed as a coordinator on cooperation matters involving the two countries suggests that the operation could not have been done without his knowledge more so because his Gauteng Team was involved in the operation. However this inference cannot provide prima facie case that he was involved "

The investigation established that there is no prima facie case against them. However with regard Lt Col M Maluleke, there is a prima facie case to sustain charges of kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice".

5 SECTION C: ANALYSIS AND FINDINGS

For ease of reference in dealing with our analysis and findings, we will address each question posed in our terms of reference, separately below. We will make our recommendations in the context of an examination of the responses to each of the questions.

5.1 Who and under what circumstances was the original report altered and/or how the Second Report came about with both reports signed by the same person: i.e Mr Khuba

5.1.1 Necessity of drafting the Second Report

5.1.1.1 The First Report was drafted and signed by Khuba in the circumstances set out at Section A1.

5.1.1.2 The Second Report was drafted in the circumstances set out at A2 and signed by Khuba, Sesoko and McBride.

5.1.1.3 Khuba was the lead investigator in the Rendition matter. He was assisted in conducting his investigation, by Moukangwe. During the investigation process, Khuba liaised with Mosing and Moeletsi from the NPA. Mosing confirms that when Khuba provided him with a copy of the First Report dated 22 January 2014, Mosing requested that Khuba add a summary of his evidence. Khuba then attended to adding his evidence and providing Mosing with a signed copy of the First Report.

5.1.1.4 Although the adding of Khuba's evidence was concluded a few days after 22 January 2014, the date of the First Report reflected 22 January 2014 nonetheless. The submission of the First Report was, in Mosing's mind a final submission of the report. In support of this version by Mosing, we have been provided with a memo addressed to the NDPP following from the consideration by Mosing of the First Report, wherein Mosing makes a recommendation to the NDPP to take certain action in this matter. It would not follow for Mosing to make such recommendation on the basis of the First Report extant at that time if, in his opinion, the investigation was not complete and or the First Report was not final at that time.

5.1.1.5 As outlined in Section A and B, above, it is apparent that the two reports differ significantly in respect of the recommendations made in each report. During an interview with Khuba he alleged that the Second Report was created as a result of two factors which necessitated the drafting of a Second Report. These factors were:

5.1.1.5.1 the surfacing of new information, being information regarding Sibiya's cell phone analysis and a few outstanding statements; and

5.1.1.5.2 discussions between Khuba, McBride and Sesoko regarding the analysis of the evidence.

5.1.1.6 We find it difficult to reconcile ourselves with the reasons given by Khuba for the publication of the Second Report on the following basis-

5.1.1.6.1 it is the version of both Moukangwe and Mosing, that the evidence regarding Sibiya's cell phone records were already known to Khuba before the submission of the First Report. As such, any additional analysis of the cell phone records, could not add any material evidence to the report;

5.1.1.6.2 upon perusing the Second Report, there is no material information which has in-fact been added in respect of the cell phone analysis of Sibiya's phone records;

5.1.1.6.3 contrary to there being no material evidence relating to Sibiya's cell phone records, in fact material evidence regarding Sibiya's cell phone records (specifically evidence relating to the smses sent by Sibiya to Dramat and others who were involved in the operation) was deleted and did not appear in the Second Report;

- 5.1.1.6.4 the additional statements contained in the report, namely that of Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke and Jennifer Irish Qhobosheane, do not contain material evidence which is capable of justifying an alteration in the conclusion of the report;
- 5.1.1.6.5 Khuba states that in discussions with Sesoko, his attention was drawn to the fact that the evidence against Sibiya may not withstand scrutiny in court and that Dramat simply having knowledge of the operation was not sufficient to implicate him criminally. This version by Khuba is contradicted by Khuba himself who states that he agrees that the knowledge of a crime is sufficient. Furthermore Khuba's version is not consistent in that Khuba himself drafted the First Report recommending the prosecution of Dramat which report was drafted with input from Mosing and Moeletsi, who had more experience with the NPA itself, than Sesoko; and
- 5.1.1.6.6 as an IPID investigator, Khuba would have to have a basic understanding of the workings of the law and would have or ought to have understood that his mandate is to investigate and to report and not to assume the role of the court in evaluating and testing evidence hypothetically.
- 5.1.1.7 Further to the above, both Angus, (who has substantial experience as an investigator), and Mosing confirm that if a report is submitted and new evidence comes to light subsequent to the submission of such report, the report may be updated to include the additional information. Any such update would not affect the status of the First Report.
- 5.1.1.8 Should the actual reasons which necessitated the submission of the Second Report be as Khuba stated (being to update the report with new evidence) the logical conclusion would be that the recommendations of the First Report would not be amended unless the additional information was so material that it required the alteration of a recommendation contained in the First Report.

5.1.1.9 In our opinion, and for the reasons discussed above, the additional information which according to Khuba necessitated the submission of the Second Report, was not sufficient or material and therefore did not require a change in the outcome of the report.

5.1.1.10 In light of the above, Khuba's alleged reasons for publishing the Second Report do not seem to be completely truthful.

5.1.2 Discrepancies between the two reports

5.1.2.1 The following material discrepancies are noted between the first and Second Reports-

5.1.2.1.1 Portions of the statements of individuals who implicate Dramat's involvement in the Rendition, which appear in the First Report, have been deleted in the Second Report;

5.1.2.1.2 the summary of evidence relating to the cell phone records of individuals has been altered to leave out information of evidentiary value;

5.1.2.1.3 the analysis and findings of the Second Report have been altered and truncated to no longer evaluate the evidence against Dramat which alteration coincides with the deletion of information implicating Dramat, in the individual statements; and

5.1.2.1.4 the recommendation in the Second Report has changed drastically, from recommending the prosecution of Dramat, Sibiya, Maluleke, Radebe, Nkosi and Makoe in the First Report, to no longer recommending the prosecution of the aforesaid individuals other than Maluleke.

5.1.2.2 The discrepancies listed above, and specifically the removal of pertinent evidence, is not justified in any way and appears to be effected in order to justify the conclusion that Dramat should not be prosecuted for his involvement in the Rendition.

5.1.3 Explanation for the discrepancies

5.1.3.1 We have interviewed each of the co-signatories of the Second Report and none of the co-signatories have been able to offer a valid explanation for the discrepancies listed above.

5.1.3.2 For ease of reference, we will address the responses of each of the three co-signatories separately below.

5.1.3.2.1 Khuba

5.1.3.2.1.1 Before the discrepancies between the reports were drawn to Khuba's attention, Khuba volunteered that he did not initial each page of the report and is therefore unable to determine if any information has been added or removed in the Second Report.

5.1.3.2.1.2 According to Khuba, he simply signed the First Report and provided Sesoko with a copy of the signed report and he is not aware of how the signed Second Report was provided to the NPA from that point.

5.1.3.2.1.3 Once the discrepancies had been drawn to Khuba's attention, Khuba explained that the analysis of the cell phone evidence had been changed in the Second Report in order to summarise the evidence in a concise manner.

5.1.3.2.1.4 However, he was unable to explain any of the discrepancies and he indicated that he was concerned by the deletion of information in the summary of individual statements.

5.1.3.2.1.5 Khuba states that he was not responsible for the deletions, nor is he able to indicate who was responsible for the deletions.

On a weighing of the evidence before us and the testimonies of each individual interviewed, we accept Khuba's version of events. This acceptance is not without difficulty in light of Khuba's failure to explain the discrepancies between the First and Second reports considering that he is the author of the First Report and the co-author of the Second Report, as well as the fact that Khuba failed to disclose information during his interview with Werksmans, which information was relevant to the investigation.

5.1.3.2.1.7

The aforementioned information relates to the complaint made under sworn affidavits by Khuba and Viceroy Maoka to the NDPP in respect of Baloyi. In their affidavits the complainants state, inter alia, that Baloyi has failed to uphold his initial consideration not to prosecute Dramat. The purpose of this complaint is unclear and seems to illustrate that Khuba misinterprets his role as investigator required to make recommendations in an investigation report which is meant to be a tool to assist the NPA in deciding whether or not to prosecute. This complaint came to our attention through Baloyi and not Khuba himself.

5.1.3.2.1.8

Additional information which Khuba failed to bring to our attention, was that he sought the legal opinion of Advocate Barry Roux, in relation to the Second Report.

5.1.3.2.2

Sesoko

5.1.3.2.2.1

Sesoko stated that he was never given the First Report, hence the absence of his signature in that report.

5.1.3.2.2.2

According to Sesoko, the only report he has ever seen is the Second Report.

5.1.3.2.2.3 This above version is contradicted by Khuba who states that he emailed a copy of the First Report to Sesoko to be provided to McBride before Khuba met with McBride.

5.1.3.2.2.4 It is further contradicted by Sesoko himself who corroborates Khuba's version that he received an email copy of the First Report from Khuba to provide to McBride. Additionally, Moukangwe stated that Sesoko, Khuba and himself attended at the offices of the NPA in order to submit the First Report to the NPA.

5.1.3.2.2.5 Sesoko's version is that he is not aware of any discrepancies or deletions in the Second Report, and that his involvement in the drafting of the Second Report was only supervisory and he never actually worked on the report. This is directly contradicted by Khuba's version that he and Sesoko worked on the report together and Sesoko gave substantial input in the alteration of the recommendation on the basis of what could be proven in a court.

5.1.3.2.2.6 It is clear from Sesoko's responses that Sesoko did not take us into his confidence and his reaction to questioning in respect of the reports was a bare denial of any meaningful involvement in the submission of the Second Report, and any knowledge of the First Report.

5.1.3.2.3 McBride

5.1.3.2.3.1 McBride states that he had no input in the report other than to make grammatical changes. Conveniently, it is not possible to prove this with documentary evidence because the manuscript changes made by McBride were destroyed to prevent documents being leaked.

5.1.3.2.3.2 Notwithstanding that McBride vehemently confirms that he stands by the recommendation contained in the Second Report, he admits that he did not read any of the evidence contained in the docket, nor did he have sight of the First Report.

McBride's version of events is that he was provided with a Second Report which had already been signed by Sesoko and Khuba and that he then signed the Second Report himself. McBride was allegedly not aware of the First Report or any discrepancies in the reports and he did not allow us to draw his attention to same.

McBride accepts that generally an investigation report is signed by the investigating officer. However, in relation to the Second Report, McBride records his reason for signing the report as that the matter involved two provinces.

5.1.3.2.3.5

It is difficult to accept McBride's version for a number of reasons, including –

5.1.3.2.3.5.1

it is highly unlikely that as an executive director of IPID who requested an update on high profile matters within a week of his appointment, that McBride was not aware of the First Report;

5.1.3.2.3.5.2

Khuba states that upon first meeting with McBride on 6 March 2014, that it was evident from their discussions that McBride had had regard to the First Report;

5.1.3.2.3.5.3

McBride's version is contradicted by Khuba who states that McBride's input into the report went beyond just grammatical changes;

5.1.3.2.3.5.4

in addition, the reason given by McBride for signing the Second Report, being that the matter involved two provinces, is contradicted by Khuba who stated that this reason was never presented to him as being the reason for signature of the report by McBride but that McBride signed the Second Report as a result of his participation therein;

5.1.3.2.3.5.5

McBride states that he is not aware of any deletions in either report; nor was he interested in having his attention drawn to same. Considering that McBride in his capacity of executive director, is in the centre of the Rendition investigation, it is perplexing as to why he would not consider the discrepancies between the First and Second Reports in order to be in a position to address them;

5.1.3.2.3.5.6

McBride vehemently supports the conclusion in the Second Report which he personally signed, without having considered, on his own version, the contents of the First Report and more importantly, the evidence in the docket;

McBride's version that he did not have regard to the evidence in the docket is contradicted by Khuba who states that on 6 March 2014, a mere three days after McBride's appointment, McBride requested that Khuba retrieve the docket from the NPA and provide McBride with every document that Khuba had in relation to the matter. Khuba furthermore confirms that it was not necessary in his view for the docket to be retrieved in order to add any evidence to it; quite significantly, there are a number of contradictions between the statement provided to Werksmans by McBride, and the statement of facts by McBride contained in a sworn affidavit by himself relating to the Rendition. For instance, in his sworn affidavit before the High Court of South Africa, Gauteng Provincial Division – on page 9 and page 11 (paragraphs 24.1 and 27, respectively), of his affidavit, McBride makes reference to the First Report as a "preliminary draft of the report (of 22 January 2014)" and as "the draft and leaked report". Not only is this contrary to his own version that he did not have sight of the First Report, but referring to the First Report as a preliminary report is contradicted by the testimony of Khuba (being the actual author of the First Report) and Mosing (being a member of the investigation team instrumental in submitting the First Report) who state that the First Report was considered to be final. Furthermore, as stated above, Angus states that in his experience as an investigator of IPID, a preliminary report does not contain recommendations. This view by Angus is given credence by the fact the Preliminary Report which itself records that it is not a final report, does not contain recommendations; at page 10 (paragraph 24.2) of his affidavit, McBride states that "the provisional findings and recommendations were found to be unsustainable on the evidence and were, accordingly, not included in the final investigation Report (of 18 March 2014)". This is a further contradiction to the version put forth to Werksmans by McBride who stated that he did not have regard to the First Report, nor did he have regard to the evidence contained in the docket. As such, McBride would not be able to pronounce on whether or not the findings of the First Report were unsustainable on the evidence. Additionally, it would be difficult for McBride to draw such a conclusion if, as he stated, the only input he had into the Second Report was related to grammatical changes and that he was furthermore only provided with a copy of the Second Report for signature once Khuba and Sesoko had signed the report; at page 22 (paragraph 51.2) of his affidavit, McBride states "I want to make it abundantly clear that the final report was the product of a thorough investigation process which included taking into account all the evidence gathered through the IPID investigation and making reasonable recommendations on the basis thereof". This statement appears to contradict McBride's version that he did not have regard to the evidence contained in the docket, and that his involvement in the Second Report was limited to grammatical changes and signature of the Second Report; on page 23 (at paragraph 51.5) of his affidavit, McBride states that "The preliminary draft of the IPID Investigation Report was also still subject to consideration and review by Sesoko and myself". This statement is contradicted by both McBride and Sesoko. McBride stated that the only input he had into the Second Report related to grammatical changes and Sesoko said that his role was merely supervisory; and a further and notable contradiction to McBride's version as put forth to Werksmans, is found on page 23 and 24 of his affidavit (paragraph 51.6) wherein McBride states "The IPID investigation was conducted in co-operation with Advocate Anthony Mosing and Advocate Billy Moeletsi, from the offices of the NDPP, both of whom were involved with the IPID investigation into the illegal rendition of Zimbabwean nationals, even before a complaint was lodged with IPID. They remained in the investigation throughout, and were provided with regular preliminary reports by the investigating Officer, Mr. Khuba...". This statement is contradicted by Mosing who states that he was not involved in the submission and/or drafting of the Second Report.

5.1.3.2.3.5.8

5.1.3.2.3.5.8.1

5.1.3.2.3.5.8.2

5.1.3.2.3.5.8.3

5.1.3.2.3.5.8.4

5.1.3.2.3.5.8.5

- 5.1.4 The analysis and findings have also been altered to remove an analysis of evidence which may implicate Dramat and/or Sibiya. The alteration of the recommendation seems to be a non sequitur in light of the fact that the so-called additional information added to the Second Report does not appear to be capable of justifying an altered conclusion.
- 5.1.5 In the absence of a valid explanation for the deletions by the co-signatories, the only logical conclusion which can be drawn from the circumstances detailed above, is that the Second Report was created for the purpose of exonerating the high ranking officials, specifically Dramat and Sibiya, who were implicated in the First Report.
- 5.1.6 It is difficult to ascertain who is responsible for the deletion of the portions of the statements which appeared in the First Report and which do not appear in the Second Report. It is evident to us that none of the co-signatories to the report are being truthful in respect of their involvement in the submission of the Second Report.
- 5.1.7 Each of the co-signatories to the Second Report deny effecting the deletions. We are of the view that the deletion of material evidence which is likely to affect the decision of the NPA in determining whether or not certain individuals should be prosecuted, is a criminal offence, specifically, defeating the ends of justice or obstructing the administration of justice.
- 5.2 Whether any misconduct or offence has been committed and if so by whom?

This question is dealt with within our responses to 5.3 below.

5.3 Whether there is prima facie evidence of misconduct and criminal liability by Lieutenant-Dramat; Major-Sibiya; and any other officers mentioned in the original report

5.3.1 Lieutenant-General Anwa Dramat

5.3.1.1 In his statement, Khuba cites the reasoning for the publication of the Second Report to be as a result of new evidence coming to light. This evidence, according to Khuba, related to the cell phone records of Sibiya as well as the discussions held amongst Sesoko, McBride and himself.

5.3.1.2 Notwithstanding that the purported reasons for the publication of a Second Report do not appear to relate to Dramat, it is clear from a perusal of the First and Second Report, that a large volume of information that relates to, and in fact incriminates, Dramat which appeared in the First Report, has been removed from the Second Report. These portions of the First Report which were removed have the effect of distancing Dramat insofar as his involvement with the Rendition is concerned.

5.3.1.3 Even if Khuba's version of events is to be accepted and the decision was taken to change the recommendation in respect of Dramat due to the view that there was not enough information to prosecute Dramat, this still does not explain why information relating to Dramat was deleted.

5.3.1.4 Khuba has not been able to provide us with a plausible explanation for the removal of the information, nor are we able to draw any inferences other than that the removal has been effected in order to justify the failure of the Second Report to recommend Dramat be prosecuted criminally, whereas the First Report made such a recommendation. When Khuba was confronted with the totality of the deletions during our interview with him, Khuba responded in part with surprise and concern.

5.3.1.5 Upon perusal of the First Report, and specifically Khuba's analysis of findings in respect of Dramat, we agree and support Khuba's analysis of findings which resulted in the recommendation that Dramat be criminally prosecuted. Without replicating the basis of Khuba's findings, which is available in the First Report, we will summarise them briefly, below.

5.3.1.5.1 Dramat met with the Zimbabwean police prior to the commencement of the operation

5.3.1.5.1.1 Madilonga's statement reflects that he was stationed at the border when Zimbabwean police officers attempted to cross into South Africa for the purposes of meeting with Dramat. Madilonga placed a call to Radzilani and Makushu, who both corroborate this evidence, in order to verify the averments by the Zimbabwean police. Madilonga was even provided with Dramat's cell phone number by Superintendent Ncube of the Zimbabwean police who identified himself to Madilonga as the leader of the group. Madilonga contacted Dramat in order to confirm the averment by the Zimbabwean police that they were going to meet with Dramat, and according to Madilonga, Dramat confirmed that he was aware of the Zimbabwean police's presence and that Madilonga should let them cross the border into South Africa.

5.3.1.5.1.2 In addition to the above, the success report dated 4 February 2011, addressed to, inter alia, Dramat and signed by Leonie Verster, records as its first point that on 5 November 2010, the Zimbabwean police visited the office of DPCI and engaged in a meeting with Dramat regarding Zimbabwean nationals who allegedly shot and killed a senior Zimbabwean police officer. The success report furthermore gives information relating to the arrest of two of the wanted Zimbabwean nationals. This success report was addressed to Dramat and there is no record of Dramat contradicting any statement of fact within the success report.

5.3.1.5.1.3

The above information should be viewed in the context of the fact that, as mentioned in the summary of Khuba's evidence above, in a meeting with Khuba and Moukangwe, Dramat stated that he did not remember meeting with the Zimbabwean police.

5.3.1.5.2.1

The cell phone records of Sibiya show that 30 smses were sent to Dramat at various milestones in the operation. Dramat also received an sms from Maluleke shortly after the arrest of the Zimbabwean nationals. Although Dramat never responded to these smses, when viewed in the context of Dramat's meeting with the Zimbabwean police, the success reports received after the operation and Dramat's congratulating of the crime intelligence officers, the smses lead to the conclusion that Dramat was aware of the operation as it happened.

In addition to the above, there is evidence that emails circulating 20 photos of both the Zimbabwean nationals and the police members involved in the operation, were sent by Maluleke to Dramat's personal assistant. We believe that it is reasonable to deduce in the circumstances, that these emails were brought to the attention of Dramat through his personal assistant.

Dramat congratulated members of crime intelligence after completion of the operation

According to the testimony of Mkasibe and Mgwanya, Dramat attended at the offices of the DPCI and thanked the officers present for their participation in arresting the Zimbabwean nationals. Mkasibe went further to state that Dramat warned them not to tell anyone about the operation. Mgwenya did not confirm Dramat's warning. It is recorded that Mgwenya admitted to Khuba that he knew Dramat from their mutual time in Umkhonto we Sizwe. In addition, a third officer, Mokgobu, testifies that she was not at the office when Dramat attended; however, upon her return she was informed by her colleagues that Dramat had attended in order to congratulate them on a job well done.

5.3.1.5.4 Dramat's statement to Acting National Commissioner of SAPS

5.3.1.5.4.1 According to the erstwhile Acting National Commissioner of SAPS, Lieutenant General Mkhwanazi ("Mkhwanazi"), in late 2011 news of the Rendition came to light. He contacted Dramat who confirmed that members of his unit transported the Zimbabwean nationals as illegal immigrants. Mkhwanazi then summoned Dramat to his office. Dramat arrived with Maluleke. Maluleke informed Mkhwanazi that he was investigating a case of ATM bombings which led him to the Zimbabwean nationals. Once he realised that they were not linked to the ATM bombing case, he decided to deport them after getting the necessary documentation from Home Affairs. When Mkhwanazi asked whether it was necessary to transport illegal immigrants, Dramat could offer no explanation.

5.3.1.5.4.2 Not only does the above display that Dramat had knowledge of the events, but his failure to offer a valid response to the question of whether it was necessary to transport the Zimbabwean nationals illustrates that either Dramat did not exhibit the level of control and oversight that he is required to by virtue of his position, alternatively, Dramat was attempting to cover up the Rendition operation as he was aware that it was unlawful.

5.3.1.6 In our view, the above information is sufficient to create a prima facie impression that Dramat is guilty of both criminal and disciplinary misconduct and that the circumstances surrounding his involvement in the Rendition and the decision of whether or not to prosecute Dramat, bears further consideration by the NPA.

5.3.2 Sibiya

5.3.2.1 We have perused and considered the contents of both the First and Second Reports in order to establish whether there is prima facie evidence of misconduct and potential criminal liability against Sibiya. It is alleged that Sibiya, was involved in the operation of 5 November 2010 and well as the operation of 22/23 November 2010.

5.3.2.2 Sibiya is the head of the TOMS unit. From our reading of the two reports regarding TOMS, we have gathered that the main objective with the establishment of TOMS was to fight priority crimes, this includes inter alia, combating armed robberies by dangerous criminals, investigating and arresting those responsible for ATM bombings.

5.3.2.3 Sibiya states as follows:

"The reality of the matter is that the operation in question was conducted under the auspices of DPCI National Head Office and they requested the services of my team because of their training and capacity".

5.3.2.4 This revelation by Sibiya confirms his knowledge of the operation that led to the Rendition of Zimbabwean Nationals. He provided TOMS personnel to assist DPCI National Head Office to carry out the Rendition.

5.3.2.5 Furthermore, in terms our reading of the annexures and two reports, Maluleke carried out the operation on instructions of his superiors.

5.3.2.6 The Rendition was carried out by the members of TOMS under the leadership of the Maluleke. The First Report suggests that Sibiya not only sanctioned the operation, but also that he actually participated in the Rendition. Several statements and affidavits from various witnesses confirming the participation of Sibiya in the Rendition were obtained. We deal with these statements herein below for the sake of completeness.

5.3.2.7 Bongani Henry Yende whose statement is annexed as A4 to the both reports, states:

"During October 2010 I was nominated to be part of the Task Team called "TOMS". In full TOMS means Tactical Operations Management Section led by Major Sibiya who is the Provincial Commander of Hawks in Gauteng Province. The members of Crime Intelligence who worked with me at the Task Team were W/O Jawuke, W/O Ndobe and Constable Campbell.

On 2010-11-05 in the evening I received a phone call from W/O Makwe of DPCI in Gauteng who was also part of the Task Team "TOMS" that Major General wanted us to meet at Fourways to go and search for suspects in a case which a colonel was killed.....

At our arrival at Fourways Shopping Centre W/O Makwe introduced two African Males as our police counterparts from Zimbabwe Police.

At the time W/O Makwe introduced the two policemen from Zimbabwe, I realised that the Colonel that was killed was from Zimbabwe and not from South African Police. W/O Makwe informed us that the two police officers came to us via the office of Dramat who is National Head of DPCI. Maj Sibiya was sitting in a navy BMW vehicle busy on his cell phone and I could not greet him".

5.3.2.8 Petros Jawuke whose statement is attached as A5 to both reports. At paragraphs 2, 9 and 10 of his statement, Jawuke states:

"During 2010 I was nominated to be part of a Task Team called "TOMS" in Gauteng Province and the team operated under the command of Major Sibiya who is the Head in Gauteng Province.

Four suspects were detained at Orlando SAPS on 2010-11-06. I do not know how Pritchard TSHUMA and Shepherd TSHUMA are related. The operation of the 2010-11-23, started during the night of the 2010-11-22 until early hours of the 2010-11-23.

I saw Maj Gen. SIBIYA in the second operation, however I also heard that he was present in the first one. I also never saw Maj. Gen SIBIYA assaulting any of the suspects. That's all I can state at this stage."

Shepard Tshuma whose statement is annexed as A1 to the both reports. Shepard was giving an account as to what transpired during the operation of 5 November 2010. Shepard states the following in relation to Major Sibiya.

'Few minutes Cowboy asked where must we be detained and one police officer said we must be taken to Randburg and the other one said we must be taken to Krugersdorp. Whilst they were busy arguing about the place to be detained, one police officer said they better ask Sibiya at that time, I didn't know who Sibiya is, but later I saw him coming out from a certain black BMW and he gave them instructions to take us to Orlando SAPS.'

5.3.2.10

Maqhawe Sibanda whose statement is annexed A2 in both reports. He states the following in relation Sibiya's involvement in the operation of that 5 November 2010.

"I later knew some of the police officers who were busy assaulting us. They call themselves with their name, it was cowboy the one who was wearing a cowboy hat, Nkosi, Leburu who was a coloured. I only manage to know the above but I can able to identify others if given permission to do that.

After we were beaten by the police, they started arguing about the place to be detained. One of the police mentioned Randburg the other mentioned Krugersdorp until the other decided that Sibiya must give directions."

I saw Sibiya coming out from the Black BMW and gave instructions to be taken to Orlando SAPS and they took us to Orlando SAPS. Arrived at the Police station in the yard I was following Shepard and saw Leburu (coloured police officer) taking the money at the back pocket of the trouser of Shepard."

5.3.2.11 The aforesaid statements by the eye witnesses from Crime Intelligence confirm that the operations on 5, 22 and 23 November 2010 were carried out in connection with the murder and robbery case that took place in Zimbabwe where a Police Superintendent was killed. This conclusion is confirmed by the presence of Zimbabwean Police officials during operations.

5.3.2.12 The above statements were made under oath and are from the Zimbabwean nationals as well as members of Crime Intelligence who claim that they all saw Sibiya at either the first or second operation of the Rendition.

5.3.2.13 As mentioned earlier in this report, an analysis of the cell phone records of Sibiya purportedly does not place him at the scene at the first operation in which he is alleged to have participated. However, it is not clear whether, solely on the basis of the aforesaid analysis of cell phone records, that Sibiya can be said to be placed in Pretoria in respect of both the first and second operations, in light of the consistent eyewitness testimony which places at the scene of both operations. Although the inference is drawn from the analysis of cell phone records that Sibiya was in Pretoria, the most that can be concluded in this regard is that Sibiya's cell-phone was located in Pretoria at the relevant times. Whether Sibiya was in the same location at that time is an assumption, and given the weight of eyewitness evidence to the contrary, would be a questionable conclusion.

- 5.3.2.14 It is our view that there is a clear contradiction between the conclusion to be drawn from the evidence of the eye witness discussed above, which places Sibiya in Diepsloot at the time of the operations, and the analysis of cell phone records which infers that Sibiya was located at Pretoria in Sunnyside at the time relevant times.
- 5.3.2.15 It is our view that this contradiction should be tested and weighed by the NPA and or a court of law. We cannot discount one piece of evidence against the other. Neither can we recommend that certain weight be placed on certain evidence or recommend that certain piece of evidence be disregarded, without it having been tested in a court of law or some forum.
- 5.3.2.16 Further to the above, the mere allegation that the members of Crime Intelligence have conspired against Sibiya by giving their eyewitness testimony can never be a rational basis to discount their evidence, or to fail to test the credibility of these witnesses or the veracity of their versions against the contrary evidence and conclusions which lead from the analysis of cell phone records.
- 5.3.2.17 According to our investigation we have established that the analysis of cell phone records serve two purposes. First, to assess the specific location of a phone at a certain time and secondly to assess the trail of communications for which the cell phone was utilised. In terms of the first assessment, Sibiya's cell phone records place his cell phones at Sunnyside in Pretoria. According to this, Sibiya was not present at any of the operations as alleged by the eye witnesses.
- 5.3.2.18 The second assessment of Sibiya's cell phone records shows that Sibiya communicated with officers who were involved in the operation, one of which is Maluleke and sent 30 smses to Dramat at the 0825515311 number during various milestones of the Rendition. Khuba records in the First Report that Dramat never responded to any of the smses from Sibiya.

5.3.2.19 In our view there is a prima facie case of kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice or obstructing the administration of justice to be made against Sibiya. It is our view that he knew about the operation that led to the Rendition. He provided a team of police officers to search and arrest the Zimbabwean nationals suspected of killing the Superintendent from Zimbabwe. As the provincial head of DPCI he sanctioned the Rendition. He allegedly gave directions to the members of TOMS on where to detain the Zimbabwean nationals. The cell phone records show detailed communications between Sibiya and Maluleke and Dramat despite the latter not responding to the smses.

5.4 The circumstances under which the Second Report and the docket was handed to the NPA and what happened to the docket whilst in the NPA's possession

5.4.1 According to Mosing the NPA's involvement in the matter was called for in the early possible stages of the investigation into the Rendition. Further, the former Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development, the Honourable Jeff Radebe addressed a conference of Senior Managers of the NPA during 2012 wherein he called for the allegations into the Rendition to be investigated, as the Government was concerned about the possible violation of international law during the Rendition.

5.4.2 It is against this backdrop that the Special Projects Division in the office of the NDPP was requested to provide guidance to the IPID investigating team led by Khuba. The Special Projects Division team was headed by Mosing assisted by Moeletsi. The team met with Khuba sometime in July 2013. The team produced the Preliminary Report into the Rendition on 22 October 2013. Mosing and Moeletsi advised Khuba to conduct further investigations into certain aspects of the report.

5.4.3 On 12 November 2013, Mosing addressed an internal memorandum to the NDPP and the DNDPP. This memorandum sought to provide an update on the progress made by the Special Projects team and the investigating team led by Khuba. The memorandum goes on to say that there was outstanding evidence that Khuba and the team had to obtain or gather in order to finalise the Preliminary Report.

- 5.4.4 According to Mosing, the outstanding information related to the warning statements from Dramat, Sibiya and Maluleke, an analysis of the cell phone data, as well as a report on the analysis of vehicle tracking information of the members involved in the operation during the Rendition.
- 5.4.5 The investigation team finalised its investigation on or about 22 January 2014 and compiled a report with final recommendations. This was a final report on the investigation in the Rendition. It was handed to the Special Projects team so that the NDPP could make a decision to either prosecute or not prosecute those implicated in the report.
- 5.4.6 On 13 February 2014 Mosing addressed another internal memorandum to Jiba and Chauke, indicating that the investigations had been finalised and that the report from IPID had been submitted for the purposes of considering the merits of the case. This internal memorandum also enclosed the docket comprising of two lever arch files, together with other files containing the cellular phone data and evidence obtained from a computer belonging to the DPCI.
- 5.4.7 According to Chauke the receipt of the internal memorandum from Mosing on or about 14 February 2014 was preceded by a meeting wherein the NDPP advised Chauke to consider the docket and take a decision in regard to same. Chauke was assisted by Advocate Van Zyl who is the Deputy Director of Public Prosecutions for South Gauteng. Subsequent to the internal memorandum from Mosing, the docket was handed to the office of Chauke for a decision on whether to prosecute on the matter. According to Chauke before his office could even make a decision on the matter Khuba and Angus from IPID collected the docket from Advocate Van Zyl's office on 7 March 2014 and signed a receipt thereof. It bears mention that this occurred shortly after McBride was appointed as the executive director of IPID. According to Khuba, he collected the docket following an instruction from McBride for him to do so.

- 5.4.8 On 18 June 2014 Advocate Van Zyl telephoned Khuba requesting the docket from the latter. Khuba told him that McBride had instructed him to return the docket to the NDPP and that this has been done. Khuba did not give or specify the date by which the docket was returned to the NDPP by himself. We are advised that Advocate Van Zyl telephoned Khuba, for the second time, to enquire about the docket which his office has not received. Khuba told Advocate Van Zyl that it was never his (Khuba) intention to return the docket to Advocate Van Zyl anyway.
- 5.4.9 We are advised that in light of this information from Khuba, Advocate Van Zyl telephoned Mosing to enquire whether the docket had been returned to the office of the NDPP. Mosing advised him that the dockets were never returned to him.
- 5.4.10 According to Chauke he addressed a letter on 3 July 2014 to the NDPP informing him about the above sequence of events regarding the docket. We are advised that the NDPP officially responded to the letter on 20 August 2014 indicating that the NDPP is in a process of considering the matter and that Chauke may close his file.
- 5.4.11 Sometime in December 2014, the NDPP enquired from Chauke about the case and wanted to know whether the latter was still involved in the matter. Chauke was surprised by this enquiry from the NDPP as according to him (Chauke) he was instructed by the same NDPP to close his file on the matter. Chauke advised the NDPP that he had since close his file on the matter and was not dealing with it anymore.
- 5.4.12 We also consulted the DPP for North Gauteng, Mzinyathi in relation to this aspect of our investigation. Mzinyathi told us that he received a telephone call from the NDPP on or about 10 January 2015 asking him about his knowledge of the Rendition. Mzinyathi told the NDPP that he did not have a clue of what the NDPP was talking about. According to Mzinyathi the NDPP told him that he had received the docket in the matter from Chauke and that the matter fell under Mzinyathi's jurisdiction because Diepsloot was under Atteridgeville which fell under North Gauteng DPP. On the day this call was made, Mzinyathi was on leave. He only returned from leave on or about 13 January 2015. Shortly after his return, the docket was delivered to his offices.

- 5.4.13 Mzinyathi spoke to his colleague the DDPP for North Gauteng, Baloyi regarding the docket and informed him that they must formulate a view on the matter. According to Mzinyathi sometime in March 2015 he received a report (being the Second Report) from the NDPP. This report summarised the statements in the docket and made its own recommendations as to who should be charged. Before Mzinyathi made his own recommendations, he approached the NDPP to understand certain things. The NDPP told him that there was a First Report and that he should read it as well. The NDPP provided him with a copy of the First Report. Mzinyathi shared this First Report with Baloyi and they discussed the potential charges to be brought against those implicated in the report.
- 5.4.14 Mzinyathi and Baloyi finalised their reading of the docket and the two reports and made recommendations on who should be charged and prosecuted. They sent their recommendations to the NDPP on 13 March 2015.
- 5.4.15 We are advised that on 31 March 2015 the NDPP wrote another letter to Chauke informing him that matter has been referred to Mzinyathi, who has recommended that all the accused including Dramat and Sibiya be prosecuted for inter alia kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice. This letter attached the letter addressed by Mzinyathi to the NDPP on 13 March 2015.
- 5.4.16 We are advised that the aforesaid letter from the NDPP inter alia states that the matter must be returned to the DPP South Gauteng because it now falls under the jurisdiction of the DDP South Gauteng since 1 December 2014. As from that date Diepsloot fell under the South Gauteng in terms of the Government Notice No 861 of 31 October 2014.
- 5.4.17 According to Chauke on 1 April 2015 he received a box consisting of the docket with a letter containing Mzinyathi's recommendations. On even date he received a letter from the Head of National Prosecution Services to conduct specific investigations in the matter.

5.5 Any other matter that might come to your attention during the investigation which is relevant to your conclusions and findings

5.5.1.1 In the context of the sequence of events described at 3.2.2, we have specific concerns that remain unanswered, as to how the docket was dealt with after it was received by the NDPP. These concerns are as follows-

5.5.1.1.1 in February 2014 the NDPP referred the matter to Chauke, the DPP for South Gauteng at a period when Diepsloot fell under the jurisdiction of the DPP for North Gauteng. This amounted to a transfer of jurisdiction in terms of section 22(3) of the National Prosecuting Authority Act;

5.5.1.1.2 in April 2014, the NDPP accepted the docket back from McBride without having withdrawn the jurisdiction from Chauke;

5.5.1.1.3 in January 2015 the NDPP referred the matter to the DPP for North Gauteng after he was aware the jurisdiction in respect of Diepsloot had been changed to fall under the jurisdiction of the DPP for South Gauteng. This amounted to another transfer of jurisdiction in terms of section 22(3) of the National Prosecuting Authority Act; and

5.5.1.1.4 the NDPP failed to take action in respect of the recommendation made by Mzinyathi on 13 March 2015 but rather sent the docket back to Chauke to make a decision on the matter. This amounts to a review by Chauke of the recommendation made by Mzinyathi. This was done despite the fact that in terms of section 22(2)(c) of the National Prosecuting Authority Act, the NDPP himself is authorised to review a decision to prosecute or not to prosecute taken by a DPP. There is no authority in the National Prosecuting Authority Act which allows a DPP to review a decision taken by another DPP.

5.5.1.2 The reason that the concerns mentioned at 5.5.1.1 have not been addressed relates to the fact that the NDPP failed to respond to our request to meet with him. Interestingly, the NDPP is the only employee of the NPA involved in this matter who failed to meet with us in response to a request to meet.

5.5.1.3 In the absence of any explanation regarding the questions raised at 5.5.1.1, it is our view that the role of the NPA in dealing with the First and Second reports, should be investigated.

6.1 Maluleke

For the reasons set out in the First Report, we recommend that both criminal charges (contravention of the Immigration Act, kidnapping, fraud, forgery and uttering, defeating the ends of justice or obstructing the administration of justice, and assault) and disciplinary charges (in his capacity as employee) be brought against Maluleke in his capacity as an employee.

6.2 Dramat

For the reasons set out at 5.3.1 above, we recommend that both criminal charges (contravention of the Immigration Act, kidnapping, and defeating the ends of justice or obstructing the administration of justice) and disciplinary charges be brought against Dramat in his capacity as an employee.

6.3 Sibiya

For the reasons set out at 5.3.2 we recommend that both criminal charges (contravention of the Immigration Act, kidnapping, and defeating the ends of justice or obstructing the administration of justice) and disciplinary charges be brought against Sibiya in his capacity as an employee.

6.4 Others

- 6.4.1 We recommend that W/O Makoe be charged criminally for assault and that disciplinary action be taken against him in his capacity as an employee.
- 6.4.2 We recommend that 'Leburu' Radebe be charged criminally for assault and disciplinary action be taken against him in his capacity as an employee.
- 6.4.3 We recommend that Nkosi be charged criminally for assault and disciplinary action be taken against him in his capacity as an employee.
- 6.4.4 We recommend that anyone involved in the fraud and forgery of the Home Affairs documents which were submitted in support of the deportation during the Rendition, be charged with forgery and uttering as well as fraud.
- 6.4.5 In the absence of any information as to which of the three co-signatories were responsible for the deletion of information from the First Report, we recommend that Khuba, McBride and Sesoko be charged criminally for defeating the ends of justice or obstructing the administration of justice, and that disciplinary charges be brought against them in their capacity as employees.

7 Benefit of report

- 7.1 The views expressed herein are given solely for the benefit and information of the Minister of Police, to whom it is expressly addressed.
- 7.2 The views expressed herein are given only –
- 7.2.1 with respect to South African law in force as at the date hereof; and

- 7.2.2 in the context of practices and standards developed under South African law which have been applied and observed in light of our experience as South African attorneys.
- 7.3 No opinion is expressed or implied as to the laws of any jurisdiction other than South Africa and we express ourselves not to be experts on, or even generally familiar with, any laws other than the laws of South Africa.

8 Limitation of liability

This report is given strictly on the basis that all and any claims of whatsoever nature arising as a result of reliance on this report shall only be capable of being brought and/or instituted (and may only and exclusively be brought and/or instituted) against Werksmans Inc and its assets, including the proceeds of the professional indemnity insurance held by it ("PI Insurance"). The directors, partners, professionals with similar status, consultants and other employees of Werksmans Inc or any of its affiliates shall not be liable in their personal capacities for any claim whatsoever arising, directly or indirectly, in connection with the opinions given in this letter, and no such claims shall be enforceable against their respective personal estates.

ANSWERING AFFIDAVIT IN RESPONSE TO THE SUPPLEMENTARY AFFIDAVIT OF MR ROBERT JOHN MCBRIDE

I, the undersigned,

SANDILE JULY

do hereby state under oath that:

- 1 I am an adult male attorney of the High Court of South Africa, of full legal capacity. I practise as an attorney and director at Werksmans Attorneys Incorporated ("Werksmans").
- 2 Unless stated otherwise, the facts contained in this affidavit are within my personal knowledge and are, to the best of my knowledge, both true and correct. In certain instances, although I may not have personal knowledge of what I say, such facts are corroborated by objective evidence from the documents that are not disputed and could not be disputed, thus making it unnecessary to call anybody to corroborate them.
- 3 I have read the supplementary statement deposed to by Mr Robert John McBride ("McBride") and I will respond to the contents of same later in this affidavit. Before I respond ad seriatim to McBride's statement, I understand (based on what I have observed from the televised coverage of McBride's testimony) that there are four specific issues that the Chairperson of the inquiry has required me to address in this affidavit:

- 3.1 Firstly, whether Messrs McBride, Humbulani Innocent Khuba ("Khuba") and Mathews Sesoko ("Sesoko") (to whom I refer collectively as "the trio") were "ever warned or cautioned of their rights to remain silent".
- 3.2 Secondly, whether certain correspondence was deliberately not communicated to Mr McBride by Werksmans because the investigation was driven by ulterior motive on the part of Werksmans.
- 3.3 Thirdly, whether I had refused to testify in the criminal case against the aforesaid trio (in circumstances where I had recommended criminal charges against them).
- 3.4 Fourthly, whether the deletions effected by the trio on the first report were considered by me to be unlawful.

MY BACKGROUND

- 4 As indicated above, I am an admitted attorney with the following academic qualifications obtained from the University of Witwatersrand: B Proc, LLB, and a Higher Diploma in Tax Law. I further obtained a Diploma in Arbitration from the Arbitration Foundation of Southern Africa ("AFSA") accredited by the University of Pretoria.

5 I have been practising as an attorney since my admission in 1996. I specialise in the field of labour law. Part of my practice entails conducting investigations into employee misconduct, disciplinary hearings, CCMA arbitrations and conducting motion and trial proceedings at the Labour Court. I have also acted as a Judge on several occasions both in the Labour Court of South Africa and the High Court of South Africa. As a result of my academic qualifications and experience in law practice I consider myself qualified to make and provide legal opinion on matters concerning the law. As a lawyer, I am not a truther, I deal and rely on facts.

6 In my experience as an attorney and having represented a shared and diverse grouping of clients, there is one thing I will never exchange for fees, that is my integrity. The profession I serve demands that an attorney's integrity be beyond reproach. This is how I have practised law and it is the reason why I have been able to make a success of it in the process. I would imagine that this is one of the reasons my clients refer work to me.

7 I have deposed to this affidavit under oath and appreciate the value and my obligation of taking the prescribed oath. Chief amongst the values of taking the prescribed oath is not to mislead this Commission when testifying before it. I will uphold the oath throughout my testimony before the Commission.

THE STRUCTURE OF THIS AFFIDAVIT

8 I have read the supplementary affidavit deposed to by Mr McBride and respond to the contents of his affidavit below. I depose to this affidavit to advise the Commission of the facts at the time the Werksmans report (dated 24 April 2015) was compiled. In doing so, I address the following topics:

8.1 The appointment of Werksmans to investigate the conduct of certain members of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate ("IPID") and whether such appointment was improper.

8.2 Whether a report was submitted by Mr Khuba of IPID on 22 January 2014 and, if so, the status of that report, both factually and legally.

8.3 Allied to the aforesaid are the following additional issues:

8.3.1 Whether Mr Sesoko was at any stage Mr Khuba's supervisor at IPID.

8.3.2 Whether, as a matter of law, an IPID investigator has the power to sign an investigation report.

8.3.3 Whether, as a matter of law, the Executive Director of IPID is required to sign an investigation report prepared by an investigator.

8.3.4 Whether a second report was prepared by IPID and, if so, the status of that report.

8.3.5 Whether there was any justification for the amendment of the first report and the recommendation contained therein to create what became the second report with a different recommendation.

8.3.6 Whether the Minister acted improperly or interfered with the independence of IPID by requesting the case information regarding the Rendition investigation.

9 In addressing the above issues, the following legal instruments must be addressed:

9.1 The Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act, 1 of 2011 ("the IPID Act");

9.2 The Regulations to the Act ("the IPID Regulations");

9.3 The Civilian Secretariat for Police Service Act 2 of 2011 ("the CSPS Act"); and 9.4 The Independent Investigative Directorate Standard Operating Procedure 2013 – 2014 ("the SOP").

10 I will focus on the following relevant sections in the IPID Act:

10.1 section 2 (objects of the Act);

10.2 section 4 (independence and impartiality);

- 10.3 sections 6 and 7 (appointment and responsibilities of the Executive Director);
- 10.4 section 8 (composition of national office);
- 10.5 section 15 (establishment of consultative forum);
- 10.6 section 16 (composition of forum);
- 10.7 section 17 (functions of forum);
- 10.8 section 20 (appointment of provincial heads);
- 10.9 section 21 (responsibilities of provincial head);
- 10.10 section 22 (appointment of investigators);
- 10.11 section 24 (functions and investigative powers);
- 10.12 section 26 (integrity measures); and
- 10.13 section 28 (types of matters to be investigated).
- 11 I will also focus on the following Regulations:
- 11.1 Regulation 2(5) (reporting of matters to be investigated to Directorate);
- 11.2 Regulation 4(4), (8) and (9) (investigation of deaths in police custody or as result of police action or omission or both);

- 11.3 Regulation 5(2)(c), (3)(g) and (3)(i) (investigation of criminal matters);
- 11.4 Regulation 7 (investigation of referred matters);
- 11.5 Regulation 15 (reporting to the Minister); and
- 11.6 Regulation 16 (General).

12 I will focus on the following relevant sections of the CSPA Act:

- 12.1 Section 3(e) to (f) (objects of Act);
- 12.2 Section 5(1)(h) (objects of Civilian Secretariat); and
- 12.3 Section 6(1)(e) to (j) (functions of Civilian Secretariat).

13 I will focus on the following relevant clauses in the SOP:

- 13.1 Clause 1;
- 13.2 Clause 4;
- 13.3 Clause 5 (from 5.1.1, up to and including 5.4.18);
- 13.4 Clause 6.2;
- 13.5 Clause 7.3; and
- 13.6 Clause 7.3.31.

14 Given that both the first and second report dealt with the rendition of the Zimbabwean Nationals, I would like to commence my affidavit by highlighting the meaning of the term "rendition" and South Africa's stance on the right to life. The word "rendition" is defined as follows:

"the practice of sending a foreign criminal or terrorist suspect covertly to be interrogated in a country with less rigorous regulations for the humane treatment of prisoners"

And:

"a government sponsored abduction and extra-judicial transfer of a person from one country to another with the purpose of circumventing the former country's laws on interrogation, detention and torture."

15 The United Nations considers the rendition of a citizen of another country to be a crime against humanity. Article 3 of the United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment¹ provides:

1. No State Party shall expel, return ("refouler") or extradite a person to another State where there are substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture.

2. For the purpose of determining whether there are such grounds, the competent authorities shall take into account all relevant considerations including, where applicable, the existence in the State concerned of a consistent pattern of gross, flagrant or mass violations of human rights."

16 A copy of this international instrument will be made available at the hearing of this matter.

17 The European Court of Human Rights in 2014 condemned the Government of Poland for participating in a CIA rendition, ordering Poland to pay restitution to a man who had been illegally abducted. (Husayn (Abuzubayah) v. Poland (Application No. 7511/13), dated 24 July 2014). The Court held that Poland had cooperated in the preparation, abduction and execution of the CIA rendition and in the secret detention and interrogation operation within its territory. Further that Poland had failed in its duty under the European Convention of Human Rights to ensure that individuals within its territory were not subjected to torture, inhumane treatment or punishment. A copy of this judgment will be made available at the hearing of this matter.

18 In this affidavit I deal with the rendition of several Zimbabwean Nationals ("the Rendition"). When I do so, it is in the sense defined above and against the backdrop of the international instruments and jurisprudence set out above.

- 19 What is certain from the international instruments is that a rendition is a very serious violation of international law and human rights.
- 20 The Rendition involved the arrest in South Africa with the assistance of South African Police officials of Zimbabwean Nationals apparently in connection with the murder of a Zimbabwean Superintendent. Following their arrest, they were unlawfully transported to the border and handed over to Zimbabwe Police and subsequently murdered in Zimbabwe. In the Werksmans report a detailed summary of the Rendition is provided in paragraph 2.2.5. It describes the arrest of five Zimbabwean Nationals over three operations on 5 and 23 November 2010 and 11 January 2011, respectively. This remains a fair reflection of the Rendition.
- 21 South Africa is a constitutional democracy where the Constitution is the supreme law of the country. The right to life of everyone living in South Africa is sacrosanct and not subject to the limitation clause in the Constitution. This was confirmed by the apex court of the country, the Constitutional Court, in the matter of S v Makwanyane CCT3/94) [1995] ZACC 3; 1995 (6) BCLR 665; 1995 (3) SA 391; 1995 (2) SACR 1 (CC) and later in Minister of Home Affairs and Others v Tsebe and Others, Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development and Another v Tsebe and Others (CCT 110/11, CCT 126/11) [2012] ZACC 16; 2012 (5) SA 467 (CC); 2012 (10) BCLR 1017 (CC) (27 July 2012). The constitutional court explaining the importance and guarantee of the right to life in extradition cases, remarked as follows:

"[67] We as a nation have chosen to walk the path of the advancement of human rights. By adopting the Constitution, we committed ourselves not to do certain things. One of those things is that no matter who the person is and no matter what the crime is that he is alleged to have committed, we shall not in any way be party to his killing as a punishment and we will not hand such person over to another country where to do so will expose him to the real risk of the imposition and execution of the death penalty upon him. This path that we, as a country, have chosen for ourselves is not an easy one. Some of the consequences that may result from our choice are part of the price that we must be prepared to pay as a nation for the advancement of human rights and the creation of the kind of society and world that we may ultimately achieve if we abide by the constitutional values that now underpin our new society since the end of apartheid.

[68] If we as a society or the State hand somebody over to another State where he will face the real risk of the death penalty, we fail to protect, respect and promote the right to life, the right to human dignity and the right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of that person, all of which are rights our Constitution confers on everyone. This Court's decision in Mohamed said that what the South African authorities did in that case was not consistent with the kind of society that we have committed ourselves to creating. It said in effect that we will not be party to the killing of any human being as a punishment – no matter who they are and no matter what they are alleged to have done."

- 22 Both judgments are reported, but I nevertheless attach copies marked “SJ1” and “SJ2”, respectively.
- 23 The principles set out above by the Constitutional Court were, in my view, completely undermined in the rendition of the Zimbabwean Nationals yet no one other than Captain Maluleke has been taken to task about their involvement in the rendition of Zimbabwean Nationals.

OBJECTIVE FACTS

- 24 The facts set out under the present heading were obtained from the Rendition Investigation Docket (which included the first and second report referred to above) and the interviews conducted by Werksmans with the following individuals.
- 24.1 Mr Khuba;
- 24.2 Colonel Botsotso Moukangwe (“Col. Moukangwe”);
- 24.3 Mr Glen Angus (“Mr Angus”);
- 24.4 Mr Sesoko;
- 24.5 Adv. Anthony Mosing (“Adv. Mosing”);
- 24.6 Advocate Sibongile Mzinyathi (“Adv. Mzinyathi”);

- 24.7 Advocate George Baloyi ("Adv. Baloyi");
- 24.8 Advocate Kehla Masenyani Andrew Chauke ("Adv. Chauke");
- 24.9 Mr McBride; and
- 24.10 Advocate Norngcobo Jiba ("Adv. Jiba").
- 25 Before Mr Khuba conducted any investigations into the illegal rendition of Zimbabwean Nationals, two investigations into the Rendition had already been undertaken by –
- 25.1 the Directorate for Priority Crimes Investigation ("the DPCI"); and
- 25.2 the Civilian Secretariat, as indicated in the statement of Ms Jennie Irish Qhobosheane. (A copy of the statement of Ms Irish-Qhobosheane is contained in the second report.)
- 26 The investigation conducted by the DPCI exonerated the members implicated in the Rendition.
- 27 It appears that the investigation conducted by Civilian Secretariat was never concluded, but was transferred to the Independent Police Investigative Directorate ("IPID") by the Civilian Secretary for Police. This was confirmed by Mr Khuba in two reports compiled by him. According to Mr Khuba (in an interview conducted with him by Werksmans) the docket handed to the IPID by Civilian Secretariat, had statements that had been taken by Col. Moukangwe and one Mr Khosa.

28 The Rendition case docket was handed to IPID by the Secretary for the Police Service appointed in terms of section 7(1) of the Civilian Secretariat for Police Service Act, 2 of 2011 ("the CSPS Act"), Ms Jennifer Irish-Qhobosheane.

29 In terms of the IPID Act and the CSPS Act there must be cooperation between IPID and the Civilian Secretariat due to the mandate of the respective bodies. I do not intend to burden this affidavit with the areas or issues that these bodies should co-operate on, those are adequately set out in the two Acts. Having said this, IPID is equally free to foster co-operation and conclude memoranda of agreement with other statutory bodies such as the National Prosecuting Authority ("NPA").

30 Due to the fact that the matter was referred to IPID by the Secretariat, it had to be investigated pursuant to the provisions of Regulation 7. (In the second report Mr Khuba stated that the investigation was handed over to IPID pursuant to section 28(1)(h) of the IPID Act. The corresponding provision in the IPID Regulations is Reg. 7.) Reg. 7 reads:

(1) The investigation of matters referred to the Directorate as contemplated in section 28(1)(h) of the Act must be done in accordance with this regulation.

(2) The Executive Director or the relevant provincial head, as the case may be, must designate an investigator to investigate a matter contemplated in section 28(1) (h) of the Act which had been referred to the Directorate for investigation.

(3) An investigator designated in terms of sub-regulation (2) must, as soon as is practicable, determine whether the referred matter relates to –

(a) a matter contemplated in regulation 4, in which case the provisions of that regulation apply with such changes as may be required by the context;

(b) a criminal matter, in which case the provisions of regulation 5 apply with such changes as may be required by the context, notwithstanding the fact that the criminal matter to be investigated may not be listed in sub-regulation (2) of that regulation; or

(c) a matter not dealt with in regulation 4 or 5, in which case the Executive Director or relevant provincial head, as the case may be, must give directions regarding the investigation, the period within which the investigation must be completed and the manner of disposal of the referred matter.

(4) An investigator designated to do an investigation in terms of this regulation must inform the person who referred the matter for investigation in writing of the progress made with the investigation at least once per calendar month."

31 During 2011/2012, Mr Khuba was designated by the then Executive Director of IPID, Mr Francois Beukman, as an investigator to investigate the Rendition case. The IPID Act came into operation on 1 April 2012. As such, Mr Khuba's designation to investigate was made before the IPID Act came into operation. Despite this, Mr Khuba conducted his investigation pursuant to the provisions of section 28(1)(f) and (h) of the IPID Act. Mr Khuba states this fact at paragraph 3, page 25 of his report dated 22 January 2014. At the time Mr Khuba was designated to investigate the Rendition case his substantive position was that of Director: Investigations. Mr Sesoko, on the other hand, at the time of Mr Khuba's designation, also occupied the position of Director: Investigations. It is important to emphasise that Mr Sesoko was under no circumstances or at any stage in his IPID career, Mr Khuba's boss or supervisor.

32 Once appointed to investigate the Rendition case, Mr Khuba assembled a team of investigators from Limpopo to assist him with the investigation. In conducting his investigation, Mr Khuba was assisted by Mr Sesoko, Col. Moukangwe and Advocates Mosing and Billy Moeletsi ("Adv. Moeletsi").

33 Two reports were produced pursuant to the IPID investigation, both signed by Mr Khuba and submitted to the NPA for a prosecutorial decision. The first report was dated 22 January 2014 and was signed and submitted by Mr Khuba to the NPA on or about 24 January 2014 for a prosecutorial decision. The second report was dated 18 March 2014 and was signed by Messrs Khuba, Sesoko, and McBride. This report was submitted to the NPA in approximately April 2014. The first report, amongst others, recommended criminal prosecution against Generals Anwa Dramat ("Dramat") and Shadrack Sibiya ("Sibiya"). The second report did not recommend criminal prosecution against either Generals Dramat or Sibiya but recommended that only one person, being Maluleke be prosecuted for the operations.

34 The Minister of Police at the time, Mr Nathi Nhleko ("the Minister") was faced with glaring discrepancies between the reports emanating from the same institution and the same person. He suspected tampering with the reports. Consequently, on 23 February 2015, the Minister appointed Werksmans to conduct an investigation into the reports submitted by IPID in relation to the Rendition. The Minister prescribed the following terms of reference for the investigation:

[5.1] who and under what circumstances was the original report altered or how the second report came about with both reports signed by the same person; i.e Mr Khuba;*

[5.2] whether any misconduct or offence has been committed and if so by whom?

[5.4] the circumstances under which the report and the docket handed in the NPA and what happened to docket whilst in the NPA possession;

[6]...

[7] I require your report within two weeks from the date of your appointment, an extension may however be granted at your request. [Emphasis added]

35 I attach marked "SJ3" a copy of the letter of instruction.

36 I was the lead lawyer in the investigation. Soon after my appointment as lead investigator, I assembled a team of attorneys and a candidate attorney to assist in conducting the investigation. The investigation team was made up of the following professionals: Mr Sandile Tom (admitted attorney and associate at the time of the investigation), Ms Kerry Badal (admitted attorney and associate at the time of the investigation) and Mr Kwazi Buthelezi who was a candidate attorney, and me. I supervised the finalisation of the report that was subsequently submitted to the Minister. To ensure that the investigation was sound in analysis and free from bias, I enlisted the services of my fellow director at Werksmans, Mr Bradley Workman-Davies. His role was to independently assess whether the conclusions reached by the investigation team were rationally connected to the evidence.

March 2014, respectively. In particular, I was required to consider why the authors of these reports came to different conclusions based on the same information and/or facts. In so doing, I was required to investigate, based on the available information, whether there was any misconduct or offence, and whether there was a prima facie criminal case against Generals Dramat and Sibiya, as mentioned in paragraph 5.3 of the terms of reference.

38 As previously stated, in conducting the investigation and compiling the Werksmans report, we had copies of and considered the Rendition investigation docket. It included the first and second reports. I attach marked "SJ4", a list of all the documents provided to Werksmans. The list of documents (annexure "SJ4" hereto) was referred to as Annexure A to the Werksmans report. Despite a diligent search, I could not find the actual Annexure A to the Werksmans report, I believe that same is in archives. What is marked "S4" is the word version of Annexure A. I will provide Annexure A as soon I have obtained it from archives. I will, later in this affidavit, refer to and attach copies of the first and second reports.

39 I have previously spelt out the names of the people we interviewed.

The first Report

40 The first report, dated 22 January 2014, was initially submitted by Mr Khuba to the NPA together with the docket and recommendations on 22 January 2014 pursuant to section 21(1)(d) of the Act read with Regulation 4(9) of the Regulations published in terms of the Act. This report was approximately 26 pages in total and submitted for the purposes of a prosecutorial decision by the

NPA. This report did not incorporate, the investigator's statement explaining the manner in which the investigation was conducted. I attach marked "SJ5" a copy of this report.

41 On 22 January 2014, Adv. Mosing advised Mr Khuba that in order to complete the investigation report, he was required, as the investigator designated in terms of the IPID Act, to include his statement explaining how he conducted his investigation. Mr Khuba, in accordance with this advice, duly prepared a statement and incorporated it into the report. Having done so, Mr Khuba signed the report and submitted it to the NPA on or about 24 January 2014. He did not amend the report to reflect the date on which his report was submitted to the NPA. Nothing, however, turns on this. This document, submitted on 24 January 2014, but dated 22 January 2014, became what we understand today to be the first report. I attach marked "SJ6" a copy of this report.

42 Mr Sesoko was involved in the preparation and the submission of the first report to the NPA. His involvement was not as Mr Khuba's supervisor but, according to Mr Khuba, as an advisor with a prosecutorial background. Mr Khuba received and took counsel from Mr Sesoko on the procedure of submitting an investigation report to the NPA.

43 Mr Sesoko alleges in paragraph 17 of his affidavit dated 20 November 2019 that he had not seen the first report. This is not true; as a fact he knew of the existence of the first report. I say this for the following reasons:

43.1 He was guiding Mr Khuba on the process to be followed when submitting the report to the NPA.

43.2 On 23 January 2014, Mr Khuba sent an email to Mr Sesoko attaching an unsigned and incomplete soft copy of a report; a day later, on 24 January 2014, Mr Khuba submitted the first report with his statement incorporated therein. Three things are noteworthy about the report sent by Mr Khuba to Mr Sesoko via email:

43.2.1 It recommended that no criminal charges be laid against General Sibiya.

43.2.2 It was not submitted to the NPA; and 43.2.3 It did not contain Mr Khuba's statement as an investigator.

43.3 During February 2014, Mr Sesoko, Mr Khuba and Colonel Moukangwe attended at the offices of the NPA demanding that warrants of arrests be issued against the Generals.

43.4 Mr Sesoko also confirmed his actual knowledge of the existence of the first report in paragraph 19 of his supplementary affidavit to the Commission by stating the following:

"Khuba had already sent me a report in January to facilitate handing over to the Secretary of Police; I do not recall giving McBride any report prior to the final report submitted to him for consideration and signature. I also do not recall Khuba asking me to pass a report on to McBride." [Emphasis added]

43.5 In his settlement agreement with the IPID to conclude his disciplinary hearing, Mr Khuba admitted that when he submitted the first report together with the docket to the NPA for decision, he was accompanied by Mr Sesoko. A copy of Mr Khuba's settlement agreement is attached marked "SJ7".

44 These events took place before Mr McBride joined IPID. Mr McBride joined IPID as its Executive Director on 3 March 2014.

45 Between January 2014 and 3 March 2014, there was no Executive Director at IPID, not even in an acting capacity. This, as I understand it, is what Messrs Khuba and Sesoko have stated of which Mr McBride is aware. Ms Koeki Mbeki, who was the Executive Director at the time, was no longer at IPID during this period. To the extent that there was a need to have reports "signed" or "approved" by Ms Mbeki, which I submit was not necessary, this, as a fact, could not happen; she was not physically there to do so.

46 It should be emphasised that Mr Khuba, Col. Moukangwe and Mr Sesoko sought arrest warrants in February 2014, after the first report (dated 22 January 2014) had been submitted to the NPA. At that stage a warning statement had not yet been obtained from either General Sibiya or Colonel Maluleka. Each of them had at that point been invited to make a statement but had refused to do so. Messrs Khuba and Sesoko and Col. Moukangwe could not have applied for arrest warrants unless and until a report had been submitted. It follows that, the fact that warning statements had not been received from General Sibiya and Colonel Maluleka was not considered by Messrs Khuba and Sesoko and

Col. Moukangwe to be relevant to the question of whether a report had been finalised. A final report as defined in the SOP had indeed been submitted.

47 I must add that a warning statement is not material evidence. Further it is not a requirement for a report or an investigation for that matter, to be final.

48 Furthermore, arrest warrants were sought with knowledge of the fact that an analysis of General Sibiya's cell phone records had already been done but were contradicted by the eye witnesses.

49 The submission of a docket together with a report with recommendations does not prevent an investigator, in this case Mr Khuba, from placing additional information on the docket which has already been submitted to the NPA. This is precisely what Mr Khuba purported to do on 28 February 2014, he obtained additional information (i.e. the warning statements from General Sibiya, who had previously refused to provide statements) that he wished to place in the docket that had already been submitted to the NPA for a prosecutorial decision. Mr Khuba requested or instructed Adv. Mosing to place these additional documents in the docket, and not to collect the docket as claimed by Messrs McBride and Sesoko, subsequently, by Mr Khuba.

The second report

50 Mr McBride joined IPID on 3 March 2014 and within two days of having done so requested an update on all the high profile cases that were being handled by IPID. Mr McBride met with Mr Khuba on 5 March 2014. It was evident from the discussions held between Messrs Khuba and McBride at this meeting, that Mr McBride had considered the first report. Subsequently, Mr Khuba briefed Mr Sesoko on the matter. The following day, 6 March 2014, Mr Khuba met with Messrs McBride, Sesoko and Angus. Mr Angus alleged that Mr McBride requested him (Mr Angus) to review the manner in which the investigation was conducted to ensure that it had been conducted appropriately. Mr Angus, however, advised Mr McBride that he did not believe that it was appropriate for him to get involved at that stage of the investigation. It was on this day that Mr McBride requested Mr Khuba to collect the docket from the NPA and to provide him with every document he (Mr Khuba) possessed regarding the Rendition investigation.

51 On 7 March 2014, Messrs Khuba and Angus visited Adv. Van Zyl at the offices of the Director of Public Prosecutions ("the DPP"). Adv. Van Zyl was in possession of the docket at the time. According to Adv. Van Zyl, they requested him to provide them with the docket and he did so. Messrs Khuba and Angus state that Adv. Van Zyl requested them to sign for the removal of the docket. Mr Khuba signed for the hand-over of the docket and Mr Angus affixed his signature to confirm that he had witnessed the docket being handed over. After removing and collecting the docket, they took it straight to Mr McBride and briefed him.

52 From approximately 7 March 2014, Messrs Khuba, Sesoko and McBride began working on what has been described as "the second report". It is this report that was subsequently signed by the trio. I attach a copy of this report marked "SJ8".

- 53 In an undated Office Note prepared by Adv. Chauke, he provides an account of movement of the docket from his office to IPID and to the office of the NDPP. A copy of this Office Note is attached marked "SJ9".
- 54 Each of the trio subsequently claimed that the second report was the official report. In truth, however, it was no more than a rehashed version of the first report with information that had implicated Generals Dramat and Sibiya deleted. No fresh analysis was undertaken by the trio to arrive at the conclusion they did. This was the nub of the conclusion we reached in the Werksmans report.
- 55 It should be emphasised that the Werksmans report was prepared in accordance with what was required by the Minister in his terms of reference. When our investigation was complete and the report compiled, we handed it over to the Minister on 24 April 2015. Werksmans recommended that the Minister institute disciplinary action against the trio, and further that they be criminally charged for defeating the ends of justice or administration of justice. I will deal with these recommendations later in this affidavit.

RESPONSE TO THE COMPLAINTS REGARDING THE REPORT

- 56 It is clear from the affidavits and statements submitted by Messrs McBride, Khuba and Sesoko that they take exception to virtually everything contained in the Werksmans report. There is a plethora of complaints raised by them about the report. This report was issued in April 2015. Notwithstanding this, none of them has so far challenged the report or sought to have it set aside on any of the grounds advanced in their statements. I would have expected them to challenge the report at an appropriate forum and fully ventilate their complaints. Mr McBride would surely have appreciated that he had such remedy available to him in law. In fact, Mr McBride challenged his suspension all the way to the Constitutional Court. Yet, nowhere in that challenge did he seek to have the report reviewed and set aside.

57 Although the report was prepared by my office, it was adopted by the Minister as his own report and he sought to act upon it. When an application was brought against the Minister's decision, the only challenge focussed on the powers of the Minister, not the contents of the Werksmans report per se. As matters currently stand, the contents of the Werksmans report have never been challenged. As such, they remain final and binding. They can only be set aside by a court order.

58 I now turn to deal with the specific issues that I understand the chairperson of the Commission wishes me to deal with.

The alleged failure to caution the trio

59 I deny that the trio were given a misleading impression regarding the purpose of the interviews. I deny that Messrs McBride and Khuba ever enquired about the status of the interviews with Werksmans. I invite them to direct the Commission to the instances where they enquired about the status and nature of the Werksmans investigation. The only person who made such inquiry about the 'status and nature' of the investigation was Mr Sesoko. He posed the following question at the beginning of his interview:

"MR SESOKO: Whether I am here as a suspect in a criminal investigation or a disciplinary investigation, because when I went through the terms of reference, the Minister says you must investigate whether there was misconduct or crime committed. So I need to establish what is my status.

MR TOM: Yes your status, Mr Sesoko, you are not a suspect in criminal proceedings or proceedings to be conducted, to be conducted either by the Minister or IPID for that matter. This investigation is to understand as what, why do we have these two reports which have conflicting information in a way or which have recommendations that are different."

60 I have referred to Mr Tom previously. He was part of the Werksmans team. I deny that he misled Mr Sesoko when he told him that he (Mr Sesoko) was not a suspect in a criminal or disciplinary investigation. As I will explain further in this affidavit, the Werksmans investigation was not a criminal investigation. Secondly by the time Mr Sesoko was interviewed Werksmans did not suspect him of any disciplinary misconduct. At the time of interviewing Mr Sesoko no one in the Werksmans investigation team knew whether he committed misconduct. At the time of the interview, there was no prima facie view held by Werksmans to the effect that Mr Sesoko committed misconduct. Mr Sesoko was just a person of interest given that he signed the second report.

61 The Werksmans investigation was not conducted by a police officer performing his functions in terms of section 35 of the Constitution or section 41 of the Criminal Procedure Act, No.51 of 1977, as amended. These pieces of legislation prescribe that any accused person who is arrested for allegedly committing an offence has a right (a) to remain silent and (b) to be informed promptly –

“(a) to remain silent;

(b) to be informed promptly –

(i) of the right to remain silent; and

(ii) of the consequences of not remaining silent.”

62 These rights accrue to persons arrested for allegedly having committing a crime. These rights must be read to them, in other words they “are cautioned” by a law enforcement officer performing functions in terms of the Constitution and the Criminal Procedure Act. The trio were not being arrested or threatened with arrest during the Werksmans investigation. Werksmans is a private law firm. It simply does not have powers of arrest. There was no obligation upon Werksmans to caution the trio of their alleged rights to “remain silent” and of the “consequences of not remaining silent”.

63 Although there was no obligation upon us to caution them, the trio was fully aware of and were advised of the nature of the Werksmans investigation from its inception: we had provided them with a copy of the terms of reference.

64 Furthermore, the trio was consistently advised and represented by the law firm Adams & Adams Attorneys ("Adams & Adams") around the time of the interviews with Werksmans. Although a representative of Adams & Adams did not attend any of the interviews held with the trio, from the facts below it is clear that they had received counsel from Adams & Adams and were aware of the nature and purpose of the investigation.

64.1 On 27 February 2014 my candidate attorney at the time, Mr Thandukwazi Buthelezi, addressed an email to Mr McBride requesting his permission to consult with Mr Khuba. The email was sent in my name, as such I refer to it as my email. Attached to my email were two documents: the Minister's terms of reference and a letter requesting his permission to consult with Mr Khuba. I attach marked "SJ10" and "SJ10(i)", respectively, copies of my email and my letter requesting permission from Mr McBride. The terms of reference have already been attached to this affidavit. Unbeknown to me at the time Mr McBride's email was not RMcBride@ipid.co.za (as indicated on my email and to which I addressed the email) but RMcBride@ipid.gov.za. For obvious reasons, I did not receive a response to this email.

64.2 I understand that Mr Buthelezi looked Mr McBride's email up from the IPID website and may have made a mistake when he put the address down. Mr Buthelezi and I did not receive anything to show that the email sent to the wrong email address had "bounced back" or was not delivered to the addressee.

64.3 On 2 March 2015 the same email was forwarded to Mr Sesoko under cover of a separate email, requesting him to grant Mr Khuba permission to consult with Werksmans for the purposes of the investigation. In the said email, I also attached the Minister's terms of reference and the request to consult with Mr Khuba. I also attached a copy of the almost identically worded letter I had addressed to Mr McBride (changed mutatis mutandis for Mr Sesoko's purpose) dated 27 February 2015. I attach hereto a copy of this email as annexure "SJ11" and "SJ12", respectively, copies of my email and the attached letter.

64.4 On 6 March 2015, I received a letter from Mr Jac Marais of Adams & Adams placing his firm on record and referring to my letter dated 27 February 2015. In his letter Mr Marais stated that Mr Khuba had not been granted permission to consult with Werksmans. I attach marked "SJ13" a copy of Mr Marais' letter. For the sake of completeness, I quote the content of this letter herein below.

- "1. We refer to your letter dated 27 February 2015 which has been referred to us for reply to on behalf of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate ("IPID").
2. We shall procure instructions from IPID as soon as possible and furnish you with a substantive response to your letter shortly.
3. We confirm that, in the interim, Mr. Khuba has not been granted permission to consult with you. We furthermore request that you direct any further correspondence in relation to your investigation to the writer hereof.

Yours faithfully

- 64.5 This letter from Mr Marias does not distinguish between the letter of 27 February 2015 sent to Mr McBride and the almost identically worded letter of the same date sent to Mr Sesoko. Whatever the case, Adams & Adams had been provided with a copy of the letter. It is, with respect, unlikely that Adams & Adams would not have discussed the content of this letter with Mr McBride, as well. Mr Marais's letter of 6 March 2015 is thus confirmation that Messrs McBride, Sesoko and Khuba had in fact received my letter of 27 February 2015 and my email of 2 March 2015.
- 64.6 It follows from the aforesaid that as at 6 March 2015 the trio was aware of the nature of the investigation that Werksmans was appointed to conduct as they were not only in possession of the terms of reference but were also being advised by Adams & Adams.
- 64.7 From 6 March 2015 until 26 March 2015, my office communicated with the trio through Adams & Adams. I attach copies of correspondence exchanged between Werksmans and Adams & Adams during this period as annexure "SJ14".
- 64.8 Importantly, among this correspondence (annexure "SJ14"), is a letter from Adams & Adams received on 23 March 2015. I refer to pertinent paragraphs of this letter below as it demonstrates my contention that the trio was aware of the purpose of the investigation:

- “1. As previously indicated, we represent the Independent Police Investigative Directorate (“IPID”). Your correspondence below addressed to Mr. M. Sesoko has been referred to us for consideration and reply.
2. Our instructions are to facilitate IPID’s cooperation with your inquiry, as referred to in your letter under reply, including in respect of interviews with Mr. McBride, Mr. Sesoko and others. We request that you address all further correspondence to us.
3. With regard to the aforesaid we draw your attention to the judgement per Fabricius J in the matter of Independent Police Investigative Directorate and Robert McBride v Minister of Police and Minister of Public Service and Administration under case number 6588/2015.
4. Our client is confident that your inquiry will not lead to any adverse findings against our client in relation to the allegations contained in your Terms of Reference (or at all). We confirm that our client’s cooperation with your investigation is without prejudice to its rights in relation to the unlawfulness of the Minister’s powers referred to above and the pending litigation.

5. We will consult with our client's Mr. Sesoko as soon as possible whereafter we will revert regarding suitable dates and times for an interview. To assist you with planning we confirm that our client's Mr. M. Sesoko has indicated he will probably be out of town tomorrow. We are, however, appreciative of the time pressures that you are under and will therefore endeavour to revert as soon as possible.

[Emphasis added]

64.9 The highlighted portions of this letter demonstrate not only that Mr McBride's allegation that we had given them a misleading impression of the purpose of the interview (as expressed in his supplementary affidavit) are false but reveals the lengths to which he is prepared to go to mislead the Commission.

64.10 On 26 March 2015, I received two telephone calls from Mr Marais. In the first telephone call, Mr Marais indicated to me that he was representing IPID and not individuals. Later that same day he telephoned me a second time to advise me that his mandate had been terminated by IPID.

64.11 On 31 March 2015, I received an email from Mr Marais informing me inter alia that his mandate had been terminated by IPID and that the contact person was a certain Mr Viceroy from IPID. I attach a copy of Mr Marais's email marked "SJ15". This email was clearly sent to me in error as it referred to a High Court application and the interaction between the two firms had nothing to do with any High Court matter. I quote the content of this letter hereunder.

- "1. We refer to the above matter ("the Application") as well as your correspondence of 25 March 2015.*

- 2. Please be advised that the First Applicant, per Mr. Kgamanyane the Acting Head of IPID, has instructed us that it will not proceed with the aforesaid Application, and, we will, accordingly, shortly deliver:*
 - 2.1. a Notice of Withdrawal of Application by the First Applicant. Please note that the Second Applicant is proceeding with the Application; and*
 - 2.2. a Notice of Withdrawal of Attorneys of Record.*

- 3. Any further correspondence to the First Applicant in relation to the Application should, accordingly, be directed to Mr. Viceroy Maoka, Acting Head of Legal Services, at vmaoka@ipid.gov.za.*

- 4. Any correspondence in relation to the Application addressed to the Second Applicant should be directed to the writer hereof.*

With kind regards"

64.12 On 2 April 2015, I addressed a letter to Mr McBride at his email address of RMcBride@ipid.gov.za requesting to consult with him on 7 April 2015. I attach a copy of this letter together with the covering email as annexure "SJ16".

64.13 I addressed this email to Mr McBride directly (as opposed to addressing it to Adams & Adams) because I understood from the information received from Mr Marais that his mandate had been terminated. I later learned from media reports that Mr McBride had been placed on precautionary suspension by the Minister on 24 March 2015 and that Mr Israel Kgamanyane was appointed as the Acting Executive Director of the IPID. Unbeknown to me at that time Mr McBride did not have access to his work emails as a result of his suspension. I was unaware of these facts or details around Mr McBride's suspension conditions.

64.14 On 13 April 2015, still labouring under the impression that Mr McBride was deliberately not responding to my email, I addressed a letter to Mr Kgamanyane, advising him of my difficulty in securing an interview with Mr McBride and sought his intervention in the matter. I attach hereto a copy of the said letter and covering email as annexure "SJ17".

64.15 Between 13 and 15 April 2015, Mr Kgamanyane brought my letter of 13 April 2015 to Mr McBride's attention and the latter responded to him by way of a short message service ("SMS") stating the following:

"Hi there. You can pass on my cellphone number to Werksmans.

Thanks."

64.16 On 15 April 2015 I received an email from Mr Marais informing me that my letter of 13 April 2015 to Mr Kgamanyane was forwarded to Mr McBride for his response. Mr Marais recorded that my email of 2 April 2015 was sent to an email address that Mr McBride did not have access to and accused me of directing correspondence to Mr McBride directly instead of him (Mr Marais). I attach a copy of this letter marked "SJ18".

64.17 Mr Marais' suggestion that I had acted improperly in sending the email directly to Mr McBride was without foundation. It will be recalled that he had telephonically advised me that he did not act for any individuals but for IPID itself and, later, that IPID had terminated his mandate.

64.18 On 16 April 2015 I addressed a letter to Mr Marais recording my disagreement with his views expressed in his email of 15 April 2015. I reminded him of what he had telephonically advised me on 26 March 2015 and explained that had I been aware that he continued to act for Mr McBride I would have contacted him instead of his client. I attach hereto a copy of this letter together with the covering email to Mr Marais marked "SJ19" and "SJ20", respectively. What is noteworthy about this letter is that in paragraph 5 thereof, I recorded the following:

"[5] Instead of advising us that he is represented by you, he sent an SMS to Mr Gamanyane (sic) which was in turn forwarded to us, which reads as follows:

"Hi there. You can pass on my cellphone number to Werksmans. Thanks."

64.19 I called Mr McBride on the 16 April 2015 about the meeting of the 17 April 2015 to his cellphone using my landline, his phone was unanswered and I left a voice message to him.

64.20 Mr McBride himself did not advise Mr Kgamanyane that he was represented by Adams & Adams. In my letter I invited Mr Marais to advise on whether the proposed interview with his client would proceed on 17 April 2015.

64.21 On the same day (16 April 2015) Mr Marais responded to my letter of the same date. He adopted a more conciliatory tone:

- *1. We refer to the above matter and your email below.
2. We confirm that the consultation with our client on Friday, 17 April 2015 at 12:00 pm at your offices.
3. We request that any documentation in respect of which you will rely on for the interview with our client be made available to him in advance for consideration in order to make the interview more constructive.
4. We look forward to receiving your response."

65 I attach a copy of this email marked as annexure "SJ21".

66 I do not recall providing Mr McBride with any documentation (other than the terms of reference) in advance. It was, to my mind, not necessary to do so because Mr McBride had a copy of the docket and the reports (which was all I had) and did not require any additional documents. We did, however, provide him with copies of the two reports (i.e. the first report and the final report) during the meeting and a copy of the transcript of the meeting afterwards.

67 On 17 April 2015 my team and I interviewed Mr McBride. I attach hereto a copy of the interview transcript as annexure "SJ22" for ease of reference. To my surprise Mr McBride arrived on his own for the interview, without his attorney, Mr Marais. As is apparent from the transcript, Mr McBride from the outset complained about not having received certain letters from my office. ["SJ22" page 2] I explained to him the exchange in correspondence between me and Mr Marais. I further expressed my surprise at not having Mr Marais as part of the interview process to represent him. Mr McBride explained why Mr Marais was not present. ["SJ22" page 4] For me, Mr Marais' absence in the interview did not make sense at all considering the tone of the earlier correspondences between us. I quote the relevant passages of the transcript:

"MR JULY: He came back to say today's meeting is proceeding. We also thought that you would be coming with him.

MR McBRIDE: No, I think initially, from the beginning, we had indicated that we do not require lawyers to be present. But since I am suspended, and they [Adams & Adams] are acting on my behalf, I obtained advice and guidance from them. The most important issue was you were not in contact with me, either via the lawyer or anybody, because I was not receiving this stuff. For me I was happy that at least you could make contact and sort out the legal issues between the lawyers. That was the most important thing.

MR JULY: At least that has been sorted out now, Mr McBride. The issue is this, you started at IPID in March.” (Emphasis added) [See annexure “SJ22” at page 4, lines 10 to 25]

68 For the reasons set out above, I reject the impression created by Mr McBride that I deliberately sent letters to an email address he had no access to or that I maliciously addressed correspondence pertaining to him to persons other than him in order to circumvent him. It is apparent from my explanation above that I was not motivated by any malice at all.

69 In light of the above, I reiterate that Mr McBride came to the interview fully aware of the nature of the interview and the purpose of the interview. He had been aware since 2 March 2015 when the terms of the reference were first sent to Mr Sesoko and received by his attorneys, Adams & Adams.

70 At paragraph 19 of his supplementary affidavit Mr McBride goes so far as to state that they were given a misleading impression of the purpose of the interviews. This statement is not only an inaccurate account of the investigation process, but is not supported by the objective facts. Mr McBride received the terms of reference through his attorneys and Mr Sesoko and they were receiving counsel from Adams & Adams around the time of the interviews. Mr McBride has made no effort to explain what this “misleading impression of the interviews" was, when regard is had to the terms of reference and the transcripts.

My alleged refusal to testify in a criminal case involving the trio 71 I emphasise that my report was addressed to the Minister. I expressly recorded therein that:

"7 Benefit of report

7.1 The views expressed herein are given solely for the benefit and information of the Minister of Police, to whom it is expressly addressed." [Emphasis added]

72 It was always open to the Minister to either accept or reject the recommendations contained in the Werksmans report. As it so happened, the Minister not only accepted the recommendations, he implemented them. Mr McBride was charged with misconduct, as were Messrs Khuba and Sesoko. The disciplinary action taken against Mr McBride was an employment issue regulated by the employment contract, the Labour Relations Act No. 66 of 1995 as amended, and the Public Service Act, 1994. The Minister's power or otherwise to discipline McBride was clarified by the Constitutional Court in McBride v Minister of Police and Another 2016 (11) BCLR 1398 (CC) (6 September 2016). Insofar as Messrs Khuba and Sesoko are concerned, the Executive Director of IPID has the power to discipline them. In their case the disciplinary action against them was taken by the then Acting Executive Head of IPID, Mr Kgamanyane.

73 The disciplinary hearing would have afforded Mr McBride an opportunity to challenge and disagree with the Werksmans report, but instead he chose to challenge the Minister's powers but not the report.

74 The Minister of Police had no power to criminally charge anybody and he certainly did not do so in this matter. The decision to charge the trio criminally was that of the NPA and was taken by that institution after having applied its mind to the matter. I elected not to testify at their criminal trial as my testimony would largely be regarded as hearsay, as I relied on what people told me during the interviews. I further elected not to testify as my report contains all my findings. Any testimony on my part would have been a mere regurgitation of my findings. For the record, I refused for the same reasons, when I was requested by the initiator in the disciplinary hearings of Messrs Khuba and Sesoko.

75 The Werksmans report is hearsay and it is trite that hearsay evidence is generally inadmissible at criminal proceedings. Hearsay evidence can only be admitted in the exceptions set out in section 3(1) of the Law of Evidence Amendment Act. This trite principle was echoed in Exxaro Coal (Pty) Ltd v Chipana and Others (JA161/17) [2019] ZALAC 52; [2019] 10 BLLR 991 (LAC) where the court remarked as follows regarding hearsay evidence emanating from investigations:

"[19] It is accepted that this section essentially means that if there is no agreement to receive hearsay evidence it is to be excluded unless the interests of justice requires its admission. Hearsay evidence that is not admitted in accordance with the provisions of this section is not evidence at all. This Court held: "Section 3(1) of the Act has ushered our approach to the admissibility of hearsay evidence into a refreshing and practical era. We have broken away from the assertion-orientated and rigid rule-and-exception approach of the past. Courts may receive hearsay evidence if the interests of justice require it to be admitted". This section still retains the "caution" concerning the receiving of hearsay evidence, but changed the rules about when it is to be received and when not.

[23] In addition to referring to precautions to be taken by criminal trial courts in applying the hearsay provisions of LEAA, the Supreme Court of Appeal in S v Ndhlovu and Others referred to safeguards to ensure respect for an accused's fundamental right to a fair trial. Cameron JA pointed out that safeguards, including the following, were important: "First, a presiding judicial officer is generally under a duty to prevent a witness heedlessly giving vent to hearsay evidence. More specifically under the Act, "it is the duty of a trial judge to keep inadmissible evidence out, [and] not to listen passively as the record is turned into a papery sump of "evidence".' Second, the Act cannot be applied against an unrepresented accused to whom the significance of its provisions have not been explained..."

76 As I have indicated elsewhere in this affidavit, the trio disagree sharply with the Werksmans report, which is based on interviews with several individuals, including them. They would never have consented to the admission of the Werksmans report as it made adverse findings against them.

77 The Werksmans investigation was not a criminal investigation performed by police officers or law enforcement officers. I seriously doubt whether absent of consent, the Werksmans report would have been admitted in criminal proceedings. In any event the persons who participated in the investigation and gave evidence upon which the Werksmans report is based were all available at the time.

78 The fact that the report recommended a criminal investigation did not transform the status of the report into a criminal investigation. In my own experience, employers routinely refer the outcome of disciplinary enquiries and internal investigations for criminal investigation. This does not mean that the disciplinary enquiry has been turned into a criminal enquiry.

Whether the deletions were unlawful?

79 As a prelude to my response to the question posed by the chairperson of the Commission regarding whether the deletions effected on the first report by the trio were unlawful, I set out the recommendation made by Werksmans regarding criminal liability of the trio herein below.

"6.4.5 In the absence of any information as to which of the three co-signatories were responsible for the deletion of information from the First Report, we recommend that Khuba, McBride and Sesoko be charged criminally for defeating the ends of justice or obstructing the administration of justice, and that disciplinary charges be brought against them in their capacity as employees.

[Emphasis added]

80 IPID is established in terms of section 3 of the Act. The objects of IPID are set out in section 2 of the IPID Act. They are, inter alia –

“(a) to give effect to the provision of section 206 (6) of the Constitution establishing and assigning functions to the Directorate on national and provincial level;

(b) to ensure independent oversight of the South African Police Service and Municipal Police Services;

(c) to align provincial strategic objectives with that of the national office to enhance the functioning of the Directorate;

(d) to provide for independent and impartial investigation of identified criminal offences allegedly committed by members of the South African Police Service and Municipal Police Services;...

81 It is important to note from the above provisions of the IPID Act that IPID is an institution established to give effect to section 206(6) of the Constitution; as such, IPID performs a constitutionally mandated function. This constitutional function is performed in the manner set out in the IPID Act. One of the functions of IPID is to refer matters of a criminal nature investigated by it to the NPA or Provincial Prosecutions Authority for further action. These matters are referred to the prosecutions authority by the submission of a docket, together with recommendations that are contained in an investigation report. Each of these procedures is designed to give effect to section 206(6) of the Constitution.

82 With this understanding of the framework applicable to IPID, it follows that its reports must be beyond reproach, objective and free from dishonesty on the part of those who prepare reports to be submitted and referred to the NPA. Although the prosecutions authority is not bound by the recommendations made by IPID in its reports, such reports are a useful tool in helping the NPA in making a prosecutorial decision. Therefore, it is important that the NPA is not misdirected or misled by IPID in its reports or recommendations. The recommendations by IPID are not some insignificant recommendations which can be rejected by the NPA without consideration. They are made for a reason by an institution performing a very important constitutional function, i.e. to keep police action in check.

83 Against this background, the question that arises is what is to happen when members of IPID, led by Mr McBride, delete crucial information from a report submitted to the NPA for a prosecutorial decision and later claim that the very report submitted for prosecutorial decision was not final. A secondary question, allied to the first, is how one classifies the conduct of senior members of IPID who instead of conducting an investigation to produce the so-called second report, as they claim to have done, merely deleted information implicating Generals Dramat and Sibiya in crimes from the first report and substituted the recommendation contained in the first report to produce the second report.

84 The answer to these questions is that the conduct of the trio, viewed objectively, involved gross dishonesty and deceit and amounted to defeating the ends of justice or obstructing the administration of justice. The trio knew and was fully aware that IPID reports and recommendations were not insignificant. They matter. The deletions were effected in order to suit their ultimate recommendations, viz. that no criminal charges should be levelled against General Dramat and Sibiya. This was done with the objective of misleading the NPA.

85 The deletions were both unlawful and constituted misconduct:

85.1 Mr McBride knew that IPID had finalised its report and submitted it to the NPA for decision. Yet, an instruction was given to retrieve the docket. This constitutes interference with the independent functioning of the NPA in breach of section 179 of the Constitution, which guarantees the independence of the NPA.

85.2 The amendment of the report was on its own unlawful. Investigators of IPID must conduct their work independently. They cannot take sides in an investigation, but must consider the facts objectively.

85.3 This also constitutes gross misconduct since IPID is established specifically to investigate the police. It is axiomatic that IPID must be independent of the police. It has been to police the police.

85.4 To date not a single one of the trio has admitted to the deletion of the information nor provided justifiable reasons for doing so.

86 These are the considerations that influenced Werksmans' recommendation that the trio be charged criminally for defeating or obstructing the ends of justice.

87 I would like to emphasize that Werksmans' role ended when it issued the report to the Minister. Furthermore, Werksmans never made recommendations to the NPA for the prosecution of the trio and was not part of the decision taken by the NPA to prosecute the trio.

Misrepresentation of the Werksmans Report

88 I listened to Mr McBride's testimony before the commission on 12 April 2019, there is statement he made that is untrue and warrants a response. Mr McBride claimed that there was a disclaimer in the Werksmans report "saying that it is not to be used in litigation. So ultimately what was the purpose of the report if it could not be used in litigation". There is no such disclaimer in the Werksmans report. What was in fact stated in the Werksmans' report was the following:

"8 Limitation of liability

This report is given strictly on the basis that all and any claims of whatsoever nature arising as a result of reliance on this report shall only be capable of being brought and / or instituted (and may only and exclusively be brought and / or instituted) against Werksmans Inc. and its assets, including the proceeds of the professional insurance held by it ("PI Insurance"). The directors, partners, professionals with similar status, consultants and other employees of Werksmans Inc. or any of its affiliates shall not be liable in their personal capacities for any claim whatsoever arising, directly or indirectly, in connection with the opinions given in this letter, and no such claims shall be enforceable against their respective estates."

89 This is a limitation of liability and not a disclaimer. It also does not state that it cannot be used for litigation.

90 The allegation by Mr McBride is untrue and demonstrates his desperation to portray Werksmans in a bad light and unnecessarily vilify it.

91 Mr McBride's supplementary affidavit deals extensively with his powers as the then Executive Director of IPID and he seeks to demonstrate how he seemingly acted within the confines of the IPID Act when the second report was produced. In light of this, I deem it prudent to first deal with the legislative framework applicable to IPID before I respond to the averments contained in the supplementary affidavit.

THE LEGISLATIVE FRAMEWORK GOVERNING IPID

The IPID Act

92 I have already discussed some of the objects of the IPID Act above. The Directorate functions independently of the South African Police Service. Each organ of state must assist the Directorate to maintain its impartiality and to perform its functions effectively.²

93 The Executive Director of IPID is appointed in terms of section 6 of the Act. The Minister must nominate a suitably qualified person for appointment to the office of Executive Director to head the Directorate in accordance with a procedure to be determined by the Minister.³

94 The relevant Parliamentary Committee must, within a period of 30 parliamentary working days of the nomination in terms of subsection (1), confirm or reject such nomination.⁴

95 In the event of an appointment being confirmed, the successful candidate is appointed to the office of Executive Director subject to the laws governing the public service with effect from a date agreed upon by such person and the Minister; and such appointment is for a term of five years, which is renewable for one additional term only.⁵

² Section 4 of the Act.

³ Section 6(1).

⁴ Section 6(2).

⁵ Section 6(3)(a)-(b).

96 The Minister is enjoined by section 6 to of the IPID Act, remove the Executive Director from office on account of, misconduct; ill health; or inability to perform the duties of that office effectively.⁶

97 The roles and responsibilities of a director are set out in section 7 of the IPID Act. The relevant aspects of section 7 read:

"(1) The Executive Director is the accounting officer of the Directorate and must ensure that –

(a) Proper records of all financial transactions, assets and liabilities of the Directorate are kept.

(4) The Executive Director must refer criminal offences revealed as a result of an investigation, to the National Prosecuting Authority for criminal prosecution and notify the Minister of such referral.

(5) The National Prosecuting Authority must notify the Executive Director of its intention to prosecute, whereafter the Executive Director must notify the Minister thereof and provide a copy to the Secretary.

⁶ Section 6(6)(a)-(c).

(6) The Executive Director must ensure that complaints regarding disciplinary matters are referred to the National Commissioner and where appropriate, to the relevant Provincial Commissioner.

(7) ...

(8) All recommendations which are not of a criminal or disciplinary nature must be referred to the Minister and provide a copy thereof to the Secretary.

(9) The Executive Director may upon receipt of a complaint, cause to investigate any offence allegedly committed by any member of the South African Police Service or Municipal Police Services, and may, where appropriate, refer such investigation to the National or Provincial Commissioner concerned.

(12) The Executive Director must at any time when requested to do so by the Minister of Parliament, report on the activities of the Directorate to the Minister or Parliament.

98 Section 8 deals with the composition of the National Office and lists the departments or units which should be part of the national office. Section 15 provides for the establishment of a Consultative forum and section 16 provides for the composition of the consultative forum. The consultative forum consists of the Executive Director and Secretary and any person invited by the Executive Director or the Secretary to a meeting of the forum.

99 The functions of the forum are set out in section 17 and are as follows-

*"(a) facilitate closer co-operation between the Secretary and the Executive Director; and (b) discuss, amongst other, issues relating to trends, recommendations and implementation of such recommendations."*⁷

100 The responsibilities of a provincial head are set out in section 21 of the Act and the provincial head's responsibilities are as follows –

- "(a) the appointment and performance management of staff at provincial level;*
- (b) to facilitate the investigation of cases and perform any other function incidental to any such investigations;*
- (c) to control and monitor active cases;*
- (d) to refer matters investigated by the provincial office under this Act to the National or relevant provincial prosecuting authority for criminal prosecution;*

⁷ Section 17(a)-(b).

- (e) to report to the Executive Director on matters investigated;
- (f) to refer disciplinary matters to the Provincial Commissioner;
- (g) to facilitate co-operation between the provincial head and provincial police secretariat;
- (h) to report to the Executive Director on recommendations and finalisation of cases;
- (i) ...;
- (o) to manage the provincial office."

101 Section 22 of the IPID Act deals with the appointment of investigators. In terms of section 22(1) the Executive Director, in consultation with the relevant provincial head, must appoint a fit and proper person as an investigator of the Directorate, subject to subsections (2), (3) and (4).

102 In terms of subsection (4), the security screening investigation contemplated in subsection (3), must be done in conjunction with the National Intelligence Agency, as referred to in section 3 of the Intelligence Services Act No. 65 of 2002.

103 Section 24 deals with the functions and investigative powers of an investigator.

103.1 In terms of subsection (1) –

“an investigator may, subject to the control and direction of the Executive Director or relevant provincial head, exercise such powers and perform such duties as are conferred or imposed upon him or her by or under this Act or any other law, and must obey all lawful directions which he or she may perform from time to time receive from a person having authority to give such directions under this Act.”⁸

103.2 An investigator has the powers provided for in the CPA, which are bestowed upon a peace officer or police official relating to: the investigation of offences; the entry and search of premises; the seizure and disposal of articles; arrest; execution of warrants; and the attendance of an accused person in court.⁹

104 The Minister may prescribe measures for integrity testing of members of the Directorate, which may include random entrapment, testing for the abuse of alcohol or drugs, or the use of a polygraph or similar instrument to ascertain, confirm or examine in a scientific manner the truthfulness of statement made by a person.¹⁰ The necessary samples required for any test referred to in subsection (1) may be taken, but any sample taken from the body of a member may only be taken by a registered medical practitioner or a registered nurse.¹¹

⁸ Section 24(1).

⁹ Section 24(2)(a)-(g).

¹⁰ Section 26(1).

¹¹ Section 26(2).

information obtained through integrity testing, if such measures are prescribed in terms of subsection (1).¹²

105 Section 28 lists the type of matters to be investigated by the Directorate. The Directorate must investigate the following–

“(1) The Directorate must investigate –

- (a) any deaths in police custody;*
- (b) deaths as a result of police actions;*
- (c) any complaint relating to the discharge of an official firearm by any police officer;*
- (d) rape by a police officer, whether the police officer is on or off duty;*
- (e) rape of any person while that person is in police custody;*
- (f) any complaint of torture or assault against a police officer in the execution of his or her duties;*
- (g) corruption matters within the police initiated by the Executive Director on his or her own, or after the receipt of a complaint from a member of the public, or referred to the* ¹² Section 26(3).

Directorate by the Minister, an MEC or the Secretary, as the case may be; and

- (h) any other matter referred to it as a result of a decision by the Executive Director, or if so requested by the Minister, an MEC or the Secretary as the case may be, in the prescribed manner.

- (2) The Directorate may investigate matters relating to systemic corruption involving the police.”

The CSPS Act

106 The objects of this CSPS Act are set out in section 3. They are inter alia to:

- (e) provide for the establishment, composition and functions of the senior management forum;
- (f) provide for co-operation with the Independent Police Investigative Directorate and the South African Police Service”

107 Section 5 deals with objects of Civilian Secretariat and provides that the objects of the Civilian Secretariat.

“The objects of the Civilian Secretariat are to –

- (a) exercise civilian oversight over the police service;

- (b) give strategic advice to the Minister in respect of developing and implementing policies;
- (c) provide administrative support services to the Minister to ensure South Africa's engagement with relevant international obligations;
- (d) liaise and communicate with stakeholders;
- (e) implement a partnership strategy to mobilise roleplayers and stakeholders to strengthen service delivery by the police service to ensure the safety and security of communities;
- (f) implement, promote and align the operations of the Civilian Secretariat in the national and provincial spheres of government;
- (g) co-ordinate the functions and powers of the Civilian Secretariat in the national and provincial spheres of government;
- (h) promote co-operation between the Civilian Secretariat, the police service and the Directorate; and
- (i) provide guidance to community police fora and associated structures and facilitate their proper functioning."

108 The functions of the Civilian Secretariat are set out in section 6(1). To achieve its objects, the Civilian Secretariat must:

"(a)...;

(e) consider such recommendations, suggestions and requests concerning police and policing matters as it may receive from any source;

(f)...

(g) enter into either memoranda of understanding or agreements or both, in consultation with the Minister, with civilian oversight groups and other parties and engage such groups and parties to strengthen co-operation between the various roleplayers;

(h) advise and support the Minister in the exercise of his or her powers and the performance of his or her functions;

(i) provide the Minister with regular reports with regard to—

(i) the performance of the police service; and

(ii) implementation of and compliance by the police service with policy directives issued or instructions made by the Minister;..

Was the appointment of Werksmans to investigate the conduct of IPID employees improper?

109 There was nothing improper in the Minister's appointment of Werksmans to investigate whether there was any misconduct committed by the senior employees of IPID. The Minister was empowered in terms of the section 6(6) of the IPID Act to remove the Executive Director of the IPID on account of misconduct. This provision does not authorise the Minister to act arbitrarily or capriciously. The powers of the Minister are constrained by the requirements of legality, reasonableness and procedural fairness which are contained in the Constitution and other applicable legislation. Alive to his responsibilities not to act unfairly and arbitrarily, the Minister appointed Werksmans to conduct an investigation in relation to what appeared to be serious misconduct on the part of senior employees. The Minister was empowered to appoint Werksmans to conduct the investigation.

110 I am advised that during the High Court proceedings where Mr McBride sought to challenge the suspension and disciplinary proceedings instituted against him, he withdrew his claims to the effect that his suspension by the Minister on grounds of misconduct, was motivated by ulterior motives on the part of the Minister.

Was there a report submitted by Mr Khuba of the IPID on 22 January 2014? If so, what was the legal status of that report? Was Sesoko ever Khuba's supervisor at IPID?

111 I have dealt with the circumstances in which IPID began investigating the Rendition matter and how the investigation came to be handed to Mr Khuba. I have also dealt with the nature of Mr Sesoko's involvement in the investigation and the nature of his relationship vis-à-vis Mr Khuba.

112 I am advised by Ms Mbeki that under the predecessor to IPID, the Independent Complaints Directorate, both Messrs Khuba and Sesoko were provincial heads. Mr Khuba was provincial head for Limpopo Province and Mr Sesoko for the North West. When the IPID was established, these positions were at a level of chief director. Both Messrs Khuba and Sesoko could not be automatically placed into these chief director positions because they were senior positions and in terms of the Public Service Act, 1994, the positions had to be advertised. I am further advised that the positions were advertised and the two applied but did not meet the requirements. As such, they remained acting in these positions. The provincial head positions that Messrs Sesoko and Khuba occupied prior to the establishment of the IPID, were graded at Director level.

113 For these reasons Messrs Khuba and Sesoko could not be automatically promoted to being chief directors at the IPID. They could only occupy their positions in acting capacities respectively until the positions were filled, with Mr Sesoko as Acting Chief Director: Investigations at IPID's national office and Mr Khuba as Acting Provincial Head for Limpopo. It follows that Mr Sesoko was never at any stage Mr Khuba's supervisor. Even as Head of Investigations he was not a supervisor of the Chief Director: Investigation in terms of the Act, Regulations and SOP. The ultimate supervisor of all investigators, in terms of the SOP, is the Director: Investigations and the Director: Investigations administratively reports to the Provincial Head. Having said that, in the context of investigations, the provincial head is not a supervisor of the Director Investigations.

114 Mr Khuba himself insisted during two interviews held with Werksmans that Mr Sesoko was not his supervisor or senior at the IPID. In the interview held with Mr Khuba on 26 March 2015, he said the following:

"I was worried, and I then phoned ADVOCATE MOSING, I then phoned my partner and I then phoned MR SESOKO. MR SESOKO was not my supervisor or my superior, he was just acting in the post, and during the investigation KOEKIE MBEKI gave me a clear instruction to say: Don't involve MR SESOKO in anything."

115 I attach a copy of the transcript to the interview with Mr Khuba marked "SJ23". The above extract appears on page 22, at lines 10 to 16.

116 Mr Khuba again emphasized that Mr Sesoko was not his supervisor in his interview with Werksmans on 13 April 2015. I attached marked "SJ24" a copy of that transcript. He said the following:

"I want to tell you that a report that has a recommendation can be regarded as a final report on the basis that there is nothing else you need to do. You need to understand the procedure which I outlined previously, to say when you compile a report with recommendations it has to be assessed by the senior person, who signs it. I was in the predicament where firstly the Acting Head - SESOKO was a senior, but he was still at the same rank as I was. He was acting in that position, but I was also acting, so there was not much difference. We were all Acting Chief Directors anyway." ["SJ24" page 12 line 1 to 14]

117 These statements by Mr Khuba make it clear that Mr Sesoko was not his supervisor.

118 I have also explained above that upon being handed the docket to investigate the Rendition matter, Mr Khuba assembled a team to assist with the investigation. Among the members of the team were Advocates Mosing and Moeletsi, both of whom were from the Special Projects Division of the NPA. They had been requested by the then Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development, Mr Jeff Radebe, to provide guidance to the investigation team. In a memorandum dated 12 November 2013 addressed to Mr Mxolisi Nxasana and Adv. Nomgcobo Jiba, Adv. Mosing explained their appointment (at page 2):

"The Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development, the Honourable Jeff Radebe is also on record, when he among other occasions, addressed the conference of Senior Managers of the NPA during 2012, calling for these allegations to be investigated and thereby reflecting the Governments concern with the allegations.

The Special Projects Division was requested to provide the necessary guidance to the investigating team whose investigations are not yet complete as at the time of writing this memorandum...Adv. B Moeletsi and writer were responsible for providing the guidance to the investigators."

119 A copy of this memorandum is attached hereto marked "SJ25".

- 120 On or about 22 October 2013, Mr Khuba sent a draft report to the NPA, for the attention of Adv. Mosing. I attach marked “SJ36” a copy of this report. In paragraph 5.6 of the draft report he made it clear that there were certain “outstanding matters”. He identified the outstanding matters and made it clear that these needed to be dealt with before the investigation could be considered complete.
- 121 Adv. Mosing considered the draft report and advised Mr Khuba that it was necessary to complete the further investigations. The further investigations proposed included an analysis of cell phone records, vehicle-tracking data and statements from Generals Dramat and Sibiya and Col. Maluleka. This was confirmed by Adv. Mosing in an internal memorandum addressed to Mr Nxasana and Adv. Jiba, dated 12 November 2013.
- 122 Mr Khuba went on to finalise his report. Before submitting his report, he had asked for the warning statements of Gen. Sibiya, but it was not furnished to him. He then compiled his final report on 22 January 2014. This was the first report. It made final recommendations to the NPA. Nor did it contain a similar reference to “outstanding matter” as was contained in paragraph 5.6 of the 22 October 2013 report.
- 123 Warning statements had previously been requested in 2013 from General Sibiya and Leonie Vester¹³ but they had declined to provide such warning statements.

"MOSING: And I know his statement is supposed to be in that thing, in the one we gave. Now I remember. That's why on this copy that I have, I wrote "draft", because it lacked his statement. Once he did that - and like I said, in not making a copy I didn't anticipate something like this happening. Because we thought in good faith KHUBA would stand by that investigation and wouldn't be made to change it. In other words the original report that he signed - although he had signed this one and I wrote "draft" on it - we said: This one is incomplete and you need to summarise your statement. I think maybe if you look at the docket, when was his statement commissioned? It was commissioned more or less at the same time, because it was the last thing he also did. Because he said although he had a draft of what he had done, we said: Do an investigating officer's statement, so to speak, explaining, because in this case he really needed to explain how this case unfolded, because it would help anyone reading the docket to understand what was going on. They could be easily confused, because there is a version here which we have to disprove. Now I remember. I think that's why we didn't even have this. You see, he didn't even change the date, he kept the date. It took him a day or two basically to finalise that. I was a bit worried as to that one."

125 I attach a copy of the transcript of the interview with Adv. Mosing marked "SJ26". The extract above appears at page 58 and line 16 to line 21 of page 59.

126 Contrary to what has been claimed by Mr McBride, it is apparent that Mr Khuba submitted a report with recommendations and a docket to the NPA. To add, this is in line with the SOP which states that a report with recommendations is final.

127 Furthermore, the first report included Dramat's warning statement (which is dealt with at page 29, paragraph 1 of the report). Mr Khuba identified Gen. Dramat's statement as A94 of the docket. As such, it is not true that Gen.

Dramat's warning statement was outstanding when the first report was submitted to the NPA.

128 In any event, the suggestion by Mr McBride that a report is incomplete if it does not contain a warning statement, is, with respect, not only incorrect but is to the knowledge of the trio untrue. For instance, the second report does not have Col. Maluleka's statement, yet, despite this, its authors (the trio) regarded that report as final. In terms of the SOP, there are only two types of investigation reports namely, an interim and a final investigative report. An interim investigative report does not have or make recommendations to the NPA, whereas a final investigative report does.

Was an analysis of General Sibiya's cellphone records outstanding?

129 Neither General Sibiya's cell phone records nor the analysis thereof was outstanding at the time of the submission of the first report on or about 24 January 2014. Mr Khuba, Col Moukangwe and Adv Mosing were in possession of the cell phone records of Gen. Sibiya and the analysis thereof. The analysis of Gen. Sibiya's cell phone records showed that he was not at the crime scene (which was in Diepsloot, where suspects were assaulted), but was apparently in a different location (In the area of Pretoria).

130 During an interview with Werksmans on 26 March 2015, Mr Khuba stated the following in relation to an analysis of Gen. Sibiya's cell phone records:

"MR KHUBA: So we did everything; we did an investigation, but we were let down by the person who was doing the cellphone records. The person who was doing the cellphone records could not come to us in time with a report. He sent a draft report, which was handwritten somewhere, and I wanted the original report. That report could not tell us much. We wanted information that would help us know whether SIBIYA was in DIEPSLOOT on the dates and times which the witnesses were alluding to. ADVOCATE MOSING said to me - and that was after I had done the report - the report with which COLONEL MOUKANGWE was also in agreement, this is the report, signed. ["SJ23" page 34 line 24 to page 35 line 13]

- 131 From Mr Khuba's version he was in possession of an expert analysis of Gen. Sibiya's evidence at the time he submitted his first report. He may not have been happy with the expert analysis given that there were eyewitnesses who, under oath, had stated that Gen. Sibiya was at the crime scene. It should thus be emphasised that the expert analysis was not new evidence, it was merely a typed version of the handwritten analysis that had previously provided. (The handwritten report was never provided to Werksmans but was referred to by Adv. Mosing in his memorandum of 13 February 2014.)
- 132 In paragraph 5.5 of the first report Mr Khuba dealt with an analysis of Gen. Sibiya's cell phone records and explained what was discovered after those records were analysed. That analysis showed that Gen. Sibiya had been kept updated on the progress of the three operations that formed part of the rendition of the Zimbabwean Nationals.

133 Furthermore, at page 32 of the first report, Mr Khuba incorporated the analysis he received from the expert regarding Sibiya's cell phone records. Mr Khuba stated:

"There is evidence and witnesses corroborate each other that General Sibiya was both at the scene and planning venue. The meeting held between the IPID and General Dramat on 2013/03/07 confirmed that General Sibiya was appointed to be the Head of TOMS which he created to trace wanted suspects. The telephone records of both Captain Maluleke and Major General Sibiya show interaction between them at various milestones of the operation. Following suggest the involvement of General Sibiya;

Witness stated that he was seen during the operation that took place on 22/11/2010 which led to the arrest of Pritchard Chuma

...

In other operations cellphone record of Warrant Officer Makoe, Captain Maluleke and Col Neethling clearly show continuous contacts with General Sibiya during and shortly after the operation. Col Neethling also stated that he should have reported progress to General Sibiya during the operation. However the cellphone records of General Sibiya does (sic) not place him at the scenes and planning venues as claimed by witnesses. It is also clear that some of the witness. It is also clear that some of the witness claim to have heard that General Sibiya was in the car rather than seeing him personally.

The meeting held in Zimbabwe wherein General Sibiya was appointed as coordinator on cooperation matters involving the two countries suggests that the operation could not have been done without his knowledge more so because his Gauteng Team was involved in the operation. However this inference cannot provide prima facie case that he was involved." [Emphasis added]

134 In the memorandum prepared by Adv. Mosing on 13 February 2014 annexed to Mr McBride's affidavit as RMB.W.8, Adv. Mosing confirms that they (i.e. Mr Khuba, Col. Moukangwe and Adv. Mosing) were in possession of a hand written expert report analysing Gen. Sibiya's cell phone records. At paragraph 4 of his memorandum, Adv. Mosing records:

"4. SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE

4.1 The above facts are supported by the following evidence:

Cell registers and occurrence books from the various police stations where victims were detained;

Affidavits from witnesses:

Surviving victims

Gauteng TOMS members

CIG members

TRT members

Home affairs officials

Wierdaburg police officers

Police officials based at Beit Bridge border post

Cellphone records

AVL of DPCI members vehicles

Success reports of the DPCI

Itinerary and travelling claims of Maluleke

Handwriting expert reports... [Emphasis added]

135 Adv. Mosing's reference to "Handwriting expert reports" is to the handwritten expert report of the analysis of Gen. Sibiya's cell phone records. It is the same report Mr Khuba referred to in his interview held with us on 26 March 2015.

136 In his interview with Werksmans on 30 March 2015, Col. Moukangwe confirmed that when the first report was submitted to the NPA they were in possession of and knew about the analysis of Gen. Sibiya's cell phone records, that the analysis placed Gen. Sibiya in Pretoria and that they (Col. Moukangwe and Mr Khuba) had questioned the eye witnesses on this issue before submitting the report. Col. Moukangwe vehemently disputed that the said analysis constituted new evidence. A copy of the transcript of the interview conducted with him is attached marked "SJ27". The following appears on page 7 line 16 to page 8 line 12 of the transcript:

"COLONEL MOUKANGWE: In that one maybe he forgot something, because we knew before that GENERAL SIBIYA's cellphone shows he was in PRETORIA, but the people who were operating with him said he is not using one cellphone. So it might happen that the official cellphones were at home, and maybe he used the other one, which is just recorded here on the statement. That is according to what they said. But we knew about the information before, because we questioned them: How can you say SIBIYA was involved, the cellphone shows that ...

MR JULY: And how did you know about this information that SIBIYA's cellphones were in SUNNYSIDE?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Because of the detailed billing that we did. We did a detailed billing on the two cellphone numbers that we were given, to show where the cellphones were at that time. They showed that he was in PRETORIA at the time they mentioned in their statements.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: After the discussion with the prosecutors, they made a suggestion whether we should do the mappings. Cellphone mapping is where an analysis will show us that this was done at this, and make some points in a chart form. That's what we were requested to do."

137 In his memorandum of 13 February 2014 to Advocates Jiba and Chauke, Advocate Mosing confirmed at paragraph 6.3 that the cell phone evidence did not provide corroboration that General Sibiya was present during the operations. He stated that this could be more closely considered after an expert witness had been procured to analyse the cell phone data.

138 In our interview with Adv. Baloyi and Adv. Mzinyathi on 17 April 2015, Advocate Baloyi explained how the issue of General Sibiya's cell phone records would be dealt with:

"MR BALOYI: Actually you recall that the operation was on two occasions, and on both occasions there are witnesses who say - there are some contradictions, especially with TOMS. Some say no, he was there on the first day, some say they are not sure. But the eye witnesses are clear that he came out of his BMW, and they asked him, I think, where to detain them, or something to that effect.

MR MZINYATHI: Yes.

MR BALOYI: I mean the evidence is clear there. Then on the second operation his name is also mentioned. We felt even if the cellphone records place him elsewhere, we have real evidence. At a later stage, during trial, we will get a cellphone analyst who will probably give an explanation. I mean, it could be that someone else had his cellphone.

That is explainable."

140 Adv. Baloyi further stated (at page 37, lines 17 to 23 of the transcript):

"MR BALOYI: Anyway, I made it clear to them that for a prosecutorial decision we could acquire the outstanding information at a later stage. But I felt that those matters could not stand in the way of us taking a decision. We then say those were loose ends that needed to be tied up before we go to trial."

141 It is apparent from the aforesaid that there was no outstanding evidence at the time the first report was submitted. If anything could be said to have been outstanding, it was an alternative analysis or interpretation of the cell phone records. To add, if there was anything outstanding this would have been recorded and reflected in the first report. The investigation was a completed investigation as defined in the SOP.

142 In our interview with Mr Khuba on 13 April 2015 he, in response to a question raised by me, explained the status of a report with recommendations and what happens when "new evidence" emerges:

"MR JULY: In other words, what ANGUS says, is that what you believed to be the factual situation at the time when you signed the report, even if it changes later on, that report remains the final report. If things have to change you will then have to deal with it, and how do you deal with those issues that have cropped up?

MR KHUBA: What you are talking about I don't think is an issue of only departmental procedure. It's an issue of common sense, that once you have made a recommendation you have done your investigation. If new evidence surfaces to rebut that, then you are able to advance: Now I have this and that and that. ["SJ24" page 13 line 9 to 21]

143 Therefore, based on Mr Khuba's own version the emergence of "new information" would not render the report submitted to the NPA interim or draft; it remains a final report. The submission of a docket together with a report with recommendations would not prevent an investigator, in this case Mr Khuba, from later placing additional information in that docket. This is precisely what Mr Khuba purported to do on 28 February 2014, he sought to file additional information (warning statements from the Generals who had earlier refused) he had obtained into the docket that had already been submitted to the NPA for a prosecutorial decision. Mr Khuba requested to file these additional documents in the docket, and not to collect the docket as claimed by Mr McBride and now also by Mr Khuba.

144 The Commission has been repeatedly told that the alleged analysis of Gen. Sibiya's cell phone records was exculpatory. I disagree with this assertion. The cell phone records only related to Gen. Sibiya's presence at the scene where suspects were assaulted and tortured. Notably in the first report Mr Khuba never recommended that Gen. Sibiya be criminally charged for assault and torture. Instead, the first report recommended criminal charges for kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice because Gen. Sibiya was aware of the activities carried out by the TOMS, had assembled the team and the team had reported to him. The cell phone records proved that smses on the stages of the operation were sent to Gen. Sibiya and he, in turn, forwarded these smses to Gen. Dramat. who never responded to them.

Was an expert analysis of Colonel Ndanduleni Madilonga's ("Col. Madilonga") statement outstanding?

145 It has also been claimed that an expert analysis of Col. Madilonga's statement was also outstanding when the first report was submitted. This is not true. During the interview with Werksmans on 26 March 2015, Mr Khuba told us that Col. Madilonga's statement was taken to an expert for analysis in September 2013. Col. Madilonga's statement was consistent with the cell phone evidence obtained through section 205 of the Criminal Procedure Act, as amended.

"MR KHUBA: It was done around September - I think McBRIDE started last year, in 2014. In September 2013 I sent a statement analysis to an expert.

I took his [Col. Madilonga's] statement for analysis by the expert, and said: Can you check this statement, because I need to go and obtain a second statement from him? I want a watertight case, so do a statement analysis. They did a statement analysis, and they said: There is something that is problematic with the statement. I said: Why? They said some of the things it seems in a way he will be telling the truth, but in another way he is trying to protect himself. The truth will be put in such a way that as long as I'm not pushing the blame. So it's marked with red lines, waddah-waddah, I know these type of things. I said: Okay, it's fine. I went back to him. When I went back to him, I clarified: Why did these people not come back to you and request assistance in the second instance? He said he did not know but he only helped them once. But his statement is corroborated by 205's - you know the material or technical evidence, that this thing happened. You know, it's corroborated. ["SJ22" page 38 line 23 to page 39 line 16].

146 Therefore, the analysis of Col. Madilonga statement was not outstanding when the first report was submitted to the NPA.

The legal status of the report

147 The SOP of 2013, defines a completed investigation to mean:

"an investigation which involves a comprehensive effort to interview the complainant, the victim, witnesses and suspect SAPS/MPS member, the identification, location and acquiring of relevant physical evidence and upon which the conclusion is based on evidence obtained, excluding technical reports ..."

148 A Final Case Investigative Report is defined in the SOP to mean:

"an investigative report which documents the entire investigation and contains the conclusion, summary of affidavits and technical reports, written recommendations to SAPS/DPP with regard to the actions of the SAP/MPS member"

149 The investigation was complete when the first report was compiled and that report was final as contemplated in the above provisions of the SOP. From a literal reading of the definition, there is no requirement to the effect that in order for an investigation report to be final, it must have warning statements.

150 During his testimony, Mr McBride confirmed that the investigation in the Rendition matter was about the death of persons as a result of police action. Therefore, the relevant section governing the investigation was section 28(1)(a) and (b) of the IPID Act.

151 As indicated above, the Rendition investigation was referred to IPID by the Secretariat. This was done pursuant to section 28(1)(h) of the IPID Act, which deals with matters referred to the IPID by the Secretariat. The Rendition investigation also concerned deaths as a result of police action in envisaged in section 28(1)(a) and (b). In addition to that the matter was referred to the IPID by the Secretariat are investigated in terms of Regulation 7 of the IPID Regulations.

152 In terms of Reg. 7(2) the Executive Director or the relevant provincial head, as the case may be, must designate an investigator to investigate a matter contemplated in section 28(1)(h) of the IPID Act which had been referred to the Directorate for investigation. In this instance the investigator appointed was Mr Khuba.

153 Reg. 7(3) provides that an investigator designated in terms of sub-regulation (2) must as soon as is practicable, determine whether the referred matter relates to (a) a matter contemplated in regulation 4, in which case the provisions of that regulation apply with such changes as may be required by the context; or (b) a criminal matter, in which case the provisions of regulation 5 apply with such changes as may be required by the context.

154 In my view and indeed as the facts suggest, Mr Khuba's investigation was into the death of people as a result of police action or omission, as well as torture of suspects in police custody. Death of people as a result of police action is regulated by regulation 4 and torture of suspects by police falls under regulation 5. I deal with the investigator's obligations stemming from these two regulations below.

155 Reg. 4(8) provides that in the event of a late notification of a death as a result of police action or omission or both, the investigator must, within a reasonable period, which may not exceed 30 days of his or her designation as investigator:

"(e) submit a report containing recommendations to the Executive Director or relevant provincial head."

156 Reg. 4(9) in turn provides that for purposes of sub-regulation (8), the investigator must do the following:

- "(a) peruse the police docket;
- (b) take the police docket over for further investigation;
- (c) finalise and submit the police docket to the relevant Director of Public Prosecutions together with recommendations relating to further actions by the National Prosecuting Authority; and
- (d) submit a report on the investigation containing recommendations to the Executive Director or relevant provincial head."

157 When regard is had to the above provisions of Reg. 4, there is no doubt that Mr Khuba complied with the IPID Act and regulations as an Investigator by submitting the first report to the NPA for a prosecutorial decision. The only thing Mr Khuba still needed to do in terms of the regulations after submitting his report to the NPA was to notify the Executive Director and the provincial head. This could not be accomplished as there was no Executive Director at the IPID during the period on which the first report was submitted. Furthermore, and in any event, Mr Khuba was the acting provincial head for Limpopo at the time. As such, even though he could notionally prepare a report, he could not submit it to himself. I will expand on this submission after having dealt with Reg. 5 below.

158 Messrs McBride and Sesoko, curiously, claim that Mr Khuba failed to comply with his obligations as set out in Reg. 5(3)(i). I discuss the salient provisions of Reg. 5 herein. Reg. 5(2) provides that an Executive Director or the relevant provincial head as the case may be must designate an investigator to investigate a complaint.

159 Sub-regulation 5(3)(i) provides that an investigator designated in terms of sub-regulation (2) must as soon as is practicable but within 24 hours of designation collect all evidence, statements, and technical or expert reports, if applicable, submit a report on the investigation of the offence to the Executive Director or the relevant provincial head, as the case may be, containing recommendations regarding further action, which may include measures to be taken against a member of the SAPS or the Municipal Police Service or the criminal prosecution of such member.

160 Mr McBride claimed that the first report was improperly submitted to the NPA by Mr Khuba because prior to its submission to the NPA, it had not been submitted to the Executive Director at IPID for approval. He relied on Reg. 5(3)(i) for this contention. McBride's reliance on this regulation is misplaced. Regulation 5(3)(i), properly interpreted, relates to notifying the Executive Director of the report. The submission of the report to the Executive Director is not for the purposes of him signing or approving the report prepared by the Investigator. On a plain reading of the text of Reg. 5(3)(1), there are no signing or approval powers conferred upon the Executive Director when he is furnished with an Investigator's report with recommendations. As such, even if the investigation conducted by Mr Khuba solely related to the crimes listed in Reg. 5, the Executive Director or provincial head still did not have powers to approve or sign the investigation report submitted by the Investigator.

161 In fact, on an holistic reading of the IPID Act, the IPID Regulations and the SOP, no power to approve and sign are conferred upon the Executive Director. The Executive Director may be empowered in terms of section 7(4) to refer criminal offences revealed as a result of an investigation to the NPA, but this does not mean that he is empowered to approve or reject an investigation report prepared by an Investigator. Nor does it mean that the Executive Director is empowered to sign off on investigations conducted by investigators designated in terms of the IPID Act and the IPID Regulations. This was conceded by Mr McBride in his interview with Werksmans on 17 April 2015.

"McBRIDE: Look, the specifics of what was discussed in a meeting more than a year ago, where no minutes were taken – I think it would not be safe to rely on who said what and in which context. The key issue for me, is normally such a report, the way I understand the law, would not come to me. It would go from the provinces. But because it concerned two provinces this one had to come to me, and it was driven by National. So that's the issue. Normally I wouldn't even have the report, because reports and dockets move in every day to the NPA, they don't come past me. ["SJ22" page 10, lines 10 to 24]

162 It would be curious to know what happened to Mr McBride's understanding regarding reports not going to the NPA through his office but through provincial offices. I do not agree that the report had to be submitted and signed by the Executive Director because it concerned two provinces.

163 Even if section 7(4) empowers the Executive Director to approve and sign a report prepared by an Investigator (which is not correct), it should be recalled that Mr Khuba signed the first report, both as an Investigator and as a provincial head, in terms of his obligations under section 21(1)(d). In terms of section 21(1)(d) a provincial head is equally empowered to refer matters investigated by the provincial office to the NPA for criminal prosecution. Consequently, there was no room for contending that Mr Khuba acted improperly in signing and submitting the first report contrary to the law. It is obvious from the above that he acted in terms of the law. This first report submitted by Mr Khuba made final and definitive recommendations to the NPA for further action.

164 If it was the intention of the legislature that the Executive Director must sign, it would have said so.

165 The trio knew that between January 2014 and 3 March 2014 there was no Executive Director at IPID, not even in an acting capacity. Ms Koeki Mbeki was no longer at the IPID during this time. To the extent that there was a need to have reports "signed" or "approved" by Ms Mbeki (which I submit was none, this could not happen as she was not there.

166 During his testimony before the commission on 11 April 2019, Mr McBride misled the commission when he claimed that he was empowered to "sign off" the report for submission to the NPA in terms of Reg. 4(3)(i) of the IPID Regulations and that he acted pursuant to this regulation when he signed the second report. For the sake of completeness, I repeat Mr McBride's testimony before the Commission:

"ADV PAUL JOSEPH PRETORIUS SC: If you just deal with that please.

MR ROBERT JOHN MCBRIDE: Thank you Chair and it reads as follows:

'After collecting all evidence statements and technical or expert reports, if applicable, submit a report on the investigation of the death containing recommendations regarding further action, which may include disciplinary measures to be taken against a member of the South African Police Service or the Municipal Police Services or criminal prosecution of such member, to the Executive Director or the relevant provincial head, as the case may be.'

ADV PAUL JOSEPH PRETORIUS SC: Now this specifically deals with deaths, but in relation to other matters investigated by IPID do similar provisions apply?

MR ROBERT JOHN MCBRIDE: Absolutely.

ADV PAUL JOSEPH PRETORIUS SC: So if an investigator conducts an investigation what is the reporting line and brief?

MR ROBERT JOHN MCBRIDE: It is to the – if it is within a province and it is initiated in a province or delegated to a province to deal with it would be to the Provincial Head who then signs it off for submission to the NPA. If it is initiated at National of certain circumstances covers more than one Province it would come to the Executive Director ultimately signed off for submission to the National Prosecution Authority."

167 Although I am in agreement with Mr McBride that the Rendition investigation involved the death of people as a result of police action, I dispute his contention that Reg. 4(3)(i) was applicable in the Rendition investigation.

168 Reg. 4(3) provides that an investigator designated by the Executive Director must "as soon as is practicable, but within 24 hours of designation" inter alia –

"(i) after collecting all evidence, statements and technical or expert reports, if applicable, submit a report on the investigation of the death containing recommendations regarding further action, which may include disciplinary measures to be taken against a member of the South African Police Service or the Municipal Police Services or criminal prosecution of such member, to the Executive Director or the relevant provincial head, as the case may be."

169 Even if Reg. 4(3)(i) were found to be applicable, it does not confer powers to the Executive Director to sign and approve a report.

170 The regulatory provisions applicable to the Rendition investigation were Reg. 4(8) and (9), which deal with the "late notification of a death". Some of the Zimbabwean Nationals were murdered a year before Khuba commenced his investigation. This is why the matter was to be dealt with pursuant to Reg. 4(8) and (9). As such, it was misleading or incorrect for Mr McBride to tell the Commission that the provisions of Reg. 4(3)(i) applied to the Rendition investigation, as this investigation was conducted well after the crimes investigated by Mr Khuba had been committed. The crimes were committed between October 2010 and January 2011 and Mr Khuba was only designated to investigate during October 2012.

171 Consequently, it cannot be correct to suggest that Reg. 4(3)(i) applied to the Rendition investigation. Mr Khuba did not act under Reg. 4(3)(i) but pursuant to the provisions of Reg. 4(8) and (9) and was empowered to sign and submit the first report as an investigator and Provincial Head.

172 Mr McBride's contention that the report had to be submitted to him because it concerned two provinces is not supported by the IPID Act, IPID Regulations or the SOP. To date, Mr McBride has not produced evidence to support his contention in that regard.

173 IPID adopted a SOP for the year 2013/2014. This SOP continued to operate beyond the year 2014. For the sake of convenience, I attach a copy of the SOP marked "SJ29". The stated purpose of the SOP was to establish policy and methods by which cases should be received, registered, processed and disposed of.¹⁴ The SOP applies to all notifications and/or cases lodged with the IPID or initiated by the IPID against members of the SAPS/MPS by any person or organisation, alleging that a member committed an act or an omission which constitutes an offence and/or misconduct.¹⁵

174 Clause 5.1 of the SOP dealt with the duties of the Executive Director. The Executive Director, in addition to the duties and responsibilities referred to in section 7 of the IPID Act and those referred to in the IPID Regulations, was obliged to:

174.1 Ensure that there were systems in place for the lodging, receiving, processing, recording and disposal of cases against members;¹⁶

174.2 Provide for the development and enforcement of policies to enable an environment that is conducive to lodge a case and receive cases reported;¹⁷

174.3 Ensure compliance with the provisions of the IPID Firearm Control Standard Operating Procedure.¹⁸

175 The powers of a Provincial Head were set out in clause 5.3 of the SOP. Of importance in the present context are the provisions of clause 5.3.6, which provides that a Provincial Head must- "Complete/Close cases on the Case Management System (CMS)".

¹⁷ Clause 5.1.2 ibid.

¹⁸ Clause 5.1.3 ibid.

176 Clause 5.4 of the SOP dealt with the powers and responsibilities of a Director Investigations. He or she was obliged, in addition any duties imposed under section 24 of the IPID Act and the IPID Regulations, to –

176.1 Supervise the investigation conducted.¹⁹

176.2 Ensure that the Case Intake Committee (CIC) met daily to evaluate cases.²⁰

176.3 Ensure that case were investigated and completed in terms of the strategic objectives.²¹

176.4 Review investigation reports, assess its quality, raise queries, if any endorse recommendations to the SAPS and DPP and sign off on the recommendations.²²

176.5 Evaluate a decision by the SAPS / DPP and decide on further action to be taken.²³

176.6 Approve / disapprove completion of an investigation.²⁴

176.7 Approve / disapprove closure of the file for archiving.²⁵

¹⁹ Clause 5.4.1 of IPID SOP page 13.

²⁰ Clause 5.4.2 ibid.

²¹ Clause 5.4.4 ibid.

²² Clause 5.4.6 ibid.

²³ Clause 5.4.7 ibid.

²⁴ Clause 5.4.8 ibid.

²⁵ Clause 5.4.9 ibid.

- 176.8 If he or she was acting in the position of Director Investigators, attach a copy of the letter appointing him or her in the acting position when closing or completing an investigation (except where the investigation was undertaken by the acting appointee himself or herself).²⁶
- 176.9 Immediately upon being notified by the Case Worker of a high profile case, conviction or arrest, notify the Provincial Head, the National Spokesperson, the Programme Manager Investigation and the Executive Director of such case, conviction or arrest.²⁷
- 176.10 Ensure that the province conduct file audits on a quarterly basis and compile a Report which is separate from Monthly Report.²⁸
- 177 Given that the investigation conducted by Mr Khuba involved the death of people as a result of police action or omission or both, the provisions of section 28(1)(a) and (b) of the IPID Act applied to the investigation. Clause 6.2 of the SOP prescribes a step-by-step process to be followed investigating such cases. It provides inter alia:
- 177.1 On step "13" a report is prepared and the supervisor reviews the report and then sends it to the Director Investigations / Provincial Head. If it's an interim Case Investigative Report, continue to step 14 and if a final Case Investigative Report, continue to step 17.

²⁶ Clause 5.4.10 ibid.

²⁷ Clause 5.4.14 ibid.

²⁸ Clause 5.4.18 ibid.

- 177.2 On step "14" the Director Investigations / Provincial Head reviews the interim Case Investigative Report and endorses recommendations or raises queries. If the recommendations are endorsed, the completion Register must be utilised and the CMS be updated.
- 177.3 On step "15" the Case Worker obtains the outstanding reports and attends to queries if any.
- 177.4 On step "16" the Case Worker prepares the Final Case Investigative Report to the DPP / SAPS and forwards the report to his or her immediate supervisor and the completion register is updated.
- 177.5 On step "17" the Supervisor reviews the report for quality assurance, the Director Investigations / Provincial Head reviews / approves the DPP / SAPS report and utilises the Recommendation, Decision, Conviction and Acquittal Register.
- 178 Clause 7.3 of the SOP deals with the case management of an investigation of a case in terms of section 28(1)(a) and (b) read with Regulations 4 and 8. I will not burden this affidavit with the detail of clause 7.3. Suffice to state that clause 7.3.30 provides that a Case Worker "refers a Recommendation Report to the Supervisor for review and recommendation of completion or closure."
- 179 Clause 7.3.31 provides that the Case Worker refers [the report] to the Director Investigations / Provincial Head for completion and / or closure. If a case is completed / closed, the Director Investigations / Provincial Head should still be informed as per Reg. 4(3)(i).

180 Having outlined the above clauses of the SOP, it is apparent that the Executive Director's responsibilities are limited to what is in clause 5.1 of the SOP. This means that the Executive Director of IPID does not:

180.1 have the power to approve or review any report prepared by a functionary of the IPID;

180.2 play a role in the opening and closing of investigations at IPID;

180.3 enjoy any signing powers in respect of reports prepared by Case Workers, Directors of Investigation, Deputy Directors and, for that matter, any employee of the IPID.

181 Simply put, Mr McBride, as the Executive Director, had no power or authority to conduct an investigation or to sign and approve an investigation report.

182 Mr Khuba, on the other hand, whose substantive position at the time of submitting the first report was that of Director: Investigations, not only enjoyed the power to sign his report in terms of the IPID Act and Reg. 4(9)(c) to (d), he was empowered in terms of the above provisions of the SOP to sign his investigation report, refer it to SAPS / DPP and authorise closure of the file. Mr Sesoko, with respect, had no role to play in the Rendition Investigation let alone the power to sign and approve investigation reports. In the grand scheme of things, it really does not matter whether Mr Khuba signed his report as Director: Investigations or Provincial Head as he was empowered to sign the report in any of the two capacities, as he had no supervisor.

Was there a second report prepared by the IPID? If so, what was the status of the second report? Were Messrs McBride and Sesoko aware of the first report when the so called second and 'only report of the IPID' was prepared? Is there any justification for the amendment of the first report?

183 Mr Sesoko claims that he had no knowledge of the existence of the first report. This is not true. I will demonstrate that he was fully aware of it and was involved in its preparation and submission to the NPA.

184 I do not know in what capacity Mr Sesoko was apparently "advising" Mr Khuba nor why it was necessary for him to do so given that two NPA prosecutors, Advocates Mosing and Moeletsi were advising Mr Khuba. Be that as it may, Mr Khuba received and took counsel from Mr Sesoko regarding the procedure for submitting an investigation report to the NPA. Importantly, at no stage did Mr Sesoko say to Mr Khuba that he (Mr Sesoko) or the Executive Director had to sign the first report.

185 Mr Khuba confirmed to Werksmans during an interview held on 13 April 2015 that during December of 2013 he sought advice from Mr Sesoko regarding how to submit the report to the NPA.

"MR JULY: Let's say you never gave him a copy, but he was aware - because he said somewhere in December you sought his advice as to how to submit the report to the NPA.

MR KHUBA: Yes." ["SJ24" page 2 line 5 to 9]

186 Mr Khuba further confirmed that Mr Sesoko was fully aware of the existence of the report at line 10 to 20 of the same transcript.

"MR JULY: So he was aware of the report.

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: But he may not have seen the report. You also testified that because he was your senior, sort of, although the Acting Executive Director gave you specific instructions not to involve him, you did inform him about the report.

MR KHUBA: Yes. yes.

MR JULY: So he knew about the existence of the report.

MR KHUBA: Yes."

187 During the same interview Mr Khuba further confirmed that during February 2014 he, Mr Sesoko and Col. Moukangwe attended at the NPA's offices and demanded that arrest warrants be issued against the suspects implicated in the first report, because, so he said, the NPA was taking its time in making a decision to prosecute.²⁹

"MR JULY: We are going to record this. I was saying to you that when we interviewed MR MOUKANGWE, he said you, him and SESOKO went to the NPA.

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: And the reason you went to the NPA is you wanted a warrant of arrest.

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: He said it was taking time and you guys wanted to find out why.

188 Col. Moukangwe also confirmed that Mr Sesoko was aware of the first report. In our interview with him, Col. Moukangwe stated:

"I won't be able to say it was submitted, but we went to the National Director of Public Prosecutions, because we were given two advocates to work with us on this issue. I was there with MR KHUBA and MR SESOKO. MR SESOKO is a legal person, he was a former prosecutor in BENONI. We went there, and when we were there the report was already drafted. That is what I can say with certainty, because when we were there the prosecutors who were dealing with us on this issue, knew about it, and had a copy of the report." ["SJ27", page 5]

189 After I asked Col. Moukangwe whether the report submitted to the NPA was preliminary, incomplete or final, he said the following about the involvement of Mr Sesoko:

"It was a final [report], because we wanted warrants there, really, that's why we took our legal person, MR SESOKO. We were worried about why it seemed they were dragging their feet in giving us warrants of arrest for these people, because the people never wanted to cooperate."

190 I refer to these extracts from the transcripts to show that Mr Sesoko has not been honest with the Commission or Werksmans when he claimed to have had no knowledge of the existence of the first report. This clearly was not true in light of Mr Khuba's version that he was aware of its existence. Both Mr Khuba and Col. Moukangwe confirmed that he was with them when they requested the NPA to act upon the recommendations contained in the first report.

191 Furthermore, on 23 January 2014 Mr Khuba sent an email to Mr Sesoko attaching an unsigned electronic copy of the report. This supports the conclusion that Mr Sesoko was at all material times aware of the existence of the first report. As already indicated, Mr Sesoko confirmed under oath to having been provided the actual first report in January 2014 to facilitate handing it over to the Secretary of Police. This all transpired before Mr McBride joined IPID as its Executive Director.

192 I now turn to deal how the so-called second report came about and Mr McBride's knowledge of the existence of the first report.

193 I have already explained above that after Mr McBride joined IPID he requested an update on all high profile cases being handled by IPID. In a meeting with Mr Khuba on 5 March 2014 it was evident to Mr Khuba that Mr McBride had already seen the first report. I have also explained that on 6 March 2014 Mr Khuba met with Messrs McBride, Sesoko and Angus.

194 Werksmans interviewed Mr Angus on 31 March 2015. I attach marked "SJ30" a transcript of that interview. Mr Angus informed us that Mr McBride requested him to review the manner in which the investigation was conducted to ensure that it had been conducted appropriately. According to Mr Angus he advised Mr McBride that he did not believe that it was appropriate for him to get involved at that stage of the investigation.

"MR ANGUS: At that stage the issue for me was, yes, McBRIDE wanted me to see if these people had done everything correctly, or are they doing the things correctly, if I understood him correctly." ["SJ30" page 10 line 22 to 25]

And later:

"MR ANGUS: My view then was: What am I going to be doing now, I've got a thousand other things to be doing, and I don't think I should be carrying on and getting involved here. After that we left, and I asked him to drop me at the hotel, where my car was - in actual fact the rental car." ["SJ30" page 11 line 10 to 16]

195 I have also explained that Mr McBride instructed Mr Khuba to collect the docket from the NPA and to provide him with every document he (Mr Khuba) possessed regarding the Rendition investigation. Messrs Khuba and Angus attended at the offices of the DPP to meet with Adv. Van Zyl SC who was in possession of the docket at the time. Mr Khuba and Angus collected the docket from Advocate Van Zyl and signed for it, Mr Khuba as confirmation that he had received the docket and Mr Angus as confirmation that he had witnessed him doing so.

196 During his testimony before the Commission on 11 April 2019 Mr McBride knowingly gave false evidence to the effect that the first report was not in the docket collected by Mr Khuba and Angus on 7 March 2015. Upon being asked whether the first report was part of the docket collected by Mr Khuba and Angus, Mr McBride responded as follows:

"CHAIRPERSON: What had happened to the first report?"

MR ROBERT JOHN MCBRIDE: I'm not sure of it but at some stage soon after that it then, towards the end of December 2014 it then surfaces in the media.

CHAIRPERSON: The first report?

MR ROBERT JOHN MCBRIDE: Yes so when – my understanding is when Khuba retrieved the docket he did not have that preliminary report with him, just the docket because that what's carrying the evidence and the original evidence...

CHAIRPERSON: Yes but you say – you are not sure or are you sure whether Mr Khuba had retrieved, from the NPA what we have been referring to as the first report and I don't [know] if that's accurate, whether it was a report, you don't know or you do know that he retrieved it?

MR ROBERT JOHN MCBRIDE: Chair my understanding is that he didn't.

CHAIRPERSON: he did not?" [page 107 of the transcript]

197 This version is contradicted by what Mr Khuba said during his interview with Werksmans on 23 April 2015. Mr Khuba explained that after taking possession of the docket he and Angus took it directly to Mr McBride. The docket they had collected had the first report in it. A copy of the transcript of that interview is attached hereto marked "SJ31". In that interview Mr Khuba told us the following:

"MR KHUBA: Yes, those statements and whatever was not there, attaching them. At that time I had not yet made copies, and I decided to make copies of another duplicate report, because he said to me: Whatever you have I want in my office - this is McBRIDE. Copies - even copies of the docket. So I said: Okay, that's fine. I went and I gave him a copy, but my interpretation was that it was done mainly for security reasons. But as an investigator I did not have a single thing, except I had the external hard drive. That external hard drive only had the expert report, so it was not part of the documents and I just kept it. Then when we collected the docket - the fact that he signed the docket as true - who was carrying? I was the carrying boy that day. I was carrying the docket all the time, and whatever, but I think he assisted me with other files..."

198 Mr Khuba also explained:

"MR KHUBA: He gave me everything, and then we packed it, and we went straight to McBRIDE. I think he wanted the one report. We went and briefed him, while we were having this ...

MR JULY: So you went to...

MR KHUBA: Yes. When we briefed him, I never opened my mouth. It was ANGUS who was talking." ["SJ31" page 14, lines 10 to 17]

199 At page 22 of the transcript of the interview held with Mr Khuba on 23 April 2015 he explained what was in the docket he had collected from the NPA's offices.

"MR JULY: ... Before VAN ZYL could even read the documents, you and ANGUS come and collect them, and the report dated 22 January was part of that docket?

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: So the question is what did you do with that report which was attached to the docket?

MR KHUBA: To tell you that as fact, I cannot remember. I know that when we send dockets the report is part of "B". That docket, Section B was a separate lever arch file, because it had a lot of things talking about the Extradition Act, and what, what. It was a thick thing, but it had that part. When we did a review, the concentration on a (?), which is a separate lever arch file. That file had another sub lever arch file, which I think is seven or eight. Whether they removed that part or kept that part, I do not know. But my common sense is that they [Sesoko and McBride] would have removed it [the first report], because they wouldn't send it [the first report] with it [the docket]." ["SJ31" page 22, lines 3 to 23]

200 Mr Khuba's version that the first report was part of section B of the docket collected on 7 March 2014 from Adv. Adv Van Zyl is further supported by an internal memorandum from Adv. Mosing to Adv. Chauke dated 14 February 2014. I attached a copy of same marked "SJ32". The memorandum reads as follows:

"1. Please find attached the case docket with accompanying files for your attention and further action discussed with the Head of NPS. The files included are as follows:

1x A- section of docket

1x B-section of docket

1x forensic report of retrieved computer document and emails

1x AVL analysis

2x Cell phone data of various cell phones

1x Copies of Wierbrug case dockets.

2. I trust you find the above in order..."

- 201 When Mr Khuba and Angus collected the docket containing the information referred to in paragraph 1 of the memorandum, Adv. Van Zyl requested that they both sign for its removal and collection, which they did as appearing from "SJ32", which he kept.
- 202 When regard is had to the evidence of Mr Khuba and "SJ32", the inescapable conclusion is that Mr McBride knowingly gave false testimony before the Commission because the very docket collected was brought straight him and it had the first report.
- 203 From about 7 March 2014 onwards, Messrs Khuba, Sesoko and McBride began working on what became known as the second report. As previously stated, the second report was not a new report. It was the first report, altered to reflect a different recommendation and with pertinent portions of the first report deleted or amended to support the new recommendation.
- 204 Mr McBride was aware of the existence of the first report as matter of fact. Although during his interview with Werksmans on 17 April 2015, Mr McBride denied any knowledge of the first report, Mr Khuba contradicted this during his interview with Werksmans on 13 April 2015. At page 7 line 14 to 22 of the transcript Mr Khuba stated the following.

"MR KHUBA: Let me tell you that the report which I had given to him, which I emailed - I don't know whether he read it or did not read it - is the report that I sent the NPA. I had already updated it, but I don't think I updated the recommendation, it was just to add those statements that had just arrived. Because there were things that I received after the report had already been sent."

"MR KHUBA: My understanding, from my view, when I sat with SESOKO I started to see it in another light, and I was very firm with my view. But SESOKO with his prosecutorial background said: Mr Khuba, you can't take it this way. You need to know that when McBRIDE arrived and read the report, we did a new report, he had an option to say: Guys, let's leave the prosecutors (indistinct). He had an option. And he also exercised the other option to say: You will go and work on this report to reflect the content. That's why when this document was sent I was never part of it."

206 Mr Khuba finally told Werksmans in the interview of 23 April 2015, that during a briefing session on 6 March 2014 between himself, Messrs McBride, Sesoko and Angus, Mr McBride asked him questions pertaining to his investigation from a position of knowledge and had a document in front of him. At page 5 line 22 to page 6 line 24, Mr Khuba said the following:

"MR JULY: Which was the previous day? MR KHUBA: Yes, and I felt as if MR McBRIDE wanted other people to know, to be briefed. Most especially on the issue of Crime Intelligence, he wanted me to walk on that path and emphasise, and basically issues like those ones he raised. I cannot remember whose evidence was discussed, but I remember very well on the 205 of LEBEYA, to say: How are you connecting this person? Now, I indicated to him that I was connecting LEBEYA not because he was a suspect. For me, if I find records of cellphones, and you have called this person regularly, I need to go to that cellphone and do a 205 to check whether you are friends, or was there something that was happening, especially around that time. He was not quite fine with that, but I explained to him, to say: These are the issues.

LS

MR JULY: But it then means that he had had sight of the report when he was asking those questions.

MR KHUBA: That's why I say he might have, because even the previous day he had something in front of him, and I did not really look at it. Because you know, our boardroom table, if you sit there and somebody is there - I never knew what he was looking at."

207 In addition to the foregoing, Mr Sesoko also confirmed during his interview with Werksmans on 1 April 2015, that he provided Mr McBride a hard copy of the first report which had been emailed to him by Mr Khuba. A copy of the transcript is attached marked "SJ33" and Mr Sesoko states the following at page 7 line 18 to page 8 line 9:

"MS BADAL: Okay, Mr Khuba says he provided you with a copy of the report to provide to Mr McBride in order to brief him on high profile matters.

MR SESOKO: Yes, I am saying the briefing on the rendition happened before between Mr Khuba and Mr McBride.

MR SESOKO: To provide to Mr McBride, was provided to Mr McBride, so there was...

MS BADAL: Or you provided him a copy?

MR SESOKO: Printed it out and provided it to him, ja."

208 This piece of detail provided by Mr Sesoko further supports the reasonable conclusion that Mr McBride was aware of the existence of the first report as a hard copy thereof had been provided to him and he read it extensively.

209 Mr McBride's knowledge of the first report is further evidenced by what he said in his founding affidavit in his High Court application against IPID (McBride v Minister of Police and Another (06588/2015) [2015] ZAGPPHC 830; [2016] 1 All SA 811 (GP); 2016 (4) BCLR 539 (GP) (4 December 2015), wherein he claimed that he regarded the first report as being "preliminary draft" and therefore subject to changes. He could not have regarded it as preliminary if he was not aware of its existence in the first place. I attach hereto marked "SJ34" a copy of Mr McBride's founding affidavit. The relevant portion appears at page 9 para.24.1 of the affidavit. Below I catalogue additional paragraphs in Mr McBride's High Court application to demonstrate that he was not only fully aware of the first report but had considered it and the docket extensively. At page 10 (paragraph 24.2) of his affidavit, Mr McBride stated:

209.1 At page 22 (paragraph 51.2) of his affidavit, Mr McBride stated:

"I want to make it abundantly clear that the final report was the product of a thorough investigation process which included taking into account all the evidence gathered through the IPID investigation and making reasonable recommendations on the basis thereof".

209.2 This contradicts Mr McBride's version that he did not have regard to the evidence contained in the docket, and that his involvement in the second report was limited to grammatical changes and signature of the second report.

209.3 On page 23 (at paragraph 51.3) of his affidavit, Mr McBride stated:

"The preliminary draft of the IPID Investigation Report of 22 January 2014 – disingenuously referred to by the Minister as the "Original Report"- contained and was based only on the evidence and findings available to Mr Khuba at the time. The preliminary draft of the Investigation Report was exactly that: a preliminary and draft report prepared by Mr Khuba based on the evidence available to him at the time."

209.4 On page 23 (at paragraph 51.5) of his affidavit, Mr McBride stated:

"The preliminary draft of the IPID Investigation Report was also still subject to consideration and review by Sesoko and myself. Notably, the preliminary report did not have regard to warning statements subsequently obtained from Dramat and Sibiya, or , to the evidence which emerged after the date of the Preliminary Report”.

210 It is obvious from the aforesaid passages extracted from his High Court application that Mr McBride’s allegations stated under oath conflict with what he said to Werksmans and this Commission regarding his knowledge of the first report.

211 Mr McBride also alleged in his founding affidavit in the High Court application that he actually considered and reviewed this so-called “preliminary” report prior to concluding and signing the second report. This is not, however, what he told Werksmans. In his interview with Werksmans, Mr McBride alleged that he only made spelling and grammatical changes to the second report and thereafter appended his signature to the corrected version. [“SJ22” page 11, lines 1 to 14]

212 In Werksmans’ interview with Khuba on 13 April 2015, Mr Khuba confirmed that Mr McBride had read the first report extensively. Mr Khuba’s statement to this effect appears at page 8 line 21 to page 9 line 24 of the transcript (annexure “SJ24” of that interview:

“MR JULY: And you know there is a reason why you would not have deleted the information. For instance, what was said by the people – for you to change it, you would have a reason, and you would put that reason in your report. So that information was removed. But if it was not you and it was not SESOKO, we have not yet been able to talk to MR

McBRIDE, although we wrote him an email to come and talk to us, who then would have deleted that information?

KHUBA: That is a very difficult question. But I need to say as the investigating officer I was over-trusting with the report. Because when SESOKO asked for the report, I never withheld the report, I emailed it to him. When we were working on the report I used his computer. Whether he showed McBRIDE - but I remember McBRIDE, if there is one person who read that report extensively it was McBRIDE. He read it extensively. Then the progress which I was doing on the report itself, I was only adding stuff. He was sitting next to me. I was adding things, I was doing things, but whether that part was cut out by him or by me, I will not say, but I don't remember removing it.

MR JULY: Deleting?

KHUBA: no, no, no..."

213 Mr Khuba's version corroborates what Mr McBride stated under oath in his High Court application and provides further support to the fact that Mr McBride was fully aware of the existence of the first report. I respectfully submit that Mr McBride simply did not like the conclusions and recommendations contained in the first report.

214 This so called second and official IPID report was no more than a version of the first report with information implicating Dramat and Sibiya deliberately deleted. No analysis was undertaken by the trio to arrive at the conclusion they arrived at. As stated elsewhere in the affidavit in terms of the SOP, neither Mr McBride nor Mr Sesoko enjoy approval and signing powers in respect of IPID reports prepared by Investigators. Nor do they enjoy any powers to close investigation files.

215 During our interview with Mr Khuba on 23 April 2015 I asked him why Messrs McBride and Sesoko had to sign the so called second report. He stated that he did not know.

"MR JULY: ... MR McBRIDE said one of the reasons why he had to sign - ordinarily he doesn't sign the report, and it makes sense that he does not sign, and the act makes no provision for him to sign. He says one of the reasons why he signed is because it involved two provinces, so he had to sign the report. Was that what you understood was the reason why he signed?"

MR KHUBA: That reason was never raised with me. My understanding was that he signed because he was the current head of the department. Even though there was nothing previously that a person would sign, he said he wanted to sign. MR JULY: But why did MR SESOKO sign?

MR KHUBA: MR SESOKO signed because he was appointed head of investigation, he was the Acting Head of Investigation. The rendition was about the investigation. As the Acting Head of Investigation - and I do not know, but probably the fact that he participated in the issue of the second report, that might be the one." ["SJ31" page 1 line 20 to page 2 line 18]

216 I submit that Mr Khuba did not know why Messrs McBride and Sesoko signed the report because there is no such rule, law or requirement at IPID that the Executive Director or Head of Investigations must sign investigation reports. Simply put, Messrs McBride and Sesoko acted ultra vires the Act, Regulations and the SOP.

Was there any justification for the amendment of the first report?

217 At the outset of the present discussion, I state that there was absolutely no justification for the changing of the first report. The changes were effected by deleting passages that they considered to be crucial information from the first report in order to arrive at conclusion desired by McBride. The Commission has not been advised of any justification for the changing of the first report other than the warning statements of Gen. Sibiya, Col. Maluleke and Ms Irish-Qhobosheane, and the analysis of Col. Madilonga's statement. The warning statements provided no probative value to the actual recommendations made in the second report. The expert report containing the cell phone analysis was not outstanding and Col. Madilonga's statement had already been analysed.

218 As stated elsewhere in this affidavit, Gen. Dramat's warning statement was not outstanding. Gen. Sibiya denied any knowledge of the Rendition and all allegations put to him. Captain Maluleke, on the other hand, exercised his right to remain silent. Ms Irish-Qhobosheane explained how the matter was referred to the IPID by the Secretariat. None of this information had any bearing on the recommendations made in either the first or second report. I still do not understand how this information could lead to the deletion of material information contained in the first report.

219 We dealt with the deletions effected to the second report in the Werksmans report (paragraph 4, pages 34 to 41). In that section of the report, we compared the information in the first report with that contained in the second report. We tabulated those difference, with the left column itemising the information from the first report and the right column the information from the second report. The differences identified were the following:

219.1 First, on page 9 of the first report, Mr Khuba extracted the following evidence of Col. Madilonga from his statement:

"He [Col. Madilonga] will state that he told Superintendent Ncube that he has to verify with his seniors about the arrangements. He was given a number of General Dramat by Superintendent Ncube. He called Colonel Radzilani to verify the information but she requested that he should call Brigadier Makushu who was a Provincial Head Protection and Security Services. He then called him on his cell phone and explained to him that there are police from Zimbabwe who are intending to have a meeting with General Dramat. Brigadier Makushu told him that he was not aware of the visit but if the people are saying that they are going to meet the General, he should call General Dramat directly. He phoned General Dramat on his cell phone and he responded by saying that he is aware of the Zimbabwean police and he must let them come"

219.2 This entire paragraph was removed from the second report.

219.3 Second, at page 21, paragraph 5.2 of the first report Mr Khuba referred to a "Success Report" dated 4 February 2011 addressed to Generals Dramat, Hlatshwayo and Toko. In the first report Mr Khuba then stated:

"The report [i.e. the Success Report] bears reference 14/02/01 and was signed by Col Leonie Verster. Paragraph "A1" of the report states that on 05/11/2010, General Dramat held a meeting with Zimbabwean police at DPCI offices about the Nationals who shot and killed one of their senior officers. Paragraph "3" states that Captain Maluleke was tasked to trace and arrest the said Nationals."

219.4 The second report also referred to the Success Report on page 20 thereof. The above statement had however been deleted in its entirety.

219.5 Third, in paragraph 5.3, page 21 of the first report, Mr Khuba dealt with certain emails seized from the laptop of Cap. Maluleke. The first report said the following regarding these emails:

"He sent emails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. The emails were sent to the PA of Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime intelligence. He also sent email to Zimbabwean police trying to find out how they travelled back home and that he is still tracing the remaining suspects."

219.6 The second report included the first sentence quote above followed immediately by the third; the underlined portion (the second sentence) had been removed.

219.7 Fourth, on page 22 of the first report Mr Khuba dealt with a letter dated 20 August 2012 addressed to stakeholders. He said the following regarding this letter:

"The letter was generated the same day indicating that in August 2010 General Sibiya and General Dramat went to Zimbabwe to discuss matters of cooperation on cross border crimes. General Sibiya was appointed as the coordinator on the cooperation issue between two countries. Other letters about the arrest of Zimbabwean national in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police refers to the cooperation agreed during the same meeting."

219.8 This letter was dealt with in the second report, but any reference to Generals Dramat and Sibiya were deleted. The same sentence in the second report read as follows:

"The letter was generated the same day indicating the trip to Zimbabwe to discuss matters of cooperation on cross border crimes."

219.9 Fifth, on page 22 of the first report Mr Khuba dealt with documents relating to the case of a Mr Bongani Moyo, one of the Zimbabwe Nationals who had been illegally deported to Zimbabwe. The first report stated:

"In a letter routed to General Dramat he [Capt. Maluleke] stated that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011."

219.10 The second report contained this sentence but had removed the fact that the letter had been routed to Gen. Dramat; it excluded the underlined portion. The same sentence in the second report read:

"In a letter he [Capt. Maluleke] states that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011."

219.11 Sixth, the first report dealt at pages 23 and 24 with certain evidence that had been obtained pursuant to section 205 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 51 of 1977. Among these were the cell phone records of Gen. Sibiya, Capt. Maluleke, Col. Neethling and Col. Madilonga. It contained an analysis of each of these individuals' cell phone records.

219.12 The second report dealt with the cell phone records of each of the aforesaid individuals and Gen. Dramat as well. But it dealt with their records in a different manner to the first report. It analysed each person's cell phone records in a tabular form with two columns, a left column under the heading "Reason for 205 application" and the right column under the heading "Findings".

219.13 The first report stated that Gen. Sibiya communicated with the officers who had conducted the operation and sent more than 20 text messages to Gen. Dramat during these operations. It contained an analysis of the cell phone records of each of the different witnesses referred to above.

219.14 As regards the cell phone records of Gen. Sibiya, the first report stated:

“Cell phone record of Major General Sibiya (072-xxx-xxxx): Upon perusal of the cell phone records it was discovered that Major General Sibiya communicated with officers who were involved in the operation, e.g. Captain Maluleke and sent more than 20 SMS to Major General Dramat (082-xxx-xxxx). However Major General Dramat never responded to the SMS. The same automated SMS[s] were sent to Lt General Lebeya at 082-xxx-xxxx. These SMS[s] were sent at various milestone of the operation as deduced from witnesses’ statements and documentary proofs.” [I have removed the cell phone numbers of the different witnesses, but the full cell phone numbers appear in the Werksmans report.]

219.15 The second report deal with Gen. Sibiya’s cell phone records by stating under the heading “Findings” that “Major General Sibiya was never at the crime scenes or planning area as alleged by members of Crime Intelligence.”

219.16 The first report did not contain an analysis of Gen. Dramat’s cell phone records.

219.17 The second report under the heading “Findings” said the following regarding Gen. Dramat’s cell phone records:

"The entire cell phone record of Lt General Dramat does [not] show any interaction with the Zimbabwean counterparts. However the fact that Zimbabwean police might have entered the country is confirmed by photographs but there is no evidence that they were with Lt. General Dramat. The photos show them with members of the TRT, Captain Maluleke and members of Crime Intelligence."

219.18 The first report dealt with the cell phone records of Capt. Maluleke by stating:

"Cell phone records of Captain "Cowboy" Maluleke (082-xxx-xxxx)

The interaction between Major General Sibiya and Captain Maluleke was also found in a form of received and outgoing calls. Captain Maluleke also communicated with General Dramat in terms of outgoing SMS at a very important milestone of the operation. However General Dramat never responded to the SMS which he received from Captain Maluleke at 23:12:15 on 05/11/2010. He also called Zimbabwean number twice between the 5th November 2010 and 8th November 2010. The number called on these two occasions is the same and was called at times preceding critical milestones of the operation. Captain Maluleke also called Colonel Madilonga on 08/11/2010 at 19:10:47, when he was approaching Masina. The information is also corroborated by Colonel Madilonga. [In the Werksmans report we referred to this paragraph but did not refer to the underlined portion.]

- 219.19 The second report under the heading "Findings" states "There is a prima facie case against Captain Maluleke."
- 219.20 As regards the cell phone records of Col Neethling, the first report stated:

"Cell phone records of Lt Colonel Neethling (0827787624): He was directly reporting to Major General Sibiya. He contacted General Sibiya telephonically and in his statement he stated that he believed he reported the operation to Major General Sibiya."
- 219.21 None of this appeared in the second report.
- 219.22 The first report stated the following as regards the cell phone records of Col. Madilonga:

"Cell Phone records of Lt Col Madilonga: He is police officer who was posted at the border during the operation. He assisted Captain Maluleke to cross the border with the suspects. He contacted Lt General Dramat when he well come (sic) the Zimbabwean police the first time. His cell phone records his interaction with Captain Maluleke in line with his statement."
- 219.23 The second statement, under the heading "Findings" recorded only that "Their interaction confirms the version of Madilonga." It does not contain the aforesaid paragraph in the first report.
- 219.24 The second report referred to the cell phone records of Capt. Nkosi, Warrant Officer Makoe and Constable Radebe and under the heading "Findings" stated "The record confirms that they were at the scene even though the allegation of theft is not corroborated."

219.25 The first report made no reference to the cell phone records of Capt. Nkosi, Warrant Officer Makoe or Const. Radebe.

219.26 Seventh, the first report included a statement by Mr Khuba to the following effect:

"On 28/01/2013 he was called by the former Executive Director who gave him the following documents stating that she received them from the Secretary of Police, report on Illegal Renditions dated 25/06/2012 accompanied by Warrants of Detention (BI-1725) for the following Dumisani witness Ndeya, Shepard Chuma, Nelson Ndlovu and three Notification of the Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DNA-1689) for Nelson Ndlovu, Shepherd Chuma and Maghwawe Sibanda. The documents are file[d] in the docket as per A36. An enlarged copy of death certificate was made from a copy of [the] Sunday Times Newspaper he received from Brigadier Zangwa dated 23/10/2011 titled "journey to death in an unmarked car" and is filed as per A35."

219.27 On page 29 of the first report Mr Khuba presented an analysis of the evidence and his findings. He concluded that there was "enough evidence that shows that General Dramat did not only know about the operation that led to renditions of Zimbabwean Nationals but sanctioned it". Mr Khuba then itemised, over the next few pages, seven respects in which the evidence supported this:

219.27.1 The Zimbabwe police came into the country for the purpose of arresting the wanted Zimbabwean Nationals and Lt General Dramat directed that they be allowed to proceed since they were coming to see him. On page 30 of the first report Mr Khuba analysed the evidence to support this and stated:

"Evaluation of the above findings: In the entire cell phone records of Lt General Dramat requested for the period 20/10/2010 to 28/02/2011, the number 0155346300 only appears once which rules out any form of communication before 04/11/2010 and after the said date. This supports his version that he called Lt General Dramat in connection with the Zimbabwean police."

219.27.2 He held a meeting on 5 November 2010 with Zimbabwean Police planning the operation. After analysing the evidence to support this, the first report concluded:

"Evaluation of the above findings: The success report signed by Leonie Verster was traced to Lt Col Maluleka's laptop as picked from the retrieved deleted data. The report was amended on 26/01/2011 and 31/01/2011 before it could be emailed to a female officer, Warrant Officer Thabiso Mafatla on 09/02/2011 at 14h32. There is no material difference between the document retrieved from the laptop and that found at the Hawks offices during investigation. This proves that Leonie Verster did not generate success report but only signed the report drafted by Captain Maluleke. The date of the meeting between Zimbabwean Police and General Dramat which took place on 05/11/2020 coincide[d] with the date of the 4th of November 2010 which according to cell phone records, General Dramat was called at 20h56 by Lt Col Madilonga seeking permission to allow Zimbabwean Police to enter into the country. Since the Zimbabwean Police where (sic) at Beit Bridge between 20h00 and 21h00, it is logical that they arrived in Gauteng late at night, leaving them with the opportunity to have the meeting with General Dramat in the morning of the 5th of November 2010 as stated in the Success Report."

219.27.3 He committed government resources into the operation. After analysis the evidence to support this, the first report concluded:

"Evaluation of the above findings: Despite the fact that General Dramat as an Accounting Officer did not sign any claim of Captain Maluleke, delegating responsibility to Major General Sibiya to assist the Zimbabwean Police in tracing • wanted suspects invariably commit government resources into an unlawful operation that amount to a criminal offence."

219.27.4 He congratulated officers for arresting Johnson Nyoni and advised them to keep it a secret. After analysing the evidence to support this, the first report concluded:

"Evaluation of the above findings: Words of appreciation from General Dramat show both interest in the arrest of the Zimbabwean Nationals and his knowledge of the operation. If the operation was lawful he would not have warned them not to tell anyone about it."

219.27.5 "He received communication regarding successes and photos of the operation through his Personal Assistant Phumla: According to the information retrieved from the seized laptop, Captain Maluleke send emails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. The emails where [sic] sent to the PA of General Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime Intelligence."

219.27.6 "He was kept informed of the developments in the operations that led to the arrest of wanted Zimbabwean Nationals. The cell phone records of General Sibiya shows 30 SMS sent to General Dramat! at various milestones of the operation. He also received an SMS from Captain Maluleke shortly after the arrest of Zimbabwean Nationals. He never responded to any of the SMS which may suggest that they were only informing him of the progress."

219.27.7 "Report to parliament in response to the allegation: A copy of the letter sent by Zimbabwean authority to Col Ntentseni clearly mention the names of people whom General Dramat in his report to parliament stated that they were deported for being illegal immigrants. the letter clearly indicates that the suspects were wanted for murdering Superintendent Chatikobo of Bulawayo on 18 September 2010. It goes further to state that there was joined operation between South African Police and Zimbabwean police to trace and arrest the suspects."

219.28 These aspects were not dealt with in the second report. Instead, under a separate paragraph headed "FINDINGS", the second report stated that:

"The success report that claim that Lt General Dramat had a meeting with the Zimbabwean police lacks detail about the meeting itself. There is no indication of what was discussed and who was part of the meeting. It is on that basis that a prima facie case cannot be premised on speculation, but need corroborated facts."

219.29 Eighth, the first report dealt with the evidence implicating Gen. Sibiya in the following manner:

"There is evidence and witnesses corroborate each other that General Sibiya was both at the scene and planning venue. The meeting held between IPID and General Dramat on 2013/03/07 confirmed that General Sibiya was appointed to be the Head of TOMS which he created to trace wanted suspects. The telephone records of both Captain Maluleke and Major General Sibiya show interaction between them at various milestones of the operation. Following suggest the involvement of General Sibiya:

- Witness stated that he was seen during the operation that took place on 22/11/2010 which led to the arrest of Prichard Chuma
- In other operations cell phone record of Warrant Officer Makoe, Captain Maluleke and Col Neethling clearly show continuous contacts with General Sibiya during and shortly after the operation. Col Neethling also stated that he should have reported progress to General Sibiya during the operation. However the cell phone records of General Sibiya does not place him at the scenes and planning venues as claimed by witnesses. It is also clear that some of the witness claim to have heard that General Sibiya was in the car rather than seeing him personally.
- The meeting held in Zimbabwe wherein General Sibiya was appointed as a coordinator on cooperation matters involving the two countries suggests that the operation could not have been done without his knowledge more so because his Gauteng Team was involved in the operation. However this inference cannot provide prima facie case that he was involved."

219.30 None of this information was dealt with in the second report.

219.31 In the first report the following recommendation is made:

"Based on the available evidence, the Independent Police Investigative Directorate recommends that Lt General Dramat, Major General Sibiya, Lt Col M Maluleke, Constable Radebe, Captain S E Nkosi and Warrant Officer Makoe be charged criminally for:

- Kidnapping
- Defeating the ends of justice
- Assault and theft (only applicable to Captain M L Maluleke, Warrant Officer Makoe, Constable P M Radebe and Captain S E Nkosi)"

219.32 The second report, however, makes the following recommendation:

"Based on the available evidence, the Independent Police Investigative Directorate recommends that no charges should be brought against Lt General Dramat and Major General Sibiya. The investigation established that there is no prima facie case against them. However, with regard to Lt Col M Maluleke, there is a prima facie case to sustain charges of kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice."

220 When the two reports are considered, it is clear that there was a crude attempt to exclude all references to Generals Sibiya and Dramat. Mr McBride participated in this exercise.

221 There was thus no legal or factual justification for the creation of the second report at all. As explained above instead of adding the so-called "new information" Messrs McBide, Khuba and Sesoko, deleted information from a report submitted to the NPA for prosecutorial decision.

Interference with a report prepared by an investigator

222 Investigators of IPID must conduct their work independently. This includes independence from their seniors, like Mr McBride. Mr McBride's involvement in the Rendition investigation was highly irregular and constitutes interference with work of the investigator.

223 Mr McBride's unjustified interference with Mr Khuba's investigation report and the sense of fear he instilled in Mr Khuba is apparent from Mr Khuba's sense of relief or "happiness" with the fact that Mr McBride was happy with the "work" done on the second report. This was explained by Mr Khuba in an interview with Werksmans on 23 April 2015 where at page 18 line 2 to page 19 line 6, he stated the following:

"MR KHUBA: To tell you various facts, whether I was happy or not happy, for me is a different thing, and I want to come to that point so that I can clarify it for you, because when you find a situation where a particular decision is taken by the person of authority, the issue of your feelings disappears. Do you know what I'm saying? Because for me, when I do an investigation I do not have vested interests. However, I would want my efforts to be put to good use, but simply because McBRIDE signed and owned to whatever, I was happy to say: Now I'm fine. But that was not being happy about the context, I was happy that he was taking responsibility for the report. I cannot express my view about whether I was happy or not happy about the content.

MR JULY: You seem to be suggesting that by the time that you were finalising the report you got a sense that a decision had already been made as to how the report should look.

MR KHUBA: Yes, that one I'm going to correct, on the basis that if it was a once-off, but this report was commuting, so it was like a work-in-progress. You have this, you do this, you go back and you go back. I was only happy when I heard that the boss is actually happy. The reason why I was happy was because I was not going to sit behind the computer."

224 By influencing Mr Khuba to make changes to his report which he (Mr McBride) was happy with, Mr McBride interfered with the independent functioning of investigators of IPID. This constitutes gross misconduct and infringes the provisions of the IPID Act read with IPID Regulations, which seeks to exclusively make investigations the responsibility of the Director Investigations. Also, it is clear that Mr McBride's true agenda was to protect members of the police. This is also gross misconduct since IPID is established specifically to investigate the police. It is axiomatic that IPID must be independent of the police, who it is created to police.

225 I say Mr McBride instilled fear in Mr Khuba, because Mr Khuba told me during an off-the-record discussion that he was very scared of Mr McBride owing to the latter's struggle credentials. Mr Khuba went as far as suggesting that he was doubtful whether Mr McBride was suitable for the position. Mr Khuba shared this with me on 26 March 2015, in the presence of Messrs Tom and Buthelezi and Ms Kerry Badal. I attach hereto marked "SJ35" a confirmatory affidavit by Mr Tom confirm this. The confirmatory affidavit for Mr Buthelezi and Ms Badal will be provided later.

Whether the Minister acted improperly or interfered with the independence of IPID when he requested the case information regarding the Rendition investigation

226 Regulation 15 deals with the reporting that has to be undertaken by the Executive Director. In terms of Reg. 15(2) the Executive Director must submit a report which must include an overview of –

226.1 The administration of the Directorate relating to its overall management and organisation;³⁰

226.2 The processing, monitoring and investigation of complaints lodged with the Directorate in terms of section 28(1) of the IPID Act;³¹

226.3 The management of information and research conducted during the financial year under review; and³²

³⁰ Regulation 15(a).

³¹ Regulation 15(b).

³² Regulation 15(c).

226.4 Statistics of cases with by the Directorate on both national and provincial level, including information on the number of cases carried over to the next financial year.³³

226.5 Despite sub-regulation (1), the Executive Director must, in accordance with section 7(12) of the IPID Act, at any time when requested to do so by the Minister and Parliament, report on the activities of the Directorate.³⁴

227 The Minister was legally empowered to demand accountability from Mr McBride in relation to the manner in which the IPID handled the Rendition investigation. Faced with parliamentary questions on the illegal rendition and media reports that there had been an investigation report that made recommendations to the effect that senior members of DPCI had to be criminally charged, the Minister was entitled to demand answers in terms of the above Reg. 15. The Minister was further entitled, in terms of section 6(6) of the IPID Act, to investigate serious acts of misconduct allegedly committed by McBride as an employee of IPID. The Minister's demand for information pertaining the Rendition investigation does not transform his conduct to interference with the independence of the IPID.

³³ Regulation 15(d).

³⁴ Regulation 15(3).

228 Furthermore, it is abundantly clear from Reg. 15(3) that the Minister can at any time request to be updated by the Executive Director on the activities of IPID. The Executive Director must comply with such a request from the Minister.

229 The Rendition investigation was prompted by the murder of Zimbabwean crime suspects arrested by South African Police handed to Zimbabwe police and murdered at that country. I now turn to deal with the allegations contained in Mr McBride's affidavit herein below.

230 Ad paragraphs 1 to 5

Except to deny that the evidence contained in Mr McBride's affidavit is both true and correct, the rest of the paragraphs are noted.

231 Ad paragraphs 6 to 8

231.1 I disagree with the allegations contained in Mr McBride's supplementary affidavit. Most of what he says is merely a repetition of what was stated by him in his replying affidavit dated 19 June 2015 in the High Court application under case number 6588/15.

231.2 In the paragraphs that follow I deal fully with the contents of Mr McBride's supplementary affidavit. I emphasise that everything contained in his supplementary affidavit and in his testimony before this Commission which is inconsistent with what I say in this affidavit is denied.

232 Ad paragraph 9

The contents of this paragraph are noted.

233 Ad paragraph 10 to 11

233.1 I deny that:

233.1.1 Werksmans was improperly appointed to investigate IPID on acts of misconduct committed by any employee employed by IPID.

233.1.2 The Werksmans investigation impugned or interfered with the independence of IPID.

233.2 The terms of reference given to Werksmans by the Minister are self-explanatory. Messrs McBride, Khuba and Sesoko were all employees of IPID and therefore subject to the Minister's discipline.

233.3 At the time the Minister appointed Werksmans to conduct the investigation he enjoyed powers to discipline and remove an Executive Director from office on account of misconduct, ill-health or inability to perform the duties of that office.³⁵ Where misconduct was alleged to have been committed, the Minister could only exercise such powers after having conducted an investigation into whether misconduct had indeed been committed. There was, with respect, nothing improper in the ³⁵ Section 6(6) of the IPID Act.

Minister appointing Werksmans to conduct an investigation prior to exercising his powers in terms section 6(6) of the IPID Act.

233.4 Mr McBride surely appreciates that the Minister's powers to discipline and suspend the Executive Director existed and were in force prior to the Constitutional Court's decision (2016 (11) BCLR 1398 (CC)). It is therefore quite unhelpful for him to make the allegations he does when at the time the Minister decided to discipline them he did, as a factual state of the law, have the power to do so.

233.5 As a matter of law, the position of Executive Director is accountable to the Minister of Police, as the political executive. Such accountability does not undermine IPID's independence at all. This view was confirmed by the Constitutional Court in McBride [2016 (11) BCLR 1398 (CC)] where the court made the following remarks:

'[27] This must be seen against section 7(7) of the IPID Act which requires the Executive Director to submit a summary of disciplinary matters to the Minister. In addition, section 32 requires the Executive Director to prepare and submit an annual report in the form prescribed by the Minister within five months of the end of the financial year to the Minister. Evidently, this is intended to ensure that the Executive Director accounts to the Minister about the activities within IPID. This is probably because the Minister, as the political head of the police, bears political responsibility for the police.

[28] But does this on its own undermine IPID's independence to a point where it offends section 206(6) of the Constitution? No. The fact that IPID is required by both the Constitution and the IPID Act to be independent does not mean that it cannot be held accountable. Like all other organs of state, IPID must be accountable for its actions. To be insulated from undue political interference or control does not mean that IPID should be insulated from political accountability. Accountability is one of the important values enshrined in our Constitution – a basic tenet for good governance. Hence the requirement that it must submit reports about its activities to the Minister who in turn will place them before Parliament. [Emphasis added]

233.6 I submit that it is apparent from the above passage that the independence of IPID does not mean that it is not accountable. The Executive Director as a matter of law is accountable to the Minister of Police. Insisting on accountability does not equate to interference.

234 Ad paragraphs 12 to 14

234.1 The Minister will come and explain or shed light on the issue raised by Mr McBride in these paragraphs.

234.2 Suffice to say that at the time of Mr McBride's suspension, the Minister was empowered by the IPID Act to not only suspend but also discipline the Executive Director in his capacity as an employee of IPID. The Constitutional Court declared certain provisions of the IPID Act and the IPID Regulations to be unconstitutional and invalid. That does not alter that those provisions existed as a matter of fact.

234.3 the suggestion by Mr McBride in paragraph 14 that the Werksmans investigation was a criminal investigation is wrong. It was not. The nature of the investigation was adequately set out in the terms of reference. The fact that recommendations were made in the report that McBride be charged criminally does not render the investigation undertaken by Werksmans a criminal investigation. Werksmans, a law firm in private practice, does not have such powers to conduct a criminal investigation.

234.4 As I have indicated elsewhere in this affidavit, the Werksmans report made recommendations to the Minister, and not the NPA. The Minister could either accept or reject the said recommendations. Even the NPA, which subsequently charged Mr McBride, could only have done so upon satisfying itself that Mr McBride had a criminal case to answer to.

235 Ad paragraph 15

For the reasons set out elsewhere in this affidavit, I deny that the Minister's involvement was unlawful.

236 Ad paragraph 16

236.1 It should be emphasised that the decision of the NPA to withdraw the charges against Generals Dramat and Sibiya had nothing do with our investigation. Our investigation was to establish whether looking at the two reports prepared by IPID and the docket, a prima facie case of criminal liability existed against the Generals. In our view such case existed. This is the same view taken by the NPA when the Generals were originally charged. It was always open to the NPA to exercise its prosecutorial discretion at any stage of the case even after the Generals had been charged.

236.2 I should further emphasize that the decision to charge or prosecute the Generals was made by the NPA. Advocates George Baloyi and Sibongile Mzinyathi on 13 March 2015 made a recommendation that the Generals be charged criminally. They explained, however, that the reason for making a "recommendation" instead of a "decision" was because the case fell outside their jurisdiction.

"MR JULY: Inside that box were arch-lever files, including a letter addressed to him dated 13 March 2015. In a nutshell what it said was that the DPP of NORTHERN GAUTENG, which is ADV MZINYATHI, has made a recommendation that DRAMAT and the others should be prosecuted. But in the letter he is requesting the DPP of GAUTENG, which is MR CHAUKE, to make a decision, after consulting with him as to whether prosecution should take place on that. That's the summary of the letter, but there are other issues contained in that. ["SJ28" page 2 line 18 to page 3 line 3]

236.3 The recommendation was made before the Werksmans report had even finalised. Importantly, the NPA took its decision to charge Generals Dramat and Sibiya criminally after the so called second report having been provided to it. In other words, the NPA arrived at a different conclusion to the recommendation that had been expressed in the second report.

237 Ad paragraph 17

I have no personal knowledge of the discussions between Messrs McBride, Sesoko and Nxasana and am accordingly not in a position to admit or deny these allegations.

238 Ad paragraph 18

238.1 I have no knowledge of the "purpose" for which the Werksmans report was used. Werksmans provided the report to the Minister in accordance with its mandate.

238.2 The 'purpose' for which the Werksmans investigation was commissioned has no effect on the facts that informed the findings expressed in the Werksmans report, and the facts are:

238.2.1 Prior to the operations which led to the Rendition of Zimbabwean nationals, during August 2010, Generals Dramat and Sibiya met with the Zimbabwean Police officers in Zimbabwe and entered into a bilateral agreement;

238.2.2 On 5 November 2010, preceding the operations, a meeting was held in Pretoria between General Dramat, Sibiya and the Zimbabwean police.

238.2.3 On 5, 23 November 2010 and January 2011 operations were undertaken to arrest the citizens of Zimbabwe in connection with the murder of a Police Superintendent in Zimbabwe.

238.2.4 The Zimbabwean police officers were part of the operations;

238.2.5 The South African government and Zimbabwe have no extradition agreement;

238.2.6 Zimbabwean nationals were arrested and handed over to Zimbabwean police officers;

238.2.7 The deportation of the Zimbabwean nationals was unlawful and irregular;

238.2.8 Four (4) Zimbabwean citizens were killed and a number of them were tortured during the operations;

238.3 It is for these reasons that Werksmans made its recommendations, it does not matter for what 'purpose' the investigation was sought and the purpose for which the report was used.

239 Ad paragraph 19

239.1 The recording of the interviews was indeed done by Werksmans, but the transcript was not compiled by it. The transcript was given to a professional transcription company for transcription of the recording of the interview.

239.2 The transcribed record and the actual recordings of the interviews was then sent to Adams & Adams.

239.3 It should be emphasised that the recording of Mr Sesoko's interview was not made available to him by us. This is because during the interview with him he had used his own Dictaphone machine to record the interview. The consequence was that there were two machines recording the same interview, his and ours. It subsequently transpired that Sesoko had removed Werksmans' machine (the two machines were identical). We realised what had happened after Sesoko attached a transcript of the interview, if my memory serves me correctly, in a High Court application.

240 Ad paragraph 20

240.1 I have already pointed out that Mr McBride complains of the manner in which I assessed or construed the evidence. I disagree that Werksmans misconstrued the evidence provided during the interviews.

240.2 In any event, one would have expected Mr McBride to have taken the Werksmans report on review so that his challenges could be properly assessed and adjudicated upon.

240.3 It is clear from the provisions of the IPID Act that IPID reports are a legislative requirement. A report by an investigator is prescribed by the IPID Act and IPID Regulations, it is not just something or a document that is produced at the discretion of the investigator. It is a peremptory requirement. I still maintain that Messrs McBride, Khuba and Sesoko, in deleting certain information from the first report, did so with the intention to exonerate Generals Dramat and Sibiya from criminal prosecution. In so doing, their conduct was aimed at defeating the ends of justice. Mr McBride should know that this is a criminal offence.

241 Ad paragraph 21

241.1 I respectfully submit that Mr McBride has been deliberately selective in attaching extracts of the interviews to his supplementary affidavit.

241.2 I will demonstrate later in this affidavit that there are additional passages in the transcript of Mr McBride's interview which should properly have been disclosed.

242 Ad paragraph 22

242.1 I disagree with Mr McBride's claim that the first report was not a "final report". It was.

242.2 I deny that there was any evidence of a material nature that still had to be included in the report of 22 January 2014.

242.3 On 30 March 2015, Werksmans interviewed Colonel Moukangwe. In this interview he informed Werksmans that before the first report was submitted to the NPA he and Khuba had requested warning statements from Generals Dramat, Sibiya and Colonel Maluleke and they all refused to give statements. This was Col. Moukangwe's response to my question whether they had requested warning statements from Generals Dramat and Sibiya prior to submitting the first report.

"COLONEL MOUKANGWE: In the report in which I was involved I never saw them, but in the report in which I was involved there were no warning statements of GENERAL SIBIYA, GENERAL DRAMAT or COLONEL MALULEKE. As I said before, they didn't want to give a statement. GENERAL SIBIYA wanted questions to be sent to him, GENERAL DRAMAT said he was still going to speak to his lawyer, and COLONEL MALULEKE refused. And they didn't speak directly with me, he's the one who spoke to me, but I was with him when he spoke to them. So the issue of how they now decided to bring statements - maybe it was just after I was a far distance from the investigation.

MR JULY: Do you remember if you asked for those statements from them before you finalised the report ...

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, we did.

MR JULY: ... which is dated 22 January?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: We did. I even went to the office of GENERAL DRAMAT with MR KHUBA... ["SJ27" page 9]

242.4 I asked Col. Moukangwe about the allegedly outstanding cell records of General Sibiya. He said the following:

"COLONEL MOUKANGWE: In that one maybe he forgot something, because we knew before that GENERAL SIBIYA's cellphone shows he was in PRETORIA, but the people who were operating with him said he is not using one cellphone. So it might happen that the official cellphones were at home, and maybe he used the other one, which is just recorded here on the statement. That is according to what they said. But we knew about the information before, because we questioned them: How can you say SIBIYA was involved, the cellphone shows that ...

MR JULY: And how did you know about this information that SIBIYA's cellphones were in SUNNYSIDE?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Because of the detailed billing that we did. We did a detailed billing on the two cellphone numbers that we were given, to show where the cellphones were at that time. They showed that he was in PRETORIA at the time they mentioned in their statements. [At pages 7 to 8 of the transcript, annexure "SJ27"]

242.5 And further:

"COLONEL MOUKANGWE: After the discussion with the prosecutors, they made a suggestion whether we should do the mappings. Cellphone mapping is where an analysis will show us that this was done at this, and make some points in a chart form. That's what we were requested to do.

MR JULY: But that was for the purposes of leading evidence?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: For the purpose of leading evidence, it was not for the purpose of the report. It was for the purpose of leading evidence, and it would be easier for the prosecutors to pinpoint and show on a chart. [At page 31 of the transcript, annexure "SJ27"]

242.6 Col. Moukangwe also gave his view about the status of the report dated 22 January 2014:

"MR JULY: This was the final report?"

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: That I know about. It was the final one.

MR JULY: You say you were involved in the actual drafting?"

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes.

MR JULY: Meaning that you ..." [At page 3 of the transcript, annexure "SJ27"]

242.7 Elsewhere during the interview Col. Moukangwe stated:

"I won't be able to say it was submitted, but we went to the National Director of Public Prosecutions, because we were given two advocates to work with us on this issue. I was there with MR KHUBA and MR SESOKO. MR SESOKO is a legal person, he was a former prosecutor in BENONI. We went there, and when we were there the report was already drafted. That is what I can say with certainty, because when we were there the prosecutors who were dealing with us on this issue, knew about it, and had a copy of the report." [At page 5 of the transcript, annexure "SJ29"]

242.8 When I asked Col. Moukangwe whether the report submitted to the NPA was preliminary, incomplete or final, he stated:

"It was a final, because we wanted warrants there, really, that's why we took our legal person, MR SESOKO. We were worried about why it seemed they were dragging their feet in giving us warrants of arrest for these people, because the people never wanted to cooperate." [At page 5 of the transcript, annexure "SJ27"]

242.9 Werksmans interviewed Mr Khuba on 13 April 2015. During that interview Mr Khuba confirmed that he, Col. Moukangwe and Mr Sesoko attended at the NPA to request arrest warrants to be issued against the Generals. ["SJ24" pages 1 line 16 to 25]

"MR JULY: We are going to record this. I was saying to you that when we interviewed MR MOUKANGWE, he said you, him and SESOKO went to the NPA.

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: And the reason you went to the NPA is you wanted a warrant of arrest.

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: He said it was taking time and you guys wanted to find out why.

MR KHUBA: Yes."

242.10 Despite his recent claims that Werksmans did not conduct a balanced assessment of the evidence, in the interview Mr Khuba confirmed that the report dated 22 January 2014 was a final report.

"Mr Khuba: I want to tell you that a report that has a recommendation can be regarded as a final report on the basis that there is nothing else you need to do." [At page 12 of the transcript of his interview (annexure "SJ24")]

242.11 Khuba went on to state the following:

"MR KHUBA: What you are talking about I don't think is an issue of only departmental procedure. It's an issue of common sense, that once you have made a recommendation you have done your investigation. If new evidence surfaces to rebut that, then you are able to advance: Now I have this and that and that. But you need to understand that when I was requested to submit the report, which I had already updated." [Page 13 of the transcript, annexure "SJ24"]

242.12 Nowhere in the first report does Mr Khuba state that there was any outstanding information to be collected or investigated, whereas he had done so in his draft report of 22 October 2013.

242.13 Moreover, and in any event, the IPID SOP of 2013 / 2014, defines a completed investigation to mean:

"an investigation which involves a comprehensive effort to interview the complainant, the victim, witnesses and suspect SAPS/MPS member, the identification, location and acquiring of relevant physical evidence and upon which the conclusion is based on evidence obtained, excluding technical reports".

242.14 It is clear from the IPID SOP that outstanding technical reports, if any, do not render an investigation report incomplete.

243 Adv. Mosing also confirmed during his interview with Werksmans that the report dated 22 January 2014 was a final report as the investigation into the matter was concluded. Advocate Mosing stated:

"ADVOCATE MOSING: Yes, they recommend. But I'm saying our role in the matter we made clear to them, that this report is not given to me so that I can make a decision, we would submit it to the relevant DPP office, who would take it, and we were merely guiding that investigation and assisting them. As I said, we had continuous discussions with the investigating team, so at no stage did he disagree really as to what was happening. I think there was a lot of pressure as well to terminate the investigation, to move over to arrest. We basically had to say: Make your investigation complete first, make sure you've got all the evidence, which at least indicates a prima facie case so that a prosecutor can take it forward and at least is assured of getting a conviction. But really there wasn't any pressure from anybody to say: Arrest this person and arrest that person, in a sense. But I'm saying of course this matter happened some time ago already, and there was some delay in really getting to the nitty-gritty, to the truth of the whole event, until we started making progress. It was just to make sure: Finish your investigation so that there is nothing extra to go and get. So by the time he then wrote the final report, which we then had agreed in terms of who would be charged, and so on - as I said, where we had agreed, and we mentioned names as well, as was mentioned in this report dated 22 January 2014. Based on this report, which we understood to be the final report, with the investigation being final as far as we were concerned, the matter was now ready to be submitted to a prosecutor to make a decision on whether to prosecute anyone or not. BILLY MOELETSI and myself drafted a memorandum to the Deputy National Director of Public Prosecutions, ADVOCATE JIVA, attaching – let me just get that report, first of all. [Page 23 line 19 to page 25 line 10 of "SJ26"]

- 243.1 In any event, I find it strange that Mr McBride is able to express an opinion on the status of a report he claimed in his interview with Werksmans never to have seen. In fact, Mr McBride even insisted that I should not ask him any questions about a report he had not seen. (Pages 23 to 25 of annexure "SJ22"). If he is to be believed, Mr McBride had no personal knowledge of the 22 January 2014 report. This appears to be , however, at paragraph 22, he seems to be commenting from a position of knowledge and authority.

244.1 The contents of this paragraph are denied.

244.2 Mr Khuba as an investigator designated in terms of the IPID Act was empowered by Regulation 4(9)(c) of the IPID Regulations to submit the report to the NPA. Mr McBride testified before the commission that the Rendition investigation also pertained to murder of Zimbabwean nationals as a result of police action or omission or both. That was correct. An investigation of this kind falls under Regulation 4(8) and (9).

244.3 It is a matter of public record that a death certificate in respect of one of the Zimbabwean nationals was in the public domain through a story published by the Sunday Times newspaper.

244.4 Even if Regulation 5 did apply to this type of case (which it did not), I disagree that the first report was not properly completed in accordance with Regulation 5(3)(1). This contention is misleading. The first report was submitted by Mr Khuba who during that period was the acting Provincial Head of IPID. He was empowered by Regulation 5(3)(1) to submit the report to the NPA.

- 244.5 Mr McBride's reliance on section 7(4) of the IPID Act ignores the fact that the Provincial Head also had powers in terms of section 21(d) to refer matters investigated by his office to the NPA or the relevant provincial prosecuting authority. Section 7(4) does not divest the Provincial Head of those powers. Regulation 5(3)(i) can be equally read with section 21(d).
- 244.6 It bears mentioning that the Executive Director has a general responsibility to refer all matters investigated by IPID to the Minister. This includes provincial investigations.
- 244.7 I should also mention that, according to my investigation and discussions with Ms Koeki Mbeki and my interview with Mr Khuba, at the time the first report was submitted to the NPA, there was no Executive Director at IPID because Ms Mbeki had taken employment elsewhere. I had several informal discussions with Ms Mbeki; according to her even if she had still been in the employ of IPID at the time, her role would have been limited to submitting the report to the Minister without any alteration. Her only contribution would have been to prepare a covering letter as part of her reporting and accountability responsibilities. She stated that investigators ought to conduct their investigations independently and free from interference, even from seniors.
- 244.8 There is no merit in the contention that Mr Khuba was not entitled to sign off on investigation reports in respect of crimes committed in other provinces. Mr Khuba was appointed as an investigator in the Rendition investigation. This covered all aspects of the Rendition matter, it was not confined to crimes committed in the province in which he was stationed. Who, after all, was to sign off on the report, if not him? My stance is informed by the provisions of section 22 of the IPID Act read with Regulation 4(9)(c) of the IPID Regulations. Khuba, as investigator, was empowered to submit the investigation report with his recommendations to the NPA and after having done so, submit the same investigation report with recommendations to the Executive Director or Provincial Head. Nowhere in the regulation is the Executive Director or Provincial Head for that matter, granted signing or approval powers of an investigation report produced by an investigator. In this case Mr Khuba was the Acting Provincial Head and there was a vacuum in the national office as Ms Mbeki had taken up employment elsewhere. In these circumstances, it could never be suggested that Mr Khuba acted improperly in submitting the report.

245 Ad paragraphs 26 to 28

245.1 The reliance on the SOP is misplaced. The provisions relied upon by McBride relate to internal case management arrangements at IPID relating to the completion of case files. This is an internal IPID arrangement, it certainly does not have the force of rendering a report, properly submitted to the NPA pursuant to the IPID Act and IPID Regulations, incomplete.

245.2 I disagree with the contention that Khuba was not supposed to sign the report alone. I have already mentioned elsewhere in this affidavit that there was no Executive Director at IPID at the time the first report was submitted to the NPA. Secondly, Sesoko was not Khuba's supervisor they were of equal rank at IPID. Mr Khuba informed us to this effect during our interview of 26 March and 13 April 2015. In this regard, I refer to the following extracted from the transcript of the interview on 26 March 2015:

"I was worried, and I then phoned ADVOCATE MOSING, I then phoned my partner and I then phoned MR SESOKO. MR SESOKO was not my supervisor or my superior, he was just acting in the post, and during the investigation KOEKIE MBEKI gave me a clear instruction to say: Don't involve MR SESOKO in anything." ["SJ23" page 22 lines 10 to 16]

245.3 Khuba further emphasized that Sesoko was not his supervisor during his interview with Werksmans on 13 April 2015 when he said the following:

"I want to tell you that a report that has a recommendation can be regarded as a final report on the basis that there is nothing else you need to do. You need to understand the procedure which I outlined previously, to say when you compile a report with recommendations it has to be assessed by the senior person, who signs it. I was in the predicament where firstly the Acting Head - SESOKO was a senior, but he was still at the same rank as I was. He was acting in that position, but I was also acting, so there was not much difference. We were all Acting Chief Directors anyway." [Page 12, line 1 to 14 of the transcript of the interview, annexure "SJ24"]

245.4 Mr McBride was not in the employ of IPID during the period when the first report was submitted, he has no personal knowledge of whether internal processes were followed or not. I am advised that Mr Khuba was consulting with Mr Sesoko and Ms Mbeki during 2013 regarding certain aspects of his investigation. Ms Mbeki informed me that Mr Khuba kept her up to date on his investigation during 2013. This is confirmed by Mr Khuba in his confirmatory affidavit to Mr McBride's replying affidavit in the High Court application, wherein he states the following at page 5:

"6.8 I was instructed by Mbeki to report directly to her in this matter and keep her abreast of the progress in the investigation through regular report. I sent weekly progress reports on the investigation to Mbeki, and also periodically sent her copies of working draft of the investigation report."

245.5 As such, it is factually incorrect for Mr McBride to claim that internal processes were not followed, in circumstances where he was not even in the employ of IPID during the period when the first report was drafted and submitted.

245.6 It is perhaps important to mention at this stage that, Mr Khuba was appointed as an investigator of the Rendition pursuant to the provisions of section 22 of the IPID Act. The process contemplated in that section demands that an investigator must receive a security clearance in the manner prescribed by the Minister of Police. Even though this was not the reason Mr Khuba signed the investigation report alone, I was advised by Ms Mbeki that Mr Sesoko was not and could not be appointed as an IPID investigator during his tenure at IPID because he had a criminal record, which IPID was in the process of assisting him to have expunged.

246 Ad paragraph 29 and 30

246.1 The contents of these paragraphs are denied.

246.2 The provisions relied upon by McBride in paragraph [29] relate to internal case management arrangements at IPID relating to the completion of case files. That section of the SOP does not even deal with submission of an investigative report to the NPA.

246.3 In any event the SOP is an internal IPID arrangement, it certainly does not have the force of rendering a report, properly submitted to the NPA pursuant to the Act and Regulations, incomplete.

246.4 In the very procedure discussed by McBride at paragraph [29] of his affidavit, there is no reference to the Executive Director having approval or signing powers in relation to 'completion of files'. McBride has no role whatsoever to play in the completion of files at the IPID. That function is performed by the Director of Investigations and the Provincial Head. Khuba had the authority to approve the completion of files as a Director of Investigations as well as the Acting Provincial Head.

246.5 I disagree with the contention that Khuba was not supposed to sign the report alone. I have already mentioned elsewhere in this affidavit that there was no Executive Director at IPID at the time the first report was submitted to the NPA. Secondly, Sesoko was not Khuba's supervisor they were of equal rank at IPID. Khuba informed us to this effect during our interview of 13 April 2015. ["SJ24" at page 12 line 10] It is perhaps important to mention at this stage that Khuba was designated as an investigator of the Rendition pursuant to the provisions of section 22 of the Act. The process delineated detailed and demands that an investigator must receive a security clearance in the manner prescribed by the Minister of Police. Even though this was not the reason Khuba signed the investigation report alone, I was advised by Ms Mbeki that Sesoko was not and could not be appointed as an IPID investigator during her stint at the IPID. The reason for this was that Sesoko had a criminal record, which IPID was in the process of assisting him to get expunged.

246.6 In fact, during his interview with Werksmans on 23 April 2015, Khuba stated that he did know why McBride and Sesoko had to sign the second report because this did not happen in the past. ["SJ31" page 1 line 20 to page 2 line 18], I refer to the following extracted from the transcript of the interview on 23 April 2015:

"MR JULY: MR McBRIDE said one of the reasons why he had to sign - ordinarily he doesn't sign the report, and it makes sense that he does not sign, and the act makes no provision for him to sign. He says one of the reasons why he signed is because it involved two provinces, so he had to sign the report. Was that what you understood was the reason why he signed?"

MR KHUBA: That reason was never raised with me. My understanding was that he signed because he was the current head of the department. Even though there was nothing previously that a person would sign, he said he wanted to sign.

MR JULY: But why did MR SESOKO sign?

MR KHUBA: MR SESOKO signed because he was appointed head of investigation, he was the Acting Head of Investigation. The rendition was about the investigation. As the Acting Head of Investigation - and I do not know, but probably the fact that he participated in the issue of the second report, that might be the one." ["SJ31", page 1 line 20 to page 2 line 18]

246.7 I submit that they could not sign because they were neither investigators in the case nor where they authorised in terms of the SOP.

247.1 In my interview with Adv. Mosing (referred to by Mr McBride at paragraph 31 of his affidavit), he explained why he wrote the word “draft” on the report submitted to him by Mr Khuba on 22 January 2014: the report did not have Mr Khuba’s statement explaining the manner in which he conducted the investigation and for this reason he inscribed the word “draft” in on it in manuscript. Adv. Mosing advised Mr Khuba to prepare and include his statement in the report. This was done and Mr Khuba submitted his report on or about 24 January 2014 together with his statement and signed it. A copy of the interview with Adv. Mosing is attached to Mr McBride’s affidavit as annexure RMD.W.5 the pertinent pages are pages 58 and 59.

247.2 I cannot respond to Mr McBride’s allegation that Mr Khuba was pressurised into signing the first report. Only Mr Khuba and Adv. Mosing can do so. Mr Khuba was a senior member of IPID and the lead investigator in the Rendition investigation. I do not understand why he would bow to “pressure” from professionals who were assisting him in conducting his investigation as the lead investigator.

247.3 According to Mr McBride the so-called “material” evidence that was outstanding was the expert analysis of General Sibiya’s cellphone records and warning statements from Generals Dramat and Mr Sibiya. This is obviously not true in light of what I have already stated elsewhere in this affidavit. I emphasize that Mr Khuba, Adv. Mosing and Col.

Moukangwe were in possession an analysis of General Sibiya's cellphone records at the time the first report was submitted to the NPA. In terms of that analysis it was established that the General Sibiya's cellphone was (which was located in Pretoria) was not in the vicinity of the crime. I have already explained the purpose of obtaining an expert analysis of cellphone records previously. That is why the first report did not make any reference to outstanding information. This is because there was none, General Sibiya's cellphone records had already been analysed. No warning statements were outstanding at the time the first report was submitted. They had been requested and had been refused. In any event a warning statement serves no more than to demonstrate that a suspect to the criminal investigation had been warned.

247.4 Furthermore, nowhere in the first report does Khuba say that there was outstanding information still to be collected or investigated, whereas he had done so in his draft report of 22 October 2013.

248 Ad paragraphs 32.4 to 32.7

248.1 Although this email was never brought to our attention during the interviews, it demonstrates that Mr Sesoko was fully aware of the existence of the first report. If what is contained in this email is true, an unsigned report was sent to Mr Sesoko on that date recommending something different from what had been marked "draft" by Adv. Mosing, then Mr Khuba must have been seriously confused. I say so for the following reasons:

- 248.1.1 I have carefully read the unsigned report and note that it does not have Mr Khuba's statement. This is entirely consistent with Adv. Mosing's version.
- 248.1.2 Mr Khuba subsequently incorporated his statement. At the same time, recommended that General Sibiya be charged. It was the report containing this recommendation that was then submitted to the NPA, not the unsigned and "incomplete" draft allegedly shared with Mr Sesoko.
- 248.1.3 If it is true that Mr Khuba sent a report to Mr Sesoko on 23 January 2014 in which he recommended that General Sibiya should not be charged, he clearly, with the assistance of Mr Sesoko, changed his mind when he incorporated his statement.
- 248.2 While I agree with Mr McBride's statement that Adv. Mosing reconsidered the evidence and made recommendations, as explained in RMB.W.8, I should clarify that Adv. Mosing made his recommendation because he believed that the available evidence does not establish a crime beyond reasonable doubt on the part of General Sibiya. The basis of his recommendation was not because there was outstanding expert analysis, it was because the available cellphone records placed General Sibiya in Pretoria and not at the scene of the crime. It is disingenuous on the part of the Mr McBride to claim that there was outstanding evidence relation to General Sibiya's cellphone records. This, according to Col. Moukangwe and Adv. Mosing, was not the case.

248.3 The content of paragraph 2 of RMB.W.8 bears repetition.

"2. BACKGROUND

The investigation has now been finalised and a report from the IPID has been submitted for the purposes of considering the merits of the case. The case docket comprising of two lever arch files, together of other files containing cellular phone data and evidence obtained from a computer belonging to the DPCI, is also enclosed. [Emphasis added]

248.4 Adv. Mosing's understanding of the status of the investigation (i.e. whether it was finalised or not) was consistent with the IPID's SOP as referred to above.

249 Ad paragraphs 33 and 34

I have no knowledge of the allegations contained in these paragraph and can neither admit nor deny them.

250 Ad paragraphs 35 to 35.2

250.1 At page 25 of the first report Mr Khuba states that he assembled a team comprising Messrs Kenneth Ratshitali, L Maphetho, N Mulaudzi and T Mashaphu, all of whom were investigators from the Limpopo Provincial Office. He stated (at paragraph 3 at page 25) that, he "took over the case for further investigation in terms of section 206(6) of the Constitution".

Mr Khuba personally took all the statements that formed part of his investigation and did not include the very team of Limpopo investigators he had assembled. This, he explained, was to ensure that he gathers and interrogates the facts himself.

250.2 I do not agree with Mr McBride's contention that the involvement of Crime Intelligence Gathering ("CIG") had undermined the independence of IPID. I further do not believe that the involvement of CIG, in particular Col. Moukangwe in the investigation compromised the integrity of the investigation. It is common cause that prior to Mr Khuba conducting any investigations into the Rendition, there were two investigations into the Rendition that had already been undertaken by:

250.2.1 the DPCI; and 250.2.2 by the Civilian Secretariat.

250.3 It is common knowledge that the Rendition docket was handed to IPID by the Secretary for the Police Service appointed in terms of section 7(1) of the CSPA, Ms Jennifer Irish-Qhobosheana. The Rendition docket contained statement prepared and obtained by Col. Moukangwe. In terms of the Act and CSPA there must be cooperation between IPID and the Civilian Secretariat due to the mandate of these bodies. I do not intend to burden this affidavit with the areas or issues on which these bodies are required to co-operate; they are adequately set out in the IPID Act and CSPA Act.

- 250.4 Having said that, IPID is equally free to foster co-operation and conclude memoranda of agreement with other statutory bodies such as the NPA.
- 250.5 Section 15 of the IPID Act establishes a consultative forum comprising the Executive Director and the Secretary.³⁶ In terms of section 16(2) the Executive Director or Secretary, in consultation with one another, may invite any person not mentioned in subsection (1) to a meeting of the forum. My understanding of these provisions is that anyone including a member of CIG may be invited to the meetings between the Executive Director and the Secretary. Of course if the said person will assist the forum in achieving its objectives as set out in section 17 of the IPID Act.
- 250.6 Mr McBride has not been able to demonstrate to the Commission how or in what way Colonel Moukangwe's involvement in the investigation compromised the integrity of the investigation or the independence of IPID. All he has done is to attack CIG and claim improper interference without a shred of evidence. The very so called second report he signed is a product of information obtained with the assistance of CIG.
- 250.7 The involvement and role of Col. Moukangwe in the investigation was explained by Mr Khuba during an interview with Werksmans on 26 March 2015. Mr Khuba explained how supportive Col. Moukangwe was during the investigation.

³⁶ Section 16 of the Act.

"KHUBA: She was an Acting Executive Director after FRANCOIS BEUKMAN resigned. She indicated that I had to join hands with COLONEL MOUKANGWE, but the instruction was when you join hands with COLONEL MOUKANGWE, MOUKANGWE had to remain a dark figure, he must not be seen. The reason for that was not explained much, but I gathered from him, when I met with him, that was when he started to tell me the reason. My first meeting with him was at EMPEROR'S PALACE. When I met him, he explained how he conducted the investigation: that he had to take statements at night, go to the office, type them at night and go back to the witnesses to get them to sign the statements. So that part was explained to me precisely. He also gave me the names of two advocates. One is ADVOCATE MOSING, the other is ADVOCATE BILLY MOELETSI. I was also provided with these advocates' contact numbers - their cell numbers. I did contact them, but at that time I had not yet started with the actual investigation. I was also given the contact numbers of the girlfriend of one of the victims who was allegedly killed in ZIMBABWE. I took the details. I was briefed on the entire evidence available, as well as the information that MOUKANGWE knew at that time." [Pages 3 to 4 of the transcript, annexure

"SJ23"]

And later:

"Apart from that, I then started to map out the way in which I was going to oppose the case. I did that alone. COLONEL MOUKANGWE was very, very supportive. I would inform him of what I was going to do, I would inform him of what I was thinking, and I need to indicate that I have never investigated a hard case like the Rendition case. There was no cooperation from anyone."

250.9 In light of the above statements made by Khuba, it cannot be true that the involvement of CIG undermined the independence of the IPID.

251.1 I deny the allegations contained in this paragraph.

251.2 Mr McBride has given contradictory accounts regarding the circumstances in which the two reports came into existence. In the founding affidavit to his high court application, he claimed that he regarded the first report as being "preliminary draft" and therefore subject to changes.

251.3 At page 10 (paragraph 24.2) of his affidavit, Mr McBride stated that:

251.4 At page 22 (paragraph 51.2) of his affidavit, Mr McBride stated:

"I want to make it abundantly clear that the final report was the product of a thorough investigation process which included taking into account all the evidence gathered through the IPID investigation and making reasonable recommendations on the basis thereof".

252 On page 23, at paragraph 51.5 of his affidavit (annexure "SJ31"), Mr McBride stated that:

"The preliminary draft of the IPID Investigation Report was also still subject to consideration and review by Sesoko and myself".

252.1 Yet, from the transcript of his interview with Werksmans, he claimed he never knew of the January 2014 report at all.

"MR JULY: The one which was submitted by KHUBA on 22 January.

MR McBRIDE: The one that has KHUBA's signature on it?

MR JULY: Yes.

MR McBRIDE: I had never seen that report until this hullabaloo started here.

MR JULY: In the same breath then ...

MR McBRIDE: No, I had never seen that report. ["SJ22" page 21 line 22 to 25 and page 22 line 1 to 3]

252.2 As can be distilled from the above passages of the founding affidavit, it is apparent that Mr McBride misled Werksmans regarding his knowledge of the first report. He continues to do in his testimony before the commission.

252.3 Although there were progress reports submitted to the NPA from time to time, with the last progress being submitted on or about on 22 October 2013, the first report was not a progress report. To suggest it was being untruthful to the commission as this is contradicted by Mr Khuba, Col. Moukangwe and Adv. Mosing who were involved in the preparation and submission of the first report. I attach a copy of the 22 October 2013 report as annexure "SJ36". This in my view is amounts to a progress report.

252.4 In paragraph 5.6 of the report of 22 October 2013 Mr Khuba made it clear that there were "outstanding matters", which he clearly identified as such. Adv. Mosing considered the draft report and advised Mr Khuba that there was a need to conduct further investigation on the case, which included obtaining an expert analysis of their cell phones, vehicle tracking information and warning statements of Generals Dramat and Sibiya and Col. Maluleka. This was confirmed in an internal memorandum prepared by Adv. Mosing and addressed to Advocates Nxasana and Jiba dated 12 November 2013. Mr Nxasana was, at the time, the National Director of Public Prosecutions. Ms Jiba was the Deputy National Director of Public Prosecutions. I have not been able to determine whether or not there was a response to this memorandum of Adv. Mosing.

252.5 Mr Khuba subsequently finalised his report before submitting it. The finalised report later became what is referred therein as the first report. This was a final report. Importantly, it excluded the reference in paragraph 5.6 of the earlier report to any "outstanding matters".

252.6 There was no preliminary report submitted by Mr Khuba to the NPA, either with the assistance of Mr Sesoko or on his own and, as explained above, Mr McBride is fully aware of this. To add, Mr McBride's careless use of concepts, under oath, such as the first report being a 'preliminary draft' is calculated to mislead. The first report submitted by Mr Khuba to the NPA is far from being a preliminary report within the SOP.

252.7 The lies of Messrs Khuba, Sesoko and McBride are further exposed by the fact that in February 2014, before Mr McBride joined IPID, Messrs Khuba and Sesoko attended at the NPA demanding that warrants of arrest be issued against Generals Dramat and Sibiya and sought to understand why the NPA was dragging its feet in the matter. Mr Sesosk also confirmed during his interview with Werksmans that he provided Mr McBride a hard copy of the first report. I find it hard to believe that Mr McBride was not informed or advised of this given his later instruction to Messrs Khuba and Angus to collect the docket from the NPA offices.

253.1 I disagree with McBride's contention that Sesoko was Khuba's "case supervisor". In his interviews with Werksmans on 26 March and 13 April 2015 respectively, Mr Khuba informed us that Mr Sesoko was not his supervisor and that they in fact occupied the same rank within IPID. [Page 12, line 10 of the transcript, annexure "SJ23" (26/03/2015) or "SJ24" if it is 13/04/2015 page 12 line 1 to 14.]

253.2 Mr Sesoko's alleged prosecutorial background did not make him Mr Khuba's supervisor. I am advised that Ms Mbeki will come and testify before this Commission that she never instructed Mr Khuba not to work with Mr Sesoko in the investigation. She will state that she in fact advised Mr Khuba to work with Mr Sesoko, but that he (Mr Sesoko) was not to be at the forefront of the investigation as he had a criminal record, which she believed might compromise the investigation. She wanted Mr Khuba to use Mr Sesoko only as a sounding board. This notwithstanding, I reiterate that according to the Werksmans investigation, Mr Sesoko was never excluded from the investigation.

254.1 I do not have personal knowledge of what was discussed in the meeting between Messrs Khuba, McBride and Sesoko. However, what I do know is that Mr McBride instructed Messrs Khuba and Angus to attend at the NPA and collect the docket. The docket was thus collected from the NPA at the behest and on the instruction of Mr McBride. Mr Angus indicated in his interview with Werksmans on 31 March 2015 that Mr McBride instructed him to check whether Mr Khuba had conducted the investigation correctly. ("SJ20" page 12)

254.2 It is, with respect, inconceivable that Mr Angus, who had nothing to do with the Rendition investigation, would of his own accord (and without any instruction from Mr McBride) collect the docket from the NPA.

255 Ad paragraphs 36 to 37

255.1 The information note sent to the Minister was patently misleading as a final report (the first report) with recommendations had already been submitted to the NPA together with the docket Mr McBride had instructed Messrs Khuba and Angus to collect from the NPA. The entire narrative now spread by Messrs McBride, Khuba and Sesoko that they were not sure whether the first report was part of the docket they collected, is false. Mr McBride knows that an IPID investigator would not submit dockets without a report containing recommendations to the NPA. Contrary to what Mr McBride wants the commission to believe, he knew at the time and knows today that the docket went hand in hand with the report with recommendations. I reiterate that this is a legislative requirement.

255.2 During our interview with Mr Khuba on 13 April 2015 he mentioned that if there was one person who read the first report, it was McBride, who had a number of questions. Mr Khuba stated the following:

"That is a very difficult question. But I need to say as the investigating officer I was over-trusting with the report. Because when SESOKO asked for the report, I never withheld the report, I emailed it to him. When we were working on the report I used his computer. Whether he showed McBRIDE - but I remember McBRIDE, if there is one person who read that report extensively it was McBRIDE. He read it extensively. Then the progress which I was doing on the report itself, I was only adding stuff. He was sitting next to me. I was adding things, I was doing things, but whether that part was cut out by him or by me, I will not say, but I don't remember removing it." [Page 9 of the transcript, annexure "SJ24"]

255.3 It was the view of Werksmans that Mr McBride knew of the report dated 22 January 2014 submitted to the NPA and did not like the recommendations made by Mr Khuba. He then sought the informal views of professionals, such as Mr Angus, on whether Mr Khuba had conducted the investigation correctly. This is the only reason McBride decided to have the report "re-done".

256 Ad paragraphs 38.1 to 38.3

256.1 I deny that Mr McBride was unaware of the existence of the first report when he participated in the drafting of the second report.

256.2 I note the contents of paragraph 38.1 to 38.2.

256.3 I deny that Mr McBride was not advised of the fact that the first report had been submitted to the NPA. Mr McBride knew that the report was submitted to the NPA as he instructed and authorised Mr Khuba and Angus to attend to collect the docket from the NPA offices. It is inconceivable that Mr McBride would not know that once an IPID docket is submitted the NPA it is submitted together with a report with recommendations. On 23 April 2015, during his interview with us, Mr Khuba stated the first report was part of the docket collected at the NPA on 7 March 2014 and the it was common sense the first report had been removed by Mr McBride when he submitted the docket together with the second report. I refer to the relevant passages of the transcript herein below.

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: So the question is what did you do with that report which was attached to the docket?

MR KHUBA: To tell you that as fact, I cannot remember. I know that when we send dockets the report is part of "B". That docket, Section B was a separate lever arch file, because it had a lot of things talking about the Extradition Act, and what what. It was a thick thing, but it had that part. When we did a review, the concentration on a (?), which is a separate lever arch file. That file had another sub lever arch file, which I think is seven or eight. Whether they removed that part or kept that part, I do not know. But my common sense is that they would have removed it, because they wouldn't send it with it.

MR JULY: So who took the docket to the NDPP then? ["SJ31" page 22 line 1 to 24]

256.4 I submit that Mr McBride was aware of the fact that the first report had been submitted to the NPA. Mr McBride knows that a docket is submitted to the NPA together with a report containing recommendations to the NPA. Mr McBride had done so when he submitted the second report to the NPA.

257.1 I deny that Mr McBride only became aware of the fact that the first report was submitted to the NPA during January 2015.

257.2 As stated above, the first report was part of the docket collected from the NPA and had been removed by Mr McBride and Sesoko when he submitted the second report together with the docket. I have also referred to relevant pages and paragraphs in Mr McBride's affidavit in the High Court case wherein he admitted to have read the evidence in the docket as well as the first report, which he considered preliminary.

258.1 I have no knowledge of whether Mr Khuba advised Mr McBride that he did not consider the report submitted to the NPA to be a final report. Mr McBride's account of events is inconsistent with what he stated in his affidavit in High Court regarding his knowledge of the first report. Mr McBride was aware of the first report the moment he joined the IPID. In the process of drafting the second report he found "the provisional recommendations made in the first report unsustainable on the evidence and accordingly were not included in the final investigation report (of 18 March 2014)." As such it is not true that Mr McBride "questioned" Mr Khuba about the first report in January 2015. As I have already pointed out above, Mr Khuba informed Werksmans that the report submitted to the NPA on 22 January 2014 was a final report with recommendations. Between Mr McBride and Mr Khuba either or both are lying and in the process making a mockery of the work this Commission was tasked to investigate.

258.2 Messrs Khuba's and McBride's opinions on what constitutes of a completed investigation are inconsistent with the IPID Act,³⁷ the IPID Regulations³⁸ and IPID's SOP.

³⁷ Section 21(d);
³⁸ Regulation 4(9).

259 Ad paragraphs 38.6 and 38.7

I have no knowledge of the content of these paragraphs and therefore, I can neither deny nor admit.

260 Ad paragraph 38.8

260.1 This update to the Minister was misleading. It was misleading to record that a thorough analysis of all the evidence had been conducted.

260.2 I have read the report prepared by the trio dated 18 March 2014. It was from a thorough analysis. The exercise conducted by the trio consisted of a deletion of material information relating to Generals Dramat and Sibiya which was properly recorded in the report originally submitted to the NPA. I still maintain that there was no such thorough analysis conducted by the trio, instead of conducting an analysis they deleted crucial information.

261 Ad paragraphs 38.9 to 40

261.1 The contents of these paragraphs are denied.

261.2 I deny that Adv. Mosing advised Mr Khuba to get the docket from the South Gauteng DPP's office. On a careful reading of RMBW15 it is apparent that the email containing General Sibiya's response to questions sent by IPID, was forwarded to Mr Khuba by Mr Sesoko on 27 February 2014. The body of the email is blank. On 28 February 2014, Mr Khuba forwarded the same email to Adv. Mosing with no message in the body of the email. Importantly, nowhere in this email did Mr Khuba express a desire to "collect", remove or "get" the docket from the NPA offices.

261.3 Adv. Mosing responded to Khuba's email as follows:

"Dear Mr Khuba in light of the fact the matter has been referred to the DPP of South Gauteng for decision, you are requested to file this evidence in the docket which is presently with the DPP SG and in future forward additional evidence or other matter directly with him. Kind regards"

261.4 Nowhere in the aforesaid response did Adv. Mosing advise Mr Khuba to get or collect the docket from the DPP of South Gauteng. To the contrary, Adv. Mosing advised Mr Khuba to file the evidence in the docket and in future forward additional evidence directly to the DPP for South Gauteng. On this basis alone Mr McBride's account of events cannot be true.

261.5 In his interview with Werksmans on 26 March 2015 Mr Khuba stated that he had contacted the NPA on 28 February 2014 and advised them that he wished to attach further information to the docket. The information that he needed to add, was inconsequential and, in any event, did not require him to remove the docket. He could quite easily have placed such information on the docket without having to remove it.

"MR KHUBA: The important part was when all this new evidence had been gathered I then sent an email, and the email is dated 28 February 2014. In that email I requested ADVOCATE MOSENG, to say: There is statement that has been brought by SIBIYA, and I would want to attach it. In other words, I wanted to attach the evidence that I had, and everything, because he now had the original docket..." ["SJ23" page 42 line to 25]

261.6 Further, at his interview on 23 April 2015 Mr Khuba stated that:

"MR JULY: According to you was there any new evidence that needed to be attached?"

MR KHUBA: You know, I think that is subject to interpretation. To tell you we needed the docket to be collected is another issue. What I did, after we had collected the docket – I even talked to McBRIDE and said: Listen, McBRIDE - no, in fact, the worst situation was that I couldn't talk to McBRIDE. I still remember now, I spoke to SESOKO, and said: Why can't I attach all these things and return the docket?" ["SJ31" page 12 line 17 to page 13 line 3]

261.7 However, Mr McBride had subsequently, upon taking up employment with IPID, instructed Messrs Khuba and Angus to attend at the NPA to collect the docket. The fact that Mr Khuba had initially enquired about the docket, does not exclude the possibility that no instruction was issued to him and Mr Angus to attend to the collection of the docket.

261.8 During our interview with Mr Khuba on 23 April 2015, he told us the following:

"MR KHUBA: Yes, those statements and whatever was not there, attaching them. At that time I had not yet made copies, and I decided to make copies of another duplicate report, because he said to me: Whatever you have I want in my office - this is McBRIDE. Copies - even copies of the docket. So I said: Okay, that's fine. I went and I gave him a copy, but my interpretation was that it was done mainly for security reasons. But as an investigator I did not have a single thing, except I had the external hard drive. That external hard drive only had the expert report, so it was not part of the documents and I just kept it. Then when we collected the docket - the fact that he signed the docket as true - who was carrying? I was the carrying boy that day. I was carrying the docket all the time, and whatever, but I think he assisted me with other files. We went back to the car and drove, and while we were driving, I reminded..." ["SJ31" page number 13 lines 5 to 25]

261.9 Later, he stated:

"He gave me everything, and then we packed it, and we went straight to McBRIDE. I think he wanted the one report. We went and briefed him, while we were having this ...

Khuba: Yes. When we briefed him, I never opened my mouth. It was ANGUS who was talking." ["SJ31" page14 line 3 to 17]

261.10 It is reasonable to infer from the above extract from the transcript and the circumstances under which Mr Angus became involved in the Rendition investigation (albeit on a very limited scale), that Messrs Khuba and Angus attended at the NPA to collect the docket on the instructions of McBride. This is an objective conclusion.

261.11 Importantly at paragraph 50.3 of his replying affidavit attached to the supplementary statement as annexure RMB.W.1, McBride says that Khuba advised him that the docket was with the NPA and that he intended to retrieve it and update the evidence, and sought McBride's consent. He goes on to say that he authorised Khuba to do so. This goes to show that McBride on his own version sanctioned the retrieval or collection of the docket. As already stated elsewhere in this affidavit, a docket submitted to the NPA is submitted in terms of the Act and Regulations, McBride must surely have appreciated this fundamental principle at the IPID.

262 Ad paragraphs 41

262.1 The allegations contained in this paragraph are denied.

262.2 Mr McBride is not telling the truth when he claims to have never been given the docket on the Renditions investigation prior to signing the second report. This claim by Mr McBride is contradicted by Mr Khuba during his interview with Werksmans on 23 April 2015 when he stated the following:

“MR KHUBA: Yes, those statements and whatever was not there, attaching them. At that time I had not yet made copies, and I decided to make copies of another duplicate report, because he said to me: Whatever you have I want in my office - this is McBRIDE. Copies - even copies of the docket. So I said: Okay, that's fine. I went and I gave him a copy, but my interpretation was that it was done mainly for security reasons...” [Emphasis added]
[“SJ31” page 13 line 5 to 14]

262.3 This extract shows the McBride was given all the information regarding the Rendition investigation including the docket.

262.4 Furthermore, Mr McBride's recollection is further contradicted by his own evidence under oath contained in the affidavit filed in support of his case before the High Court. Wherein he stated at page 22 (paragraph 51.2)

262.5 I submit that this statement could not have been made by a person who did not have regard to the evidence on the docket.

263 Ad paragraph 42

The contents of this paragraph are denied. Mr McBride participated in the so called analysis of evidence and drafting of the second report.

264 Ad paragraph 43 to 45

Inasmuch I do not have personal knowledge of what Mr McBride says in these paragraphs, Mr McBride confirms that he was involved in the preparation of the second report. He may not have personally affected his input into the second report but he certainly made such input which was incorporated by Khuba and Sesoko.

265 Ad paragraph 46

265.1 I disagree with Mr McBride's claim that the only input he had into the report dated 18 March 2014 related to grammatical changes and that he did not see the report submitted to the NPA on or about 22 January 2014. This version is contradicted by Mr Khuba who stated that Mr McBride had in fact seen the soft copy of the report of 22 January 2014. Being a soft copy, it was unsigned. Mr Khuba stated that Mr McBride had certainly read the first report which he (Mr Khuba) had shared with Mr Sesoko. Mr Khuba stated that it was obvious to him from discussions with Mr McBride that the latter had read the report.

265.2 Werksmans considered and investigated the so-called grammatical changes allegedly made by Mr McBride manually on the report he was working on (a copy of which was never shared with Werksmans). It is clear that no grammatical changes that were present in the first report were corrected in the second report. In fact, the only differences between the two reports consisted of the deletion of information implicating Generals Dramat and Sibiya and the alteration to reflect a different recommendation. I invite McBride to take this Commission into his confidence and share the hard copy on which he made the grammatical changes or to demonstrate what grammatical changes were made.

266.1 This is an admission on the part of Mr McBride that he knew of the first report.

266.2 On his own version Mr McBride discussed his concern about the leaking of the January 2014 report with the NDPP. According to Mr McBride as at 6 March 2014 he was aware of the existence of the report dated 22 January 2014 which, so he says, had been leaked by the offices of the NPA.

267 Ad paragraph 48

267.1 I disagree with Mr McBride when he says that there was no prima facie case against the Generals, as concluded by Mr Khuba in the first report.

267.2 The NPA, independently of Mr Khuba's recommendations, took its own prosecutorial decision and decided to charge the Generals Dramat and Sibiya criminally.

268 Ad paragraph 49

I maintain that McBride is part of the IPID employees who changed the IPID to change earlier recommendations regarding the criminal charges against General Sibiya and Dramat.

269 Ad paragraph 50

269.1 I disagree with Mr McBride's contention.

269.2 Firstly, all of the events that Mr McBride challenges occurred before he had commenced employment with IPID. He has repeatedly claimed that he knows or knew nothing about reports and dockets submitted to the NPA before 3 March 2014. The enduring question has always been how could Mr McBride contradict evidence given by individuals who were involved in the Rendition investigation prior to him joining IPID. For example, other than bare denials and a baseless dismissal of the evidence of Adv. Mosing, Mr Khuba and Col. Moukangwe, Mr McBride has made no effort to explain why their evidence, considered together with the IPID Act and IPID Regulations should be disbelieved. The most disconcerting aspect of his bare denials is that they are made by a person who was not even employed by IPID at the time the 22 January 2014 report was prepared. This person further accuses everyone who disagreed with him, having been captured or interfering with the independence of IPID.

270 Ad paragraph 51

270.1 I deny that the first report was not part of the docket collected by Messrs Khuba and Angus. This is not what Mr Khuba said during the interview. In fact, Mr Khuba agreed that the first report was included in the docket collected by him and Mr Angus from Advocate Van Zyl.

270.2 Mr McBride's version that the first report was not part of the docket uplifted and collected from the NPA, in any event, defies logic. Why would anybody within the NPA remove a report with recommendations submitted with the docket in terms of the Act and Regulations? I reiterate that a docket submitted by an investigator, Provincial Head or Executive Director, is accompanied by a report with recommendations.

270.3 For the sake of completeness and to prevent Mr McBride from continuing to make misleading references to the transcript of the interview held with Khuba on 13 April 2015, I quote from the interview:

"MR JULY: Before VAN ZYL could even read the documents, you and ANGUS come and collect them, and the report dated 22 January was part of that docket?

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: So the question is what did you do with that report which was attached to the docket?

MR KHUBA: To tell you that as fact, I cannot remember. I know that when we send dockets the report is part of "B". That docket, Section B was a separate lever arch file, because it had a lot of things talking about the Extradition Act, and what, what. It was a thick thing, but it had that part. When we did a review, the concentration on a (?), which is a separate lever arch file. That file had another sub lever arch file, which I think is seven or eight. Whether they [i.e. Sesoko and McBride] removed that part [i.e. the first report] or kept that part, I do not know. But my common sense is that they would have removed it [i.e. the first report], because they wouldn't send it [i.e. the first report] with it [i.e. the docket].

MR JULY: So who took the docket to the NDPP then?

MR KHUBA: My role ended when I signed that report, in the absence of McBRIDE but in the presence of SESOKO. When they took that docket - in fact when it was handed in, I was told that I must not keep anything, and it was indicated precisely that nothing will be in SESOKO's office, but in McBRIDE's office. In fact, when the Minister started this issue of referencing or requesting the copies of the docket ..." [Emphasis added]

270.4 It is clear from the above extract that Mr Khuba agreed that the first report was part of the docket collected from Advocate Van Zyl. When Mr Khuba says it was common sense that the first report was removed, he refers to Messrs McBride and Sesoko having removed the said first report when they submitted the second report with the docket to the NDPP. This is apparent from my next question regarding who took the docket to the NDPP, and Mr Khuba's subsequent response.

270.5 It is clear from the transcript that Mr Khuba does not suggest that Adv. Van Zyl removed the first report from the docket he and Mr Angus collected.

271 Ad paragraph 52

The allegations contained in this paragraph are denied.

272 Ad paragraphs 53 to 54

272.1 I disagree with Mr McBride's claim that there was material evidence still outstanding and other evidence which remained outstanding.

272.2 I have already dealt with the issue of the warning statements and the analysis of the cell phone records at elsewhere in this affidavit, I repeat what is stated there.

272.3 Mr McBride deliberately misinterprets Adv. Mosing's email to Mr Khuba. Adv. Mosing says nothing more in his email than that Mr Khuba should file the said evidence in the docket. This with respect, does not and cannot be interpreted to mean he should collect or uplift the docket from the NPA. It simply means place the said evidence into the docket which was with DPP Gauteng.

273 Ad paragraph 55

273.1 Mr McBride's obsession with the notion of material outstanding information is disconcerting. He is so blinded by the narrative that there was material information outstanding that he ignores un-contradicted evidence that during February 2014, Mr Khuba, Col. Moukangwe and Mr Sesoko went to the NPA offices demanding warrants of arrest to be issued against Generals Dramat and Sibiya. Mr McBride obviously read the transcripts of the interviews held with Mr Khuba and would be aware of what Mr Khuba stated in his interview with Werksmans.

273.2 It may be mentioned that in seeking such warrants of arrest, they must have been satisfied that there was prima facie evidence of criminal responsibility. Repeating this narrative will never elevate it to the truth.

274.1 This, with respect, is an extremely reckless and unsubstantiated claim by Mr McBride.

274.2 I have read media reports that General Dramat and Minister Nhleko settled their employment dispute on the basis that General Dramat agreed to early retirement. If General Dramat was aggrieved by the action taken by the Minister, he had legal remedies available to him. I attach marked "SJ37" a copy of an article from the Mail & Guardian newspaper to support this. I do not state that this was, necessarily, the media report I read at the time. I simply do not recall.

274.3 Werksmans is a reputable law firm with a track record that speaks for itself. None of the professionals who conducted the investigation owe any allegiance to the Minister. We are all officers of the Court and we all acted professionally at all times. The conclusions reached by Werksmans in its report are based on the facts that were placed before us at the time and the terms of reference given to Werksmans. This is yet another unfortunate allegation made by McBride without providing proof.

274.4 Mr McBride's understanding of interference is seriously concerning and shocking. To him everything the Minister did at IPID amounts to interference. Even requesting an employee of IPID to cooperate with an investigation commissioned by the Minister apparently amounts to interference. It bears mentioning that Mr McBride through his attorney, Mr Jac Marais, refused Mr Khuba permission to consult with Werksmans without any cogent reason. In fact, Mr McBride was engaging in conduct aimed at deliberately frustrating the investigation commissioned by the Minister to whom he was accountable.

275.1 Mr McBride is again deliberately misleading the commission. He knows very well that the report dated 22 October 2013, was a progress report, contained no recommendations, was not signed and was not submitted with a docket.

275.2 On the other hand, the first report was submitted as a final report with recommendations for action to be taken by the NPA.

275.3 The deletions were captured and explained in section B of the Werksmans report, I beg leave to incorporate same herein by reference.

276 Ad paragraph 70

276.1 I have elsewhere in this affidavit addressed the issue regarding my unwillingness to testify in the criminal matter.

276.2 I also addressed this issue in my letter attached to the supplementary statement marked as RMB.W.25. I stand by the views recorded and expressed in the said letter and record that my refusal to testify has nothing to do with state capture. I wish to state that it is not uncommon for private investigative bodies or actors to, in the course of their investigations, recommend criminal action where there is evidence of the commission of a crime. Even this commission can and might at some stage recommend criminal action against those it believes have committed crime. It would be ridiculous to expect the chairperson or any of the evidence leaders to become witnesses in those criminal proceedings simply because of their role in establishing a prima facie case of criminal conduct and referring such a case to law enforcement agencies.

277 Ad paragraph 71

277.1 As lead investigator during the Werksmans investigation and as one of the authors of the report, I still stand by the conclusions arrived at in the report.

277.2 It really does not concern me how the Minister utilised the Werksmans report.

277.3 What I can say is that the investigation was done and the report compiled properly. We were dealing with extremely untruthful senior managers of IPID. It is important to note that Mr Khuba simply lacks integrity his as his version changes with conditions and circumstances. At least Messrs Sesoko and McBride have been consistent in their version, although they are patently false. Messrs Khuba and Sesoko were dismissed because they were found guilty in disciplinary hearings constituted by independent chairpersons. To date Mr McBride has avoided and evaded any disciplinary process against him. He never explained what the constitutional court [2016 (11) BCLR 1398 (CC)] referred to as "the glaring discrepancies in the two reports".

- 277.4 At his disciplinary hearing, Mr Khuba pleaded guilty to a charge of dishonesty and defeating the ends of justice. By pleading guilty he in fact admitted that the first investigation report was the final report.
- 277.5 When Mr Khuba pleaded guilty to the charges preferred against him, he was legally represented. He did so freely and voluntarily.
- 277.6 A settlement agreement in respect of sanction ONLY was entered into between IPID and Mr Khuba. In terms of the settlement agreement, a lenient sanction of a final written warning was imposed despite the seriousness of the charges that he pleaded guilty to.
- 277.7 Later on, about 25 September 2015, Mr Khuba deposed to an affidavit that contradicted his guilty plea. Mr Khuba was confronted by the then Acting Executive Director of IPID Mr Kgamanyane about his new affidavit. He was given an opportunity to make written representations as to why he should not be dismissed in light of the perpetuation of his untruthfulness. Mr Kgamanyane proceeded to summarily dismiss him on the grounds of the employment relationship having irreparably broken down, after considering his written representations.
- 277.8 Subsequent to his dismissal, Mr Khuba referred an unfair dismissal dispute to the Bargaining Council and lost as his dismissal was found to have been fair. I attach hereto the arbitration award by the bargaining council as annexure "SJ38".

277.9 Mr Sesoko also tried his utmost to avoid the disciplinary enquiry chaired by Adv. Mxolisi Zondo. This enquiry provided Mr Sesoko with a golden opportunity to deal with the adverse findings made about him in the Werksmans report. I am advised that Mr Sesoko tried every trick in the book to delay and derail the disciplinary inquiry. He was eventually dismissed by the chairperson in his absence on the basis of evidence led by Adv. Mosing. I attach hereto a copy of the chairperson's findings as annexure "SJ39".

277.10 I hasten to mention that the disciplinary proceedings against Messrs McBride, Sesoko and Khuba were not handled by Werksmans and neither was I a witness in those proceedings.

278 Ad paragraph 73

278.1 To the extent that McBride suggests that he was charged by Werksmans, that is denied. Werksmans merely made recommendations to the Minister and no one else.

278.2 Nowhere in the Werksmans report is the NPA directed to charge or prosecute anybody. The prosecutorial decision was always and has always been that of the NPA.

IN THE CONSTITUTIONAL COURT OF THE REPUBLIC OF SOUTH AFRICA

Case No. CCT/3/94

In the matter of:

THE STATE versus

T MAKWANYANE AND M MCHUNU

Heard on:

15 February to 17 February 1995

Delivered on:

6 June 1995

JUDGMENT

- [1] CHASKALSON P: The two accused in this matter were convicted in the Witwatersrand Local Division of the Supreme Court on four counts of murder, one count of attempted murder and one count of robbery with aggravating circumstances. They were sentenced to death on each of the counts of murder and to long terms of imprisonment on the other counts. They appealed to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court against the convictions and sentences. The Appellate Division dismissed the appeals against the convictions and came to the conclusion that the circumstances of the murders were such that the accused should receive the heaviest sentence permissible according to law.
- [2] Section 277(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act No. 51 of 1977 prescribes that the death penalty is a competent sentence for murder. Counsel for the accused was invited by the Appellate Division to consider whether this provision was consistent with the Republic of South Africa Constitution, 1993, which had come into force subsequent to the conviction and sentence by the trial court. He argued that it was not, contending that it was in conflict with the provisions of sections 9 and 11(2) of the Constitution.

SJ

- [3] The Appellate Division dismissed the appeals against the sentences on the counts of attempted murder and robbery, but postponed the further hearing of the appeals against the death sentence until the constitutional issues are decided by this Court. See: S v Makwanyane en 'n Ander 1994 (3) SA 868 (A). Two issues were raised: the constitutionality of section 277(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act, and the implications of section 241(8) of the Constitution. Although there was no formal reference of these issues to this Court in terms of section 102(6) of the Constitution, that was implicit in the judgment of the Appellate Division, and was treated as such by the parties.
- [4] The trial was concluded before the 1993 Constitution came into force, and so the question of the constitutionality of the death sentence did not arise at the trial. Because evidence which might possibly be relevant to that issue would not have been led, we asked counsel appearing before this Court to consider whether evidence, other than undisputed information placed before us in argument, would be relevant to the determination of the question referred to us by the Appellate Division. Apart from the issue of public opinion, with which I will deal later in this judgment, counsel were not able to point to specific material that had not already been placed before us which might be relevant to the decision on the constitutional issues raised in this case. I am satisfied that no good purpose would be served by referring the case back to the trial court for the hearing of further evidence and that we should deal with the matter on the basis of the information and arguments that have been presented to us.
- [5] It would no doubt have been better if the framers of the Constitution had stated specifically, either that the death sentence is not a competent penalty, or that it is permissible in circumstances sanctioned by law. This, however, was not done and it has been left to this Court to decide whether the penalty is consistent with the provisions of the Constitution. That is the extent and limit of the Court's power in this case.

[6] No executions have taken place in South Africa since 1989.¹ There are apparently over 300 persons, and possibly as many as 400 if persons sentenced in the former Transkei, Bophuthatswana and Venda are taken into account, who have been sentenced to death by the Courts and who are on death row waiting for this issue to be resolved. Some of these convictions date back to 1988, and approximately half of the persons on death row were sentenced more than two years ago.² This is an intolerable situation and it is essential that it be resolved one way or another without further delay.³

The Relevant Provisions of the Constitution

[7] The Constitution

¹ The last execution in South Africa occurred on 14 November 1989. See infra note 26.

² This information was contained in the written argument filed on behalf of the South African Government and was not disputed.

... provides a historic bridge between the past of a deeply divided society characterised by strife, conflict, untold suffering and injustice, and a future founded on the recognition of human rights, democracy and peaceful co-existence and development opportunities for all South Africans, irrespective of colour, race, class, belief or sex.⁴

It is a transitional constitution but one which itself establishes a new order in South Africa; an order in which human rights and democracy are entrenched and in which the Constitution:

... shall be the supreme law of the Republic and any law or act inconsistent with its provisions shall, unless otherwise provided expressly or by necessary implication in this Constitution, be of no force and effect to the extent of the inconsistency.⁵

- [8] Chapter Three of the Constitution sets out the fundamental rights to which every person is entitled under the Constitution and also contains provisions dealing with the way in which the Chapter is to be interpreted by the Courts. It does not deal specifically with the death penalty, but in section 11(2), it prohibits "cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment." There is no definition of what is to be regarded as "cruel, inhuman or degrading" and we therefore have to give meaning to these words ourselves.

⁴ These words are taken from the first paragraph of the provision on National Unity and Reconciliation with which the Constitution concludes. Section 232(4) provides that for the purposes of interpreting the Constitution, this provision shall be deemed to be part of the substance of the Constitution, and shall not have a lesser status than any other provision of the Constitution.

⁵ Section 4(1) of the Constitution.

[9] In S v Zuma and Two Others,⁶ this Court dealt with the approach to be adopted in the interpretation of the fundamental rights enshrined in Chapter Three of the Constitution. It gave its approval to an approach which, whilst paying due regard to the language that has been used, is "generous" and "purposive" and gives expression to the underlying values of the Constitution. Kentridge AJ, who delivered the judgment of the Court, referred with approval⁷ to the following passage in the Canadian case of R v Big M Drug Mart Ltd:

The meaning of a right or freedom guaranteed by the Charter was to be ascertained by an analysis of the purpose of such a guarantee; it was to be understood, in other words, in the light of the interests it was meant to protect.

In my view this analysis is to be undertaken, and the purpose of the right or freedom in question is to be sought by reference to the character and larger objects of the Charter itself, to the language chosen to articulate the specific right or freedom, to the historical origins of the concept enshrined, and where applicable, to the meaning and purpose of the other specific rights and freedoms with which it is associated within the text of the Charter. The interpretation should be...a generous rather than legalistic one, aimed at fulfilling the purpose of a guarantee and securing for individuals the full benefit of the Charter's protection.⁸

[10] Without seeking in any way to qualify anything that was said in Zuma's case, I need say no more in this judgment than that section 11(2) of the Constitution must not be construed in isolation, but in its context, which includes the history and background to the adoption of the Constitution, other provisions of the Constitution itself and, in particular, the provisions of Chapter Three of which it is part.⁹ It must also be construed in a way which secures for "individuals the full measure" of its protection.¹⁰ Rights with which section 11(2) is associated in Chapter Three of the Constitution, and which are of particular importance to a decision on the constitutionality of the death penalty are included in section 9, "every person shall have the right to life", section 10, "every person shall have the right to respect for and protection of his or her dignity", and section 8, "every person shall have the right to equality before the law and to equal protection of the law." Punishment must meet the requirements of sections 8, 9 and 10; and this is so, whether these sections are treated as giving meaning to Section 11(2) or as prescribing separate and independent standards with which all punishments must comply.¹¹

[11] Mr. Bizos, who represented the South African government at the hearing of this matter, informed us that the government accepts that the death penalty is a cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment and that it should be declared unconstitutional. The Attorney General of the Witwatersrand, whose office is independent of the government, took a different view, and contended that the death penalty is a necessary and acceptable form of punishment and that it is not cruel, inhuman or degrading within the meaning of section 11(2). He argued that if the framers of the Constitution had wished to make the death penalty unconstitutional they would have said so, and that their failure to do so indicated an intention to leave the issue open to be dealt with by Parliament in the ordinary way. It was for Parliament, and not the government, to decide whether or not the death penalty should be repealed, and Parliament had not taken such a decision.

Legislative History

- [12] The written argument of the South African government deals with the debate which took place in regard to the death penalty before the commencement of the constitutional negotiations. The information that it placed before us was not disputed. It was argued that this background information forms part of the context within which the Constitution should be interpreted.
- [13] Our Courts have held that it is permissible in interpreting a statute to have regard to the purpose and background of the legislation in question.

Certainly no less important than the oft repeated statement that the words and expressions used in a statute must be interpreted according to their ordinary meaning is the statement that they must be interpreted in the light of their context. But it may be useful to stress two points in relation to the application of this principle. The first is that "the context", as here used, is not limited to the language of the rest of the statute regarded as throwing light of a dictionary kind on the part to be interpreted. Often of more importance is the matter of the statute, its apparent scope and purpose, and, within limits, its background.¹²

- [14] Debates in Parliament, including statements made by Ministers responsible for legislation, and explanatory memoranda providing reasons for new bills have not been admitted as background material. It is, however, permissible to take notice of the report of a judicial commission of enquiry for the limited purpose of ascertaining "the mischief aimed at [by] the statutory enactment in question."¹³ These principles were derived in part from English law. In England, the courts have recently relaxed this exclusionary rule and have held, in *Pepper (Inspector of Taxes) v Hart*¹⁴ that, subject to the privileges of the House of Commons:

...reference to Parliamentary material should be permitted as an aid to the construction of legislation which is ambiguous or obscure or the literal meaning of which leads to an absurdity. Even in such cases references in court to Parliamentary material should only be permitted where such material clearly discloses the mischief aimed at or the legislative intention lying behind the ambiguous or obscure words.¹⁵

¹⁴ 1993 AC 593 HL (E).

¹⁵ Per Lord Browne-Wilkinson at 634D-E, who went on to say that "as at present advised I cannot foresee that any statement other than the statement of the Minister or other promoter of the Bill is likely to meet these criteria".

¹⁶ Id. at 637 F.

[16] In countries in which the constitution is similarly the supreme law, it is not unusual for the courts to have regard to the circumstances existing at the time the constitution was adopted, including the debates and writings which formed part of the process. The United States Supreme Court pays attention to such matters, and its judgments frequently contain reviews of the legislative history of the provision in question, including references to debates, and statements made, at the time the provision was adopted.¹⁷ The German Constitutional Court also has regard to such evidence.¹⁸ The Canadian Supreme Court has held such evidence to be admissible, and has referred to the historical background including the pre-confederation debates for the purpose of interpreting provisions of the Canadian Constitution, although it attaches less weight to such information than the United States Supreme Court does.¹⁹ It also has regard to ministerial statements in Parliament in regard to the purpose of particular legislation.²⁰ In India, whilst speeches of individual members of Parliament or the Convention are apparently not ordinarily admissible, the reports of drafting committees can, according to Seervai, "be a helpful extrinsic aid to construction."²¹ Seervai cites Kania CJ in *A. K. Gopalan v The State*²² for the proposition that whilst not taking "...into consideration the individual opinions of Members of Parliament or Convention to construe the meaning of a particular clause, when a question is raised whether a certain phrase or expression was up for consideration at all or not, a reference to debates may be permitted." The European Court of Human Rights and the United Nations Committee on Human Rights all allow their deliberations to be informed by travaux préparatoires.²³

[17] Our Constitution was the product of negotiations conducted at the Multi-Party Negotiating Process. The final draft adopted by the forum of the Multi-Party Negotiating Process was, with few changes, adopted by Parliament. The Multi-Party Negotiating Process was advised by technical committees, and the reports of these committees on the drafts are the equivalent of the travaux préparatoires, relied upon by the international tribunals. Such background material can provide a context for the interpretation of the Constitution and, where it serves that purpose, I can see no reason why such evidence should be excluded. The precise nature of the evidence, and the purpose for which it may be tendered, will determine the weight to be given to it.

[18] It has been said in respect of the Canadian constitution that:

²³ Article 32 of the Vienna Convention of Treaties 1969, 8 ILM 679 (1969) permits the use of travaux préparatoires for the purpose of interpreting treaties. For examples of the application of this principle, see Keith Cox v Canada, United Nations Committee on Human Rights, Communication No. 539/1993, 3 November 1993, at 19, stating:

Nonetheless, when giving a broad interpretation to any human rights treaty, care must be taken not to frustrate or circumvent the ascertainable will of the drafters. Here the rules of interpretation set forth in article 32 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties help us by allowing the use of the travaux préparatoires.

STARKE, INTRODUCTION TO INTERNATIONAL LAW 481 (10th ed., Butterworths)(1989).

...the Charter is not the product of a few individual public servants, however distinguished, but of a multiplicity of individuals who played major roles in the negotiating, drafting and adoption of the Charter. How can one say with any confidence that within this enormous multiplicity of actors ... the comments of a few federal civil servants can in any way be determinative.²⁴

Our Constitution is also the product of a multiplicity of persons, some of whom took part in the negotiations, and others who as members of Parliament enacted the final draft. The same caution is called for in respect of the comments of individual actors in the process, no matter how prominent a role they might have played.

[19] Background evidence may, however, be useful to show why particular provisions were or were not included in the Constitution. It is neither necessary nor desirable at this stage in the development of our constitutional law to express any opinion on whether it might also be relevant for other purposes, nor to attempt to lay down general principles governing the admissibility of such evidence. It is sufficient to say that where the background material is clear, is not in dispute, and is relevant to showing why particular provisions were or were not included in the Constitution, it can be taken into account by a Court in interpreting the Constitution. These conditions are satisfied in the present case.

- [20] Capital punishment was the subject of debate before and during the constitution-making process, and it is clear that the failure to deal specifically in the Constitution with this issue was not accidental.²⁵

²⁵ The brief account that follows is taken from the written submissions of the South African Government. These facts were not disputed at the hearing.

[21] In February 1990, Mr F W de Klerk, then President of the Republic of South Africa, stated in Parliament that "the death penalty had been the subject of intensive discussion in recent months", which had led to concrete proposals for reform under which the death penalty should be retained as an option to be used in "extreme cases", the judicial discretion in regard to the imposition of the death sentence should be broadened, and an automatic right of appeal allowed to those under sentence of death.²⁶ These proposals were later enacted into law by the Criminal Law Amendment Act No. 107 of 1990.

[22] In August 1991, the South African Law Commission in its Interim Report on Group and Human Rights described the imposition of the death penalty as "highly controversial".²⁷ A working paper of the Commission which preceded the Interim Report had proposed that the right to life be recognised in a bill of rights, subject to the proviso that the discretionary imposition of the sentence of death be allowed for the most serious crimes. As a result of the comments it received, the Law Commission decided to change the draft and to adopt a "Solomonic solution"²⁸ under which a constitutional court would be required to decide whether a right to life expressed in unqualified terms could be circumscribed by a limitations clause contained in a bill of rights.²⁹ "This proposed solution" it said "naturally imposes an onerous task on the Constitutional Court. But it is a task which this Court will in future have to carry out in respect of many other laws and executive and administrative acts. The Court must not shrink from this task, otherwise we shall be back to parliamentary sovereignty."³⁰

²⁶ Address to Parliament on 2 February 1990. In this speech it was said that the last execution in South Africa had been on 14 November 1989.

[23] In March 1992, the then Minister of Justice issued a press statement in which he said:

²⁹ Id. at para. 7.36.

³⁰ Id. at para. 7.37.

Opinions regarding the death penalty differ substantially. There are those who feel that the death penalty is a cruel and inhuman form of punishment. Others are of the opinion that it is in some extreme cases the community's only effective safeguard against violent crime and that it gives effect in such cases to the retributive and deterrent purposes of punishment.³¹

He went on to say that policy in regard to the death penalty might be settled during negotiations on the terms of a Bill of Fundamental Rights, and that pending the outcome of such negotiations, execution of death sentences which had not been commuted, would be suspended. He concluded his statement by saying that:

The government wishes to see a speedy settlement of the future constitutionality of this form of punishment and urges interested parties to join in the discussions on a Bill of Fundamental Rights.³²

- [24] The moratorium was in respect of the carrying out, and not the imposition, of the death sentence. The death sentence remained a lawful punishment and although the courts may possibly have been influenced by the moratorium, they continued to impose it in cases in which it was considered to be the "only proper" sentence. According to the statistics provided to us by the Attorney General, 243 persons have been sentenced to death since the amendment to section 277 in 1990, and of these sentences, 143 have been confirmed by the Appellate Division.

[25] In the constitutional negotiations which followed, the issue was not resolved. Instead, the "Solomonic solution" was adopted.³³ The death sentence was, in terms, neither sanctioned nor excluded, and it was left to the Constitutional Court to decide whether the provisions of the pre-constitutional law making the death penalty a competent sentence for murder and other crimes are consistent with Chapter Three of the Constitution. If they are, the death sentence remains a competent sentence for murder

³³ This is apparent from the reports of the Technical Committee on Fundamental Rights and, in particular, the Fourth to the Seventh reports, which were brought to our attention by counsel. The reports show that the question whether the death penalty should be made an exception to the right to life was "up for debate" in the Negotiating Council. The Sixth Report contained the following references to the right to life:

Life: (1) Every person shall have the right to life. (2) A law in force at the commencement of subsection (1) relating to capital punishment or abortion shall remain in force until repealed or amended by the [legislature]. (3) No sentence of death shall be carried out until the [Constitutional Assembly] has pronounced finally on the abolition or retention of capital punishment.

[Comment: The Council still has to decide on the inclusion of this right and if so whether its formulation should admit of qualification of the type suggested above. The unqualified inclusion of the right will result in the [Constitutional Court] having to decide on the validity of any law relating to capital punishment or abortion.] Sixth Report, 15 July 1993 at 5.

In the Seventh Report the right to life was formulated in the terms in which it now appears in section 9 of the Constitution. The report contained the following comment:

[Comment: The Ad Hoc Committee appointed by the Planning Committee recommends the unqualified inclusion of this right in the Chapter. We support this proposal.] Seventh Report, 29 July 1993 at 3.

in cases in which those provisions are applicable, unless and until Parliament otherwise decides; if they are not, it is our duty to say so, and to declare such provisions to be unconstitutional.

Section 11(2) - Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Punishment

[26] Death is the most extreme form of punishment to which a convicted criminal can be subjected. Its execution is final and irrevocable. It puts an end not only to the right to life itself, but to all other personal rights which had vested in the deceased under Chapter Three of the Constitution. It leaves nothing except the memory in others of what has been and the property that passes to the deceased's heirs. In the ordinary meaning of the words, the death sentence is undoubtedly a cruel punishment. Once sentenced, the prisoner waits on death row in the company of other prisoners under sentence of death, for the processes of their appeals and the procedures for clemency to be carried out. Throughout this period, those who remain on death row are uncertain of their fate, not knowing whether they will ultimately be reprieved or taken to the gallows. Death is a cruel penalty and the legal processes which necessarily involve waiting in uncertainty for the sentence to be set aside or carried out, add to the cruelty. It is also an inhuman punishment for it "...involves, by its very nature, a denial of the executed person's humanity",³⁴ and it is degrading because it strips the convicted person of all dignity and treats him or her as an object to be eliminated by the state. The question is not, however, whether the death sentence is a cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment in the ordinary meaning of these words but whether it is a cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment within the meaning of section 11(2) of our Constitution.³⁵ The accused, who rely on section 11(2) of the ³⁴ Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 290 (1972)(Brennan, J., concurring).

³⁵ This has been the approach of certain of the justices of the United States Supreme Court. Thus, White, J., concurring, who said in Furman v. Georgia, supra note 34, at 312, that "[T]he imposition and execution of the death penalty are obviously cruel in the dictionary sense", was one of the justices who held in Gregg v Georgia, infra note 60, that capital punishment was not per se cruel and unusual punishment within the meaning of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution. Burger, CJ., dissenting, refers in Furman's case at 379, 380, and 382 to a punishment being cruel "in the constitutional sense". See also, comments by Justice Stewart, concurring in Furman's case at 309, "... the death sentences now before us are the product of a Constitution, carry the initial onus of establishing this proposition.³⁶

The Contentions of the Parties

[27] The principal arguments advanced by counsel for the accused in support of their contention that the imposition of the death penalty for murder is a "cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment," were that the death sentence is an affront to human dignity, is inconsistent with the unqualified right to life entrenched in the Constitution, cannot be corrected in case of error or enforced in a manner that is not arbitrary, and that it negates the essential content of the right to life and the other rights that flow from it. The Attorney General argued that the death penalty is recognised as a legitimate form of punishment in many parts of the world, it is a deterrent to violent crime, it meets society's need for adequate retribution for heinous offences, and it is regarded by South African society as an acceptable form of punishment. He asserted that it is, therefore, not cruel, inhuman or degrading within the meaning of section 11(2) of the Constitution. These arguments for and against the death sentence are well known and have been considered in many of the foreign authorities and cases to which we were referred. We must deal with them now in the light of the provisions of our own Constitution.

The Effect of the Disparity in the Laws Governing Capital Punishment legal system that brings them, I believe, within the very core of the... guarantee against cruel and unusual punishments...it is clear that these sentences are 'cruel' in the sense that they excessively go beyond, not in degree but in kind, the punishments that the legislatures have determined to be necessary [citing Weems v. United States, 217 U.S. 349 (1910)]...death sentences [imposed arbitrarily] are cruel and unusual in the same way that being struck by lightning is cruel and unusual".

[28] One of the anomalies of the transition initiated by the Constitution is that the Criminal Procedure Act does not apply throughout South Africa. This is a consequence of section 229 of the Constitution which provides:

Subject to this Constitution, all laws which immediately before the commencement of this Constitution were in force in any area which forms part of the national territory, shall continue in force in such area, subject to any repeal or amendment of such laws by a competent authority.

[29] Prior to the commencement of the Constitution, the Criminal Procedure Act was in force only in the old Republic of South Africa. Its operation did not extend to the former Transkei, Bophuthatswana, Venda or Ciskei, which were then treated by South African law as independent states and had their own legislation. Although their respective Criminal Procedure statutes were based on the South African legislation, there were differences, including differences in regard to the death penalty. The most striking difference in this regard was in Ciskei, where the death sentence was abolished on June 8, 1990 by the military regime,³⁷ the de facto government of the territory, and it ceased from that date to be a competent sentence.³⁸ These differences still exist,³⁹ which means that the law governing the imposition of the death sentence in South Africa is not uniform. The greatest disparity is in the Eastern Cape Province. A person who commits murder and is brought to trial in that part of the province which was formerly Ciskei, cannot be sentenced to death, whilst a person who commits murder and is brought to trial in another part of the same province, can be sentenced to death. There is no rational reason for this distinction, which is the result of history, and we asked for argument to be addressed to us on the question whether this difference has a bearing on the constitutionality of section 277(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act.

³⁸ S v Qeqe and Another 1990 (2) SACR 654 (CKAD).

³⁹ In the former Transkei, Bophuthatswana and Venda the death sentence was a competent verdict for murder but the provisions of the relevant statutes in Transkei and Bophuthatswana are not identical to section 277. For the purposes of this judgment it is not necessary to analyse the differences, which relate in the main to the procedure prescribed for appeals and the powers of the court on appeal, procedures that are now subject to the provisions of section 241(1) and (1A) of the Constitution, as amended by the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa Third Amendment Act No. 13 of 1994.

[30] Counsel for the accused argued that it did. They contended that in the circumstances section 277 was not a law of general application (which is a requirement under section 33(1) for the validity of any law which limits a Chapter Three right), and that the disparate application of the death sentence within South Africa discriminates unfairly between those prosecuted in the former Ciskei and those prosecuted elsewhere in South Africa, and offends against the right to "equality before the law and to equal protection of the law."⁴⁰

[31] If the disparity had been the result of legislation enacted after the Constitution had come into force the challenge to the validity of section 277 on these grounds may well have been tenable. Criminal law and procedure is a national competence and the national government could not without very convincing reasons have established a "safe haven" in part of one of the provinces in which the death penalty would not be enforced. The disparity is not, however, the result of the legislative policy of the new Parliament, but a consequence of the Constitution which brings together again in one country the parts that had been separated under apartheid. The purpose of section 229 was to ensure an orderly transition, and an inevitable consequence of its provisions is that there will be disparities in the law reflecting pre-existing regional variations, and that this will continue until a uniform system of law has been established by the national and provincial legislatures within their fields of competence as contemplated by Chapter Fifteen of the Constitution.

⁴⁰ See section 8 of the Constitution.

[32] The requirement of section 229 that existing laws shall continue to be in force subject to the Constitution, makes the Constitution applicable to existing laws within each of the geographic areas. These laws have to meet all the standards prescribed by Chapter Three, and this no doubt calls for consistency and parity of laws within the boundaries of each of the different geographic areas. It does not, however, mean that there has to be consistency and parity between the laws of the different geographic areas themselves.⁴¹ Such a construction would defeat the apparent purpose of section 229, which is to allow different legal orders to exist side by side until a process of rationalisation has been carried out, and would inappropriately expose a substantial part if not the entire body of our statutory law to challenges under section 8 of the Constitution. It follows that disparities between the legal orders in different parts of the country, consequent upon the provisions of section 229 of the Constitution, cannot for that reason alone be said to constitute a breach of the equal protection provisions of section 8, or render the laws such that they are not of general application.

- [33] The death sentence is a form of punishment which has been used throughout history by different societies. It has long been the subject of controversy.⁴² As societies became more enlightened, they restricted the offences for which this penalty could be imposed.⁴³ The movement away from the death penalty gained momentum during the second half of the present century with the growth of the abolitionist movement. In some countries it is now prohibited in all circumstances, in some it is prohibited save in times of war, and in most countries that have retained it as a penalty for crime, its use has been restricted to extreme cases. According to Amnesty International, 1,831 executions were carried out throughout the world in 1993 as a result of sentences of death, of which 1,419 were in China, which means that only 412 executions were carried out in the rest of the world in that year.⁴⁴ Today, capital punishment has been abolished as a penalty for murder either specifically or in practice by almost half the countries of the world including the democracies of Europe and our neighbouring countries, Namibia, Mozambique and Angola.⁴⁵ In most of those countries where it is retained, as the Amnesty International statistics show, it is seldom used.
- [34] In the course of the arguments addressed to us, we were referred to books and articles on the death sentence, and to judgments dealing with challenges made to capital punishment in the courts of other countries and in international tribunals. The international and foreign authorities are of value because they analyse arguments for and against the death sentence and show how courts of other jurisdictions have dealt with this vexed issue. For that reason alone they require our attention. They may also have to be considered because of their relevance to section 35(1) of the Constitution, ⁴² An account of the history of the death sentence, the growth of the abolitionist movement, and the application of the death sentence by South African courts is given by Prof. B. van Niekerk in Hanged by the Neck Until You Are Dead, (1969) 86 SALJ 457; Professor E. In interpreting the provisions of this Chapter a court of law shall promote the values which underlie an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality and shall, where applicable, have regard to public international law applicable to the protection of the rights entrenched in this Chapter, and may have regard to comparable foreign case law.

[35] Customary international law and the ratification and accession to international agreements is dealt with in section 231 of the Constitution which sets the requirements for such law to be binding within South Africa. In the context of section 35(1), public international law would include non-binding as well as binding law.⁴⁶ They may both be used under the section as tools of interpretation. - (b) international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law; of specialised agencies such as the International Labour Organisation may provide guidance as to the correct interpretation of particular provisions of Chapter Three.

- [36] Capital punishment is not prohibited by public international law, and this is a factor that has to be taken into account in deciding whether it is cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment within the meaning of section 11(2). International human rights agreements differ, however, from our Constitution in that where the right to life is expressed in unqualified terms they either deal specifically with the death sentence, or authorise exceptions to be made to the right to life by law.⁵² This has influenced the way international tribunals have dealt with issues relating to capital punishment, and is relevant to a proper understanding of such decisions.

⁵² The pertinent part of article 6 of the ICCPR reads:

1. Every human being has the inherent right to life. This right shall be protected by law. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life.
2. ...sentence of death may be imposed only for the most serious crimes in accordance with the law in force at the time of the commission of the crime and not contrary to the provisions of the present covenant ...

Article 4(2) of the American Convention on Human Rights and article 2 of the European Convention of Human Rights contain similar provisions. Article 4 of the African Charter of Human and People's Rights provides:

Human beings are inviolable. Every human being shall be entitled to respect for his life and the integrity of his person. No one may be arbitrarily deprived of this right. (Emphasis supplied) [37] Comparative "bill of rights" jurisprudence will no doubt be of importance, particularly in the early stages of the transition when there is no developed indigenous jurisprudence in this branch of the law on which to draw. Although we are told by section 35(1) that we "may" have regard to foreign case law, it is important to appreciate that this will not necessarily offer a safe guide to the interpretation of Chapter Three of our Constitution.⁵³ This has already been pointed out in a number of decisions of the Provincial and Local Divisions of the Supreme Court,⁵⁴ and is implicit in the injunction given to the Courts in section 35(1), which in permissive terms allows the Courts to "have regard to" such law. There is no injunction to do more than this.

[38] When challenges to the death sentence in international or foreign courts and tribunals have failed, the constitution or the international instrument concerned has either directly sanctioned capital punishment or has specifically provided that the right to life is subject to exceptions sanctioned by law. The only case to which we were referred in which there were not such express provisions in the Constitution, was the decision of the Hungarian Constitutional Court. There the challenge succeeded and the death penalty was declared to be unconstitutional.⁵⁵

[39] Our Constitution expresses the right to life in an unqualified form, and prescribes the criteria that have to be met for the limitation of entrenched rights, including the prohibition of legislation that negates the essential content of an entrenched right. In dealing with comparative law, we must bear in mind that we are required to construe the South African Constitution, and not an international instrument or the constitution of some foreign country, and that this has to be done with due regard to our legal system, our history and circumstances, and the structure and language of our own Constitution.⁵⁶ We can derive assistance from public international law and foreign case law, but we are in no way bound to follow it.

Capital Punishment in the United States of America

⁵⁶ The judgment of Kentridge AJ in S v Zuma and Two Others, supra note 6, discusses the relevance of foreign case law in the context of the facts of that case, and demonstrates the use that can be made of such authorities in appropriate circumstances.

[40] The earliest litigation on the validity of the death sentence seems to have been pursued in the courts of the United States of America. It has been said there that the "Constitution itself poses the first obstacle to [the] argument that capital punishment is per se unconstitutional".⁵⁷ From the beginning, the United States Constitution recognised capital punishment as lawful. The Fifth Amendment (adopted in 1791) refers in specific terms to capital punishment and impliedly recognises its validity. The Fourteenth Amendment (adopted in 1868) obliges the states, not to "deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law" and it too impliedly recognises the right of the states to make laws for such purposes.⁵⁸ The argument that capital punishment is unconstitutional was based on the Eighth Amendment, which prohibits cruel and unusual punishment.⁵⁹ Although the Eighth Amendment "has not been regarded as a static concept"⁶⁰ and as drawing its meaning "from the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society",⁶¹ the fact that the Constitution recognises the lawfulness of capital punishment has proved to be an obstacle in the way of the acceptance of this argument, and this is stressed in some of the judgments of the United States Supreme Court.⁶²

[41] Although challenges under state constitutions to the validity of the death sentence have been successful,⁶³ the federal constitutionality of the death sentence as a legitimate form of punishment for murder was affirmed by the United States Supreme Court in Gregg v. Georgia.⁶⁴ Both before and after Gregg's case, decisions upholding and rejecting challenges to death penalty statutes have divided the Supreme Court, and have led at times to sharply-worded judgments.⁶⁵ The decisions ultimately turned on the votes of those judges who considered the nature of the discretion given to the sentencing authority to be the crucial factor.

[42] Statutes providing for mandatory death sentences, or too little discretion in sentencing, have been rejected by the Supreme Court because they do not allow for consideration of factors peculiar to the convicted person facing sentence, which may distinguish his or her case from other cases.⁶⁶ For the same reason, statutes which allow too wide a discretion to judges or juries have also been struck down on the grounds that the exercise of such discretion leads to arbitrary results.⁶⁷ In sum, therefore, if there is no discretion, too little discretion, or an unbounded discretion, the provision authorising the death sentence has been struck down as being contrary to the Eighth Amendment; where the discretion has been "suitably directed and limited so as to minimise the risk of wholly arbitrary and capricious action",⁶⁸ the challenge to the statute has failed.⁶⁹

Arbitrariness and Inequality

[43] Basing his argument on the reasons which found favour with the majority of the United States Supreme Court in Furman v. Georgia, Mr Trengove contended on behalf of the accused that the imprecise language of section 277, and the unbounded discretion vested by it in the Courts, make its provisions unconstitutional.

[44] Section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act provides:

- (c) robbery or attempted robbery, if the court finds aggravating circumstances to have been present;
- (d) kidnapping;
- (e) child-stealing;

(2) The sentence of death shall be imposed-

- (a) after the presiding judge conjointly with the assessors (if any), subject to the provisions of s 145(4)(a), or, in the case of a trial by a special superior court, that court, with due regard to any evidence and argument on sentence in terms of section 274, has made a finding on the presence or absence of any mitigating or aggravating factors; and
- (b) if the presiding judge or court, as the case may be, with due regard to that finding, is satisfied that the sentence of death is the proper sentence.

- (a) The sentence of death shall not be imposed upon an accused who was under the age of 18 years at the time of the commission of the act which constituted the offence concerned.
- (b) If in the application of paragraph (a) the age of an accused is placed in issue, the onus shall be on the State to show beyond reasonable doubt that the accused was 18 years of age or older at the relevant time.

[45] Under our court system questions of guilt and innocence, and the proper sentence to be imposed on those found guilty of crimes, are not decided by juries. In capital cases, where it is likely that the death sentence may be imposed, judges sit with two assessors who have an equal vote with the judge on the issue of guilt and on any mitigating or aggravating factors relevant to sentence; but sentencing is the prerogative of the judge alone. The Criminal Procedure Act allows a full right of appeal to persons sentenced to death, including a right to dispute the sentence without having to establish an irregularity or misdirection on the part of the trial judge. The Appellate Division is empowered to set the sentence aside if it would not have imposed such sentence itself, and it has laid down criteria for the exercise of this power by itself and other courts.⁷⁰ If the person sentenced to death does not appeal, the Appellate Division is nevertheless required to review the case and to set aside the death sentence if it is of the opinion that it is not a proper sentence.⁷¹

[46] Mitigating and aggravating factors must be identified by the Court, bearing in mind that the onus is on the State to prove beyond reasonable doubt the existence of aggravating factors, and to negative beyond reasonable doubt the presence of any mitigating factors relied on by the accused.⁷² Due regard must be paid to the personal circumstances and subjective factors which might have influenced the accused person's conduct,⁷³ and these factors must then be weighed up with the main objects of punishment, which have been held to be: deterrence, prevention, reformation, and retribution.⁷⁴ In this process "[e]very relevant consideration should receive the most scrupulous care and reasoned attention",⁷⁵ and the death sentence should only be imposed in the most exceptional cases, where there is no reasonable prospect of reformation and the objects of punishment would not be properly achieved by any other sentence.⁷⁶

[47] There seems to me to be little difference between the guided discretion required for the death sentence in the United States, and the criteria laid down by the Appellate Division for the imposition of the death sentence. The fact that the Appellate Division, a court of experienced judges, takes the final decision in all cases is, in my view, more likely to result in consistency of sentencing, than will be the case where sentencing is in the hands of jurors who are offered statutory guidance as to how that discretion should be exercised.

- [48] The argument that the imposition of the death sentence under section 277 is arbitrary and capricious does not, however, end there. It also focuses on what is alleged to be the arbitrariness inherent in the application of section 277 in practice. Of the thousands of persons put on trial for murder, only a very small percentage are sentenced to death by a trial court, and of those, a large number escape the ultimate penalty on appeal.⁷⁷ At every stage of the process there is an element of chance. The outcome may be dependent upon factors such as the way the case is investigated by the police, the way the case is presented by the prosecutor, how effectively the accused is defended, the personality and particular attitude to capital punishment of the trial judge and, if the matter goes on appeal, the particular judges who are selected to hear the case. Race⁷⁸ and poverty are also alleged to be factors.

⁷⁷ According to the statistics referred to in the amicus brief of the South African Police approximately 9 000 murder cases are brought to trial each year. In the more than 40 000 cases that have been heard since the amendment to section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act, only 243 persons were sentenced to death, and of these sentences, only 143 were ultimately confirmed on appeal. See also, Devenish, supra note 42, at 8 and 13.

⁷⁸ In the amicus brief of Lawyers for Human Rights, Centre for Applied Legal Studies and the Society for the Abolition of the Death Penalty in South Africa it is pointed out that the overwhelming majority of those sentenced to death are poor and black. There is an enormous social and cultural divide between those sentenced to death and the judges before whom they appear, who are presently almost all white and middle class. This in itself gives rise to problems which even the most meticulous judge cannot avoid. The formal trial proceedings are recorded in English or Afrikaans, languages which the judges understand and speak, but which many of the accused may not understand, or of which they may have only an imperfect understanding. The evidence of witnesses and the discourse between the judge and the accused often has to be interpreted, and the way this is done influences the proceedings. The differences in the backgrounds and culture of the judges and the accused also comes into the picture, and is particularly relevant when the personal circumstances of the accused have to be evaluated for the purposes of deciding upon the sentence. All this is the result of our history, and with the demise of apartheid this will change. Race and class are, however, factors that run deep in our society and cannot simply be brushed aside as no longer being relevant.

[49] Most accused facing a possible death sentence are unable to afford legal assistance, and are defended under the pro deo system. The defending counsel is more often than not young and inexperienced, frequently of a different race to his or her client, and if this is the case, usually has to consult through an interpreter. Pro deo counsel are paid only a nominal fee for the defence, and generally lack the financial resources and the infrastructural support to undertake the necessary investigations and research, to employ expert witnesses to give advice, including advice on matters relevant to sentence, to assemble witnesses, to bargain with the prosecution, and generally to conduct an effective defence. Accused persons who have the money to do so, are able to retain experienced attorneys and counsel, who are paid to undertake the necessary investigations and research, and as a result they are less likely to be sentenced to death than persons similarly placed who are unable to pay for such services.⁷⁹

[50] It needs to be mentioned that there are occasions when senior members of the bar act pro deo in particularly difficult cases - indeed the present case affords an example of that, for Mr Trengove and his juniors have acted pro deo in the proceedings before us, and the Legal Resources Centre who have acted as their instructing attorneys, have done so without charge. An enormous amount of research has gone into the preparation of the argument and it is highly doubtful that even the wealthiest members of our society could have secured a better service than they have provided. But this is the exception and not the rule. This may possibly change as a result of the provisions of section 25(3)(e) of the Constitution, but there are limits to the available financial and human resources, limits which are likely to exist for the foreseeable future, and which will continue to place poor accused at a significant disadvantage in defending themselves in capital cases.

⁷⁹ I do not want to be understood as being critical of the pro deo counsel who perform an invaluable service, often under extremely difficult conditions, and to whom the courts are much indebted. But the unpalatable truth is that most capital cases involve poor people who cannot afford and do not receive as good a defence as those who have means. In this process, the poor and the ignorant have proven to be the most vulnerable, and are the persons most likely to be sentenced to death.

[51] It cannot be gainsaid that poverty, race and chance play roles in the outcome of capital cases and in the final decision as to who should live and who should die. It is sometimes said that this is understood by the judges, and as far as possible, taken into account by them. But in itself this is no answer to the complaint of arbitrariness; on the contrary, it may introduce an additional factor of arbitrariness that would also have to be taken into account. Some, but not all accused persons may be acquitted because such allowances are made, and others who are convicted, but not all, may for the same reason escape the death sentence.⁸⁰

[52] In holding that the imposition and the carrying out of the death penalty in the cases then under consideration constituted cruel and unusual punishment in the United States, Justice Douglas, concurring in Furman v. Georgia, said that "[a]ny law which is nondiscriminatory on its face may be applied in such a way as to violate the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment." Discretionary statutes are:

⁸⁰ See the comments of Curlewis, J in [1991] SAJHR, Vol. 7, p. 229, arguing that judges who do not impose the death sentence when they should do so are not doing their duty. "Let me return to the point that troubles the authors: 'that a person's life may depend upon who sits in judgment.' Of course this happens. I do not know why the authors are so hesitant in saying so. Their own reasoning, let alone their tables, proves this". Id. at 230.

...pregnant with discrimination and discrimination is an ingredient not compatible with the idea of equal protection of the laws that is implicit in the ban on "cruel and unusual" punishments.⁸¹

- [53] It was contended that we should follow this approach and hold that the factors to which I have referred, make the application of section 277, in practice, arbitrary and capricious and, for that reason, any resulting death sentence is cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment.

⁸¹ Furman v. Georgia, supra note 34, at 257.

[54] The differences that exist between rich and poor, between good and bad prosecutions, between good and bad defence, between severe and lenient judges, between judges who favour capital punishment and those who do not, and the subjective attitudes that might be brought into play by factors such as race and class, may in similar ways affect any case that comes before the courts, and is almost certainly present to some degree in all court systems. Such factors can be mitigated, but not totally avoided, by allowing convicted persons to appeal to a higher court. Appeals are decided on the record of the case and on findings made by the trial court. If the evidence on record and the findings made have been influenced by these factors, there may be nothing that can be done about that on appeal. Imperfection inherent in criminal trials means that error cannot be excluded; it also means that persons similarly placed may not necessarily receive similar punishment. This needs to be acknowledged. What also needs to be acknowledged is that the possibility of error will be present in any system of justice and that there cannot be perfect equality as between accused persons in the conduct and outcome of criminal trials. We have to accept these differences in the ordinary criminal cases that come before the courts, even to the extent that some may go to gaol when others similarly placed may be acquitted or receive non-custodial sentences. But death is different, and the question is, whether this is acceptable when the difference is between life and death. Unjust imprisonment is a great wrong, but if it is discovered, the prisoner can be released and compensated; but the killing of an innocent person is irremediable.⁸²

[55] In the United States, the Supreme Court has addressed itself primarily to the requirement of due process. Statutes have to be clear and discretion curtailed without ignoring the peculiar circumstances of each accused person. Verdicts are set aside if the defence has not been adequate,⁸³ and persons sentenced to death are allowed wide rights of appeal and review. This attempt to ensure the utmost procedural fairness has itself led to problems. The most notorious is the "death row phenomenon" in which prisoners cling to life, exhausting every possible avenue of redress, and using every device to put off the date of execution, in the natural and understandable hope that there will be a reprieve from the Courts or the executive. It is common for prisoners in the United States to remain on death row for many years, and this dragging out of the process has been characterised as being cruel and degrading.⁸⁴ The difficulty of ⁸³ Voyles v. Watkins, 489 F.Supp 901 (D.D.C.: N.D.Miss. 1980). See also, People v. Frierson, 599 P.2d. 587 (1979). Cf. Powell v. Alabama, 287 U.S. 45 (1932).

It is part of the human condition that a condemned man will take every opportunity to save his life through use of the appellate procedure. If the appellate procedure enables the prisoner to prolong the appellate hearings over a period of years, the fault is attributed to the appellate system that permits such delay and not to the prisoner who takes advantage of it. Appellate procedures that echo down the years are not compatible with capital punishment. The death row phenomenon must not become established as a part of our jurisprudence.

Pratt v Attorney-General for Jamaica, supra note 3, at 1014.

implementing a system of capital punishment which on the one hand avoids arbitrariness by insisting on a high standard of procedural fairness, and on the other hand avoids delays that in themselves are the cause of impermissible cruelty and inhumanity, is apparent. Justice Blackmun, who sided with the majority in Gregg's case, ultimately came to the conclusion that it is not possible to design a system that avoids arbitrariness.⁸⁵ To design a system that avoids arbitrariness and delays in carrying out the sentence is even more difficult.

⁸⁵ Callins v. Collins, supra note 62, (Blackmun, J., dissenting).

[56] The United States jurisprudence has not resolved the dilemma arising from the fact that the Constitution prohibits cruel and unusual punishments, but also permits, and contemplates that there will be capital punishment. The acceptance by a majority of the United States Supreme Court of the proposition that capital punishment is not per se unconstitutional, but that in certain circumstances it may be arbitrary, and thus unconstitutional, has led to endless litigation. Considerable expense and interminable delays result from the exceptionally-high standard of procedural fairness set by the United States courts in attempting to avoid arbitrary decisions. The difficulties that have been experienced in following this path, to which Justice Blackmun and Justice Scalia have both referred,⁸⁶ but from which they have drawn different conclusions, persuade me that we should not follow this route.

The Right to Dignity

[57] Although the United States Constitution does not contain a specific guarantee of human dignity, it has been accepted by the United States Supreme Court that the concept of human dignity is at the core of the prohibition of "cruel and unusual punishment" by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments.⁸⁷ For Brennan J this was decisive of the question in Gregg v. Georgia.

The fatal constitutional infirmity in the punishment of death is that it treats

⁸⁶ Id. (compare Scalia, J., concurring, with Blackmun, J., dissenting).

⁸⁷ Trop v. Dulles, supra note 61, at 100. See also, Furman v. Georgia, supra note 34, at 270-281 (Brennan, J., concurring); Gregg v. Georgia, supra note 60, at 173; People v. Anderson, supra note 62, at 895 ("The dignity of man, the individual and the society as a whole, is today demeaned by our continued practice of capital punishment.").

"members of the human race as nonhumans, as objects to be toyed with and discarded. [It is] thus inconsistent with the fundamental premise of the Clause that even the vilest criminal remains a human being possessed of common human dignity."⁸⁸

[58] Under our constitutional order the right to human dignity is specifically guaranteed. It can only be limited by legislation which passes the stringent test of being 'necessary'. The weight given to human dignity by Justice Brennan is wholly consistent with the values of our Constitution and the new order established by it. It is also consistent with the approach to extreme punishments followed by courts in other countries.

[59] In Germany, the Federal Constitutional Court has stressed this aspect of punishment.

⁸⁸ Gregg v. Georgia, supra note 60, at 230 (Brennan, J., dissenting) (quoting his opinion in Furman v. Georgia, at 273). See also, Furman v. Georgia, supra note 34, at 296, where Brennan, J., concurring, states: "The country has debated whether a society for which the dignity of the individual is the supreme value can, without a fundamental inconsistency, follow the practice of deliberately putting some of its members to death."

Respect for human dignity especially requires the prohibition of cruel, inhuman, and degrading punishments. [The state] cannot turn the offender into an object of crime prevention to the detriment of his constitutionally protected right to social worth and respect.⁸⁹

- [60] That capital punishment constitutes a serious impairment of human dignity has also been recognised by judgments of the Canadian Supreme Court. *Kindler v Canada*⁹⁰ was concerned with the extradition from Canada to the United States of two fugitives, Kindler, who had been convicted of murder and sentenced to death in the United States, and Ng who was facing a murder charge there and a possible death sentence. Three of the seven judges who heard the cases expressed the opinion that the death penalty was cruel and unusual:

It is the supreme indignity to the individual, the ultimate corporal punishment, the final and complete lobotomy and the absolute and irrevocable castration. [It is] the ultimate desecration of human dignity...⁹¹

- [61] Three other judges were of the opinion that:

⁸⁹ [1977] 45 BVerfGE 187, 228 (Life Imprisonment case)(as translated in Kommers, supra note 18, at 316). The statement was made in the context of a discussion on punishment to be meted out in respect of murders of wanton cruelty. It was held that a life sentence was a competent sentence as long as it allowed the possibility of parole for a reformed prisoner rehabilitated during his or her time in prison.

⁹¹ Id. at 241 (per Cory, J, dissenting with Lamer, CJC, concurring). See also, Sopinka, J, dissenting (with Lamer, CJC, concurring) at 220.

[t]here is strong ground for believing, having regard to the limited extent to which the death penalty advances any valid penological objectives and the serious invasion of human dignity it engenders, that the death penalty cannot, except in exceptional circumstances, be justified in this country.⁹²

In the result, however, the majority of the Court held that the validity of the order for extradition did not depend upon the constitutionality of the death penalty in Canada, or the guarantee in its Charter of Rights against cruel and unusual punishment. The Charter was concerned with legislative and executive acts carried out in Canada, and an order for extradition neither imposed nor authorised any punishment within the borders of Canada.

- [62] The issue in Kindler's case was whether the action of the Minister of Justice, who had authorised the extradition without any assurance that the death penalty would not be imposed, was constitutional. It was argued that this executive act was contrary to section 12 of the Charter which requires the executive to act in accordance with fundamental principles of justice. The Court decided by a majority of four to three that in the particular circumstances of the case the decision of the Minister of Justice could not be set aside on these grounds. In balancing the international obligations of Canada in respect of extradition, and another purpose of the extradition legislation - to prevent Canada from becoming a safe haven for criminals, against the likelihood that the fugitives would be executed if returned to the United States, the view of the majority was that the decision to return the fugitives to the United States could not be said to be contrary to the fundamental principles of justice. In their view, it would not shock the conscience of Canadians to permit this to be done.

The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights

- [63] Ng and Kindler took their cases to the Human Rights Committee of the United Nations, contending that Canada had breached its obligations under the International ⁹² Id. at 202 (per La Forest, J)(L'Heureux-Dube and Gonthier, JJ concurring).

Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Once again, there was a division of opinion within the tribunal. In Ng's case it was said:

The Committee is aware that, by definition, every execution of a sentence of death may be considered to constitute cruel and inhuman treatment within the meaning of article 7 of the covenant.⁹³

⁹³ Ng v Canada, supra note 23, at 21.

- [64] There was no dissent from that statement. But the International Covenant contains provisions permitting, with some qualifications, the imposition of capital punishment for the most serious crimes. In view of these provisions, the majority of the Committee were of the opinion that the extradition of fugitives to a country which enforces the death sentence in accordance with the requirements of the International Covenant, should not be regarded as a breach of the obligations of the extraditing country. In Ng's case, the method of execution which he faced if extradited was asphyxiation in a gas chamber. This was found by a majority of the Committee to involve unnecessary physical and mental suffering and, notwithstanding the sanction given to capital punishment, to be cruel punishment within the meaning of article 7 of the International Covenant. In Kindler's case, in which the complaint was delivered at the same time as that in the Ng's case, but the decision was given earlier, it was held that the method of execution which was by lethal injection was not a cruel method of execution, and that the extradition did not in the circumstances constitute a breach of Canada's obligations under the International Covenant.⁹⁴
- [65] The Committee also held in Kindler's case that prolonged judicial proceedings giving rise to the death row phenomenon does not per se constitute cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment. There were dissents in both cases. Some Commissioners in Ng's case held that asphyxiation was not crueller than other forms of execution. Some in Kindler's case held that the provision of the International Covenant against the arbitrary deprivation of the right to life took priority over the provisions of the International Covenant which allow the death sentence, and that Canada ought not in the circumstances to have extradited Kindler without an assurance that he would not be executed.
- [66] It should be mentioned here that although articles 6(2) to (5) of the International Covenant specifically allow the imposition of the death sentence under strict controls

"for the most serious crimes" by those countries which have not abolished it, it provides in article 6(6) that "[n]othing in this article shall be invoked to delay or to prevent the abolition of capital punishment by any State Party to the present Covenant." The fact that the International Covenant sanctions capital punishment must be seen in this context. It tolerates but does not provide justification for the death penalty.

- [67] Despite these differences of opinion, what is clear from the decisions of the Human Rights Committee of the United Nations is that the death penalty is regarded by it as cruel and inhuman punishment within the ordinary meaning of those words, and that it was because of the specific provisions of the International Covenant authorising the imposition of capital punishment by member States in certain circumstances, that the words had to be given a narrow meaning.

The European Convention on Human Rights

- [68] Similar issues were debated by the European Court of Human Rights in Soering v United Kingdom.⁹⁵ This case was also concerned with the extradition to the United States of a fugitive to face murder charges for which capital punishment was a competent sentence. It was argued that this would expose him to inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment in breach of article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights. Article 2 of the European Convention protects the right to life but makes an exception in the case of "the execution of a sentence of a court following [the] conviction of a crime for which this penalty is provided by law." The majority of the Court held that article 3 could not be construed as prohibiting all capital punishment, since to do so would nullify article 2. It was, however, competent to test the imposition of capital punishment in particular cases against the requirements of article 3 -- the manner in which it is imposed or executed, the personal circumstances of the condemned person and the disproportionality to the gravity of the crime committed, as well as the conditions of detention awaiting execution, were capable of bringing the treatment or punishment received by the condemned person within the proscription.

- [69] On the facts, it was held that extradition to the United States to face trial in Virginia would expose the fugitive to the risk of treatment going beyond the threshold set by article 3. The special factors taken into account were the youth of the fugitive (he was 18 at the time of the murders), an impaired mental capacity, and the suffering on death row which could endure for up to eight years if he were convicted. Additionally, although the offence for which extradition was sought had been committed in the United States, the fugitive who was a German national was also liable to be tried for the same offence in Germany. Germany, which has abolished the death sentence, also sought his extradition for the murders. There was accordingly a choice in regard to the country to which the fugitive should be extradited, and that choice should have been exercised in a way which would not lead to a contravention of article 3. What weighed with the Court was the fact that the choice facing the United Kingdom was not a choice between extradition to face a possible death penalty and no punishment, but a choice between extradition to a country which allows the death penalty and one which does not. We are in a comparable position. A holding by us that the death penalty for murder is unconstitutional, does not involve a choice between freedom and death; it involves a choice between death in the very few cases which would otherwise attract that penalty under section 277(1)(a), and the severe penalty of life imprisonment.

Capital Punishment in India

- [70] In the amicus brief of the South African Police, reliance was placed on decisions of the Indian Supreme Court, and it is necessary to refer briefly to the way the law has developed in that country.
- [71] Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code authorises the imposition of the death sentence as a penalty for murder. In Bachan Singh v State of Punjab,⁹⁶ the constitutionality of this provision was put in issue. Article 21 of the Indian Constitution provides that:

No person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law.

[72] The wording of this article presented an obstacle to a challenge to the death sentence, because there was a "law" which made provision for the death sentence. Moreover, article 72 of the Constitution empowers the President and Governors to commute sentences of death, and article 134 refers to the Supreme Court's powers on appeal in cases where the death sentence has been imposed. It was clear, therefore, that capital punishment was specifically contemplated and sanctioned by the framers of the Indian Constitution, when it was adopted by them in November 1949.⁹⁷

[73] Counsel for the accused in Bachan Singh's case sought to overcome this difficulty by contending that article 21 had to be read with article 19(1), which guarantees the freedoms of speech, of assembly, of association, of movement, of residence, and the freedom to engage in any occupation. These fundamental freedoms can only be restricted under the Indian Constitution if the restrictions are reasonable for the attainment of a number of purposes defined in sections 19(2) to (6). It was contended that the right to life was basic to the enjoyment of these fundamental freedoms, and that the death sentence restricted them unreasonably in that it served no social purpose, its deterrent effect was unproven and it defiled the dignity of the individual.

⁹⁷ Id. at 730, para. 136.

[74] The Supreme Court analysed the provisions of article 19(1) and came to the conclusion, for reasons that are not material to the present case, that the provisions of section 302 of the Indian Penal Code did "not have to stand the test of article 19(1) of the Constitution."⁹⁸ It went on, however, to consider "arguendo" what the outcome would be if the test of reasonableness and public interest under article 19(1) had to be satisfied.

⁹⁸ Id. at 709, para. 61.

[75] The Supreme Court had recognised in a number of cases that the death sentence served as a deterrent, and the Law Commission of India, which had conducted an investigation into capital punishment in 1967, had recommended that capital punishment be retained. The court held that in the circumstances it was "for the petitioners to prove and establish that the death sentence for murder is so outmoded, unusual or excessive as to be devoid of any rational nexus with the purpose and object of the legislation."⁹⁹

[76] The Court then dealt with international authorities for and against the death sentence, and with the arguments concerning deterrence and retribution.¹⁰⁰ After reviewing the arguments for and against the death sentence, the court concluded that:

...the question whether or not [the] death penalty serves any penological purpose is a difficult, complex and intractable issue [which] has evoked strong, divergent views. For the purpose of testing the constitutionality of the impugned provisions as to death penalty ... on the grounds of reasonableness in the light of Articles 19 and 21 of the Constitution, it is not necessary for us to express any categorical opinion, one way or another, as to which of these antithetical views, held by the Abolitionists and the Retentionists, is correct. It is sufficient to say that the very fact that persons of reason, learning and light are rationally and deeply divided in their opinion on this issue, is ground among others, for rejecting the petitioners'

⁹⁹ Id. at 712, para. 71.

¹⁰⁰ I have not yet dealt specifically with the issues of deterrence, prevention and retribution, on which the Attorney General placed reliance in his argument. These are all factors relevant to the purpose of punishment and are present both in capital punishment, and in the alternative of imprisonment. Whether they serve to make capital punishment a more effective punishment than imprisonment is relevant to the argument on justification, and will be considered when that argument is dealt with. For the moment it is sufficient to say that they do not have a bearing on the nature of the punishment, and need not be taken into account at this stage of the enquiry.

argument that retention of death penalty in the impugned provision, is totally devoid of reason and purpose.¹⁰¹

It accordingly held that section 302 of the Indian Penal Code "violates neither the letter nor the ethos of Article 19."¹⁰²

[77] The Court then went on to deal with article 21. It said that if article 21 were to be expanded in accordance with the interpretative principle applicable to legislation limiting rights under Article 19(1), article 21 would have to be read as follows:

No person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to fair, just and reasonable procedure established by a valid law.

¹⁰¹ Supra note 96, at 729, para. 132.

And thus expanded, it was clear that the State could deprive a person of his or her life, by "fair, just and reasonable procedure." In the circumstances, and taking into account the indications that capital punishment was considered by the framers of the constitution in 1949 to be a valid penalty, it was asserted that "by no stretch of the imagination can it be said that death penalty...either per se or because of its execution by hanging constitutes an unreasonable, cruel or unusual punishment" prohibited by the Constitution.¹⁰³

[78] The wording of the relevant provisions of our Constitution are different. The question we have to consider is not whether the imposition of the death sentence for murder is "totally devoid of reason and purpose", or whether the death sentence for murder "is devoid of any rational nexus" with the purpose and object of section 277(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act. It is whether in the context of our Constitution, the death penalty is cruel, inhuman or degrading, and if it is, whether it can be justified in terms of section 33.

[79] The Indian Penal Code leaves the imposition of the death sentence to the trial judge's discretion. In Bachan Singh's case there was also a challenge to the constitutionality of the legislation on the grounds of arbitrariness, along the lines of the challenges that have been successful in the United States. The majority of the Court rejected the argument that the imposition of the death sentence in such circumstances is arbitrary, holding that a discretion exercised judicially by persons of experience and standing, in accordance with principles crystallized by judicial decisions, is not an arbitrary discretion.¹⁰⁴ To complete the picture, it should be mentioned that long delays in carrying out the death sentence in particular cases have apparently been held in India to be unjust and unfair to the prisoner, and in such circumstances the death sentence is liable to be set aside.¹⁰⁵

The Right to Life

[80] The unqualified right to life vested in every person by section 9 of our Constitution is another factor crucially relevant to the question whether the death sentence is cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment within the meaning of section 11(2) of our Constitution. In this respect our Constitution differs materially from the Constitutions of the United States and India. It also differs materially from the European Convention and the International Covenant. Yet in the cases decided under these constitutions and treaties there were judges who dissented and held that notwithstanding the specific language of the constitution or instrument concerned, capital punishment should not be permitted.

¹⁰⁵ Triveniben v State of Gujarat [1992] LRC(Const.) 425 (Sup. Ct. of India); Daya Singh v Union of India [1992] LRC(Const.) 452 (Sup. Ct. of India).

[81] In some instances the dissent focused on the right to life. In Soering's case before the European Court of Human Rights, Judge de Meyer, in a concurring opinion, said that capital punishment is "not consistent with the present state of European civilisation"¹⁰⁶ and for that reason alone, extradition to the United States would violate the fugitive's right to life.

[82] In a dissent in the United Nations Human Rights Committee in Kindler's case, Committee member B. Wennergren also stressed the importance of the right to life.

¹⁰⁶ Supra note 95, at 484.

The value of life is immeasurable for any human being, and the right to life enshrined in article 6 of the Covenant is the supreme human right. It is an obligation of States [P]arties to the Covenant to protect the lives of all human beings on their territory and under their jurisdiction. If issues arise in respect of the protection of the right to life, priority must not be accorded to the domestic laws of other countries or to (bilateral) treaty articles. Discretion of any nature permitted under an extradition treaty cannot apply, as there is no room for it under Covenant obligations. It is worth repeating that no derogation from a State's obligations under article 6, paragraph 1, is permitted. This is why Canada, in my view, violated article 6, paragraph 1, by consenting to extradite Mr. Kindler to the United States, without having secured assurances that Mr. Kindler would not be subjected to the execution of the death sentence.¹⁰⁷

[83] An individual's right to life has been described as "[t]he most fundamental of all human rights",¹⁰⁸ and was dealt with in that way in the judgments of the Hungarian Constitutional Court declaring capital punishment to be unconstitutional.¹⁰⁹ The challenge to the death sentence in Hungary was based on section 54 of its Constitution which provides:

(1) In the Republic of Hungary everyone has the inherent right to life and to human dignity, and no one shall be arbitrarily deprived of these rights.

(2) No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel or inhuman or degrading punishment

[84] Section 8, the counterpart of section 33 of our Constitution, provides that laws shall not impose any limitations on the essential content of fundamental rights. According to the finding of the Court, capital punishment imposed a limitation on the essential content of the fundamental rights to life and human dignity, eliminating them irretrievably. As such it was unconstitutional. Two factors are stressed in the judgment of the Court. First, the relationship between the rights of life and dignity, and the importance of these rights taken together. Secondly, the absolute nature of these two rights taken together. Together they are the source of all other rights. Other rights may be limited, and may even be withdrawn and then granted again, but their ultimate limit is to be found in the preservation of the twin rights of life and dignity. These twin rights are the essential content of all rights under the Constitution. Take them away, and all other rights cease. I will deal later with the requirement of our Constitution that a right shall not be limited in ways which negate its essential content. For the present purposes it is sufficient to point to the fact that the Hungarian Court held capital punishment to be unconstitutional on the grounds that it is inconsistent with the right to life and the right to dignity.

¹⁰⁷ Joseph Kindler v Canada, supra note 94, at 23.

¹⁰⁹ Supra note 55.

- [85] Our Constitution does not contain the qualification found in section 54(1) of the Hungarian constitution, which prohibits only the arbitrary deprivation of life. To that extent, therefore, the right to life in section 9 of our Constitution is given greater protection than it is by the Hungarian Constitution.
- [86] The fact that in both the United States and India, which sanction capital punishment, the highest courts have intervened on constitutional grounds in particular cases to prevent the carrying out of death sentences, because in the particular circumstances of such cases, it would have been cruel to do so, evidences the importance attached to the protection of life and the strict scrutiny to which the imposition and carrying out of death sentences are subjected when a constitutional challenge is raised. The same concern is apparent in the decisions of the European Court of Human Rights and the United Nations Committee on Human Rights. It led the Court in Soering's case to order that extradition to the United States, in the circumstances of that case, would result in inhuman or degrading punishment, and the Human Rights Committee to declare in Ng's case that he should not be extradited to face a possible death by asphyxiation in a gas chamber in California.

Public Opinion

- [87] The Attorney General argued that what is cruel, inhuman or degrading depends to a large extent upon contemporary attitudes within society, and that South African society does not regard the death sentence for extreme cases of murder as a cruel, inhuman or degrading form of punishment. It was disputed whether public opinion, properly informed of the different considerations, would in fact favour the death penalty. I am, however, prepared to assume that it does and that the majority of South Africans agree that the death sentence should be imposed in extreme cases of murder. The question before us, however, is not what the majority of South Africans believe a proper sentence for murder should be. It is whether the Constitution allows the sentence.
- [88] Public opinion may have some relevance to the enquiry, but in itself, it is no substitute for the duty vested in the Courts to interpret the Constitution and to uphold its provisions without fear or favour. If public opinion were to be decisive there would be no need for constitutional adjudication. The protection of rights could then be left to Parliament, which has a mandate from the public, and is answerable to the public for the way its mandate is exercised, but this would be a return to parliamentary sovereignty, and a retreat from the new legal order established by the 1993 Constitution. By the same token the issue of the constitutionality of capital punishment cannot be referred to a referendum, in which a majority view would prevail over the wishes of any minority. The very reason for establishing the new legal order, and for vesting the power of judicial review of all legislation in the courts, was to protect the rights of minorities and others who cannot protect their rights adequately through the democratic process. Those who are entitled to claim this protection include the social outcasts and marginalised people of our society. It is only if there is a willingness to protect the worst and the weakest amongst us, that all of us can be secure that our own rights will be protected.
- [89] This Court cannot allow itself to be diverted from its duty to act as an independent arbiter of the Constitution by making choices on the basis that they will find favour with the public.¹¹⁰ Justice Powell's comment in his dissent in Furman v Georgia bears repetition:

...the weight of the evidence indicates that the public generally has not accepted either the morality or the social merit of the views so passionately advocated by the articulate spokesmen for abolition. But however one may assess amorphous ebb and flow of public opinion generally on this volatile issue, this type of inquiry lies at the periphery - not the core - of the judicial process in constitutional cases. The assessment of popular opinion is essentially a legislative, and not a judicial, function.¹¹¹

So too does the comment of Justice Jackson in West Virginia State Board of Education v Barnette:

¹¹⁰ "The cruel or unusual punishment clause of the California Constitution, like other provisions of the Declaration of Rights, operates to restrain legislative and executive action and to protect fundamental individual and minority rights against encroachment by the majority. It is the function of the court to examine legislative acts in the light of such constitutional mandates to ensure that the promise of the Declaration of Rights is a reality to the individual (citations omitted)...Were it otherwise, the Legislature would ever be the sole judge of the permissible means and extent of punishment and article I, section 6, of the Constitution would be superfluous." People v. Anderson, supra note 62, at 888. This was also the approach of the President of the Hungarian Constitutional Court in his concurring opinion on the constitutionality of capital punishment, where he said: "The Constitutional Court is not bound either by the will of the majority or by public sentiments." Supra note 55, at 12. See also, Gregg v. Georgia, supra note 60, at 880. In the decisive judgment of the Court, Justices Stewart, Powell and Stevens, accepted that "...the Eighth Amendment demands more than that a challenged punishment be acceptable to contemporary society. The Court also must ask whether it comports with the basic concept of human dignity at the core of the Amendment." (citation omitted)

¹¹¹ Supra note 34, at 443.

The very purpose of a Bill of Rights was to withdraw certain subjects from the vicissitudes of political controversy, to place them beyond the reach of majorities and officials and to establish them as legal principles to be applied by the courts. One's right to life, liberty, and property, to free speech, a free press, freedom of worship and assembly and other fundamental rights may not be submitted to vote; they depend on the outcome of no elections.¹¹²

Cruel, Inhuman and Degrading Punishment

[90] The United Nations Committee on Human Rights has held that the death sentence by definition is cruel and degrading punishment. So has the Hungarian Constitutional Court, and three judges of the Canadian Supreme Court. The death sentence has also been held to be cruel or unusual punishment and thus unconstitutional under the state constitutions of Massachusetts and California.¹¹³

¹¹² 319 U.S. 624, 638 (1943).

¹¹³ The Californian Constitution was subsequently amended to sanction capital punishment.

- [91] The California decision is People v. Anderson.¹¹⁴ Capital punishment was held by six of the seven judges of the Californian Supreme Court to be "impermissibly cruel"¹¹⁵ under the California Constitution which prohibited cruel or unusual punishment. Also,

It degrades and dehumanizes all who participate in its processes. It is unnecessary to any legitimate goal of the state and is incompatible with the dignity of man and the judicial process.¹¹⁶

- [92] In the Massachusetts decision in District Attorney for the Suffolk District v. Watson,¹¹⁷ where the Constitution of the State of Massachusetts prohibited cruel or unusual punishment, the death sentence was also held, by six of the seven judges, to be impermissibly cruel.¹¹⁸

¹¹⁴ Supra note 62.

¹¹⁵ Id. at 899. The cruelty lay "...not only in the execution itself and the pain incident thereto, but also in the dehumanizing effects of the lengthy imprisonment prior to the execution during which the judicial and administrative procedures essential to due process of law are carried out." Id. at 894 (citations omitted).

¹¹⁶ Id. at 899.

discrimination...inevitably persist even under a statute which meets the demands of Furman." Id. at 670. "...[T]he supreme punishment of death, inflicted as it is by chance and caprice, may not stand." Id. at 671. "The death sentence itself is a declaration that society deems the prisoner a nullity, less than human and unworthy to live. But that negation of his personality carries through the entire period between sentence and execution." Id. at 683 (Liacos, J., concurring).

[94] Proportionality is an ingredient to be taken into account in deciding whether a penalty is cruel, inhuman or degrading.¹¹⁹ No Court would today uphold the constitutionality of a statute that makes the death sentence a competent sentence for the cutting down of trees or the killing of deer, which were capital offences in England in the 18th Century.¹²⁰ But murder is not to be equated with such "offences." The wilful taking of an innocent life calls for a severe penalty, and there are many countries which still retain the death penalty as a sentencing option for such cases. Disparity between the crime and the penalty is not the only ingredient of proportionality; factors such as the enormity and irredeemable character of the death sentence in circumstances where neither error nor arbitrariness can be excluded, the expense and difficulty of addressing the disparities which exist in practice between accused persons facing similar charges, and which are due to factors such as race, poverty, and ignorance, and the other subjective factors which have been mentioned, are also factors that can and should be taken into account in dealing with this issue. It may possibly be that none alone would be sufficient under our Constitution to justify a finding that the death sentence is cruel, inhuman or degrading. But these factors are not to be evaluated in isolation. They must be taken together, and in order to decide whether the threshold set by section 11(2) has been crossed¹²¹ they must be evaluated with other relevant factors, including the two fundamental rights on which the accused rely, the right to dignity and the right to life.

¹²¹ This was the approach of Brennan, J., in Furman v. Georgia, supra note 34, at 282 ("The test, then, will ordinarily be a cumulative one: If a punishment is unusually severe, if there is a strong probability that it is inflicted arbitrarily, if it is substantially rejected by contemporary society [a determination he makes based on the infrequency of use in relation to the number of offences for which such punishment may apply], and if there is no reason to believe that it serves any penal purpose more effectively than some less severe punishment, then the continued infliction of that punishment violates the [clause prohibiting cruel and unusual punishment].").

[95] The carrying out of the death sentence destroys life, which is protected without reservation under section 9 of our Constitution, it annihilates human dignity which is protected under section 10, elements of arbitrariness are present in its enforcement and it is irremediable. Taking these factors into account, as well as the assumption that I have made in regard to public opinion in South Africa, and giving the words of section 11(2) the broader meaning to which they are entitled at this stage of the enquiry, rather than a narrow meaning,¹²² I am satisfied that in the context of our Constitution the death penalty is indeed a cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment.

Is capital punishment for murder justifiable?

[96] The question that now has to be considered is whether the imposition of such punishment is nonetheless justifiable as a penalty for murder in the circumstances contemplated by sections 277(1)(a), 316A and 322(2A) of the Criminal Procedure Act.

¹²² S v Zuma and Two Others, supra note 6, para. 21.

[97] It is difficult to conceive of any circumstances in which torture, which is specifically prohibited under section 11(2), could ever be justified. But that does not necessarily apply to capital punishment. Capital punishment, unlike torture, has not been absolutely prohibited by public international law. It is therefore not inappropriate to consider whether the death penalty is justifiable under our Constitution as a penalty for murder. This calls for an enquiry similar to that undertaken by Brennan J in *Furman's case*¹²³ in dealing with the contention that "death is a necessary punishment because it prevents the commission of capital crimes more effectively than any less severe punishment."¹²⁴ The same question is addressed and answered in the negative in the judgment of Wright CJ in People v Anderson.¹²⁵ Under the United States Constitution and the Californian Constitution, which have no limitation clauses, this enquiry had to be conducted within the larger question of the definition of the right. With us, however, the question has to be dealt with under section 33(1).

[98] Section 33(1) of the Constitution provides, in part, that:

The rights entrenched in this Chapter may be limited by law of general application, provided that such limitation-

- (a) shall be permissible only to the extent that it is-
- (i) reasonable; and
 - (ii) justifiable in an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality; and

¹²⁴ Id.

¹²⁵ "The People concede that capital punishment is cruel to the individual involved. They argue, however, that only "unnecessary" cruelty is constitutionally proscribed, and that if a cruel punishment can be justified it is not forbidden by article I, section 6, of the California Constitution." Supra note 62, at 895.

LS
SS

(b) shall not negate the essential content of the right in question.

[99] Section 33(1)(b) goes on to provide that the limitation of certain rights, including the rights referred to in section 10 and section 11 "shall, in addition to being reasonable as required in paragraph (a)(f), also be necessary."

The Two-Stage Approach

[100] Our Constitution deals with the limitation of rights through a general limitations clause. As was pointed out by Kentridge AJ in Zuma's case,¹²⁶ this calls for a "two-stage" approach, in which a broad rather than a narrow interpretation is given to the fundamental rights enshrined in Chapter Three, and limitations have to be justified through the application of section 33. In this it differs from the Constitution of the United States, which does not contain a limitation clause, as a result of which courts in that country have been obliged to find limits to constitutional rights through a narrow interpretation of the rights themselves. Although the "two-stage" approach may often produce the same result as the "one-stage" approach,¹²⁷ this will not always be the case.

[101] The practical consequences of this difference in approach are evident in the present case. In Gregg v. Georgia, the conclusion reached in the judgment of the plurality was summed up as follows:

¹²⁶ S v Zuma and Two Others, supra note 6.

¹²⁷ Attorney-General of Hong Kong v Lee Kwong-Kut, (1993) AC 951 at 970-972 (PC).

In sum, we cannot say that the judgment of the Georgia legislature that capital punishment may be necessary in some cases is clearly wrong. Considerations of federalism, as well as respect for the ability of a legislature to evaluate, in terms of its particular state the moral consensus concerning the death penalty and its social utility as a sanction, require us to conclude in the absence of more convincing evidence, that the infliction of death as a punishment for murder is not without justification, and is thus not unconstitutionally severe.¹²⁸

[102] Under our Constitution, the position is different. It is not whether the decision of the State has been shown to be clearly wrong; it is whether the decision of the State is justifiable according to the criteria prescribed by section 33. It is not whether the infliction of death as a punishment for murder "is not without justification", it is whether the infliction of death as a punishment for murder has been shown to be both reasonable and necessary, and to be consistent with the other requirements of section 33. It is for the legislature, or the party relying on the legislation, to establish this justification, and not for the party challenging it to show that it was not justified.¹²⁹

The Application of Section 33

[103] The criteria prescribed by section 33(1) for any limitation of the rights contained in section 11(2) are that the limitation must be justifiable in an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality, it must be both reasonable and necessary and it must not negate the essential content of the right.

¹²⁸ Supra note 60, at 186-187.

¹²⁹ S v Zuma and Two Others, supra note 6.

[104] The limitation of constitutional rights for a purpose that is reasonable and necessary in a democratic society involves the weighing up of competing values, and ultimately an assessment based on proportionality.¹³⁰ This is implicit in the provisions of section 33(1). The fact that different rights have different implications for democracy, and in the case of our Constitution, for "an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality", means that there is no absolute standard which can be laid down for determining reasonableness and necessity. Principles can be established, but the application of those principles to particular circumstances can only be done on a case by case basis. This is inherent in the requirement of proportionality, which calls for the balancing of different interests. In the balancing process, the relevant considerations will include the nature of the right that is limited, and its importance to an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality; the purpose for which the right is limited and the importance of that purpose to such a society; the extent of the limitation, its efficacy, and particularly where the limitation has to be necessary, whether the desired ends could reasonably be achieved through other means less damaging to the right in question. In the process regard must be had to the provisions of section 33(1), and the underlying values of the Constitution, bearing in mind that, as a Canadian Judge has said, "the role of the Court is not to second-guess the wisdom of policy choices made by legislators."¹³¹

Limitation of Rights in Canada

¹³⁰ A proportionality test is applied to the limitation of fundamental rights by the Canadian courts, the German Federal Constitutional Court and the European Court of Human Rights. Although the approach of these Courts to proportionality is not identical, all recognise that proportionality is an essential requirement of any legitimate limitation of an entrenched right. Proportionality is also inherent in the different levels of scrutiny applied by United States courts to governmental action.

¹³¹ Reference re ss. 193 and 195(1)(c) of the Criminal Code of Manitoba, infra note 135.

[105] In dealing with this aspect of the case, Mr Trengove placed considerable reliance on the decision of the Canadian Supreme Court in R v Oakes.¹³² The Canadian Charter of Rights, as our Constitution does, makes provision for the limitation of rights through a general clause. Section 1 of the Charter permits such reasonable limitations of Charter rights "as can be demonstrably justified in a free and democratic society." In Oakes' case it was held that in order to meet this requirement a limitation of a Charter right had to be directed to the achievement of an objective of sufficient importance to warrant the limitation of the right in question, and that there had also to be proportionality between the limitation and such objective. In a frequently-cited passage, Dickson CJC described the components of proportionality as follows:

There are, in my view, three important components of a proportionality test. First, the measures adopted must be carefully designed to achieve the objective in question. They must not be arbitrary, unfair or based on irrational considerations. In short, they must be rationally connected to the objective. Second, the means, even if rationally connected to the objective in this first sense, should impair "as little as possible" the right or freedom in question: R v Big M Drug Mart Ltd. at p. 352. Third, there must be a proportionality between the effects of the measures which are responsible for limiting the Charter right or freedom, and the objective which has been identified as of "sufficient importance".¹³³

[106] Although there is a rational connection between capital punishment and the purpose for which it is prescribed, the elements of arbitrariness, unfairness and irrationality in the imposition of the penalty, are factors that would have to be taken into account in the application of the first component of this test. As far as the second component is concerned, the fact that a severe punishment in the form of life imprisonment is available as an alternative sentence, would be relevant to the question whether the death sentence impairs the right as little as possible. And as I will show later, if all relevant considerations are taken into account, it is at least doubtful whether a sentence of capital punishment for murder would satisfy the third component of the Oakes test.

[107] The second requirement of the Oakes test, that the limitation should impair the right "as little as possible" raises a fundamental problem of judicial review. Can, and should, an unelected court substitute its own opinion of what is reasonable or necessary for that of an elected legislature? Since the judgment in R v Oakes, the Canadian Supreme Court has shown that it is sensitive to this tension, which is particularly acute where choices have to be made in respect of matters of policy. In Irwin Toy Ltd v Quebec (Attorney General),¹³⁴ Dickson CJ cautioned that courts, "must be mindful of the legislature's representative function." In Reference re ss. 193 and 195 (1)(c) of the Criminal Code (Manitoba),¹³⁵ it was said that "the role of the Court is not to second-guess the wisdom of policy choices made by ...legislators"; and in R v Chaulk, that the means must impair the right "as little as is reasonably possible".¹³⁶ Where choices have to be made between "differing reasonable policy options", the courts will allow the government the deference due to legislators, but "[will] not give them an unrestricted licence to disregard an individual's Charter Rights. Where the government cannot show that it had a reasonable basis for concluding that it has complied with the requirement of minimal impairment in seeking to attain its objectives, the legislation will be struck down."¹³⁷

[108] The German Constitution does not contain a general limitations clause but permits certain basic rights to be limited by law. According to Professor Grimm,¹³⁸ the Federal Constitutional Court allows such limitation "only in order to make conflicting rights compatible or to protect the rights of other persons or important community interests...any restriction of human rights not only needs constitutionally valid reasons but also has to be proportional to the rank and importance of the right at stake." Proportionality is central to the process followed by the Federal Constitutional Court in its adjudication upon the limitation of rights. The Court has regard to the purpose of the limiting legislation, whether the legislation is suitable for the achievement of such purpose, which brings into consideration whether it in fact achieves that purpose, is necessary therefor, and whether a proper balance has been achieved between the purpose enhanced by the limitation, and the fundamental right that has been limited.¹³⁹ The German Constitution also has a provision similar to section 33(1)(b) of our Constitution, but the Court apparently avoids making use of this provision,¹⁴⁰ preferring to deal with extreme limitations of rights through the proportionality test.

Limitation of Rights Under the European Convention

[109] The European Convention also has no general limitations clause, but makes certain rights subject to limitation according to specified criteria. The proportionality test of the European Court of Human Rights calls for a balancing of ends and means. The end must be a "pressing social need" and the means used must be proportionate to the attainment of such an end. The limitation of certain rights is conditioned upon the limitation being "necessary in a democratic society" for purposes defined in the relevant provisions of the Convention. The national authorities are allowed a discretion by the European Court of Human Rights in regard to what is necessary - a margin of appreciation - but not unlimited power. The "margin of appreciation" that is allowed varies depending upon the nature of the right and the nature and ambit of the restriction. A balance has to be achieved between the general interest, and the interest of the individual.¹⁴¹ Where the limitation is to a right fundamental to democratic society, a higher standard of justification is required;¹⁴² so too, where a law interferes with the "intimate aspects of private life."¹⁴³ On the other hand, in areas such as morals or social policy greater scope is allowed to the national authorities.¹⁴⁴ The jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights provides some guidance as to what may be considered necessary in a democratic society, but the margin of appreciation allowed to national authorities by the European Court must be understood as finding its place in an international agreement which has to accommodate the sovereignty of the member states. It is not necessarily a safe guide as to what would be appropriate under section 33 of our Constitution.

Is Capital Punishment for Murder Justifiable under the South African Constitution?

[110] In Zuma's case, Kentridge AJ pointed out that the criteria developed by the Canadian Courts for the interpretation of section 1 of the Canadian Charter of Rights may be of assistance to our Courts, but that there are differences between our Constitution and the Canadian Charter which have a bearing on the way in which section 33 should be dealt with. This is equally true of the criteria developed by other courts, such as the German Constitutional Court and the European Court of Human Rights. Like Kentridge AJ, "I see no reason in this case... to attempt to fit our analysis into the Canadian pattern,"¹⁴⁵ or for that matter to fit it into the pattern followed by any of the other courts to which reference has been made. Section 33 prescribes in specific terms the criteria to be applied for the limitation of different categories of rights and it is in the light of these criteria that the death sentence for murder has to be justified.

[111] "Every person" is entitled to claim the protection of the rights enshrined in Chapter Three, and "no" person shall be denied the protection that they offer. Respect for life and dignity which are at the heart of section 11(2) are values of the highest order under our Constitution. The carrying out of the death penalty would destroy these and all other rights that the convicted person has, and a clear and convincing case must be made out to justify such action.

¹⁴⁵ S v Zuma and Two Others, supra note 122, para. 35.

[112] The Attorney General contended that the imposition of the death penalty for murder in the most serious cases could be justified according to the prescribed criteria. The argument went as follows. The death sentence meets the sentencing requirements for extreme cases of murder more effectively than any other sentence can do. It has a greater deterrent effect than life imprisonment; it ensures that the worst murderers will not endanger the lives of prisoners and warders who would be at risk if the "worst of the murderers" were to be imprisoned and not executed; and it also meets the need for retribution which is demanded by society as a response to the high level of crime. In the circumstances presently prevailing in the country, it is therefore a necessary component of the criminal justice system. This, he said, is recognised by the Appellate Division, which only confirms a death sentence if it is convinced that no other sentence would be a proper sentence.¹⁴⁶

The Judgements of the Appellate Division

[113] The decisions of the Appellate Division to which the Attorney General referred are only of limited relevance to the questions that have to be decided in the present case. The law which the Appellate Division has applied prescribes that the death sentence is a competent sentence for murder in a proper case. The Appellate Division has reserved this sentence for extreme cases in which the maximum punishment would be the appropriate punishment. Were it to have done otherwise, and to have refused to pass death sentences, it would in effect have been saying that the death sentence is never a proper sentence, and that section 277(1)(a) should not be enforced. This was not within its competence. The criteria set by the Appellate Division for the passing of a death sentence for murder are relevant to the argument on arbitrariness, and also provide a basis for testing the justifiability of such a penalty. They do not, however, do more than that.

The Judgement of the Tanzanian Court of Appeal

¹⁴⁶ S v Senonohi, supra note 76, at 734F-G.

[114] There is support for part of the Attorney General's argument in the judgment of the Tanzanian Court of Appeal in Mbushuu and Another v The Republic.¹⁴⁷ It was held in this case that the death sentence amounted to cruel and degrading punishment, which is prohibited under the Tanzanian Constitution, but that despite this finding, it was not unconstitutional. The Constitution authorised derogations to be made from basic rights for legitimate purposes, and a derogation was lawful if it was not arbitrary, and was reasonably necessary for such purpose. The legitimate purposes to which the death sentence was directed was a constitutional requirement that "everyone's right to life shall be protected by law." The death sentence was a mandatory penalty for murder, but it was not considered by the Court to be arbitrary because decisions as to guilt or innocence are taken by judges. There was no proof one way or the other that the death sentence was necessarily a more effective punishment than a long period of imprisonment. In the view of the Court, however, it was for society and not the courts to decide whether the death sentence was a necessary punishment. The Court was satisfied that society favoured the death sentence, and that in the circumstances "the reasonable and necessary" standard had been met. Accordingly, it held that the death sentence was a lawful derogation from the prohibition of cruel and degrading punishment, and thus valid.

¹⁴⁷ Criminal Appeal No. 142 of 1994; 30 January 1995.

[115] The approach of the Tanzanian Court of Appeal to issues concerning the limitation of basic rights seems to have been influenced by the language of the Tanzanian Constitution,¹⁴⁸ and rules of interpretation developed by the Courts to deal with that language. The relevant provisions of our Constitution are different and the correct approach to the interpretation of the limitations clause must be found in the language of section 33 construed in the context of the Constitution as a whole. It is for the Court, and not society or Parliament, to decide whether the death sentence is justifiable under the provisions of section 33 of our Constitution.¹⁴⁹ In doing so we can have regard to societal attitudes in evaluating whether the legislation is reasonable and necessary, but ultimately the decision must be ours. If the decision of the Tanzanian Court of Appeal is inconsistent with this conclusion, I must express my disagreement with it.

Deterrence

[116] The Attorney General attached considerable weight to the need for a deterrent to violent crime. He argued that the countries which had abolished the death penalty were on the whole developed and peaceful countries in which other penalties might be sufficient deterrents. We had not reached that stage of development, he said. If in years to come we did so, we could do away with the death penalty. Parliament could decide when that time has come. At present, however, so the argument went, the death sentence is an indispensable weapon if we are serious about combatting violent crime.

¹⁴⁸ Id., wherein Ramadhani JA., highlights with respect to the Republic of Tanzania Constitution, that article 30(2) provides that laws, and actions taken in accordance with such laws, shall not be invalidated under the Constitution if such laws (or actions) make provision, inter alia, for "ensuring that the rights and freedom of other or the public interest are not prejudiced by the misuse of the individual rights and freedom." Id. at p. 23. The judgment refers to "derogations" and not to "limitations".

¹⁴⁹ See discussion on public opinion supra paras. 87 to 89.

[117] The need for a strong deterrent to violent crime is an end the validity of which is not open to question. The state is clearly entitled, indeed obliged, to take action to protect human life against violation by others. In all societies there are laws which regulate the behaviour of people and which authorise the imposition of civil or criminal sanctions on those who act unlawfully. This is necessary for the preservation and protection of society. Without law, society cannot exist. Without law, individuals in society have no rights. The level of violent crime in our country has reached alarming proportions. It poses a threat to the transition to democracy, and the creation of development opportunities for all, which are primary goals of the Constitution. The high level of violent crime is a matter of common knowledge and is amply borne out by the statistics provided by the Commissioner of Police in his amicus brief. The power of the State to impose sanctions on those who break the law cannot be doubted. It is of fundamental importance to the future of our country that respect for the law should be restored, and that dangerous criminals should be apprehended and dealt with firmly. Nothing in this judgment should be understood as detracting in any way from that proposition. But the question is not whether criminals should go free and be allowed to escape the consequences of their anti-social behaviour. Clearly they should not; and equally clearly those who engage in violent crime should be met with the full rigour of the law. The question is whether the death sentence for murder can legitimately be made part of that law. And this depends on whether it meets the criteria prescribed by section 33(1).

[118] The Attorney General pointed to the substantial increase in the incidence of violent crime over the past five years during which the death sentence has not been enforced. He contended that this supported his argument that imprisonment is not a sufficient deterrent, and that we have not yet reached the stage of development where we can do without the death sentence. Throughout this period, however, the death sentence remained a lawful punishment, and was in fact imposed by the courts although the sentences were not carried out.¹⁵⁰ The moratorium was only announced formally on

27 March 1992.¹⁵¹ A decision could have been taken at any time to terminate the moratorium on executions, and none of the criminals had any assurance that the moratorium would still be in place if they were to be caught, brought to trial, convicted and sentenced to death.

¹⁵¹ In the Statement of Minister of Justice dated 27 March 1992, supra note 31, para. 22.

[120] Homelessness, unemployment, poverty and the frustration consequent upon such conditions are other causes of the crime wave. And there is also the important factor that the police and prosecuting authorities have been unable to cope with this. The statistics presented in the police amicus brief show that most violent crime is not solved, and the Attorney General confirmed that the risk of a criminal being apprehended and convicted for such offences is somewhere between 30 and 40 per cent. Throughout the period referred to by the Attorney General the death sentence remained on the statute book and was imposed on convicted murderers when the Courts considered it appropriate to do so.

[121] We would be deluding ourselves if we were to believe that the execution of the few persons sentenced to death during this period, and of a comparatively few other people each year from now onwards will provide the solution to the unacceptably high rate of crime. There will always be unstable, desperate, and pathological people for whom the risk of arrest and imprisonment provides no deterrent, but there is nothing to show that a decision to carry out the death sentence would have any impact on the behaviour of such people, or that there will be more of them if imprisonment is the only sanction. No information was placed before us by the Attorney General in regard to the rising crime rate other than the bare statistics, and they alone prove nothing, other than that we are living in a violent society in which most crime goes unpunished - something that we all know.

[122] The greatest deterrent to crime is the likelihood that offenders will be apprehended, convicted and punished. It is that which is presently lacking in our criminal justice system; and it is at this level and through addressing the causes of crime that the State must seek to combat lawlessness.

[123] In the debate as to the deterrent effect of the death sentence, the issue is sometimes dealt with as if the choice to be made is between the death sentence and the murder going unpunished. That is of course not so. The choice to be made is between putting the criminal to death and subjecting the criminal to the severe punishment of a long term of imprisonment which, in an appropriate case, could be a sentence of life imprisonment.¹⁵³ Both are deterrents, and the question is whether the possibility of being sentenced to death, rather than being sentenced to life imprisonment, has a marginally greater deterrent effect, and whether the Constitution sanctions the limitation of rights affected thereby.

[124] In the course of his argument the Attorney General contended that if sentences imposed by the Courts on convicted criminals are too lenient, the law will be brought into disrepute, and members of society will then take the law into their own hands. Law is brought into disrepute if the justice system is ineffective and criminals are not punished. But if the justice system is effective and criminals are apprehended, brought to trial and in serious cases subjected to severe sentences, the law will not fall into disrepute. We have made the commitment to "a future founded on the recognition of human rights, democracy and peaceful co-existence...for all South Africans."¹⁵⁴ Respect for life and dignity lies at the heart of that commitment. One of the reasons for the prohibition of capital punishment is "that allowing the State to kill will cheapen the value of human life and thus [through not doing so] the State will serve in a sense as a role model for individuals in society."¹⁵⁵ Our country needs such role models.

[125] The Attorney General also contended that if even one innocent life should be saved by the execution of perpetrators of vile murders, this would provide sufficient justification for the death penalty.¹⁵⁶ The hypothesis that innocent lives might be saved must be weighed against the values underlying the Constitution, and the ability of the State to serve "as a role model". In the long run more lives may be saved through the inculcation of a rights culture, than through the execution of murderers.

[126] The death sentence has been reserved for the most extreme cases, and the overwhelming majority of convicted murderers are not and, since extenuating circumstances became a relevant factor sixty years ago, have not been sentenced to death in South Africa. I referred earlier to the figures provided by the Attorney General which show that between the amendment of the Criminal Procedure Act in 1990, and January 1995, which is the date of his written argument in the present case, 243 death sentences were imposed, of which 143 were confirmed by the Appellate Division. Yet, according to statistics placed before us by the Commissioner of Police and the Attorney General, there were on average approximately 20 000 murders committed, and 9 000 murder cases brought to trial, each year during this period. Would the carrying out of the death sentence on these 143 persons have deterred the other murderers or saved any lives?

[127] It was accepted by the Attorney General that this is a much disputed issue in the literature on the death sentence. He contended that it is common sense that the most feared penalty will provide the greatest deterrent, but accepted that there is no proof that the death sentence is in fact a greater deterrent than life imprisonment for a long period. It is, he said, a proposition that is not capable of proof, because one never knows about those who have been deterred; we know only about those who have not been deterred, and who have committed terrible crimes. This is no doubt true, and the fact that there is no proof that the death sentence is a greater deterrent than imprisonment does not necessarily mean that the requirements of section 33 cannot be met. It is, however, a major obstacle in the way of the Attorney General's argument, for he has to satisfy us that the penalty is reasonable and necessary, and the doubt which exists in regard to the deterrent effect of the sentence must weigh heavily against his argument. "A punishment as extreme and as irrevocable as death cannot be predicated upon speculation as to what the deterrent effect might be..."¹⁵⁷ I should add that this obstacle would not be removed by the implementation of a suggestion in one of the amicus briefs, that section 277(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act should be made more specific, and should identify the extreme categories of murder for which the death sentence would be a permissible punishment.

Prevention

¹⁵⁷ Wright, CJ., in People v. Anderson, supra note 62, at 897.

[128] Prevention is another object of punishment. The death sentence ensures that the criminal will never again commit murders, but it is not the only way of doing so, and life imprisonment also serves this purpose. Although there are cases of gaol murders, imprisonment is regarded as sufficient for the purpose of prevention in the overwhelming number of cases in which there are murder convictions, and there is nothing to suggest that it is necessary for this purpose in the few cases in which death sentences are imposed.

Retribution

[129] Retribution is one of the objects of punishment, but it carries less weight than deterrence.¹⁵⁸

The righteous anger of family and friends of the murder victim, reinforced by the public abhorrence of vile crimes, is easily translated into a call for vengeance. But capital punishment is not the only way that society has of expressing its moral outrage at the crime that has been committed. We have long outgrown the literal application of the biblical injunction of "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth". Punishment must to some extent be commensurate with the offence, but there is no requirement that it be equivalent or identical to it. The state does not put out the eyes of a person who has blinded another in a vicious assault, nor does it punish a rapist, by castrating him and submitting him to the utmost humiliation in gaol. The state does not need to engage in the cold and calculated killing of murderers in order to express moral outrage at their conduct. A very long prison sentence is also a way of expressing outrage and visiting retribution upon the criminal.

[130] Retribution ought not to be given undue weight in the balancing process. The Constitution is premised on the assumption that ours will be a constitutional state founded on the recognition of human rights.¹⁵⁹ The concluding provision on National Unity and ¹⁵⁸ S v P 1991 (1) SA 517 (A) at 523D-F. See also supra note 74.

¹⁵⁹ The Preamble to the Constitution records that the new order will be a "constitutional state in which...all citizens shall be able to enjoy and exercise their fundamental rights and freedoms." The commitment to recognition of human rights is reaffirmed in the concluding provision on National Unity and Reconciliation.

Reconciliation contains the following commitment:

The adoption of this Constitution lays the secure foundation for the people of South Africa to transcend the divisions and strife of the past, which generated gross violations of human rights, the transgression of humanitarian principles in violent conflicts and a legacy of hatred, fear, guilt and revenge.

These can now be addressed on the basis that there is a need for understanding but not for vengeance, a need for reparation but not for retaliation, a need for ubuntu but not for victimisation. (Emphasis supplied)

[131] Although this commitment has its primary application in the field of political reconciliation, it is not without relevance to the enquiry we are called upon to undertake in the present case. To be consistent with the value of ubuntu ours should be a society that "wishes to prevent crime...[not] to kill criminals simply to get even with them."¹⁶⁰

¹⁶⁰ Brennan, J., in Furman v. Georgia, supra note 34, at 305.

[132] Section 33(1)(b) provides that a limitation shall not negate the essential content of the right.

There is uncertainty in the literature concerning the meaning of this provision. It seems to have entered constitutional law through the provisions of the German Constitution, and in addition to the South African constitution, appears, though not precisely in the same form, in the constitutions of Namibia, Hungary, and possibly other countries as well. The difficulty of interpretation arises from the uncertainty as to what the "essential content" of a right is, and how it is to be determined. Should this be determined subjectively from the point of view of the individual affected by the invasion of the right, or objectively, from the point of view of the nature of the right and its place in the constitutional order, or possibly in some other way?

Professor Currie draws attention to the large number of theories which have been propounded by German scholars as to the how the "essence" of a right should be discerned and how the constitutional provision should be applied.¹⁶¹ The German Federal Constitutional Court has apparently avoided to a large extent having to deal with this issue by subsuming the enquiry into the proportionality test that it applies and the precise scope and meaning of the provision is controversial.¹⁶²

[133] If the essential content of the right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment is to be found in respect for life and dignity, the death sentence for murder, if viewed subjectively from the point of view of the convicted prisoner, clearly negates the essential content of the right. But if it is viewed objectively from the point of view of a constitutional norm that requires life and dignity to be protected, the punishment does not necessarily negate the essential content of the right. It has been argued before this Court that one of the purposes of such punishment is to protect the life and hence the dignity of innocent members of the public, and if it in fact does so, the punishment will not negate the constitutional norm. On this analysis it would, however, have to be shown that the punishment serves its intended purpose. This would involve a consideration of the deterrent and preventative effects of the punishment and whether they add anything to the alternative of life imprisonment. If they do not, they cannot be said to serve a life protecting purpose. If the negation is viewed both objectively and subjectively, the ostensible purpose of the punishment would have to be weighed against the destruction of the individual's life. For the purpose of that analysis the element of retribution would have to be excluded and the "life saving" quality of the punishment would have to be established.

¹⁶² Grimm, supra note 138, at page 276 states, "operating at an earlier stage than the essential content limit in Article 19(2), the proportionality principle has rendered the former almost insignificant." Currie, supra note 139, notes that the German Federal Constitutional Court has remarked in at least one case that dealt with the 'essential content' question that the Court "state[d] an alternative ground that, because of its greater stringency [the proportionality test], has made it unnecessary in most cases to inquire whether a restriction invades the 'essential content' of a basic right." Currie, supra note 139, at 306-307 (citing 22 BVerfGE 180, 220 (1967)).

[134] It is, however, not necessary to solve this problem in the present case. At the very least the provision evinces concern that, under the guise of limitation, rights should not be taken away altogether. It was presumably the same concern that influenced Dickson CJC to say in R v Oakes that rights should be limited "as little as possible",¹⁶³ and the German Constitutional Court to hold in the life imprisonment case that all possibility of parole ought not to be excluded.¹⁶⁴

The Balancing Process

[135] In the balancing process, deterrence, prevention and retribution must be weighed against the alternative punishments available to the state, and the factors which taken together make capital punishment cruel, inhuman and degrading: the destruction of life, the annihilation of dignity, the elements of arbitrariness, inequality and the possibility of error in the enforcement of the penalty.

[136] The Attorney General argued that the right to life and the right to human dignity were not absolute concepts. Like all rights they have their limits. One of those limits is that a person who murders in circumstances where the death penalty is permitted by section 277, forfeits his or her right to claim protection of life and dignity. He sought to support this argument by reference to the principles of self-defence. If the law recognises the right to take the life of a wrongdoer in a situation in which self-defence is justified, then, in order to deter others, and to ensure that the wrongdoer does not again kill an innocent person, why should it not recognise the power of the state to take the life of a convicted murderer? Conversely, if the death sentence negates the essential content of the right to life, how can the taking of the life of another person in self-defence, or even to protect the State itself during war or rebellion, ever be justified.

[137] This argument is fallacious. The rights vested in every person by Chapter Three of the Constitution are subject to limitation under section 33. In times of emergency, some may be suspended in accordance with the provisions of section 34 of the Constitution.¹⁶⁵ But subject to this, the rights vest in every person, including criminals convicted of vile crimes. Such criminals do not forfeit their rights under the Constitution and are entitled, as all in our country now are, to assert these rights, including the right to life, the right to dignity and the right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment. Whether or not a particular punishment is inconsistent with these rights depends upon an interpretation of the relevant provisions of the Constitution, and not upon a moral judgment that a murderer should not be allowed to claim them.

¹⁶⁵ SECTIONS 8(2), 9, 10 AND 11(2) ARE IN FACT NON-DEROGABLE RIGHTS AND IN TERMS OF SECTION 34(S)(C) CANNOT BE SUSPENDED DURING AN EMERGENCY.

[138] Self-defence is recognised by all legal systems. Where a choice has to be made between the lives of two or more people, the life of the innocent is given preference over the life of the aggressor. This is consistent with section 33(1). To deny the innocent person the right to act in self-defence would deny to that individual his or her right to life. The same is true where lethal force is used against a hostage taker who threatens the life of the hostage. It is permissible to kill the hostage taker to save the life of the innocent hostage. But only if the hostage is in real danger. The law solves problems such as these through the doctrine of proportionality, balancing the rights of the aggressor against the rights of the victim, and favouring the life or lives of innocents over the life or lives of the guilty.¹⁶⁶ But there are strict limits to the taking of life, even in the circumstances that have been described, and the law insists upon these limits being adhered to. In any event, there are material respects in which killing in self-defence or necessity differ from the execution of a criminal by the State. Self-defence takes place at the time of the threat to the victim's life, at the moment of the emergency which gave rise to the necessity and, traditionally, under circumstances in which no less-severe alternative is readily available to the potential victim. Killing by the State takes place long after the crime was committed, at a time when there is no emergency and under circumstances which permit the careful consideration of alternative punishment.

¹⁶⁶ Self-defence is treated in our law as a species of private defence. It is not necessary for the purposes of this judgement to examine the limits of private defence. Until now, our law has allowed killing in defence of life, but also has allowed killing in defence of property, or other legitimate interest, in circumstances where it is reasonable and necessary to do so. S v Van Wyk 1967 (1) SA 488 (A). Whether this is consistent with the values of our new legal order is not a matter which arises for consideration in the present case. What is material is that the law applies a proportionality test, weighing the interest protected against the interest of the wrongdoer. These interests must now be weighed in the light of the Constitution.

[139] The examples of war and rebellion are also not true analogies. War and rebellion are special cases which must be dealt with in terms of the legal principles governing such situations. It is implicit in any constitutional order that the State can act to put down rebellion and to protect itself against external aggression. Where it is necessary in the pursuit of such ends to kill in the heat of battle the taking of life is sanctioned under the Constitution by necessary implication, and as such, is permissible in terms of section 4(1).¹⁶⁷ But here also there are limits. Thus prisoners of war who have been captured and who are no longer a threat to the State cannot be put to death; nor can lethal force be used against rebels when it is not necessary to do so for the purposes of putting down the rebellion.

[140] The case of a police officer shooting at an escaping criminal was also raised in argument. This is permitted under section 49(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act as a last resort if it is not possible to arrest the criminal in the ordinary way. Once again, there are limits. It would not, for instance, be permissible to shoot at point blank range at a criminal who has turned his or her back upon a police officer in order to abscond, when other methods of subduing and arresting the criminal are possible. We are not concerned here with the validity of section 49(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act, and I specifically refrain from expressing any view thereon. Greater restriction on the use of lethal force may be one of the consequences of the establishment of a constitutional state which respects every person's right to life. Shooting at a fleeing criminal in the heat of the moment, is not necessarily to be equated with the execution of a captured criminal. But, if one of the consequences of this judgment might be to render the provisions of section 49(2) unconstitutional, the legislature will have to modify the provisions of the section in order to bring it into line with the Constitution. In any event, the constitutionality of the death sentence for murder does not depend upon whether it is permissible for life to be taken in other circumstances currently sanctioned by law. It depends upon whether it is justifiable as a penalty in terms of section 33 of the Constitution. In deciding this question, the fact that the person sentenced to death is denied his or her right to life is of the greatest importance.

[141] The Attorney General argued that all punishment involves an impairment of dignity.

Imprisonment, which is the alternative to the death sentence, severely limits a prisoner's fundamental rights and freedoms. There is only the barest freedom of movement or of residence in prison, and other basic rights such as freedom of expression and freedom of assembly are severely curtailed.

[142] Dignity is inevitably impaired by imprisonment or any other punishment, and the undoubted power of the state to impose punishment as part of the criminal justice system, necessarily involves the power to encroach upon a prisoner's dignity. But a prisoner does not lose all his or her rights on entering prison.

[Prisoners retain] those absolute natural rights relating to personality, to which every man is entitled. True [their] freedom had been greatly impaired by the legal process of imprisonment but they were entitled to demand respect for what remained. The fact that their liberty had been legally curtailed could afford no excuse for a further legal encroachment upon it. [It was] contended that the [prisoners] once in prison could claim only such rights as the Ordinance and the regulations conferred. But the directly opposite view is surely the correct one. They were entitled to all their personal rights and personal dignity not temporarily taken away by law, or necessarily inconsistent with the circumstances in which they had been placed.¹⁶⁸

¹⁶⁸ Innes J in Whittaker v Roos and Bateman 1912 AD 92 at 122-123. See also, Goldberg and Others v Minister of Prisons and Others 1979 (1) SA 14 (A) at 39H-40C; Nestor and Others v Minister of Police and Others 1984 (4) SA 230 (SWA) at 250F-251D.

[143] A prisoner is not stripped naked, bound, gagged and chained to his or her cell. The right of association with other prisoners, the right to exercise, to write and receive letters and the rights of personality referred to by Innes J are of vital importance to prisoners and highly valued by them precisely because they are confined, have only limited contact with the outside world, and are subject to prison discipline. Imprisonment is a severe punishment; but prisoners retain all the rights to which every person is entitled under Chapter Three subject only to limitations imposed by the prison regime that are justifiable under section 33.¹⁶⁹ Of these, none are more important than the section 11(2) right not to be subjected to "torture of any kind...nor to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment." There is a difference between encroaching upon rights for the purpose of punishment and destroying them altogether. It is that difference with which we are concerned in the present case.

Conclusion

[144] The rights to life and dignity are the most important of all human rights, and the source of all other personal rights in Chapter Three. By committing ourselves to a society founded on the recognition of human rights we are required to value these two rights above all others. And this must be demonstrated by the State in everything that it does, including the way it punishes criminals. This is not achieved by objectifying murderers and putting them to death to serve as an example to others in the expectation that they might possibly be deterred thereby.

[145] In the balancing process the principal factors that have to be weighed are on the one hand the destruction of life and dignity that is a consequence of the implementation of the death sentence, the elements of arbitrariness and the possibility of error in the enforcement of capital punishment, and the existence of a severe alternative punishment (life imprisonment) and, on the other, the claim that the death sentence is a greater deterrent to murder, and will more effectively prevent its commission, than would a sentence of life imprisonment, and that there is a public demand for retributive justice to be imposed on murderers, which only the death sentence can meet.

- [146] Retribution cannot be accorded the same weight under our Constitution as the rights to life and dignity, which are the most important of all the rights in Chapter Three. It has not been shown that the death sentence would be materially more effective to deter or prevent murder than the alternative sentence of life imprisonment would be. Taking these factors into account, as well as the elements of arbitrariness and the possibility of error in enforcing the death penalty, the clear and convincing case that is required to justify the death sentence as a penalty for murder, has not been made out. The requirements of section 33(1) have accordingly not been satisfied, and it follows that the provisions of section 277(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977 must be held to be inconsistent with section 11(2) of the Constitution. In the circumstances, it is not necessary for me to consider whether the section would also be inconsistent with sections 8, 9 or 10 of the Constitution if they had been dealt with separately and not treated together as giving meaning to section 11(2).

Section 241(8) of the Constitution

- [147] In the present case the trial had been completed but an appeal to the Appellate Division was pending, when the 1993 Constitution came into force. The validity of the trial, and the fact that the death sentences were competent sentences at the time they were imposed, are not in issue. What is in issue before the Appellate Division is whether the death sentences can and should be confirmed. It has postponed its judgment pending the determination of the issues referred to us for our decision.
- [148] It is not necessary to deal with the provisions of section 241(8) in the present case. The Attorney General correctly conceded that if the death penalty for murder is unconstitutional, it would not be competent to carry out the death sentences that have been imposed on the accused. The prohibition of cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment is applicable to all punishments implemented after the 27th April, and can be invoked to prevent a punishment being carried out even if the punishment was lawful when it was imposed.¹⁷⁰

The Order to be made

[149] I have dealt in this judgment only with the provisions of section 277(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act, but it is clear that if subsection (1)(a) is inconsistent with the Constitution, subsections (1)(c) to (1)(f) must also be unconstitutional, so too must provisions of legislation corresponding to sections 277(1)(a), (c), (d), (e) and (f) that are in force in parts of the national territory in terms of section 229 of the Constitution. Different considerations arising from section 33(1) might possibly apply to subsection (b) which makes provision for the imposition of the death sentence for treason committed when the republic is in a state of war. No argument was addressed to us on this issue, and I refrain from expressing any views thereon.

[150] The proper sentence to be imposed on the accused is a matter for the Appellate Division and not for us to decide. This, and other capital cases which have been postponed by the Appellate Division pending the decision of this Court on the constitutionality of the death sentence, can now be dealt with in accordance with the order made in this case. Lest there be any doubt on this score, one of the effects of our judgment is to prohibit the State, or any of its organs, from executing persons whose appeals against sentences of death have been disposed of. Such persons will remain in custody under the sentences imposed on them until such sentences have been set aside in accordance with law, and substituted by appropriate and lawful punishments. This will form part of the order made.

¹⁷⁰ See Pratt v Attorney General for Jamaica; and Catholic Commission for Justice in Zimbabwe v The Attorney General, Zimbabwe, and Others, supra note 3.

1. In terms of section 98(5) of the Constitution, and with effect from the date of this order, the provisions of paragraphs (a), (c), (d), (e) and (f) of section 277(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act, and all corresponding provisions of other legislation sanctioning capital punishment which are in force in any part of the national territory in terms of section 229, are declared to be inconsistent with the Constitution and, accordingly, to be invalid.
2. In terms of section 98(7) of the Constitution, and with effect from the date of this order:
 - (a) the State is and all its organs are forbidden to execute any person already sentenced to death under any of the provisions thus declared to be invalid; and
 - (b) all such persons will remain in custody under the sentences imposed on them, until such sentences have been set aside in accordance with law and substituted by lawful punishments.

[152] ACKERMANN J: I concur fully in the judgment of the President, both regarding his conclusions and his reasons therefor, save in the respects hereinafter set forth. I also agree with the order proposed by him.

[153] I place greater emphasis on the inevitably arbitrary nature of the decision involved in the imposition of the death penalty as a form of punishment in supporting the conclusion that it constitutes "cruel", "inhuman" and "degrading punishment" within the meaning of section 11(2) of the Constitution, which cannot be saved by section 33(1).

[154] In paragraphs [43] to [56] of his judgment the President deals with the arbitrariness and inequality of the death penalty. He deals (more particularly in paragraphs [55] and [56]) with the difficulties faced by the US Supreme Court in trying to eliminate the dangers of arbitrariness by employing the due process provisions of the Fifth and

ACKERMANN J

Fourteenth Amendments. Such efforts cause considerable expense and interminable delays, and the President concludes by expressing the view that we should not follow the United States route. I agree, but that does not mean that we ought not to accord greater weight to considerations of arbitrariness and inequality. The US Supreme Court has been obliged to follow the route it did because, so it seems to me, their Constitution postulates (by implication) that it is possible to devise due process mechanisms which can deal with the arbitrary and unequal features of death sentence imposition. We are not so constrained. Our right to life is not qualified in the way it is qualified in the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments of the US Constitution. We are not constitutionally constrained to accept the arbitrary consequences of the imposition of the death penalty.

- [155] The preamble to the Constitution refers to the creation of a new order in a state, which, amongst other things, is described as a "constitutional state." Section 4(1) declares the Constitution to be the "supreme law of the Republic" which by virtue of section 4(2) "binds all legislative, executive and judicial organs of state at all levels of government." Every person's right to equality before the law is entrenched in section 8(1) and in section 8(2) a substantial number of different grounds of unfair discrimination are prohibited. The constitutional importance of equality is further underscored in section 35(1) which enjoins the courts to promote the values which underlie an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality in interpreting the provisions of Chapter 3.
- [156] In reaction to our past, the concept and values of the constitutional state, of the "regstaat", and the constitutional right to equality before the law are deeply foundational to the creation of the "new order" referred to in the preamble. The detailed enumeration and description in section 33(1) of the criteria which must be met before the legislature can limit a right entrenched in Chapter 3 of the Constitution emphasises the importance, in our new constitutional state, of reason and justification when rights are sought to be curtailed. We have moved from a past characterised by much which was arbitrary and unequal in the operation of the law to a present and a future in a constitutional state where state action must be such that it is capable of being analysed and justified rationally. The idea of the constitutional state presupposes a system whose operation can be rationally tested against or in terms of the law. Arbitrariness, by its very nature, is dissonant with these core concepts of our new constitutional order. Neither arbitrary action nor laws or rules which are inherently arbitrary or must lead to arbitrary application can, in any real sense, be tested against the precepts or principles of the Constitution¹⁷¹. Arbitrariness must also inevitably, by ¹⁷¹See in general Prof. E Mureinik 'A Bridge to Where? Introducing the Interim Bill of Rights' 10 (1994) SAJHR 31. At 32 the learned author points out that -

"If the new Constitution is a bridge away from a culture of authority, it is clear what it must be a bridge to. It must lead to a culture of justification - a culture in which every exercise of power is expected to be justified; ... If the Constitution is to be a bridge in this direction, it is plain that the Bill of Rights must be its chief strut".

At 38 he points out that Chapter 3 of the Constitution, and in particular section 24, the administrative justice clause -

"gives a lead which, properly followed, would put South Africa at the frontiers of the search for a culture of justification."

ACKERMANN J

its very nature, lead to the unequal treatment of persons. Arbitrary action, or decision making, is incapable of providing a rational explanation as to why similarly placed persons are treated in a substantially different way. Without such a rational justifying mechanism, unequal treatment must follow.

[157] It is in the context of our (textually) unqualified section 9 right to life that I find certain observations in the US decisions supportive on the issue and consequences of arbitrariness. We are free to look at the incidence and consequences of arbitrariness without being constrained by a constitutional authorization (whether explicit or implicit) of the death penalty. One must of course constantly bear in mind that the relevant criteria in the Eighth Amendment of the US Constitution also differ from those in section 11(2) of our Constitution. Whereas in the former they are "cruel and unusual" in the latter they are "cruel, inhuman or degrading".

[158] In Furman v. Georgia¹⁷² the US Supreme Court had to consider a case where the determination of whether the penalty for murder and rape should be death or another punishment was left by the State of Georgia to the discretion of the judge or of the jury. In the course of his judgment¹⁷³ Douglas J referred with approval to the following comments in a journal article:

"A penalty ... should be considered 'unusually' imposed if it is administered arbitrarily or discriminatingly ... [t]he extreme rarity with which applicable death penalty provisions are put to use raises a strong inference of arbitrariness."

He further expressed the view¹⁷⁴ that -

"[t]he high service rendered by the 'cruel and unusual' punishment clause of the Eighth Amendment is to require legislatures to write penal laws that are evenhanded, non-selective, and nonarbitrary ..."

[159] On the issue of arbitrariness Brennan J observed in Furman¹⁷⁵ that -

"In determining whether a punishment comports with human dignity, we are aided also by a second principle inherent in the [Cruel and Unusual Punishments] Clause - that the State must not arbitrarily inflict a severe punishment. This principle derives from the notion that the State does not respect human dignity when, without reason, it inflicts upon some people a severe punishment that it does not inflict upon others."

¹⁷⁵Id. at 274.

ACKERMANN J

He also stated¹⁷⁶ (in a context not dissimilar to ours where a vast number of murders are committed, a large number of accused charged and convicted but relatively few ultimately executed) that -

"No one has yet suggested a rational basis that could differentiate in those terms the few who die from the many who go to prison. Crimes and criminals simply do not admit of a distinction that can be drawn so finely as to explain, on that ground, the execution of such a tiny sample of those eligible Nor is the distinction credible in fact."

[160] Stewart J founded his judgment on the fact that the imposition of so extreme a penalty in pursuance of the Georgia statute was inevitably arbitrary. After referring to the fact that "the petitioners are among a capriciously selected random handful upon whom the sentence of death has in fact been imposed" he concludes simply by holding that -

"the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments cannot tolerate the infliction of a sentence of death under legal systems that permit this unique penalty to be so wantonly and so freakishly imposed"¹⁷⁷

ACKERMANN J

[161] In Callins v. Collins, cert. denied, 114 S.Ct. 1127, 127 L.Ed 435 (1994) Blackmun J filed a dissenting opinion. In it he observed that¹⁷⁸ -

"[e]xperience has taught us that the constitutional goal of eliminating arbitrariness and discrimination from the administration of death, see Furman v. Georgia, supra, can never be achieved without compromising an equally essential component of fundamental fairness - individualized sentencing. See Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586 (1978)."

and, commenting upon its unavoidable arbitrariness, that¹⁷⁹ -

"[i]t is virtually self-evident to me now that no combination of procedural rules or substantive regulations ever can save the death penalty from its inherent constitutional deficiencies. The basic question - does the system accurately and consistently determine which defendants 'deserve' to die? - cannot be answered in the affirmative."

He further expressed the view that¹⁸⁰ -

"[a]lthough most of the public seems to desire, and the Constitution appears to permit, the penalty of death, it surely is beyond dispute that if the death penalty cannot be administered consistently and rationally, it must not be administered at all." (emphasis added) and that¹⁸¹, in the aftermath of the Furman judgment -

"[i]t soon became apparent that discretion could not be eliminated from capital sentencing without threatening the fundamental fairness due a defendant when life is at stake. Just as contemporary society was no longer tolerant of the random or discriminatory infliction of the penalty of death ... evolving standards of decency required due consideration of the uniqueness of each individual defendant when imposing society's ultimate penalty ... [T]he consistency and rationality promised in Furman are inversely related to the fairness owed the individual when considering a sentence of death. A step toward consistency is a step away from fairness".

[162] In considering a constitutional right to life unfettered by the restraints or interpretative problems of the right in the US Constitution, I am of the view that the above dicta are appropriate to the issue of the constitutionality of the death sentence in South Africa. As general propositions, which can be applied in the context of our Constitution, I would accept and endorse the views of Blackmun J.

[163] As to the more general principle that arbitrariness conflicts with the idea of a right to equality and equality before the law I am fortified in my view by the following remarks of Bhagwati, J in Gandhi v. Union of India 1978 SC 597 at 624:

"We must reiterate here what was pointed out by the majority in E.P. Royappa v. State of Tamil Nadu (1974) 2 SCR 348: (AIR 1974 SC 555) namely, that 'from a positivistic point of view, equality is antithetic to arbitrariness. In fact equality and arbitrariness are sworn enemies; one belongs to the rule of law in a republic, while the other, to the whim and caprice of an absolute monarch. Where an act is arbitrary, it is implicit in it that it is unequal both according to political logic and constitutional law and is, therefore violative of Article 14.'"

[164] I am mindful of the fact that it is virtually impossible (save in the case of rigidly circumscribed mandatory sentences - which present other dangers) to avoid elements of arbitrariness in the imposition of any punishment. Arbitrary elements are present in ¹⁸¹Id. at 1132.

the difficult decision to send an offender to prison for the first time, or in deciding what the appropriate length of the prison sentence should be in any case where it is imposed. However, the consequences of the death sentence, as a form of punishment, differ so radically from any other sentence that the death sentence differs not only in degree but also in substance from any other form of punishment. A sentence which preserves life differs incomparably from one which obliterates life. The executed person has, in fact, "lost the right to have rights."¹⁸² In this sense the death sentence is unique and ¹⁸²Trop v. Dulles 356 US 84 (1958) at 102 quoted with approval by Brennan J in Furman, supra note 2, at 289. See also Stewart J in Furman at 306:

"The penalty of death differs from all other forms of criminal punishment, not in degree but in kind. It is unique in its total irrevocability. It is unique in its rejection of rehabilitation of the convict as a basic purpose of criminal justice. And it is unique, finally, in its absolute renunciation of all that is embodied in our concept of humanity."

ACKERMANN J

the dimension and consequences of arbitrariness in its imposition differ fundamentally from the dimension and consequences of arbitrariness in the imposition of any other punishment¹⁸³.

¹⁸³In Callins v. Collins, supra, at 1132, Blackmun J, quoting from the opinion of Stewart, Powell and Stevens JJ in Woodson v. North Carolina 428 US 280 (1976) at 305, pointed out that because of the qualitative difference of the death penalty, "there is a corresponding difference in the need for reliability in the determination that death is the appropriate punishment in a specific case."

ACKERMANN J

[165] In paragraphs [44] to [46] of his judgment the President has referred to the relevant statutory provisions prescribing the tests to be applied for the imposition of the death sentence and the guidelines laid down for their application by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. In the end, whatever guidelines are employed, a process of weighing up has to take place between "mitigating factors" (if any) and "aggravating factors" and thereafter a value judgment made as to whether "the sentence of death is the proper sentence." I am not suggesting that the statutory provisions could have been better formulated or that the Appellate Division guidelines could be improved upon. The fact of the matter is that they leave such a wide latitude for differences of individual assessment, evaluation and normative judgment, that they are inescapably arbitrary to a marked degree. There must be many borderline cases where two courts, with the identical accused and identical facts, would undoubtedly come to different conclusions. I have no doubt that even on a court composed of members of the genus Hercules¹⁸⁴ and Athena there would in many cases be differences of opinion, incapable of rational elucidation, on whether to impose the death penalty in a particular case, where its imposition was, as in the case of section 277(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act, dependant on the application of widely formulated criteria and the exercise of difficult value judgments.

11(2). Where the arbitrary and unequal infliction of punishment occurs at the level of a punishment so unique as the death penalty, it strikes me as being cruel and inhuman. For one person to receive the death sentence, where a similarly placed person does not, is, in my assessment of values, cruel to the person receiving it. To allow chance, in this way, to determine the life or death of a person, is to reduce the person to a cypher in a sophisticated judicial lottery. This is to treat the sentenced person as inhuman. When these considerations are taken in conjunction with those set forth by the President in his judgment, they render the death penalty a cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment. For the reasons expounded by the President in his judgment, and with which I fully agree, neither the infringement of section 9 nor of section 11(2) by section 277(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act, can be saved by the provisions of section 33(1) of the Constitution. Accordingly the provisions of section 277(1)(a) must be held to be inconsistent with sections 9 and 11(2) of the Constitution.

[167] In paragraphs [132] to [134] of his judgment the President alludes to the provision in section 33(1)(b) of the Constitution that a limitation "shall not negate the essential content of the right in question" but, after referring to uncertainties concerning its meaning, finds it unnecessary to resolve the issue in the present case. In paragraph [133] he postulates, however, a subjective and an objective approach to the problem. I do not necessarily agree with his formulation of the objective approach. In my view it is unnecessary in the present case to say anything at all about the meaning to be attached to this provision. It is one which the framers of our Constitution borrowed in part from article 19(2) of the German Basic Law ("Grundgesetz") which provides that "In keinem Falle darf ein Grundrecht in seinem Wesensgehalt angetastet werden"

[168] Members of the public are understandably concerned, often frightened, for their life and safety in a society where the incidence of violent crime is high and the rate of apprehension and conviction of the perpetrators low. This is a pressing public concern. However important it undoubtedly is to emphasise the constitutional importance of individual rights, there is a danger that the other leg of the constitutional state compact may not enjoy the recognition it deserves. I refer to the fact that in a constitutional state individuals agree (in principle at least) to abandon their right to self-help in the protection of their rights only because the state, in the constitutional state compact, assumes the obligation to protect these rights. If the state fails to discharge this duty adequately, there is a danger that individuals might feel justified in using self-help to protect their rights. This is not a fanciful possibility in South Africa. "The need for a strong deterrent to violent crime" is underscored by the President in his judgment as is the duty of the state, through the criminal justice system, to ensure that offenders will be apprehended and convicted, for these steps are conditions precedent to punishment.¹⁷

[169] Apart from deterring others, one of the goals of punishment is to prevent the convicted prisoner from committing crimes again. Both the preventative and reformative components of punishment are directed towards this end, although reformation obviously has the further commendable aim of the betterment of the prisoner. Society as a whole is justifiably concerned that this aim of punishment should be achieved and society fears the possibility that the violent criminal, upon release from prison, will once again harm society. Society is particularly concerned with the possibility of this happening in the case of an unreformed recidivist murderer or rapist if the death penalty is abolished.

¹⁷Para. 117.

ACKERMANN J

[170] The President has rightly pointed out in his judgment that in considering the deterrent effect of the death sentence the evaluation is not to be conducted by contrasting the death penalty with no punishment at all but between the death sentence and "severe punishment of a long term of imprisonment which, in an appropriate case, could be a sentence of life imprisonment";¹⁸ I agree with this approach. With the abolition of the death penalty society needs the firm assurance that the unreformed recidivist murderer or rapist will not be released from prison, however long the sentence served by the prisoner may have been, if there is a reasonable possibility that the prisoner will repeat the crime. Society needs to be assured that in such cases the state will see to it that such a recidivist will remain in prison permanently.

[171] I appreciate the concern of not wishing to anticipate the issue as to whether life imprisonment, however executed and administered, is constitutional or not. At the same time I do not believe that the two issues can be kept in watertight separate juristic compartments. If the death penalty is to be abolished, as I believe it must, society is entitled to the assurance that the state will protect it from further harm from the convicted unreformed recidivist killer or rapist. If there is an individual right not to be put to death by the criminal justice system there is a correlative obligation on the state, through the criminal justice system, to protect society from once again being harmed by the unreformed recidivist killer or rapist. The right and the obligation are inseparably part of the same constitutional state compact.

ACKERMANN J

[172] Article 102 of the German Basic Law declares that capital punishment is abolished. The German Federal Constitutional Court considered the constitutionality of life imprisonment in 1977¹⁹. The provision in the criminal code which prescribes life imprisonment for murder was challenged on the basis that it conflicted with the protection afforded to human dignity (art 1.1) and personal freedom (art 2.2) in the German Basic Law. The Court upheld the law on the basis that it was not shown that the serving of a sentence of life imprisonment leads to irreparable physical or psychological damage to the prisoner's health. The Court did however find that the right to human dignity demands a humane execution of the sentence. This meant that the existing law, which made provision for executive pardon, had to be replaced by a law laying down objective criteria for the release of prisoners serving life sentences. In the course of its judgment, the Court made clear that there is nothing constitutionally objectionable to executing a life sentence in full in cases where the prisoner does not meet the criteria. At page 242 of the judgment the Court said:

"Die Menschenwürde wird auch dann nicht verletzt, wenn der Vollzug der Strafe wegen fortdauernder Gefährlichkeit des Gefangenen notwendig ist und sich aus diesem Grunde eine Begnadigung verbietet. Es ist der staatlichen Gemeinschaft nicht verwehrt, sich gegen einen gemeingefährlichen Straftäter durch Freiheitsentzug zu sichern."

("Human dignity is not infringed when the execution of the sentence remains necessary due to the continuing danger posed by the prisoner and clemency is for this reason precluded. The state is not prevented from protecting the community from dangerous criminals by keeping them incarcerated".)

[173] DIDCOTT J: I agree with Chaskalson P that our new Constitution (Act 200 of 1993)

outlaws capital punishment in South Africa for the crimes covered by his judgment, and I concur in the order giving effect to that conclusion which he proposes to make.

[174] My grounds for believing the death penalty to be unconstitutional for the crimes in question are these. Capital punishment violates the right to life of every person that is protected by section 9 of the Constitution and contravenes the prohibition pronounced in section 11(2) against cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment, both of which bind the state and its organs in terms of section 7(1). The provisions of the Criminal Procedure Act (51 of 1977) that sanction sentences of death for such crimes are not saved from nullification in their consequent clash with sections 9 and 11 (2). For they fail to satisfy the conditions which paragraph (a) of section 33(1) prescribes for their survival as exceptions to the general rule, the conditions requiring that they must be reasonable in the first place and, in a society of the sort described there, justifiable in the second. Nor do they pass the further test of necessity set by paragraph (aa) for any permissible invasion of section 11(2).

[175] Perhaps the essential content of the right to life is negated in addition, an effect not countenanced by paragraph (b) of section 33(1) which subjects the legitimacy of any encroachment on the right to the extra requirement that no such result may ever ensue. That point may be put aside, however, once the requirements of paragraphs (a) and (aa) are not met. Negating the essential content of a constitutional right is a concept less simple and clear than it may appear at first to be. Any definitive ruling on its import that was made now would have a profound bearing on other issues likely to confront us in the future, with implications for them which are difficult to foresee at so early a stage in the development of our jurisprudence. It is better, I therefore feel, not to go into the question on this occasion, but to leave that open for consideration and decision on a different one when it has to be answered.

[176] Nor, for much the same reasons, do I think it wise to venture at present a comprehensive and exact definition of what is encompassed by the constitutional right to life. It suffices for the purposes of this case to say that the proclamation of the right and the respect for it demanded from the state must surely entitle one, at the very least, not to be put to death by the state deliberately, systematically and as an act of policy that denies in principle the value of the victim's life. Those are hardly features of deaths which the state may happen to cause in the course of waging defensive warfare, quelling an insurrection or rescuing hostages, to cite some situations debated before us in which a constitutional protection of life was said to be inconceivable. Such hallmarks do, however, characterise every execution by the state of a criminal.

[177] Whether execution ranks also as a cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment is a question that lends itself to no precise measurement. It calls for a value judgment in an area where personal opinions are prone to differ, a value judgment that can easily become entangled with or be influenced by one's own moral attitude and feelings. Judgments of that order must often be made by courts of law, however, whose training and experience warns them against the trap of undue subjectivity. Such a judgment is now required from us, at all events, and would have been inescapable whichever way the question was answered. Nor do we lack guidance on it. A provision of the Zimbabwean Constitution which banned inhuman or degrading punishment was considered by their Supreme Court in Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace in Zimbabwe v Attorney-General, Zimbabwe, and Others 1993(4) SA 239 (ZSC). Gubbay CJ had this to say about it (at 247 I - 248 B):

"It is a provision that embodies broad and idealistic notions of dignity, humanity and decency. It guarantees that punishment.....of the individual be exercised within the ambit of civilised standards. Any punishment.....incompatible with the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society, or which involve the infliction of unnecessary suffering, is repulsive. What might not have been regarded as inhuman decades ago may be revolting to the new sensitivities which emerge as civilisation advances".

The same goes, I firmly believe, for our section 11(2). Gubbay CJ continued thus (at 248 B-C):

DIDCOTT J

"(A)n application of this approach to whether a form of ... punishment ... is inhuman or degrading is dependent upon the exercise of a value judgment ...; one that must not only take account of the emerging consensus of values in the civilised international community (of which this country is a part) ..., but of contemporary norms operative in Zimbabwe and the sensitivities of its people".

I take that view here too, where such norms and sensitivities are demonstrated, above all else, by the altruistic and humanitarian philosophy which animates the Constitution enjoyed by us nowadays.

[178] Capital punishment was discussed at length in Furman v State of Georgia(1972) 408 US 238, a case handled by the Supreme Court of the United States of America in which a comparably liberal philosophy was expounded by a number of the judges hearing it. Stewart J described that sentence (at 306) as - ".....unique ...in its absolute renunciation of all that is embodied in our concept of humanity."

Brennan J agreed, declaring in the same case (at 290 and 291) that:

"Death is truly an awesome punishment. The calculated killing of a human being by the state involves, by its very nature, a denial of the executed person's humanity. The contrast with the plight of a person punished by imprisonment is evident....A prisoner remains a member of the human family...In comparison to all other punishments...the deliberate extinguishment of human life by the state is uniquely degrading to human dignity".

The distinctive features of the penalty were emphasised by Brennan J elsewhere in his judgment, when he wrote (at 287 and 288) that:

"Death is today an unusually severe punishment, unusual in its pain, in its finality, and in its enormity. No other existing punishment is comparable to death in terms of physical and mental suffering... Since the discontinuance of flogging as a constitutionally permissible punishment..., death remains the only punishment that may involve the conscious infliction of physical pain. In addition, we know that mental pain is an inseparable part of our practice of punishing criminals by death, for the prospect of pending execution exacts a frightful toll during the inevitable long wait between the imposition of sentence and the actual infliction of death... The unusual severity of death is manifested most clearly in its finality and enormity. Death, in these respects, is in a class by itself."

In a Californian case, the one of The People v Anderson (1972) 493 P 2d 880, Wright CJ observed (at 894) that:

"The cruelty of capital punishment lies not only in the execution itself and the pain incident thereto, but also in the dehumanising effects of the lengthy imprisonment prior to execution during which the judicial and administrative procedures essential to due process of law are carried out. Penologists and medical experts agree that the process of carrying out a verdict of death is often so degrading and brutalising to the human spirit as to constitute psychological torture."

Liacos J elaborated on that aspect of the matter in the judgment which he delivered when District Attorney for the Suffolk District v Watson and Others (1980) 381 Mass 648 was decided in Massachusetts. The passages that I shall quote (at 678 - 9, 681 and 683) are vivid. They went thus:

"The ordeals of the condemned are inherent and inevitable in any system that informs the condemned person of his sentence and provides for a gap between sentence and execution. Whatever one believes about the cruelty of the death penalty itself, this violence done the prisoner's mind must afflict the conscience of enlightened government and give the civilised heart no rest... The condemned must confront this primal terror directly, and in the most demeaning circumstances. A condemned man knows, subject to the possibility of successful appeal or commutation, the time and manner of his death. His thoughts about death must necessarily be focussed more precisely than other people's. He must wait for a specific death, not merely expect death in the abstract. Apart from cases of suicide or terminal illness, this certainty is unique to those who are sentenced to death. The state puts the question of death to the condemned person, and he must grapple with it without the consolation that he will die naturally or with his humanity intact. A condemned person experiences an extreme form of debasement... The death sentence itself is a declaration that society deems the prisoner a nullity, less than human and unworthy to live. But that negation of his personality carries through the entire period between sentence and execution.”

A similar account was furnished by Gubbay CJ in the Catholic Commission case when he said (at 268 E-H):

“From the moment he enters the condemned cell, the prisoner is enmeshed in a dehumanising environment of near hopelessness. He is in a place where the sole object is to preserve his life so that he may be executed. The condemned prisoner is ‘the living dead’..... He is kept only with other death sentence prisoners - with those whose appeals have been dismissed and who await death or reprieve; or those whose appeals are still to be heard or are pending judgment. While the right to an appeal may raise the prospect of being allowed to live, the intensity of the trauma is much increased by knowledge of its dismissal. The hope of a reprieve is all that is left. Throughout all this time the condemned prisoner constantly broods over his fate. The horrifying spectre of being hanged by the neck and the apprehension of being made to suffer a painful....death isnever far from mind.”

[179] The Constitutions of California and Massachusetts forbade cruel punishments. Sentences of death were held in each state to be contraventions of the prohibition which could not stand. The decision reached in the case of the District Attorney for Suffolk was announced by Hennessey CJ, who said (at 664 and 665):

“(T)he death penalty is unacceptable under contemporary standards of decency in its unique and inherent capacity to inflict pain. The mental agony is, simply and beyond question, a horror.... We conclude..... that the death penalty, with its full panoply of concomitant physical and mental tortures, is impermissibly cruel.....when judged by contemporary standards of decency.”

Executions were not outlawed altogether, on the other hand, in either Furman v State of Georgia or the case of the Catholic Commission, despite the castigation that they then underwent. The reason lay in the special provisions of the governing charters, the Constitutions of the United States and Zimbabwe, each of which impliedly authorised the punishment, or appeared at least to do so, by protecting the right to life in terms that specifically excluded deaths thus caused. So, while executions could be and were banned in the particular circumstances of the two cases, insufficient room was visible for the total embargo which Brennan J and Gubbay CJ would no doubt have preferred to impose on them. No such obstacle was presented by the Constitution of Massachusetts or found to be raised at that time by the Californian one. None of this detracts, however, from my purpose in repeating the harrowing descriptions given on all four occasions of the ordeal suffered by criminals awaiting and experiencing execution. I am unaware of any criticism ever levelled at those descriptions, which were not disputed before us when reliance was placed on them in argument, and I have no reason to believe that they may have been inaccurate or exaggerated in any material respect. They suffice on the whole to convince me that every sentence of death must be stamped, for the purposes of section 11(2), as an intrinsically cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment.

- [180] I pass to the question whether capital punishment is nevertheless allowed by section 33(1) for the crimes that concern us now. I am not sure that a sentence with a sequel of such cruelty, inhumanity and degradation can ever be rightly regarded in a civilised society as a reasonable or justifiable measure, let alone a necessary one. But I shall assume that the penalty is not innately incapable of meeting those requirements.
- [181] The most familiar argument advanced in support of capital punishment, and the main contention we have to consider under the heading of its suggested permissibility, is that executions operate as a unique deterrent against the future commission of the crimes visited with them. That proposition, if sound indeed, deserves to be taken seriously. It then provides the strongest reason, in cases of murder at all events, for rating the sentence of death as an expedient which, though regrettable, passes constitutional muster. For section 9 protects likewise the lives of the innocent, the lives of potential victims. And that is a factor which must enter the reckoning, especially at present when the crimes of violence perpetrated here have become so prevalent and reached a level so appalling that acute anxiety is felt everywhere about the danger to life lurking around the corner. Such a time was said to be hardly propitious for, such a state of affairs to be scarcely conducive to, any relaxation in the rigour of the law. We dared not exacerbate the danger, we were warned, by reducing the force of deterrence in the combat with it. I agree that the nation cannot afford our doing so, and we would not wish it anyhow. Sight must never be lost, however, of this. The question is not whether capital punishment has a deterrent effect, but whether its deterrent effect happens to be significantly greater than that of the alternative sentence available, a suitably severe sentence of imprisonment which not only gets passed but may also be expected to run its course.

[182] The debate surrounding that question, an old one both here and elsewhere, has often been marked by the production of statistical evidence tendered to show that the death penalty either does not or does serve a uniquely deterrent purpose, as the case may be. The rate of capital crimes committed in a state performing executions is compared with that of the selfsame crimes experienced contemporaneously in some place or another where none occurs. The records of countries that executed convicts formerly, but have ceased doing so, are also examined. Comparisons are then drawn between the rates of those crimes found there before the punishment was abandoned and the ones encountered afterwards. Such statistics, when analysed, have always turned out to be inconclusive in the end. The pictures that they purport to present differ in the first place. The clarity of the sketching is impaired, in the second, by all sorts of variable factors for which no allowance is or can be made. One thinks, for instance, of differences and fluctuations in moral codes and values, in the efficiency and success of police forces in preventing and investigating crimes, in the climate for the collaboration and assistance that they need to obtain from the public and the extent of it which they manage to gain, in the organisation and skills of criminal conspirators and, above all perhaps, in the social and economic conditions that have so profound a bearing everywhere on the incidence of crimes. It therefore did not surprise me to hear that no great store was set in argument by figures of that kind. Others were drawn to our attention, which related to South Africa alone. They recorded the number of alleged murders that were reported here during every year from 1988 until 1993, inclusive of both. A globular increase emerged, the rate of which over the whole period of six years amounted approximately to 35% and accordingly to an annual average of almost 6%, calculated for convenience by means of a straight division that inflates the rate slightly, to be sure, since it disregards the effect on the percentage of the change from year to year in the figure on which it ought actually to be based. Interesting to notice, however, is this. The number of alleged murders rose by a mere 1% or thereabouts during 1993, in contrast with the average rate of 6% postulated, and by 9% during the time from the beginning of 1992 until the end of 1993, which remained lower than the corresponding average of 12% for that period of two years. The significance of the arithmetic lies in the fact that the moratorium on executions was announced, formally and firmly, in March 1992. What the exercise appears to illustrate, if statistics prove anything in such an area, is the irrelevance of the announcement to the rate of murders alleged, which had grown steadily while executions were carried out and was not accelerated by the halt in hangings. The results of my analysis, for what they are worth, may be added to the cogent and stronger reasons which Chaskalson P has supplied in paragraphs [119] and [120] for rejecting the contention addressed to us that the moratorium had contributed materially to the increase.

- [183] Without empirical proof of the extent to which capital punishment worked as a deterrent, neither side could present any argument on the point better than the appeal to common sense that tends to be lodged whenever the debate is conducted. That the extreme penalty must inevitably be more terrifying than anything else was said, on the one hand, to speak for itself. It spoke superficially, we were told on the other, and unrealistically too. What stood to reason was this instead. A very large proportion of murderers were in no mood or state of mind at the time to contemplate or care about the consequences of their killings which they might personally suffer. Those rational enough to take account of them gambled by and large on their escape from detection and arrest, where the odds in their favour were often rather high. The prospect of conviction and punishment was much less immediate and seldom entered their thinking. It was fanciful, should that happen on relatively rare occasions, to imagine their being daunted by the possibility of a journey to the gallows, a journey taken by only a small percentage of convicted murderers even at the height of executions in this country, but not by the probability of incarceration in a jail for many years and perhaps for the rest of their lives. The second school of thought is the one which gets to grips with the realities of the matter, in my opinion, appraising them with a lot more plausibility and persuasiveness than any that attaches to the stark proposition of the first school.

DIDCOTT J

- [184] It is unnecessary, however, to go so far. The protagonists of capital punishment bear the burden of satisfying us that it is permissible under section 33(1). To the extent that their case depends upon the uniquely deterrent effect attributed to it, they must therefore convince us that it indeed serves such a purpose. Nothing less is expected from them in any event when human lives are at stake, lives which may not continue to be destroyed on the mere possibility that some good will come of it. In that task they have failed and, as far as one can see, could never have succeeded.
- [185] In his judgment Chaskalson P has discussed retribution as another goal of punishment, and the arbitrariness and inequality contaminating our processes that culminate in executions. His treatment of the first subject will be found in paragraphs [129] to [131] and of the second one in paragraphs [48] to [54]. I share the view taken by him that retribution smacks too much of vengeance to be accepted, either on its own or in combination with other aims, as a worthy purpose of punishment in the enlightened society to which we South Africans have now committed ourselves, and that the expression of moral outrage which is its further and more defensible object can be communicated effectively by severe sentences of imprisonment. The inequality of which he has written may be curable in the long run, once it is not the result of the arbitrariness described by him. The same does not go, however, for the arbitrariness itself, a flaw in the edifice which Ackermann J has examined as well in paragraphs [158] to [165]. The problem of that is quite as intractable here as it has proved to be in the United States of America, where the courts have wrestled with it constantly and by no means to their satisfaction. For such arbitrariness is largely inherent in the nature of the proceedings from start to finish. Similar trouble may be inescapable, to be sure, in cases that are not capital ones. But in those producing sentences of death the arbitrariness is intolerable because of the irreversibility of the punishment once that gets put into force and the consequent irremediability of mistakes discovered afterwards, mistakes which do occur now and then notwithstanding the myth to the contrary. The defect then militates forcefully, I believe, against the reasonableness and justifiability of capital punishment.
- [186] The conclusion to which I have thus come, echoing the one reached by Chaskalson P, is that the death penalty cannot survive our constitutional scrutiny of it. The line I have taken in arriving there differs in some parts from that preferred by him, occasionally approaching a topic from another angle and sometimes placing the emphasis elsewhere. It has also called for less elaboration in the light of his meticulous research into a mountain of material and his erudite exposition of the themes developed from that. In general, however, I agree with his judgment, a profound and monumental work with which I feel proud to associate myself.

- [187] I wish before ending this judgment to add my voice to that of Chaskalson P in dealing with a couple of points raised in argument on which he has commented already but which I have not yet mentioned.
- [188] Whether capital punishment ought to be abolished or retained amounted, so it was said, to a question of policy which Parliament should decide, representing as it did the citizens of the country and expressing their general will. The issue is also, however, a constitutional one. It has been put before us squarely and properly. We cannot delegate to Parliament the duty that we bear to determine it, or evade that duty otherwise, but must perform it ourselves. In doing so, we were counselled in the alternative, we had to pay great attention to public opinion, which was said to favour the retention of the death penalty. We have no means of ascertaining whether that is indeed so, but I shall assume it to be the case. One may also assume, with a fair measure of confidence, that most members of the public who support capital punishment do so primarily in the belief that, owing to its uniquely deterrent force, they and their families are safer with than without its protection. The feeling is quite understandable, given its basis. But it deserves no further homage if the premise underlying and accounting for it is fallacious or unfounded, as I consider that one to be. To allow ourselves to be influenced unduly by public opinion would, in any event, be wrong. Powell J disparaged such external pressures on constitutional adjudication when he said in Furman v State of Georgia (at 443):

“(T)he weight of the evidence indicates that the public generally has not accepted either the morality or the social merit of the views so passionately advocated by the articulate spokesmen for abolition. But however one may assess (the) amorphous ebb and flow of public opinion generally on this volatile issue, this type of enquiry lies at the periphery - not the core - of the judicial process in constitutional cases. The assessment of popular opinion is essentially a legislative, not a judicial, function."

In similar vein were these remarks passed by Jackson J on the earlier occasion of West Virginia State Board of Education v Barnette and Others (1942) 319 U5 624 (at 638):

"The very purpose of a bill of rights was to withdraw certain subjects from the vicissitudes of political controversy, to place them beyond the reach of majorities... and to establish them as legal principles to be applied by the courts. One's right to life... and other fundamental rights may not be submitted to vote; they depend on the outcome of no elections."

[189] The other point was not so much a contention as a complaint, one registered against the sympathy with murderers, and the lack of any felt for the victims and their families, which some proponents of capital punishment have seen as the motivation behind every attack on it. It is unnecessary, I hope, for this court to answer that canard. In rebuttal of the criticism, lest it be levelled at us all the same, one can do no better than to repeat the following excerpts from the judgment which Wright CJ wrote in The People v Anderson (at 896 and 899):

"We are fully aware that many condemned prisoners have committed crimes of the utmost cruelty and depravity and that such persons are not entitled to the slightest sympathy from society in the administration of justice or otherwise.... Our conclusion that the death penalty may no longer be exacted in California... is not grounded in sympathy for those who would commit crimes of violence, but in concern for the society that diminishes itself whenever it takes the life of one of its members. Lord Chancellor Gardiner reminded the House of Lords, debating abolition of capital punishment in England: 'When we abolished the punishment for treason that you should be hanged, and then cut down while still alive, and then disembowelled while still alive, and then quartered, we did not abolish that punishment because we sympathised with traitors, but because we took the view that it was a punishment no longer consistent with our self-respect'."

[190] South Africa has experienced too much savagery. The wanton killing must stop before it makes a mockery of the civilised, humane and compassionate society to which the nation aspires and has constitutionally pledged itself. And the state must set the example by demonstrating the priceless value it places on the lives of all its subjects, even the worst.

KENTRIDGE AJ

[191] KENTRIDGE AJ: I agree with the order proposed by Chaskalson P and with the reasons for it contained in his judgment and in the judgment of Didcott J In view of the importance of the issue and in deference to the forceful submissions of Mr von Lieres SC, the Attorney-General of the Witwatersrand, I add some remarks of my own.

[192] Capital punishment is an issue on which many members of the public hold strong and conflicting views. To many of them it may seem strange that so difficult and important a public issue should be decided by the eleven appointed judges of this court. It must be understood that we undertake this task not because we claim a superior wisdom for ourselves but, as Chaskalson P has explained in his judgment, because the framers of the Constitution have imposed on us the inescapable duty of deciding whether the death penalty for murder is consistent with Chapter Three of the Constitution. It should not be overlooked that a decision holding the death penalty to be constitutional would have been just as far-reaching an exercise of judicial power as the decision to strike it down.

[193] Some public commentators on the question before this court have supposed that any doubt as to the unconstitutionality of the death penalty was foreclosed by section 9 of the Constitution, which proclaims in unqualified terms that every person shall have the right of life, read with section 33(1)(b), which provides that no statutory limitation on that or any other constitutional right shall "negate the essential content of the right in question." The execution of a condemned prisoner, it is suggested, must negate entirely his right to life and must therefore ipso facto be in conflict with the constitution. For my part, I do not believe that this supposedly simple solution bears examination. Although the right to life is stated in unqualified terms its full scope and implications remain to be worked out in future cases. Certainly, as the President of the Court has pointed out, the right to life must accommodate the right to kill in lawful self-defence of one's own life or the lives of others, as well as the right of the State to defend itself against insurrection. The right to life may also be seen as entailing a duty on the State to protect the lives of its citizens by ensuring, as far as it is able, that unlawful killing is visited with condign punishment. That punishment like any other, must fall within the limits imposed by section 11(2) of the Constitution. As to section 33(1)(b), I agree with Chaskalson P that our decision in this case can be reached without requiring the Court to give an authoritative interpretation of that clause. We did, however, hear argument on the clause and I should like to state briefly why I do not think that it provides the short answer to the problem of the constitutionality of the death penalty.

[194] The source of section 33(1)(b) is presumably the similar provision in the Constitution of the Federal Republic of Germany. As far as I am aware the German Constitutional Court has never given any definite interpretation to that clause. Varying constructions of it have been suggested by the authors cited by Chaskalson P in the footnotes to paragraphs 108 and 132 of his Judgment; see also the discussion by Rautenbach in 1991 TSAR 403. For present purposes it is sufficient to mention two possible interpretations of section 33(1)(b). The first is that it requires one to consider the effect of any State action on the individual concerned - sometimes called the subjective approach. On this basis the infliction of the death penalty must conflict with section 33(1)(b) because in destroying life it must negate the essence of the right to life. I do not find this so-called subjective interpretation convincing. It cannot accommodate the many State measures which must be necessary and justifiable in any society, such as long-term imprisonment for serious crimes. It is true that a prisoner, even one held under secure conditions, retains some residual rights. See Whittaker v Roos 1912 A.D. 92, 122-3, per Innes J. But I find it difficult to comprehend how, on any rational use of language, it could be denied that while he is in prison the essence of the prisoner's right to freedom (section 11), of his or her right to leave the Republic (section 20) or to pursue a livelihood anywhere in the national territory (section 26) is not negated. Many other examples could be given which in my view rule out the subjective approach of the sub-section.

[195] The other approach (sometimes, not altogether appropriately, called the objective approach) is to examine the law which is sought to be justified under section 33. That section states that rights entrenched in Chapter Three may be limited by laws of general application provided that such limitation complies with the requirements of paragraph (a) of sub-section 1 and provided further that it does not negate the essential content of the right in question. What must pass scrutiny under section 33 is the limitation contained in the law of general application. This means in my opinion that it is the law itself which must pass the test. On this basis a law providing for imprisonment for defined criminal conduct, cannot be said to negate the essential content of the right to freedom, whatever the effect on the individual prisoner serving a sentence under that law. Similarly such a law would not negate the essential content of the right of free movement. Those are general rights entrenched in the Constitution, and a law which preserves those rights for most people at most times does not negate the essential content of those rights. An example of a law which might negate the essence of the right to freedom of movement would be a law (such as the Departure from the Republic Act, 1955) under which no person may leave the Republic without the express or implied consent of the Government. Another possible example could relate to the right of freedom of speech. A law providing for general censorship of all publications would on the face of it negate the essence of the right to freedom of speech. On the other hand a law providing penalties for what is colloquially referred to as "hate speech" would not, I think, negate the essence of that right. (Whether or not it would meet the other criteria of section 33 is a different question.)

[196] It follows that in my opinion that the true issue for decision is whether or not the death penalty for murder is a "cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment", although the entrenched right to life, like the right to dignity and to equality of treatment, does illuminate the issue. As both Chaskalson P and Didcott J have emphasised, capital punishment is qualitatively something quite apart from even the longest term of imprisonment. It entails the calculated destruction of a human life. Inequalities in its incidence are probably unavoidable. In the infliction of capital punishment judicial and executive error can never be wholly excluded nor, of course, repaired. With regard to the uniquely cruel and inhuman nature of the death penalty I would refer to the ample citation of American authority by Didcott J in paragraphs 6 and 7 of his Judgment and to the various decisions of international tribunals cited by Chaskalson P. I would add to these the judgment of Blackmun J in Callins v Collins 114 S. Ct. 1127 (1994). The statement of Stewart J in Furman v Georgia 408 US 238 at 306 cited by Scalia J in Harmelin v Michigan 501 US 957 (1991), also deserves repetition:

KENTRIDGE AJ

"The penalty of death differs from all other forms of criminal punishment, not in degree but in kind. It is unique in its total irrevocability. It is unique in its rejection of rehabilitation of the convict as a basic purpose of criminal justice. And it is unique, finally, in its absolute renunciation of all that is embodied in our concept of humanity."

The "death row" phenomenon as a factor in the cruelty of capital punishment has been eloquently described by Lord Griffiths in Pratt v Johnson [1994] 2 AC 1 and by Gubbay CJ in Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace in Zimbabwe v Attorney General Zimbabwe 1994 (4) SA 329. Those were cases of inordinately extended delay in the carrying out of the death sentence, but the mental agony of the criminal, in its alternation of fear, hope and despair must be present even when the time between sentence and execution is measured in months or weeks rather than years.

[197] It may be said that if the punishment is cruel so was the act of the murderer. That cannot and should not be denied. In the present case the Appellants committed murders of horrifying callousness motivated by nothing but greed. In some of the cases summarised in the Attorney-General's written submissions, all of them cases in which the Appellate Division had confirmed the sentence of death, the accused had, if that were possible, committed even more revolting acts of cruelty against their victims. I agree with Chaskalson P that proportionality is an ingredient to be taken into account in deciding whether a penalty is cruel, inhuman or degrading. But that does not mean that the State should respond to the murderer's cruelty with a deliberate and matching cruelty of its own. As Simon Jenkins said in a recent article on the death penalty in "The Times" (London), that would imply that punishment must not merely fit the crime, but repeat the crime.

[198] Section 35 of the Constitution requires us to "promote the values which underlie an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality." We are thus entitled and obliged to consider the practices of such societies. That exercise shows us that most of the countries which we would naturally include in that category have abolished capital punishment as a penalty for murder, either by legislation or by disuse. These countries include the neighbouring States of Namibia, Angola and Mozambique. The principal exceptions are the great democracies of India and the United States. In each of those countries the written constitution expressly contemplates the legitimacy, subject to safeguards, of the death penalty. Thus the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States begins with the words, "No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury..." There are similar express indications of the acceptability of the death sentence in Article 21 of the Constitution of India. It is therefore understandable that the Supreme Courts of those two countries have found themselves unable to hold that the death penalty is per se unconstitutional. Nonetheless, in our attempt to identify objectively the values of an open and democratic society what I find impressive is that individual judges of great distinction such as Brennan J in the United States and Bhagwati J in India have held, notwithstanding those constitutional provisions, that the death penalty is impermissible when measured against the standards of humanity and decency which have evolved since the date of their respective constitutions. Similarly, courts to which considerable respect is due, such as the Supreme Court of California in People v Anderson 493 P.2d 880 (1972) and the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in District Attorney for the Suffolk District v Watson 381 Mass 648 (1980) have held the death penalty to be a "cruel and inhuman punishment" and therefore in conflict with their respective State constitutions. In the California case that decision was arrived at notwithstanding clauses in the State Constitution which, like the United States Constitution, recognised the existence of capital punishment. (See Anderson's case at 886-7).

"Of course, the risk of assessing evolving standards is that it is all too easy to believe that evolution has culminated in one's own views."

KENTRIDGE AJ

This is a pertinent warning which I have, I hope, kept in mind. I believe, nonetheless, that there is ample objective evidence that evolving standards of civilisation demonstrate the unacceptability of the death penalty in countries which are or aspire to be free and democratic societies. Most democratic countries have abandoned the death penalty for murder. Even in countries which have the death penalty on the statute books there is a decline in its use. Although one cannot say that the death penalty is as yet contrary to international law, Chaskalson P has demonstrated that that is the direction in which international law is developing. I shall come later to the question of public opinion and the guidance to be obtained from it, but what is clear to my mind is that in general in civilised democratic societies the imposition of the death penalty has been found to be unacceptably cruel, inhuman and degrading, not only to those subjected to it but also to the society which inflicts it. Simon Jenkins, in the article which I have already quoted, says that the State is (or should be) "institutionalised civilisation." I would agree, and add that this is especially true of the State created by our new Constitution. The deliberate execution of a human, however depraved and criminal his conduct, must degrade the new society which is coming into being.

[200] In the course of argument before us much was said about public opinion on the death penalty in South Africa. Both Chaskalson P and Didcott J have shown that public opinion, even if expressed in acts of Parliament, cannot be decisive. If we were simply to defer to public opinion we would be abdicating from our constitutional function. Yet, were public opinion on the question clear it could not be entirely ignored. The accepted mores of one's own society must have some relevance to the assessment whether a punishment is impermissibly cruel and inhuman. In Furman v Georgia 408 US 238 (1972) Brennan J at 277 said that one of the principles inherent in the constitutional prohibition of cruel and unusual punishments was that "a severe punishment must not be unacceptable to contemporary society." Much earlier, in Weems v United States 217 US 349, 378 (1910) the United States Supreme Court had held that that provision of the Constitution was "not fastened to the obsolete", but might "acquire meaning as public opinion becomes enlightened by a human justice." I would, with all respect, suggest that the principle propounded by Brennan J may give too much weight to prevailing opinion - an opinion which may swing with public moods and varying public concerns. But in any event, whether or not a punishment is acceptable to contemporary society is not to be judged by the results of informal public opinion polls, still less by letters to the press. In People v Anderson (supra) Wright CJ speaking for the Supreme Court of California said at 893-4:

"Public acceptance of capital punishment is a relevant but not controlling factor in assessing whether it is consonant with contemporary standards of decency. But public acceptance cannot be measured by the existence of death penalty statutes or by the fact that some juries impose death on criminal defendants. Nor are public opinion polls about a process which is far removed from the experience of those responding helpful in determining whether capital punishment would be acceptable to an informed public were it even-handedly applied to a substantial proportion of the persons potentially subject to execution."

In Gregg v Georgia 428 US 153 (1976) a judgment given four years after Furman v Georgia, supra, Stewart J at 179-180 found that developments during that period had shown that "a large proportion of American society continues to regard it (capital punishment) as an appropriate and necessary criminal sanction." The principal evidence on which Stewart J based this finding was that since the Furman case the legislatures of 35 of the United States had enacted new death penalty statutes. Further, the Congress of the United States had enacted a statute providing the death penalty for aircraft piracy. In addition, he referred to an official State-wide referendum in the State of California adopting a constitutional amendment that authorised capital punishment.

[201] Needless to say, there was no similar evidence before us. Public opinion has not expressed itself in a referendum, nor in any recent legislation. Certainly, there is no evidence of a general social acceptance of the death penalty for murderers such as might conceivably have influenced our conclusions. On the contrary, developments in South Africa point in the opposite direction. It is to be noted that even at the time, during the previous decade, when South Africa had the unenviable reputation for carrying out more executions than any other country in the western world, only a proportion of those convicted of murder were sentenced to death, and of those many were reprieved. The amendment to the Criminal Procedure Act introduced by Act No 107 of 1990 drastically reduced the number of convicted murderers sentenced to death. The subsequent developments described by Chaskalson P including the official executive moratorium on the death penalty announced in March 1992, while not evidence of general opinion, do cast serious doubt on the acceptability of capital punishment in South Africa. In fact, we are informed, since 1989 there has been no judicial execution in South Africa. Thus there has been in this country no indication whatsoever of what Stewart J in Gregg's case referred to as "society's endorsement of the death penalty for murder." In the Constitution itself such endorsement is markedly absent. Consequently, in all the circumstances, the appeal to public opinion could not affect our decision.

[202] There is little I wish to add to what has been said by other members of the Court on the application of section 33. On the question whether a death penalty can be justified by its deterrent effect the statistical and other evidence is inconclusive, as it was bound to be. As the analysis of Chaskalson P shows the statistical evidence comes nowhere near establishing that the death penalty is an effective deterrent against murder. Nor on the other hand can it be shown that it is not a deterrent. As Mr von Lieres pointed out, only those who were not deterred enter the statistics; the number who were deterred cannot be known. In Burns' well-known lines, "What's done we often may compute/But know not what's resisted." The most impressive argument of Mr von Lieres on this aspect of the case was that, statistics aside, the awfulness of the death penalty must in its nature deter some would-be murderers. In the face of the appalling murder rates in this country, he said, we cannot afford to relinquish any possible weapon in the fight against violent crime. That is a powerful argument but, given the cruelty and inhumanity of the death penalty, it is an argument which cannot in the end prevail. It relies essentially on the mere possibility that the death sentence may deter some murderers. That is not a sufficient justification for the continued existence of such an extreme punishment.

[203] I have little to add, too, to what Chaskalson P has said on the element of retribution as an element in punishment. The Attorney-General's argument was that the criminal law including the modes of punishment must adequately reflect the moral outrage felt by society when a vicious and cold-blooded murder is committed. This too I regard as an argument of weight. One can understand in particular the reaction of the families of victims of murderers and the feeling that the culprits "deserve to die". But the choice, as Chaskalson P has pointed out, is not between death penalty on the one hand and the condonation of the murderer's act on the other. The choice is between the death penalty and a long term of imprisonment which might in appropriate cases include life imprisonment in the fullest sense of the term. As a civilised society it is not open to us, in my opinion, to express our moral outrage by executing even the worst of murderers any more than we could do so by the public hangings or mutilations of a bygone time.

[204] In conclusion I would endorse what Didcott J has cogently stated; the striking down of the death penalty entails no sympathy whatsoever for the murderer, nor any condonation of his crime. What our decision does entail is a recognition that even the worst and most vicious criminals are not excluded from the protections of the Constitution. In 1910 Mr Winston Churchill speaking in the House of Commons said this:

"The mood and temper of the public in regard to the treatment of crime and criminals is one of the most unfailing tests of the civilisation of any country. A calm dispassionate recognition of the rights of the accused, and even of the convicted criminal, against the State - a constant heart-searching by all charged with the duty of punishment - a desire and eagerness to rehabilitate in the world of industry those who have paid their due in the hard coinage of punishment: tireless efforts towards discovery of curative and regenerative processes: unfailing faith that there is a treasure, if you can only find it, in the heart of every man. These are the symbols, which, in the treatment of crime and criminal, mark and measure the stored-up strength of a nation, and are sign and proof of the living virtue in it."

[205] KRIEGLER J: I agree with the conclusions reached by Chaskalson P, endorse the bulk of his reasoning and concur in the order he has formulated. There are just two points that I wish to add though: the first by way of additional emphasis and the second to indicate a somewhat different line of reasoning.

[206] The basic issue, as Chaskalson P points out in the opening and concluding paragraphs of the main judgment, is whether the Constitution¹ has outlawed capital punishment in South Africa.² The issue is not whether I favour the retention or the abolition of the death ¹Constitution of The Republic of South Africa, Act No. 200 of 1993, as amended.

²As sanctioned by section 277(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1977, as amended and the corresponding provisions of the former Transkei, Bophuthatswana and Venda.

KRIEGLER J

[207] In answering that question the methods to be used are essentially legal, not moral or philosophical. To be true the judicial process cannot operate in an ethical vacuum. After all, concepts like "good faith", "unconscionable" or "reasonable" import value judgments into the daily grind of courts of law. And it would be foolish to deny that the judicial process, especially in the field of constitutional adjudication, calls for value judgments in which extra-legal considerations may loom large. Nevertheless, the starting point, the framework and the outcome of the exercise must be legal. The foundation of our state and all its organs, the rules which govern their interaction and the entrenchment of the rights of its people are to be found in an Act of Parliament, albeit a unique one.³ That Act entrusts the enforcement of its provisions to courts of law.⁴ The "court of final instance over all matters relating to the interpretation, protection and enforcement" of those provisions is this Court,⁵ appointment to which is reserved for lawyers.⁶ The ³Section 4 of the Constitution describes it as "the supreme law of the Republic ... [which] shall bind all legislative, executive and judicial organs of state at all levels of government." Section 7 makes Chapter 3, containing fundamental rights, binding on "all legislative and executive organs of state at all levels of government" and provides that it "shall apply to all law in force and all administrative decisions taken and acts performed during the period of operation of this Constitution."

⁴See Chapter 7 of the Constitution.

⁵Section 98(2) of the Constitution.

⁶See section 99(2)(c) of the Constitution which requires on appointee to be a person who "(i) is a judge of the Supreme Court or is qualified to be admitted as an advocate or attorney and has, for a cumulative period of at least 10 years after having so qualified, practised as an advocate or an attorney or lectured in law at a university; or (ii) is a person who, by reason of his or her training and experience, has expertise in the field of constitutional incumbents are judges, not sages; their discipline is the law, not ethics or philosophy and certainly not politics.

[208] The exercise is to establish whether there is an invalid infringement of a right protected by Chapter Three. This "calls for a 'two-stage' approach. First, has there been a contravention of a guaranteed right? If so, is it justified under the limitation clause?"⁷

For the first step, one need go no further than section 9 of the Constitution, which could not possibly be plainer:

"Every person shall have the right to life."

Whatever else section 9 may mean in other contexts, with regard to which I express no view, at the very least it indicates that the State may not deliberately deprive any person of his or her life. As against that general prohibition section 277(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act sanctions a judicial order for the deprivation of a person's life. The two provisions are clearly not reconcilable. Therefore, the latter provision is liable to be struck down under section 4(1) of the Constitution, unless it is saved by the second step of the analysis -application of the limitations clause.

law relevant to the application of this Constitution and the law of the Republic."

⁷Per Kentridge AJ, in S v Zuma and Others 1995 (4) BCLR 401, 414 (SA). The "limitation clause" he refers to is section 33(1) of the Constitution.

KRIEGLER J

[209] During the second step of the exercise one must ask whether that infringement of the right to life is reasonable and also whether it is justifiable in an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality (sections 33(1)(a)(i) & (ii)).⁸ As I am satisfied that section 277(1)(a) does not meet the threshold test of reasonableness, I find it unnecessary to ask whether it is justifiable in the kind of society postulated. Nor do I consider the meaning of section 33(1)(b), which is discussed in paragraphs 132, 133 and 134 of the main judgment and paragraphs 193, 194 and 195 of the judgment of Kentridge AJ.⁹ In respect thereof I express no opinion.

⁸The questions may well be asked what the distinction is between reasonable and justifiable and whether one test can be met and not the other. Be that as it may, this case is so clear that the distinction, if any, between the two criteria need not be considered.

⁹Relating to the meaning and effect of the prohibition in section 33(1)(b) against a limitation which "negate[s] the essential content of the right in question."

KRIEGLER J

[210] I also find it unnecessary to probe the outer limits of what is reasonable. At the very least the reasonableness of a provision which flies directly in the face of an entrenched right would have to be cogently established. Furthermore a provision relating to so basic and so precious a right as the right to life itself (without which all other rights are nought), would have to be manifestly reasonable.¹⁰

[211] We were favoured with literally thousands of pages of material in support of and opposed to the death penalty, ranging from the religious, ethical, philosophical and ideological to the mathematical and statistical. Mr Von Lieres, SC, who argued the retentionist cause with great skill, in essence sought to bring the death sentence within the protection of section 33(1) on the strength of its deterrent and retributive value. The main judgment deals with these two considerations¹¹ and I merely wish to make a few additional observations regarding deterrence.¹²

¹⁰The reasonableness of other limitations on the right to life does not arise here. Suffice it to say that there must always be a proportionality between any right and the limitation thereof sought to be saved under section 33(1).

¹¹Paragraphs 116 to 127 on deterrence and 129 to 131 on retribution.

¹²No more need be said about retribution than has been said by my colleagues. See also paragraph 203 of the judgment of Kentridge AJ and paragraph 185 of the judgment of Didcott J.

KRIEGLER J

[212] Nearly a quarter of a century ago the US Supreme Court decided the watershed case of Furman v Georgia.¹³ In the course of a compendiously researched opinion, Marshall J reviewed virtually every scrap of Anglo-American evidence for and against capital punishment. In the course of his "long and tedious journey" (his own description) he made the crucial finding that 200 years of research had established

"that capital punishment serves no purpose that life imprisonment could not serve equally well."¹⁴

A decade later the Indian Supreme Court surveyed the international authorities for and against the death penalty in Bachan Singh's case.¹⁵ Since then a great deal more has been written in support of both the abolitionist and the retentionist schools. But when all is said and done the answer is still what it was to Marshall J in Furman's case: the death penalty has no demonstrable penological value over and above that of long-term imprisonment. No empirical study, no statistical exercise and no theoretical analysis has been able to demonstrate that capital punishment has any deterrent force greater than that of a really heavy sentence of imprisonment. That is the ineluctable conclusion to be drawn from the mass of data so thoroughly canvassed in the written and oral arguments presented to us.

[213] Another equally ineluctable conclusion then is that capital punishment cannot be vindicated by the provisions of section 33(1) of the Constitution.¹⁶ It simply cannot be reasonable to ¹⁶The provisions of section 277(1)(b), which sanction the death penalty for treason committed at a time when sanction judicial killing without knowing whether it has any marginal deterrent value.

SS LS

KRIEGLER J

[214] Having concluded that capital punishment is inconsistent with section 9 of the Constitution and cannot be saved by section 33(1), I find it unnecessary to consider its possible inconsistency with any other fundamental rights protected by Chapter Three. Vigilant protection of the right to human dignity (section 10) and of the immunity from cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment (section 11(2)) is undoubtedly essential. So too arbitrariness in the imposition of any sentence is fatally inconsistent with the demand for equality so emphatically mandated in sections 8(1) and (2). I do not want to be understood as disagreeing with the views expressed by any of my colleagues in regard to those rights and their importance; but in the hierarchy of values and fundamental rights guaranteed under chapter 3, I see them as ranking below the right to life. Indeed, they are subsumed by that most basic of rights. Inasmuch as capital punishment, by definition, strikes at the heart of the right to life, the debate need go no further.

[215] LANGA J: I agree with the conclusions reached by Chaskalson P and generally with the reasons he advances in his exhaustive and erudite judgment. I concur in the order he has proposed. I wish to put additional emphasis on some of the aspects he has dealt with.

[216] The death sentence, in terms of the provisions of section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act, No. 51 of 1977, is unconstitutional, violating as it does:

- (a) the right to life which is guaranteed to every person by section 9 of the Constitution;

the Republic is in a state of war, do not arise for consideration in this case. That is a wholly different situation which requires independent evaluation.

- (b) the right to respect for human dignity guaranteed in section 10;
- (c) the right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment as set out in section 11(2).

[217] For the reasons set out in Didcott J's judgment, I place more emphasis on the right to life. Section 9 of the Constitution proclaims it in unqualified terms. It is the most fundamental of all rights,¹ the supreme human right.² I do not consider it necessary or desirable to define the exact scope of the right, save to make two points, namely:

- (a) It does mean that every person has the right not to be deliberately put to death by the State as punishment, as envisaged in section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act.
- (b) I do not exclude the application of the limitations clause to the right to life. Any law which seeks to limit the right will have to comply with the requirements of section 33(1) of the Constitution. For the reasons set out in Chaskalson P's judgment, the requirements have not been met; the State has been unable to justify the limitation which is imposed on the right to life by section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act. I cannot accept that it is "reasonable," as required by section 33(1) of the Constitution, to override what is the most fundamental of all rights, without clear proof that the deterrence value of the penalty is substantially higher than that which the imposition of a suitably long period of imprisonment has. This has not been proved. Because of the view I take, I find it unnecessary to deal with the other requirements of section 33(1) of the Constitution.

- [218] The emphasis I place on the right to life is, in part, influenced by the recent experiences of our people in this country. The history of the past decades has been such that the value of life and human dignity have been demeaned. Political, social and other factors created a climate of violence resulting in a culture of retaliation and vengeance. In the process, respect for life and for the inherent dignity of every person became the main casualties. The State has been part of this degeneration, not only because of its role in the conflicts of the past, but also by retaining punishments which did not testify to a high regard for the dignity of the person and the value of every human life.
- [219] The primacy of the right to life and its relationship to punishment needs to be emphasized also in view of our constitutional history. The doctrine of parliamentary sovereignty meant, virtually, that the State could do anything, enact any law, subject only to procedural correctness.³
- [220] When the Constitution was enacted, it signalled a dramatic change in the system of governance from one based on rule by parliament to a constitutional state in which the rights of individuals are guaranteed by the Constitution. It also signalled a new dispensation, as it were, where rule by force would be replaced by democratic principles and a governmental system based on the precepts of equality and freedom.
- [221] It may well be that for millions in this country, the effect of the change has yet to be felt in a material sense. For all of us though, a framework has been created in which a new culture must take root and develop.

[222] Implicit in the provisions and tone of the Constitution are values of a more mature society, which relies on moral persuasion rather than force; on example rather than coercion. In this new context, then, the role of the State becomes clear. For good or for worse, the State is a role model for our society.⁴ A culture of respect for human life and dignity, based on the values reflected in the Constitution, has to be engendered, and the State must take the lead. In acting out this role, the State not only preaches respect for the law and that the killing must stop, but it demonstrates in the best way possible, by example, society's own regard for human life and dignity by refusing to destroy that of the criminal. Those who are inclined to kill need to be told why it is wrong. The reason surely must be the principle that the value of human life is inestimable, and it is a value which the State must uphold by example as well. As pointed out by Mr Justice Schaefer of the Supreme Court of Illinois:⁵

"The methods we employ in the enforcement of our criminal law have aptly been called the measures by which the quality of our civilisation may be judged."

[223] The ethos of the new culture is expressed in the much-quoted provision on National Unity and Reconciliation which forms part of the Constitution. Chaskalson P quotes the various components of it in paragraphs 7 and 130 of his judgment. It describes the Constitution as a "bridge" between the past and the future; from "the past of a deeply divided society characterised by strife, conflict, untold suffering and injustice, and a future founded on the recognition of human rights, ... for all South Africans ..."; and finally, it suggests a change in mental attitude from vengeance to an appreciation of the need for understanding, from retaliation to reparation and from victimisation to ubuntu. The Constitution does not define this last-mentioned concept.

[224] The concept is of some relevance to the values we need to uphold. It is a culture which places some emphasis on communality and on the interdependence of the members of a community. It recognises a person's status as a human being, entitled to unconditional respect, dignity, value and acceptance from the members of the community such person happens to be part of. It also entails the converse, however. The person has a corresponding duty to give the same respect, dignity, value and acceptance to each member of that community. More importantly, it regulates the exercise of rights by the emphasis it lays on sharing and co-responsibility and the mutual enjoyment of rights by all. It is perhaps best illustrated in the following remarks in the judgment of the Court of Appeal of the Republic of Tanzania in DPP v Pete,⁶

"The second important principle or characteristic to be borne in mind when interpreting our Constitution is a corollary of the reality of co-existence of the individual and society, and also the reality of co-existence of rights and duties of the individual on the one hand, and the collective of communitarian rights and duties of society on the other. In effect this co-existence means that the rights and duties of the individual are limited by the rights and duties of society, and vice versa."

[225] An outstanding feature of ubuntu in a community sense is the value it puts on life and human dignity. The dominant theme of the culture is that the life of another person is at least as valuable as one's own. Respect for the dignity of every person is integral to this concept. During violent conflicts and times when violent crime is rife, distraught members of society decry the loss of ubuntu. Thus heinous crimes are the antithesis of ubuntu. Treatment that is cruel, inhuman or degrading is bereft of ubuntu.

- [226] We have all been affected, in some way or other, by the "strife, conflict, untold suffering and injustice" of the recent past. Some communities have been ravaged much more than others. In some, there is hardly anyone who has not been a victim in some way or who has not lost a close relative in senseless violence. Some of the violence has been perpetrated through the machinery of the State, in order to ensure the perpetuation of a status quo that was fast running out of time. But all this was violence on human beings by human beings. Life became cheap, almost worthless.
- [227] It was against a background of the loss of respect for human life and the inherent dignity with attaches to every person that a spontaneous call has arisen among sections of the community for a return to ubuntu. A number of references to ubuntu have already been made in various texts but largely without explanation of the concept.⁷ It has however always been mentioned in the context of it being something to be desired, a commendable attribute which the nation should strive for.
- [228] At first blush, it may sound odd that the issue of the right to life is being decided on the basis of persons condemned to death for killing other human beings. In this regard, it is relevant to note that there are some 400 people presently under sentence of death for acts of violence. That in itself means that there are probably an equivalent number of victims whose lives have been prematurely, violently, terminated. They died without having had any recourse to law. For them there was no "due process."
- [229] That is why, during argument, a tentative proposition was made that a person who has killed another has forfeited the right to life. Although the precise implications of this suggestion were not thoroughly canvassed, this cannot be so. The test of our commitment to a culture of rights lies in our ability to respect the rights not only of the weakest, but also of the worst among us. A person does not become "fair game" to be killed at the behest of the State, because he has killed.

⁷ See paragraphs 130 and 131 of Chaskalson P's judgment. The concept has been referred to also by Madala J, Mahomed J and Mokgoro J in their separate concurring judgments in this matter.

[230] The protection afforded by the Constitution is applicable to every person. That includes the weak, the poor and the vulnerable. It includes others as well who might appear not to need special protection; it includes criminals and all those who have placed themselves on the wrong side of the law. The Constitution guarantees them their right, as persons, to life, to dignity and to protection against torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment or treatment.

[231] The violent acts of those who destroy life cannot be condoned, neither should anyone think that the abolition of the sentence of death means that the crime is regarded as anything but one of extreme seriousness. The sentence itself was an indication of society's abhorrence for the cruel and inhuman treatment of others. That moral outrage has been expressed in the strongest terms that society could muster.

[232] Severe punishments must be meted out where deserved, but they should never be excessive. As Brennan J observed in his concurring judgment in Furman v Georgia,⁸

"... a severe punishment must not be excessive. A punishment is excessive under this principle if it is unnecessary . . . [i]f there is a significantly less severe punishment adequate to achieve the purposes for which the punishment is inflicted, the punishment inflicted is unnecessary and therefore excessive."

⁸ 408 US 238, 279 (1972).

Righteous anger against those who destroy the human life and dignity of others must be appropriately expressed by the Courts;⁹ but in doing so, the State must not send the wrong message, namely, that the value of human life is variable.¹⁰ Society cannot now succumb to the doctrine of "an eye for an eye." Its actions must be informed by the high values which reflect the quality of this nation's civilization.

[233] The Constitution constrains society to express its condemnation and its justifiable anger in a manner which preserves society's own morality. The State should not make itself guilty of conduct which violates that which it is in the community's interests to nurture. The Constitution, in deference to our humanity and sense of dignity, does not allow us to kill in cold blood in order to deter others from killing. Nor does it allow us to "kill criminals simply to get even with them."¹¹ We are not to stoop to the level of the criminal.

[234] It follows from the remarks above that as a 'punishment' the death penalty is a violation of the right to life. It is cruel, inhuman and degrading. It is also a severe affront to human dignity. The 'death row phenomenon' merely aggravates the position. Section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act cannot be saved by the provisions of section 33(1) of the Constitution in respect of any of the rights affected. The punishment is not reasonable on any basis. In view of the available alternative sentence of a long term of imprisonment, it is also unnecessary.

[235] MADALA J: I am in agreement with the views expressed in the judgment of Chaskalson P and with his decision on the unconstitutionality of the death penalty. The punishment, in my view, is clearly offensive to the cardinal principles for which our Constitution stands.

However, while I concur, as aforesaid, I believe that there are some additional matters that need to be mentioned and aspects that should be emphasised, and I proceed to do so briefly.

[236] The death penalty is unique. As stated by Stewart J in Furman v Georgia 408 US at 306:

"The penalty of death differs from all other forms of criminal punishment, not in degree but in kind. It is unique in its total irrevocability. It is unique in its rejection of rehabilitation of the convict as a basic purpose of criminal justice. And it is unique, finally, in its absolute renunciation of all that is embodied in our concept of humanity."

This statement was more recently (1991) re-affirmed by Scalia J, who delivered the judgment of the court in Harmelin v Michigan 501 US 957, and noted that even the most severe sentence of life imprisonment cannot compare with death.

[237] The Constitution in its post-amble declares:

"... there is a need for understanding but not vengeance, and for reparation but not for retaliation, a need for ubuntu but not victimisation."

The concept "ubuntu" appears for the first time in the post-amble, but it is a concept that permeates the Constitution generally and more particularly Chapter Three which embodies the entrenched fundamental human rights. The concept carries in it the ideas of humaneness, social justice and fairness.

[238] It was argued by Mr Bizos, on behalf of the Government, that the post-amble enjoins the people of South Africa to open a new chapter which envisages the country playing a leading role in the upholding of human rights. He submitted further, that the Government favoured the abolition of the death penalty because it believed that such punishment could not be reconciled with the fundamental rights contained in the Constitution, and that its application diminished the dignity of our society as a whole.

- [239] In my rejection of the death penalty as a form of punishment, I do not intend, nor do my colleagues, to condone murder, rape, armed robbery with aggravating circumstances and those other crimes which are punishable by a sentence of death in terms of Section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act 51 of 1977. These criminal acts are, and remain, as heinous, vicious and as reprehensible as they ever were, and do not belong in civilised society. The death penalty is a punishment which involves so much pain and suffering that civilised society ought not to tolerate it even in spite of the present high rate of crime. And society ought to tolerate the death penalty even less when considering that it has not been proved that it has any greater deterrent effect on would-be murderers than life imprisonment.
- [240] The aspect of irrevocability of the death penalty has been canvassed adequately in the judgment of Chaskalson P and I propose to say no more on that score (See paragraphs 26 and 54).
- [241] As observed before, the death penalty rejects the possibility of rehabilitation of the convicted persons, condemning them as "no good", once and for all, and drafting them to the death row and the gallows. One must then ask whether such rejection of rehabilitation as a possibility accords with the concept of ubuntu.
- [242] One of the relative theories of punishment (the so-called purposive theories) is the reformatory theory, which considers punishment to be a means to an end, and not an end in itself - that end being the reformation of the criminal as a person, so that the person may, at a certain stage, become a normal law-abiding and useful member of the community once again. The person and the personality of the offender are the point of focus rather than the crime, although the crime is, however, not forgotten. And in terms of this theory of punishment and as a necessary consequence of its application, the offender has to be imprisoned for a long period for the purpose of rehabilitation. By treatment and training the offender is rehabilitated, or, at the very least, ceases to be a danger to society.

[243] This, in my view, accords fully with the concept of ubuntu which is so well enunciated in the Constitution.

[244] Our courts have found room for the exercise of ubuntu, as appears from the many cases where they have found that despite the heinousness of the offence and the brutality with which it was perpetrated, there were factors in the offenders' favour, indicating that they were, in spite of the criminal conduct of which they were convicted, responsible members of society, and were worthy and capable of rehabilitation. (See S v Mbotshwa 1993(2) SACR 468(A) at 468J-469F; S v Ramba 1990(2) SACR 334(A) at 335H-336E; S v Ngcobo 1992(2) SACR 515(A) at 515H-516A; Contra: S v Bosman 1992(1) SACR 115(A) at 116G-117F)

[245] Against ubuntu must be seen the other side, the inhuman side of mankind, in terms of which the death penalty violates Section 11(2) of the Constitution in that it is "cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment".

[246] In Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace in Zimbabwe v Attorney-General, Zimbabwe 1993(4) SA 239(ZSC) at 268E-H, Gubbay CJ, observed:

"From the moment he enters the condemned cell, the prisoner is enmeshed in a dehumanising environment of near hopelessness. He is in a place where the sole object is to preserve his life so that he may be executed. The condemned prisoner is 'the living dead' ... He is kept only with other death sentenced prisoners - with those whose appeals have been dismissed and who await death or reprieve; or those whose appeals are still to be heard or are pending judgment. While the right to an appeal may raise the prospect of being allowed to live, the intensity of the trauma is much increased by knowledge of its dismissal. The hope of a reprieve is all that is left. Throughout all this time the condemned prisoner constantly broods over his fate. The horrifying spectre of being hanged by the neck and the apprehension of being made to suffer a painful and lingering death is, if at all, never far from mind. Grim accounts exist of hangings not properly performed."

[247] Convicted persons in death row invariably find themselves there for a long time as they make every effort to exhaust all possible review avenues open to them. All this time they are subjected to a fate of ever increasing fear and distress. They know not what their future is and whether their efforts will come to nought; they live under the sword of Damocles - they will be advised any day about their appointment with the hangman. It is true that they might have shown no mercy at all to their victims, but we do not and should not take our standards and values from the murderer. We must, on the other hand, impose our standards and values on the murderer.

[248] In the aforementioned Zimbabwe case, the court concluded that the incarceration of the condemned person under those conditions was in conflict with the provisions of Section 15(1) of the Zimbabwe Constitution, which like our Constitution, has entrenched guarantees against torture or inhuman and degrading punishment.

[249] The so-called "death row phenomenon" also came under attack in the case of Soering v United Kingdom (1989) 11 EHRR 439.

From the statistics supplied by the Attorney-General and from what one gleans daily from the newspapers and other media, we live at a time when the high crime rate is unprecedented, when the streets of our cities and towns rouse fear and despair in the heart, rather than pride and hope, and this in turn, robs us of objectivity and personal concern for our brethren. But, as Marshall J put it in Furman v Georgia (supra) at 371:

"The measure of a country's greatness is its ability to retain compassion in time of crisis."

[250] This, in my view, also accords with ubuntu - and calls for a balancing of the interest of society against those of the individual, for the maintenance of law and order, but not for dehumanising and degrading the individual.

[251] We must stand tallest in these troubled times and realise that every accused person who is sent to jail is not beyond being rehabilitated - properly counselled - or, at the very least, beyond losing the will and capacity to do evil.

[252] A further aspect which I wish to mention is the question of traditional African jurisprudence, and the degree to which such values have not been researched for the purposes of the determination of the issue of capital punishment.

[253] Ms Davids, who appeared on behalf of the Black Advocates Forum, in its capacity as amicus curiae, touched on but did not fully argue this matter.

[254] She submitted that we could not determine the question of the constitutionality or otherwise of the death sentence without reference to further evidence which would include the views, aspirations and opinions of the historically disadvantaged and previously oppressed people of South Africa, who also constitute the majority of our society.

[255] As I understood her argument, the issue of capital punishment could not be determined in an open and democratic society without the active participation of the black majority. This, in my view, would be tantamount to canvassing public opinion among the black population for the decisions of our courts. I do not agree with this submission, if it implies that this Court or any other court must function according to public opinion.

[256] In order to arrive at an answer as to the constitutionality or otherwise of the death penalty or any enactment, we do not have to canvass the opinions and attitudes of the public. Ours is to interpret the provisions of the Constitution as they stand and if any matter is in conflict with the Constitution, we have to strike it down.

[257] We, as judges, are oath bound to defend the Constitution. This obligation, in turn, requires that any enactment of Parliament should be judged by standards laid down by the Constitution. The judiciary has the duty of implementing the constitutional safeguards that protect individual rights. When the State seeks to take away the individual fundamental right to life, the safeguards of the Constitution should be examined with special diligence. When it appears that an act of Parliament conflicts with the provisions of the Constitution, we have no choice but to enforce the paramount commands of the Constitution. We are sworn to do no less.

[258] I agree with Ms Davids' submission about the need to bring in the traditional African jurisprudence to these matters, to the extent that such is applicable, and would not confine such research to South Africa only, but to Africa in general.

[259] For purposes of the determination of the question of the constitutionality of the death penalty, however, it is, in my view, not necessary or even desirable that public opinion should be sought on the matter in the manner she suggests.

[260] In my view, the death penalty does not belong to the society envisaged in the Constitution, is clearly in conflict with the Constitution generally and runs counter to the concept of ubuntu; additionally and just as importantly, it violates the provisions of Section 11(2) of the Constitution and, for those reasons, should be declared unconstitutional and of no force and effect.

[261] MAHOMED J: I have had the privilege of reading the full and erudite judgment of Chaskalson P in this matter. I agree with the order proposed by him and in general with the reasons given by him for that order. Regard being had, however, to the crucial consequences of the debate on capital punishment, and the multiplicity of potential constitutional factors and nuances which impact on its resolution, I think it is desirable for me to set out briefly some of my responses to this debate in order to explain why I have come to the conclusion that capital punishment is prohibited by the Constitution.

[262] All Constitutions seek to articulate, with differing degrees of intensity and detail, the shared aspirations of a nation; the values which bind its people, and which discipline its government and its national institutions; the basic premises upon which judicial, legislative and executive power is to be wielded; the constitutional limits and the conditions upon which that power is to be exercised; the national ethos which defines and regulates that exercise; and the moral and ethical direction which that nation has identified for its future. In some countries, the Constitution only formalizes, in a legal instrument, a historical consensus of values and aspirations evolved incrementally from a stable and unbroken past to accommodate the needs of the future. The South African Constitution is different: it retains from the past only what is defensible and represents a decisive break from, and a ringing rejection of, that part of the past which is disgracefully racist, authoritarian, insular, and repressive and a vigorous identification of and commitment to a democratic, universalistic, caring and aspirationally egalitarian ethos, expressly articulated in the Constitution. The contrast between the past which it repudiates and the future to which it seeks to commit the nation is stark and dramatic. The past institutionalized and legitimized racism. The Constitution expresses in its preamble the need for a "new order .. in which there is equality between ... people of all races". Chapter 3 of the Constitution extends the contrast, in every relevant area of endeavour (subject only to the obvious limitations of section 33). The past was redolent with statutes which assaulted the human dignity of persons on the grounds of race and colour alone; section 10 constitutionally protects that dignity. The past accepted, permitted, perpetuated and institutionalized pervasive and manifestly unfair discrimination against women and persons of colour; the preamble, section 8 and the postamble seek to articulate an ethos which not only rejects its rationale but unmistakably recognizes the clear justification for the reversal of the accumulated legacy of such discrimination. The past permitted detention without trial; section 11(1) prohibits it. The past permitted degrading treatment of persons; section 11(2) renders it unconstitutional. The past arbitrarily repressed the freedoms of expression, assembly, association and movement; sections 15, 16, 17 and 18 accord to these freedoms the status of "fundamental rights". The past limited the right to vote to a minority; section 21 extends it to every citizen. The past arbitrarily denied to citizens on the grounds of race and colour, the right to hold and acquire property; section 26 expressly secures it. Such a jurisprudential past created what the postamble to the Constitution recognizes as a society "characterized by strife, conflict, untold suffering and injustice". What the Constitution expressly aspires to do is to provide a transition from these grossly unacceptable features of the past to a conspicuously contrasting

"future founded on the recognition of human rights, democracy and peaceful co-existence and development opportunities for all South Africans, irrespective of colour, race, class, belief or sex".

[263] The postamble to the Constitution gives expression to the new ethos of the nation by a commitment to "open a new chapter in the history of our country", by lamenting the transgressions of "human rights" and "humanitarian principles" in the past, and articulating a "need for understanding, but not for vengeance, a need for reparation but not retaliation, a need for ubuntu but not for victimization".

"The need for ubuntu" expresses the ethos of an instinctive capacity for and enjoyment of love towards our fellow men and women; the joy and the fulfilment involved in recognizing their innate humanity; the reciprocity this generates in interaction within the collective community; the richness of the creative emotions which it engenders and the moral energies which it releases both in the givers and the society which they serve and are served by.

[264] It is against this historical background and ethos that the constitutionality of capital punishment must be determined.

[265] The death penalty sanctions the deliberate annihilation of life. As I have previously said it "is the ultimate and the most incomparably extreme form of punishment... It is the last, the most devastating and the most irreversible recourse of the criminal law, involving as it necessarily does, the planned and calculated termination of life itself; the destruction of the greatest and most precious gift which is bestowed on all humankind" (S v Mhlongo 1994 (1) SACR 584(A) at 587 e-g).

This "planned and calculated termination of life itself" was permitted in the past which preceded the Constitution. Is it now permissible? Those responsible for the enactment of the Constitution, could, if they had so wished, have treated the issue as a substantially political and moral issue justifying a political choice, clearly expressed in the Constitution, either retaining or prohibiting the death sentence. They elected not to do so, leaving it to this Court to resolve the issue, as a constitutional issue.

[266] The difference between a political election made by a legislative organ and decisions reached by a judicial organ, like the Constitutional Court, is crucial. The legislative organ exercises a political discretion, taking into account the political preferences of the electorate which votes political decision-makers into office. Public opinion therefore legitimately plays a significant, sometimes even decisive, role in the resolution of a public issue such as the death penalty. The judicial process is entirely different. What the Constitutional Court is required to do in order to resolve an issue, is to examine the relevant provisions of the Constitution, their text and their context; the interplay between the different provisions; legal precedent relevant to the resolution of the problem both in South Africa and abroad; the domestic common law and public international law impacting on its possible solution; factual and historical considerations bearing on the problem; the significance and meaning of the language used in the relevant provisions; the content and the sweep of the ethos expressed in the structure of the Constitution; the balance to be struck between different and sometimes potentially conflicting considerations reflected in its text; and by a judicious interpretation and assessment of all these factors to determine what the Constitution permits and what it prohibits.

[267] Adopting that approach, I am satisfied that the death penalty as a form of punishment violates crucial sections of the Constitution and that it is not saved by the limitations permitted in terms of section 33. I wish briefly to set out my reasons for that conclusion.

[268] In the first place, it offends section 9 of the Constitution which prescribes in peremptory terms that "every person shall have the right to life". What does that mean? What is a "person"? When does "personhood" and "life" begin? Can there be a conflict between the "right to life" in section 9 and the right of a mother to "personal privacy" in terms of section 13 and her possible right to the freedom and control of her body? Does the "right to life", within the meaning of section 9, preclude the practitioner of scientific medicine from withdrawing the modern mechanisms which mechanically and artificially enable physical breathing in a terminal patient to continue, long beyond the point, when the "brain is dead" and beyond the point when a human being ceases to be "human" although some unfocussed claim to qualify as a "being" is still retained? If not, can such a practitioner go beyond the point of passive withdrawal into the area of active intervention? When? Under what circumstances?

[269] It is, for the purposes of the present case, unnecessary to give to the word "life" in section 9 a comprehensive legal definition, which will accommodate the answer to these and other complex questions. Whatever be the proper resolution of such issues, should they arise in the future, it is possible to approach the constitutionality of the death sentence by a question with a sharper and narrower focus, thus:

"Does the right to life guaranteed by section 9, include the right of every person, not to be deliberately killed by the State, through a systematically planned act of execution sanctioned by the State as a mode of punishment and performed by an executioner remunerated for this purpose from public funds?"

The answer to that question, is in my view: "Yes, every person has that right". It immediately distinguishes that right from some other obvious rights referred to in argument, such as for example the right of a person in life-threatening circumstances to take the life of the aggressor in self-defence or even the acts of the State, in confronting an insurrection or in the course of War.

[270] The deliberate annihilation of the life of a person, systematically planned by the State, as a mode of punishment, is wholly and qualitatively different. It is not like the act of killing in self-defence, an act justifiable in the defence of the clear right of the victim to the preservation of his life. It is not performed in a state of sudden emergency, or under the extraordinary pressures which operate when insurrections are confronted or when the State defends itself during War. It is systematically planned long after - sometimes years after - the offender has committed the offence for which he is to be punished, and whilst he waits impotently in custody, for his date with the hangman. In its obvious and awesome finality, it makes every other right, so vigorously and eloquently guaranteed by Chapter 3 of the Constitution, permanently impossible to enjoy. Its inherently irreversible consequence, makes any reparation or correction impossible, if subsequent events establish, as they have sometimes done, the innocence of the executed or circumstances which demonstrate manifestly that he did not deserve the sentence of death.

[271] The death sentence must, in some measure, manifest a philosophy of indefensible despair in its execution, accepting as it must do, that the offender it seeks to punish is so beyond the pale of humanity as to permit of no rehabilitation, no reform, no repentance, no inherent spectre of hope or spirituality; nor the slightest possibility that he might one day, successfully and deservedly be able to pursue and to enjoy the great rights of dignity and security and the fundamental freedoms protected in Chapter 3 of the Constitution, the exercise of which is possible only if the "right to life" is not destroyed. The finality of the death penalty allows for none of these redeeming possibilities. It annihilates the potential for their emergence. Moreover, it cannot accomplish its objective without invading in a very deep and distressing way, the guarantee of human dignity afforded by section 10 of the Constitution, as the person sought to be executed spends long periods in custody, anguished by the prospect of being "hanged by the neck until he is dead" in the language of section 279(4) of Act 51 of 1977. The invasion of his dignity is inherent. He is effectively told: "You are beyond the pale of humanity. You are not fit to live among humankind. You are not entitled to life. You are not entitled to dignity. You are not human. We will therefore annihilate your life". (See the observations of Brennan J in Trop v Dulles 356 US 84 at 100).

[272] It is not necessarily only the dignity of the person to be executed which is invaded. Very arguably the dignity of all of us, in a caring civilization, must be compromised, by the act of repeating, systematically and deliberately, albeit for a wholly different objective, what we find to be so repugnant in the conduct of the offender in the first place (see Furman v Georgia 408 US 238 at 273 (1972)(Brennan J, concurring)).

MAHOMED J

[273] I also have very considerable difficulty in reconciling the guarantee of the right to equality which is protected by section 8 of the Constitution, with the death penalty. I have no doubt whatever that Judges seek conscientiously and sedulously to avoid, any impermissibly unequal treatment between different accused whom they are required to sentence, but there is an inherent risk of arbitrariness in the process, which makes it impossible to determine and predict which accused person guilty of a capital offence will escape the death penalty and which will not. The fault is not of the sentencing Court, but in the process itself. The ultimate result depends not on the predictable application of objective criteria, but on a vast network of variable factors which include, the poverty or affluence of the accused and his ability to afford experienced and skillful counsel and expert testimony; his resources in pursuing potential avenues of investigation, tracing and procuring witnesses and establishing facts relevant to his defence and credibility; the temperament and sometimes unarticulated but perfectly bona fide values of the sentencing officer and their impact on the weight to be attached to mitigating and aggravating factors; the inadequacy of resources which compels the pro - deo system to depend substantially on the services of mostly very conscientious but inexperienced and relatively junior counsel; the levels of literacy and communication skills of the different accused in effectively transmitting to counsel the nuances of fact and inference often vital to the probabilities; the level of training and linguistic facilities of busy interpreters; the environmental milieu of the accused and the difference between that and the comparative environment of those who defend, prosecute and judge him; class, race, gender and age differences which influence bona fide perceptions, relevant to the determination of the ultimate sentence; the energy, skill and intensity of police investigations in a particular case; and the forensic skills and experience of counsel for the prosecution. There are many other such factors which influence the result and which determine who gets executed and who survives. The result is not susceptible to objective prediction. Some measure of arbitrariness seems inherent in the process. This truth has caused Blackmun J, one of the most experienced Judges of the United States Supreme Court, finally to conclude that it

"is virtually self-evident to me now that no combination of procedural rules or substantive regulations ever can save the death penalty from its inherent constitutional deficiencies. The basic question - does the system accurately and consistently determine which defendants 'deserve' to die? - cannot be answered in the affirmative" (Collins v Collins 114 S. Ct. 1127; 127 L.Ed.2d 435 (1994)(Blackmun J, dissenting)).

[274] It must, of course, be conceded that the factors which ensure arbitrariness in the judicial application of the death sentence, must in some considerable measure also influence a sentence of imprisonment, but there is an enormous difference between the death sentence and imprisonment or any other sentence. It is a qualitative and not just a quantitative difference. The unfair consequences of a wrong sentence of imprisonment can be reversed. Death, however, is final and irreversible. The accused, who is imprisoned, is still able to exercise, within the discipline of the prison, in varying degrees, some of the other rights which the Constitution guarantees to every person. The executed prisoner loses the right to pursue any other right. He simply dies.

[275] For substantially the reasons given by Chaskalson P, I am further of the view that the death penalty is also inconsistent with section 11(2) of the Constitution which provides that:

"No person shall be subject to torture of any kind, whether physical, mental or emotional, nor shall any person be subject to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment."

[276] The different parts of section 11(2) must be read disjunctively. The death sentence would (subject to section 33) offend section 11(2) if it constitutes

- (a) torture; or
- (b) cruel treatment; or
- (c) cruel punishment; or
- (d) inhuman treatment; or
- (e) inhuman punishment; or
- (f) degrading treatment; or
- (g) degrading punishment.

MAHOMED J

- [277] In my view, the death sentence does indeed constitute cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment within the meaning of those expressions in section 11(2).
- [278] Undoubtedly, this conclusion does involve in some measure a value judgment, but it is a value judgment which requires objectively to be formulated, having regard to the ordinary meaning of the words used in section 11(2); its consistency with the other rights protected by the Constitution and the constitutional philosophy and humanism expressed both in the preamble and the postamble to the Constitution; its harmony with the national ethos which the Constitution identifies; the historical background to the structures and objectives of the Constitution; the discipline of proportionality to which it must legitimately be subject; the effect of the death sentence on the right to life protected by the Constitution; its inherent arbitrariness in application; its impact on human dignity; and its consistency with constitutional perceptions evolving both within South Africa and the world outside with which our country shares emerging values central to the permissible limits and objectives of punishment in the civilized community.
- [279] I have dealt with some of these issues, in analysing the proper approach to the interpretation of the Constitution, and in focusing on the rights protected by sections 8, 9 and 10 of the Constitution. Some of the other issues relevant to the exercise, have been dealt with in the comprehensive judgment of the President and the persuasive comments of some of my colleagues.
- [280] Applying the relevant considerations which emerge from the proper approach in assessing whether capital punishment is "cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment", I share the conclusions arrived at by the United Nations Committee on Human Rights, and the Hungarian Constitutional Court, (Decision 23/1990 (X31) AB) that the death sentence is cruel and degrading punishment and the conclusion of the Californian Supreme Court that it is "impermissibly cruel" (People v Anderson 493 P.2d 880 (1972)).

MAHOMED J

[281] In my view, it also constitutes inhuman punishment. It invades irreversibly the humanity of the offender by annihilating the minimum content of the right to life protected by section 9; by degrading impermissibly the humanity inherent in his right to dignity; by the inevitable arbitrariness with which its objective is implemented; by the continuing and corrosive denigration of his humanity in the long periods preceding his formal execution; by the inescapable denial of his humanity inherently involved in a sentence which directs his elimination from society.

[282] I am accordingly of the view that the death penalty does prima facie invade the right to life; the right to equality; the right to dignity; and the right not to be subject to cruel inhuman or degrading punishment, respectively protected by sections 9, 8, 10 and 11(2) of the Constitution.

[283] Notwithstanding that conclusion however, it would be our duty to uphold the constitutionality of the death penalty if it was saved by section 33 of the Constitution, which provides that the rights entrenched by Chapter 3 may be limited by a law of general application, provided that such limitation

- "(a) shall be permissible only to the extent that it is
- (i) reasonable; and
 - (ii) justifiable in an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality; and
- (b) shall not negate the essential content of the right in question, and provided that any limitation to
- (aa) a right entrenched in section 10, 11, 12, 14(1), 21, 25 or 30(1)(d) or (e) or (2); or
 - (bb)
- shall in addition to being reasonable as required in paragraph (a)(i) also be necessary".

On a proper construction of section 33, a "law of general application" which invades a right entrenched in Chapter 3, will be declared unconstitutional unless the party relying on such law is able to establish that it fulfils each of the conditions prescribed by this section, for its justification.

[284] In order to qualify as a permissible limitation in terms of section 33 the State must therefore establish that the invasions on the right to life, the right to be protected from unfair discrimination, the right to dignity and the right to be protected from cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment, which the application of the death penalty causes, satisfy at least the three separate elements specified in sections 33(1)(a)(i), (ii) and 33(1)(b). In the case of a limitation on the right to dignity and the right to be protected from cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment, the fourth element of "necessity" contained in section 33(1)(aa) must further be satisfied.

- [285] The most plausible argument in support of the submission that the death penalty does satisfy these onerous conditions prescribed by section 33 is the submission that it acts as a deterrent. That argument has dominated perceptions in support of the death penalty, both in South Africa and abroad.
- [286] It must readily be conceded that if it could be established that the death sentence does indeed deter the commission of serious offences in respect of which the death penalty is a competent sentence, it would indeed be a very relevant and at least a potentially persuasive consideration in support of its justification in terms of section 33. There are, however, some serious difficulties involved in the acceptance of the proposition that the death penalty is, or ever has been, a demonstrable deterrence.
- [287] The legitimacy of the argument must to a substantial degree be premised on an assumption which appears to me to be fallacious and at the least, highly speculative and rationally unconvincing. That assumption is that a criminal, contemplating the commission of a serious offence, weighs the risk that he might be sentenced to death against the risk that he might not be sentenced to death but only to a long term of imprisonment of twenty years or more. The assumption is that he would decide to commit the offence even at the risk of receiving a long term of imprisonment but that if the death sentence was the risk, he would refrain from committing the offence at all. I have serious difficulties with these assumptions. In the first place they are not supported by any empirical evidence or research in this country or abroad. Secondly, this argument attributes to the offender a capacity for reflection and contemplation and a maturity of analysis which appears to me to be unrealistic. Thirdly, and more fundamentally, it ignores what is possibly the real factor in any risk assessment which might activate a potentially serious offender: the risk which he considers is that he will not be caught. If he believed that there was a real risk of being apprehended, charged and convicted he would not willingly assume the prospect of many years of quite punishing imprisonment.

[288] If, as I believe, such offenders commit the crimes contemplated because of a belief that they will probably not be apprehended at all, it is a belief which is regrettably justified. On the information that was common cause in argument before us, sixty or seventy percent of offenders who commit serious crimes are not apprehended at all and a substantial proportion of those who are, are never convicted. The risk is therefore worth taking, not because the death penalty would, in the perception of the offender, not be imposed but because no punishment is likely to result at all. The levels of serious crimes committed in South Africa are indeed disturbing. For many in the community, life has become dangerous and intolerable. Criminals do need vigorously to be deterred from conduct which endangers the security and freedom of citizens to a very distressing degree but, on the available evidence, it is facile to assume that the retention of the death penalty will provide the deterrence which is clearly needed. I have analysed such statistics as were debated in argument. In comparisons between States in the United States of America which retained the death penalty and those which did not, there is no manifest proof that the rate of serious crime was greater in the States which did not sanction capital punishment. In the case of those which did abolish capital punishment, there was no convincing proof that the rate of serious crime was greater after such act of abolition (Peterson and Bailey, "Murder and Capital Punishment in the context of the Post-Furman Era (1988)66 Social Forces 774; Thorsten Sellin, The Death Penalty, 1982).

[289] Following a survey of research findings the United Nations concluded that -

"this research has failed to provide scientific proof that executions have a greater deterrent effect than life imprisonment - such proof is unlikely to be following. The evidence as a whole still gives no possible support to the deterrent hypothesis". (United Nations: The Question of the Death Penalty and the New Contributions of Criminal Science to the Matter (1988) at 110).

MAHOMED J

- [290] We were not furnished with any reliable research dealing with the relationship between the rate of serious offences and the proportion of successful apprehensions and convictions following on the commission of serious offences. This would have been a significant enquiry. It appears to me to be an inherent probability that the more successful the police are in solving serious crimes and the more successful they are in apprehending the criminals concerned and securing their convictions, the greater will be the perception of risk for those contemplating such offences. That increase in the perception of risk, contemplated by the offender, would bear a relationship to the rate at which serious offences are committed. Successful arrest and conviction must operate as a deterrent and the State should, within the limits of its undoubtedly constrained resources, seek to deter serious crime by adequate remuneration for the police force; by incentives to improve their training and skill; by augmenting their numbers in key areas; and by facilitating their legitimacy in the perception of the communities in which they work.
- [291] Successful deterrence of serious crime also involves the need for substantial redress in the socio-economic conditions of those ravaged by poverty, debilitated by disease and malnutrition and disempowered by illiteracy. Rapid amelioration in these areas must have some concomitant effect on the levels of crime. There has to be a corresponding campaign among the communities affected by serious crime to harness their own legitimacy and their own infrastructures, in interaction with the security agencies of the State. The power and influence of agencies of moral authority such as teachers, school principals and religious leaders must rapidly be restored. Crime is a multi-faceted phenomenon. It has to be assaulted on a multi-dimensional level to facilitate effective deterrence.
- [292] The moratorium on the execution of the death penalty, which has been effectively in operation since 1990, is also relevant in offering some insight into the veracity of the proposition that executions for capital crimes operate as a deterrent. That proposition, as Didcott J has correctly analysed, is not cogently supported by the statistics made available to us for the period following upon the moratorium; nor is it supported by the rate at which crime levels increased during periods in our history when executions were administered with vigour.

- [293] Bringing to bear upon the issue, therefore, a rational and judicial judgment, I have not been persuaded that the fear of the death penalty rationally or practically operates as a demonstrable deterrent for offenders seeking to perpetrate serious crimes. It remains, for the reasons I have previously discussed, an impermissibly cruel invasion of rights, the sustenance of which is fundamental to a defensible civilization, protected in South Africa by the ethos of a Constitution, which is manifestly humanistic and caring in its content.
- [294] Even if the fallacious and speculative assumptions which motivate the argument in support of the proposition that the death sentence does act as a deterrent against serious crime were to be accepted, rationally the fear of the death penalty would only operate on the mind of the potential offender if there was a serious risk that he could be so punished. On the information made available to us, however, that risk is in any event so minimal, as to constitute a remote statistical possibility, which, as Mr Trengove argued, might be no more significant than the risk of dying in a motor accident. It is difficult to appreciate how such a remote statistical possibility acts as a deterrent on the minds of potential offenders.
- [295] On a judicial application of all the relevant considerations and the facts made available to us, I therefore cannot conclude that the State has successfully established that the death penalty per se has any deterrent effect on the potential perpetrators of serious offences.
- [296] Is there any other basis on which the death penalty can be justified? The only serious alternative basis suggested in argument was that it is justifiable as an act of retribution. Retribution has indeed constituted one of the permissible objects of criminal punishment because there is an inherent legitimacy about the claim that the individual victims and society generally should, and are entitled to, enforce punishment as an expression of their moral outrage and sense of grievance. I have, however, some serious difficulties with the justification of the death sentence as a form of retribution. The proper approach is not to contrast the legitimacy of the death sentence as a form of retribution against no retribution at all. That is plainly untenable and manifestly indefensible. The relevant contrast is between the death sentence and the alternative of a very lengthy period of imprisonment, in appropriate cases. It is difficult to appreciate why a sentence which compels the offender to spend years and years in prison, away from his family, in conditions of deliberate austerity and rigid discipline, substantially and continuously impeding his enjoyment of the elementary riches and gifts of civilized living, is not an effective and adequate expression of moral outrage. The unarticulated fallacy in the argument that it is not, is the proposition that it must indeed be equivalent in form to the offence committed. That is an impermissible argument. The burning of the house of the offender is not a permissible punishment for arson. The rape of the offender is not a permissible punishment of a rapist. Why should murder be a permissible punishment for murder? Indeed, there are good reasons why it should not, because its execution might desensitize respect for life per se. More crucially, within the context of the South African Constitution, it appears to be at variance with its basic premise and ethos which I analysed earlier in this judgment. On these considerations, I find it difficult to hold that the death sentence has been demonstrated by the State to be "justifiable in an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality".

[297] That conclusion should make it unnecessary for me to deal with the other elements of justification set out in section 33, but I am in any event of the view that the State has not established that the limitations the death penalty imposes on the relevant rights in Chapter 3, which I have discussed, can be said to be "necessary". That is a material element for justification in terms of section 33 where what is limited is the right to human dignity in section 10 or the right to be protected from cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment in terms of section 11(2). The failure to satisfy that element is fatal to the attempt to establish justification in terms of section 33. Section 277(1)(a) of Act 51 of 1977 must therefore be the constitutional casualty of this conclusion and therefore be struck down. The reasons which have prompted that conclusion are substantially also of application to sub-paragraphs (c) (d) (e) and (f) of section 277(1) and must therefore endure the same fate. For the reasons given by Chaskalson P, I agree that the issue as to whether section 277(1)(b) is unconstitutional should be left open.

[298] It also follows from my approach and the conclusions to which I have arrived, that it is unnecessary to decide whether or not the death penalty does "negate the essential content of the right in question" within the meaning of section 33(1)(b). I also prefer to leave this question open. In the absence of full argument, I do not consider it desirable to determine what the meaning of the reference to the "essential content of the right" is. Chaskalson P, in paragraph 132 of his judgment, has, without deciding, referred to two approaches which he describes as the "objective" and "subjective" determination of the essential content. Arguably, it is possible to consider a third angle which focuses on the distinction between the "essential content" of a right and some other content. This distinction might justify a relative approach to the determination of what is the essential content of a right by distinguishing the central core of the right from its peripheral outgrowth and subjecting "a law of general application" limiting an entrenched right, to the discipline of not invading the core, as distinct from the peripheral outgrowth. In this regard, there may conceivably be a difference between rights which are inherently capable of incremental invasion and those that are not. We have not heard proper argument on any of these distinctions which justify debate in the future in a proper case. I say no more.

[299] Consistent with my approach to the judicial process involved in the determination of the constitutionality of the death sentence, I am accordingly privileged to concur in the order supported by all my colleagues.

[300] MOKGORO J: I am in agreement with the judgement of Chaskalson P, its reasoning, and its conclusions, and I concur in the order that gives effect to those conclusions. I give this brief concurring opinion to highlight what I regard as important: namely that, when our courts promote the underlying values of an open and democratic society in terms of Section 35 when considering the constitutionality of laws, they should recognise that indigenous South African values are not always irrelevant nor unrelated to this task. In my view, these values are embodied in the Constitution and they impact directly on the death penalty as a form of punishment.

[301] Now that constitutionalism has become central to the new emerging South African jurisprudence, legislative interpretation will be radically different from what it used to be in the past legal order. In that legal order, due to the sovereignty of parliament, the supremacy of legislation and the absence of judicial review of parliamentary statutes, courts engaged in simple statutory interpretation, giving effect to the clear and unambiguous language of the legislative text - no matter how unjust the legislative provision. The view of the court in Bongopi v Council of the State, Ciskei 1992(3) SA 250 (CK) at 265 H - I, as per Pickard CJ is instructive in this regard:

‘This court has always stated openly that it is not the maker of laws. It will enforce the law as it finds it. To attempt to promote policies that are not to be found in the law itself or to prescribe what it believes to be the current public attitudes or standards in regard to these policies is not its function’.

[302] With the entrenchment of a Bill of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms in a supreme constitution, however, the interpretive task frequently involves making constitutional choices by balancing competing fundamental rights and freedoms. This can often only be done by reference to a system of values extraneous to the constitutional text itself, where these principles constitute the historical context in which the text was adopted and which help to explain the meaning of the text. The constitution makes it particularly imperative for courts to develop the entrenched fundamental rights in terms of a cohesive set of values, ideal to an open and democratic society. To this end common values of human rights protection the world over and foreign precedent may be instructive.

[303] While it is important to appreciate that in the matter before us the court had been called upon to decide an issue of constitutionality and not to engage in debate on the desirability of abolition or retention, it is equally important to appreciate that the nature of the court’s role in constitutional interpretation, and the duty placed on courts by Section 35, will of necessity draw them into the realm of making necessary value choices.

MOKGORO J

[304] The application of the limitation clause embodied in Section 33(1) to any law of general application which competes with a Chapter 3 right is essentially also an exercise in balancing opposing rights. To achieve the required balance will of necessity involve value judgements. This is the nature of constitutional interpretation. Indeed Section 11(2) which is the counterpart of Section 15(1) of the Constitution of Zimbabwe¹, and provides protection against cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment, embodies broad idealistic notions of dignity and humanity. If applied to determine whether the death penalty was a form of torture, treatment or punishment which is cruel, inhuman or degrading it also involves making value choices, as was held per Gubbay CJ in Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace, Zimbabwe v Attorney-General, Zimbabwe, 1993(4) SA 239(ZS) at 241. In order to guard against what Didcott J, in his concurring judgement terms the trap of undue subjectivity, the interpretation clause prescribes that courts seek guidance in international norms and foreign judicial precedent, reflective of the values which underlie an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality. By articulating rather than suppressing values which underlie our decisions, we are not being subjective. On the contrary, we set out in a transparent and objective way the foundations of our interpretive choice and make them available for criticism. Section 35 seems to acknowledge the paucity of home-grown judicial precedent upholding human rights, which is not surprising considering the repressive nature of the past legal order. It requires courts to proceed to public international law and foreign case law for guidance in constitutional interpretation, thereby promoting the ideal and internationally accepted values in the cultivation of a human rights jurisprudence for South Africa. However, I am of the view that our own (ideal) indigenous value systems are a premise from which we need to proceed and are not wholly unrelated to our goal of a society based on freedom and equality. This, in my view too, is the relevance of the submissions of Adv. Davids, appearing as amicus curiae on behalf of the Black Advocates' Forum, albeit that these submissions were inappropriately presented.

Walsh J, expressed the view that:

“... in a democracy the law cannot afford to ignore the moral consensus of the community. If the law is out of touch with the moral consensus of the community, whether by being either too far below it or too far above it, the law is brought into contempt” (at 184).

Although this view was expressed in relation to the legislative process, in as far as courts have to comply with the requirements of Section 35 of the Constitution the approach it embodies is not wholly inapplicable in constitutional adjudication. Enduring values, however, are not the same as fluctuating public opinion. In his argument before the court, the Attorney General submitted that:

“... the overwhelming public opinion in favour of the retention of the death sentence is sufficiently well-known to be accepted as the true voice of the South African society. This opinion of the South African public is evidenced by newspaper articles, letters to newspapers, debates in the media and representations to the authorities...”

The described sources of public opinion can hardly be regarded as scientific. Yet even if they were, constitutional adjudication is quite different from the legislative process, because “the court is not a politically responsible institution”² to be seized every five years by majoritarian opinion. The values intended to be promoted by Section 35 are not founded on what may well be uninformed or indeed prejudiced public opinion. One of the functions of the court is precisely to ensure that vulnerable minorities are not deprived of their constitutional rights.

² See Jesse Choper quoted in Rights and Constitutionalism; The New South African Legal Order; Van Wyk D. et al, Juta, 1994 p. 9. The suggestion is that the judiciary is not wholly removed from the political process, where it plays a supervisory role, restraining the majority will through judicial review.

MOKGORO J

[306] In support of her main contention, Adv. Davids quite appropriately expressed concern for the need to consider the value systems of the formerly marginalised sectors of society in creating a South African jurisprudence. However, for reasons outlined in the concurring opinion of Sachs J, the issue was regrettably not argued. Indeed even if her submissions might not have influenced the final decision of the court, the opportunity to present and argue properly adduced evidence of those undistorted values historically disregarded in South African judicial law-making would have created an opportunity of important historical value, injecting such values into the mainstream of South African jurisprudence. The experience would, in my view, also have served to emphasise that the need to develop an all-inclusive South African jurisprudence is not only incumbent upon the judiciary, let alone the Constitutional Court. The broad legal profession, academia and those sectors of organised civil society particularly concerned with public interest law, have an equally important responsibility and role to play by combining efforts and resources to place the required evidence in argument before the courts. It is not as if these resources are lacking; what has been absent has been the will, and the acknowledgment of the importance of the material concerned.

[307] In interpreting the Bill of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms, as already mentioned, an all-inclusive value system, or common values in South Africa, can form a basis upon which to develop a South African human rights jurisprudence. Although South Africans have a history of deep divisions characterised by strife and conflict, one shared value and ideal that runs like a golden thread across cultural lines, is the value of ubuntu - a notion now coming to be generally articulated in this country. It is well accepted that the transitional Constitution is a culmination of a negotiated political settlement. It is a bridge between a history of gross violations of human rights and humanitarian principles, and a future of reconstruction and reconciliation. The post-amble of the Constitution expressly provides,

“... there is a need for understanding but not for vengeance, a need for reparation but not for retaliation, a need for ubuntu but not for victimisation...”

MOKGORO J

Not only is the notion of ubuntu expressly provided for in the epilogue of the Constitution, the underlying idea and its accompanying values are also expressed in the preamble. These values underlie, first and foremost, the whole idea of adopting a Bill of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms in a new legal order. They are central to the coherence of all the rights entrenched in Chapter 3 - where the right to life and the right to respect for and protection of human dignity are embodied in Sections 9 and 10 respectively.

[308] Generally, ubuntu translates as humaneness. In its most fundamental sense, it translates as personhood and morality. Metaphorically, it expresses itself in umuntu ngumuntu ngabantu, describing the significance of group solidarity on survival issues so central to the survival of communities. While it envelops the key values of group solidarity, compassion, respect, human dignity, conformity to basic norms and collective unity, in its fundamental sense it denotes humanity and morality. Its spirit emphasises respect for human dignity, marking a shift from confrontation to conciliation.³ In South Africa ubuntu has become a notion with particular resonance in the building of a democracy. It is part of our “rainbow” heritage, though it might have operated and still operates differently in diverse community settings. In the Western cultural heritage, respect and the value for life, manifested in the all-embracing concepts of humanity and menswaardigheid are also highly prized. It is values like these that Section 35 requires to be promoted. They give meaning and texture to the principles of a society based on freedom and equality.

[309] In American jurisprudence, courts have recognised that the dignity of the individual in American society is the supreme value. Even the most evil offender, it has been held, “remains a human being possessed of a common human dignity” (Furman v Georgia 408 US 238 at 273 (1972)), thereby making the calculated process of the death penalty inconsistent with this basic, fundamental value. In Hungarian jurisprudence, the right to life and the right to human dignity are protected as twin rights in Section 54(1) of that Constitution⁴. They are viewed as an inseparable unity of rights. Not only are they regarded as a unity of indivisible rights, but they also have been held to be the genesis of all rights. In international law, on the other hand, human dignity is generally considered the fountain of all rights. The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (1966) G.A. Res 2200 (XXI), 21 U.N. GAOR, SUPP. (No, 16) at 52, U.N. DOC. A/6316(1966), in its preamble, makes references to “the inherent dignity of all members of the human family” and concludes that “human rights derive from the inherent dignity of the human person”. This, in my view, is not different from what the spirit of ubuntu embraces.

[310] It is common cause, however, that the legal system in South Africa, and the socio-political system within which it operated, has for decades traumatised the human spirit. In many ways, it trampled on the basic humanity of citizens. We cannot in all conscience declare, as did a United States Supreme Court justice in Furman v Georgia 408 US 238, at 296 (1972) with reference to the American context, that respect for and protection of human dignity has been a central value in South African jurisprudence. We cannot view the death penalty as fundamentally inconsistent with our harsh legal heritage. Indeed, it was an integral part of a system of law enforcement that imposed severe penalties on those who aspired to achieve the values enshrined in our Constitution today.

[311] South Africa now has a new constitution however, which creates a constitutional state. This state is in turn founded on the recognition and protection of basic human rights, and although this constitutes a revolutionary change in legal terms, the idea is consistent with the inherited traditional value systems of South Africans in general - traditional values which hardly found the chance to bring South Africa on par with the rest of the world.

MOKGORO J

As this constitution evolves to overcome the culture of gross human rights violations of the past, jurisprudence in South Africa will simultaneously develop a culture of respect for and protection of basic human rights. Central to this commitment is the need to revive the value of human dignity in South Africa, and in turn re-define and recognise the right to and protection of human dignity as a right concomitant to life itself and inherent in all human beings, so that South Africans may also appreciate that “even the vilest criminal remains a human being” (Furman v Georgia, supra). In my view, life and dignity are like two sides of the same coin. The concept of ubuntu embodies them both.

[312] In the past legal order, basic human rights in South Africa, including the right to life and human dignity, were not protected in a Bill of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms, in a supreme constitution, as is the case today. Parliament then was sovereign, and could pass any law it deemed fit. Legislation was supreme, and due to the absence of judicial review, no court of law could set aside any statute or its provision on grounds of violating fundamental rights. Hence, Section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 51 of 1977, could survive untested to this day.

[313] Our new Constitution, unlike its dictatorial predecessor, is value-based. Among other things, it guarantees the protection of basic human rights, including the right to life and human dignity, two basic values supported by the spirit of ubuntu and protected in Sections 9 and 10 respectively. In terms of Section 35, this Constitution now commits the state to base the worth of human beings on the ideal values espoused by open democratic societies the world over and not on race colour, political, economic and social class. Although it has been argued that the currently high level of crime in the country is indicative of the breakdown of the moral fabric of society, it has not been conclusively shown that the death penalty, which is an affront to these basic values, is the best available practical form of punishment to reconstruct that moral fabric. In the second place, even if the end was desirable, that would not justify the means. The death penalty violates the essential content of the right to life embodied in Section 9, in that it extinguishes life itself. It instrumentalises the offender for the objectives of state policy. That is dehumanising. It is degrading and it violates the rights to respect for and protection of human dignity embodied in Section 10 of the Constitution.

MOKGORO J

- [314] Once the life of a human being is taken in the deliberate and calculated fashion that characterises the described methods of execution the world over, it constitutes the ultimate cruelty with which any living creature could ever be treated. This extreme level of cruel treatment of a human being, however despicably such person might have treated another human being, is still inherently cruel. It is inhuman and degrading to the humanity of the individual, as well as to the humanity of those who carry it out.
- [315] Taking the life of a human being will always be reprehensible. Those citizens who kill deserve the most severe punishment, if it deters and rehabilitates and therefore effectively addresses deviance of this nature. Punishment by death cannot achieve these objectives. The high rate of crime in this country is indeed disturbing and the state has a duty to protect the lives of all citizens - including those who kill. However, it should find more humane and effective integrated approaches to manage its penal system, and to rehabilitate offenders.
- [316] The state is representative of its people and in many ways sets the standard for moral values within society. If it sanctions by law punishment for killing by killing, it sanctions vengeance by law. If it does so with a view to deterring others, it dehumanises the person and objectifies him or her as a tool for crime control. This objectification through the calculated killing of a human being, to serve state objectives, strips the offender of his or her human dignity and dehumanises, such a person constituting a violation of Section 10 of the Constitution.
- [317] Although the Attorney General placed great reliance on the deterrent nature of the death penalty in his argument, it was conceded that this has not been conclusively proven. It has also not been shown that this form of punishment was the best available option for the rehabilitation of the offender. Retaining the death penalty for this purpose is therefore unnecessary. Section 277(1) which authorises the death penalty under these unnecessarily inhuman and degrading circumstances is inconsistent with the right to life and human dignity embodied in Sections 9 and 10 of the Constitution, respectively, and is in direct conflict with the values that Section 35 aims to promote in the interpretation of these sections. Taking the life of a person under such deliberate and calculated circumstances, with the methods already described in the judgement of Chaskalson P, is cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It is inconsistent with Section 11(2) of the Constitution. In my view, therefore, the death penalty is unconstitutional. Not only does it violate the right not be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, it also violates the right to life and human dignity.

[318] O'REGAN J: I have read the judgment of Chaskalson P and I agree with the order that he proposes. However, although I agree that the death sentence constitutes a breach of section 11(2) of the Constitution that is not justified in terms of section 33, it is my view that it also constitutes a breach of section 9 (the right to life) and section 10 (the right to dignity) for the reasons that are given in this judgment.

[319] The crimes of which the two prisoners whose case has been referred to this court have been convicted were committed during a robbery from a bank security vehicle which was delivering monthly wages to the Coronation Hospital in Johannesburg. It appears from the judgment of the Appellate Division that the two prisoners were part of a group of robbers who had cold-bloodedly planned the robbery. All the robbers had been armed with AK-47s and had opened fire on the security vehicle and the accompanying vehicle when they had driven into the hospital parking area. As a result of the shooting, two policemen and two bank security officials were shot dead.

[320] There is no doubt that the crimes committed by the two prisoners were abhorrent. Our society cannot and does not condone brutal murder or robbery. Perpetrators of crimes such as these must be punished severely according to our system of criminal justice. In this case, the prisoners have been tried, convicted and sentenced. The question that this court must answer is not whether the prisoners committed these crimes, nor whether they should be punished. It has been established by the proper courts that they did commit crimes, and for that they must be punished. What this court must consider is whether the form of punishment that has been imposed is constitutional. Does our constitution permit any convicted criminal, however heinous the crime, to be put to death by the government as punishment for that crime?

[321] The Constitution entrenches certain fundamental rights. Included amongst these are the right to life (section 9), the right to the respect for and protection of dignity (section 10) and the right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment (section 11(2)). The prisoners allege that the death penalty is in conflict with each of these. The language of each of these rights is broad and capable of different interpretations. How is this court to determine the content and scope of these rights? This question is at least partially answered by section 35(1) of the constitution which enjoins this court in interpreting the rights contained in the Constitution to 'promote the values which underlie an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality'.

[322] No-one could miss the significance of the hermeneutic standard set. The values urged upon the court are not those that have informed our past. Our history is one of repression not freedom, oligarchy not democracy, apartheid and prejudice not equality, clandestine not open government. As the epilogue to the constitution states:

'This constitution provides a historic bridge between the past of a deeply divided society characterised by strife, conflict, untold suffering and injustice, and a future founded on the recognition of human rights, democracy and peaceful co-existence and development opportunities for all South Africans, irrespective of colour, race, class, belief or sex.'

[323] In interpreting the rights enshrined in chapter 3, therefore, the court is directed to the future: to the ideal of a new society which is to be built on the common values which made a political transition possible in our country and which are the foundation of its new constitution. This is not to say that there is nothing from our past which should be retained. Of course this is not so. As Kentridge AJ described in the first judgment of this court (S v Zuma unreported judgment of this court, 5 April 1995), many of the rights entrenched in section 25 of the constitution concerning criminal justice are longstanding principles of our law, although eroded by statute and judicial decision. In interpreting the rights contained in section 25, those common law principles will be useful guides.

O' REGAN J

But generally section 35(1) instructs us, in interpreting the constitution, to look forward not backward, to recognise the evils and injustices of the past and to avoid their repetition.

[324] Section 9 of the Constitution provides that:

'Every person shall have the right to life.'

This formulation of the right to life is not one which has been used in the constitutions of other countries or in international human rights conventions. In choosing this formulation, the drafters have specifically avoided either expressly preserving the death penalty, or expressly outlawing it. In addition, they have not used the language so common in other constitutions, which provides that no-one may be deprived of life arbitrarily or without due process of law.¹ To the extent that the formulation of the right is different from that adopted in other jurisdictions, their jurisprudence will be of less value. The question is thus left for us to determine whether this right, or any of the others enshrined in chapter 3, would prima facie prohibit the death penalty.

[325] In giving meaning to section 9, we must seek the purpose for which it was included in the

¹ The Universal Declaration of Human Rights contains an unconditional form of the right: article 3 provides that 'Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of the person.' On the other hand, many other international rights instruments contain qualified protections of the right to life. Article 6(1) of the International Convention on Civil and Political Rights stipulates that 'Every human being has the inherent right to life. This right shall be protected by law. No-one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life.' Subsections 2 - 5 of article 6 then provide for minimum standards for countries which have not abolished the death penalty, and article 6(6) provides that: 'Nothing in this article shall be invoked to delay or prevent the abolition of capital punishment by any state party to the present covenant.' In addition in 1989 an optional protocol was adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations, article 1 of which provides that 'No-one within the jurisdiction of state parties to the present optional protocol shall be executed'.

Article 4 of the Banjul Charter on Human and People's Rights (African Charter) provides that 'Human beings are inviolable. Every human being shall be entitled to respect for his life and the integrity of the person. No one may be arbitrarily deprived of this right.'

Article 2(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights provides that 'Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law. No one shall be deprived of his life intentionally save in the execution of a sentence of a court following his conviction of a crime for which this penalty is provided by law.' But in 1983 a protocol to the Convention was adopted which provided that capital punishment should be abolished. The protocol has been widely ratified. See Van Dijk and Van Hoof Theory and Practice of the European Convention on Human Rights 2nd ed (1990) pp 502 -3.

O' REGAN J

Constitution.² This purposive or teleological approach to the interpretation of rights may at times require a generous meaning to be given to provisions of chapter 3 of the Constitution, and at other times a narrower or specific meaning. It is the responsibility of the courts, and ultimately this court, to develop fully the rights entrenched in the Constitution. But that will take time. Consequently any minimum content which is attributed to a right may in subsequent cases be expanded and developed.

[326] The right to life is, in one sense, antecedent to all the other rights in the Constitution. Without life in the sense of existence, it would not be possible to exercise rights or to be the bearer of them. But the right to life was included in the Constitution not simply to enshrine the right to existence. It is not life as mere organic matter that the Constitution cherishes, but the right to human life: the right to live as a human being, to be part of a broader community, to share in the experience of humanity. This concept of human life is at the centre of our constitutional values. The constitution seeks to establish a society where the individual value of each member of the community is recognised and treasured. The right to life is central to such a society.

[327] The right to life, thus understood, incorporates the right to dignity. So the rights to human dignity and life are entwined. The right to life is more than existence, it is a right to be treated as a human being with dignity: without dignity, human life is substantially diminished. Without life, there cannot be dignity. This was recognised by the Hungarian constitutional court in the case in which it considered the constitutionality of the death penalty:

'It is the untouchability and equality contained in the right to human dignity that results in man's right to life being a specific right to human life (over and above animals' and artificial subjects' right to being); on the other hand, dignity as a fundamental right does not have meaning for the individual if he or she is dead. ... Human dignity is a naturally accompanying quality of human life.' (Decision No 23/1990, (X.31.) AB, George Feher translation)

[328] The right to dignity is enshrined in our Constitution in section 10:

'Every person shall have the right to respect for and protection of his or her dignity'.

The importance of dignity as a founding value of the new Constitution cannot be overemphasised. Recognising a right to dignity is an acknowledgement of the intrinsic worth of human beings: human beings are entitled to be treated as worthy of respect and concern.³ This right therefore is the foundation of many of the other rights that are specifically entrenched in chapter 3. As Brennan J held when speaking of forms of cruel and unusual punishments in the context of the American constitution:

'The true significance of these punishments is that they treat members of the human race as non-humans, as objects to be toyed with and discarded. They are thus inconsistent with the fundamental premise of the Clause that even the vilest criminal remains a human being possessed of common human dignity.' (Furman v Georgia 408 US 238 at 272,3 (1972))

[329] Respect for the dignity of all human beings is particularly important in South Africa. For apartheid was a denial of a common humanity. Black people were refused respect and dignity and thereby the dignity of all South Africans was diminished. The new constitution rejects this past and affirms the equal worth of all South Africans. Thus recognition and protection of human dignity is the touchstone of the new political order and is fundamental to the new constitution.

³See, for discussion of the right to dignity and the death penalty, the judgment of Solyom J in the Hungarian case concerning the constitutionality of the death penalty (Decision no 23/1990 (X.31.) AB, George Feher translation).

O' REGAN J

[330] But human dignity is important to all democracies. In an aphorism coined by Ronald Dworkin 'Because we honour dignity, we demand democracy'.⁴ Its importance was recognised too by Cory J in Kindler v Canada (1992) 6 CRR (2nd) 193 (SCC) at 237 in which he held that '[i]t is the dignity and importance of the individual which is the essence and the cornerstone of democratic government'.⁵

[331] The Attorney-General argued that the prisoners, and others like them, who are convicted of crimes for which the death penalty is currently competent, have forfeited their right to life and dignity. This cannot be correct. It is a fundamental premise of our constitution that the rights in chapter 3 are available to all South Africans no matter how atrocious their conduct. As Gubbay CJ held in Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace, Zimbabwe v Attorney-General, Zimbabwe 1993 (4) SA 239 (ZS) at 247 g -h:

'It cannot be doubted that prison walls do not keep out fundamental rights and protections. Prisoners are not, by mere reason of a conviction, denuded of all the rights they otherwise possess. No matter the magnitude of the crime, they are not reduced to non-persons. They retain all basic rights, save those inevitably removed from them by law, expressly or by implication.'

[332] It must be emphasised that the entrenchment of a Bill of Rights, enforceable by a judiciary, is designed, in part, to protect those who are the marginalised, the dispossessed and the outcasts of our society. They are the test of our commitment to a common humanity and cannot be excluded from it.

O' REGAN J

- [333] Are the rights to life and dignity breached by the death penalty? The death sentence has been part of South African law since the colonial era. Not only has the law permitted the death sentence, but it has been regularly imposed by courts and carried out by the government. For many years, South Africa had the doubtful honour of being a world leader in the number of judicial executions carried out. Although there is some uncertainty about the statistics, it appears that between 1981 and 1990 approximately 1100 people were executed in South Africa, including the Transkei, Ciskei, Bophuthatswana and Venda.⁶ The death sentence was imposed sometimes for crimes that were motivated by political ideals. In this way the death penalty came to be seen by some as part of the repressive machinery of the former government. Towards the end of the 1980s there were several major public campaigns to halt the execution of people who were perceived to be political opponents of the government. There is no doubt that these campaigns to prevent the execution of amongst others, the 'Sharpeville Six' and the 'Upington 26' were partly responsible for the government's decision in 1990 to suspend the implementation of sentences of death.
- [334] The purpose of the death penalty is to kill convicted criminals. Its very purpose lies in the deprivation of existence. Its inevitable result is the denial of human life. It is hard to see how this methodical and deliberate destruction of life by the government can be anything other than a breach of the right to life.
- [335] The implementation of the death penalty is also a denial of the individual's right to dignity. The execution of the death penalty was described by Professor Chris Barnard as follows:

'The man's spinal cord will rupture at the point where it enters the skull, electrochemical discharges will send his limbs flailing in a grotesque dance, eyes and tongue will start from the facial apertures under the assault of the rope and his bowels and bladder may simultaneously void themselves to soil the legs and drip on the floor....' (Rand Daily Mail 12 June 1978, cited in Appellants' heads)

⁶ See Murray 'Hangings in Southern Africa: The last ten years' (1990) 6 SAJHR 439 - 441; Keightley 'Hangings in Southern Africa: the last ten years' (1991) 7 SAJHR 347 - 349; 'The Death Penalty in SA: Statistics' (1989) 2 SACJ 251; Amnesty International 'When the State Kills... The Death Penalty vs Human Rights' (1989) 204 - 207.

O' REGAN J

This frank description of the execution process leaves little doubt that it is one which is destructive of human dignity. As Cory J held in Kindler v Canada (1992) 6 CRR (2nd) 193 (SCC) at 241:

'The death penalty not only deprives the prisoner of all vestiges of human dignity, it is the ultimate desecration of the individual as a human being. It is the annihilation of the very essence of human dignity.'

[336] But it is not only the manner of execution which is destructive of dignity, the circumstances in which convicted criminals await the execution of their sentence also constitutes a breach of dignity. These circumstances have been amply and aptly described by Gubbay CJ in Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace, Zimbabwe v Attorney-General, Zimbabwe 1993(4) SA 239 (ZS) at 268-9. Although little evidence has been placed before us to describe the experience of condemned prisoners in South Africa, it seems all too probable that it resembles the conditions described by Gubbay CJ. Indeed, the moratorium on the implementation of the death sentence described by Chaskalson P has probably aggravated the conditions of condemned prisoners considerably.

[337] Section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act is therefore not only a breach of section 11(2) of the Constitution as held by Chaskalson P, but it is also a breach of section 9 (the right to life) and section 10 (the right to dignity). It is unnecessary and would be inappropriate to consider the further scope of these rights.

[338] The Constitution does recognise in section 33 that the rights it entrenches may be limited by law of general application if a law is reasonable and justifiable (and in some circumstances, necessary) in an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality. The infringement of the rights to life and dignity occasioned by section 277 of the Criminal Procedure Act needs to be measured against this test. In this regard, it should be noted that a law which infringes the right to dignity must be shown to be a reasonable, justifiable and necessary limitation, whereas a law which contains a limitation upon the right to life need only be shown to be reasonable and justifiable.

O' REGAN J

[339] The purpose of the bifurcated levels of justification need not detain us here. What is clear is that section 33 introduces different levels of scrutiny for laws which cause an infringement of rights. The requirement of reasonableness and justifiability which attaches to some of the section 33 rights clearly envisages a less stringent constitutional standard than does the requirement of necessity. In both cases, the enquiry concerns proportionality: to measure the purpose, effects and importance of the infringing legislation against the infringement caused. In addition, it will need to be shown that the ends sought by the legislation cannot be achieved sufficiently and realistically by other means which would be less destructive of entrenched rights. Where the constitutional standard is necessity, the considerations are similar, but the standard is more stringent.

[340] In determining whether the breaches of sections 9 and 10 are justified in terms of section 33, the relevant considerations are the same as those traversed by Chaskalson P at paragraphs 116 - 131 of his judgment albeit only in the context of a breach of section 11(2). The Attorney-General argued that the purpose of section 277 was the deterrence and prevention of crime, and retribution. Although deterrence is an important goal, as Chaskalson P has described, the deterrent effect of the death penalty remains unproven, perhaps unprovable.

[341] The question of retribution is a more complex one. I agree with Chaskalson P that in a democratic society retribution as a goal of punishment should not be given undue weight. Indeed, I am unconvinced that, where the punishment is held to constitute a breach of a fundamental right, retribution would ever, on its own, be a sufficient ground for justification. As Marshall J noted in Furman v Georgia 408 US 238 at 344-5 (1972):

'To preserve the integrity of the Eighth Amendment, the Court has consistently denigrated retribution as a permissible goal of punishment. It is undoubtedly correct that there is a demand for vengeance on the part of many persons in a community against one who is convicted of a particularly offensive act. At times a cry is heard that morality requires vengeance to evidence society's abhorrence of the act. But the Eighth Amendment is our insulation from our baser selves. The 'cruel and unusual' language limits the avenues through which vengeance can be channelled. Were this not so, the language would be empty and a return to the rack and other tortures would be possible in a given case.'

O' REGAN J

[342] It remains then to balance the purposes of section 277 with the infringement of sections 9 and 10 it causes. In this exercise, it is undeniable that sections 9 and 10 are rights which lie at the heart of our constitutional framework and that section 277 grievously infringes the ambit of these rights. They weigh very heavily in the scales of proportionality. On the other hand, while the goals of deterrence and prevention which are the purpose of section 277 are important legislative purposes, it has not been satisfactorily demonstrated that they could not be sufficiently and realistically achieved by other means. After a careful consideration of the nature of the rights, the extent of the infringement of those rights, and the purposes of section 277, I remain unpersuaded that section 277 is a constitutionally acceptable limitation upon the rights to life and dignity.

[344] In conclusion, then, the death penalty is unconstitutional. It is a breach of the rights to life and dignity that are entrenched in sections 9 and 10 of our Constitution, as well as a breach of the prohibition of cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment contained in section 11(2). The new Constitution stands as a monument to this society's commitment to a future in which all human beings will be accorded equal dignity and respect. We cannot postpone giving effect to that commitment.

[345] SACHS J: I agree fully with the judgment of the President of the court, and wish merely to elaborate on two matters, both of emphasis rather than substance, which I feel merit further treatment.

[346] The first relates to the balance between the right to life and the right to dignity. The judgment appropriately regards the two rights as mutually re-enforcing, but places greater reliance on the prohibition against cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment than it does on the right to life. For reasons which I will outline, I think the starting-off point for an analysis of capital punishment should be the right to life.

[347] Secondly, I think it important to say something about the source of values which, in terms of section 35 of the Constitution, our interpretation is required to promote.

The Right to Life and Proportionality

[348] Decent people throughout the world are divided over which arouses the greatest horror: the thought of the State deliberately killing its citizens, or the idea of allowing cruel killers to co-exist with honest citizens. For some, the fact that we cold-bloodedly kill our own kind, taints the whole of our society and makes us all accomplices to the premeditated and solemn extinction of human life. For others, on the contrary, the disgrace is that we place a higher value on the life and dignity of the killer than on that of the victim. A third group prefer a purely pragmatic approach which emphasises not the moral issues, but the inordinate stress that capital punishment puts on the judicial process and, ultimately, on the Presidency, as well as the morbid passions it arouses in the public; from a purely practical point of view, they argue, capital punishment appears to offer an illusory solution to crime, and as such actually detracts from really effective measures to protect the public.

[349] We are not called upon to decide between these positions. They are essentially emotional, moral and pragmatic in character and will no doubt occupy the attention of the Constitutional Assembly. Our function is to interpret the text of the Constitution as it stands. Accordingly, whatever our personal views on this fraught subject might be, our response must be a purely legal one.

[350] This court is unlikely to get another case which is emotionally and philosophically more elusive, and textually more direct. Section 9 states: "Every person shall have the right to life." These unqualified and unadorned words are binding on the State (sections 4 and 7) and, on the face of it, outlaw capital punishment. Section 33 does allow for limitations on fundamental rights; yet, in my view, executing someone is not limiting that person's life, but extinguishing it.

[351] Life is different. In the vivid phrase used by Mahomed J in the course of argument, the right to life is not subject to incremental invasion. Life cannot be diminished for an hour, or a day, or 'for life'. While its enjoyment can be qualified, its existence cannot. Similarly, death is different. It is total and irreversible. Just, as there are no degrees of life, so there are no degrees of death (though, as we shall see, there were once degrees of severity in relation to how the sentence of death should be carried out). A level of arbitrariness and the possibilities of mistake that might be inescapable and therefore tolerable in relation to other forms of punishment, burst the parameters of constitutionality when they impact on the deliberate taking of life. The life of any human being is inevitably subject to the ultimate vagaries of the due processes of nature; our Constitution does not permit it to be qualified by the unavoidable caprices of the due processes of law.¹

[352] In the case of other constitutional rights, proportionate balances can be struck between the exercise of the right and permissible derogations from it. In matters such as torture, where no derogations are allowed, thresholds of permissible and impermissible conduct can be established. When it comes to execution, however, there is no scope for proportionality, while the only relevant threshold is, tragically, that to eternity.

[353] Even if one applies an objective approach in relation to the enjoyment of the right to life, namely, that the State is under a duty to create conditions to enable all persons to enjoy the right, in my view this cannot mean that the State's function can be extended to encompass complete, intentional and avoidable obliteration of any person's subjective right. Subject to further argument on the matter, my initial view is that the objective approach can be used to qualify the subjective enjoyment of the right, but not to eliminate it completely, and certainly not to eliminate the subject. It can provide the basis for limiting enjoyment of other subjective rights - to dignity, personal freedom, movement - for a period, or in relation to a concrete situation, or in respect of a physical space, if the requirements of section 33 are met. Yet, life by its very nature cannot be restricted, qualified, abridged, limited or derogated from in the same way. You are either alive or dead.

¹The issue, of course, is whether inescapable caprice prevents the process from being 'due' when the consequences are so drastic.

SACHS J

[354] In my view, section 33 permits limitations on rights, not their extinction. Our Constitution in this sense is different from those that expressly authorise deprivation of life if due process of law is followed, or those that prohibit the arbitrary taking of life. The unqualified statement that 'every person has the right to life', in effect outlaws capital punishment. Instead of establishing a constitutional framework within which the State may deprive citizens of their lives, as it could have done, our Constitution commits the State to affirming and protecting life. Because section 33 is not concerned with creating circumstances in which the right of any person may be disregarded altogether, nor with establishing exceptions which qualify the nature of the right itself, or exclude its operation, it cannot be invoked as an authorization for capital punishment.

[355] A full conceptualization of the right to life will have to await examination of a multitude of complex issues, each of which has its own contextual setting and particularities. In contrast to capital punishment, there are circumstances relating to the right to life where proportionality could well play an important role in balancing out competing interests. Whether or not section 33 would be applicable in each case, or whether proportionality will enter into the definition of the ambit of the right itself, or whether it relates simply to competition between two or more people to exercise the right when it is under immediate threat, need not be decided here. Thus, the German Constitutional Court has relied heavily on the principle of proportionality in relation to the question of when personhood and legally protected life begin and, in particular of how to balance foetal rights as against the rights of the woman concerned.² Force used by the State in cases of self-defence or dealing with hostage-takers or mutineers, must be proportionate to the danger apprehended; the issue arises because two or more persons compete for the right to life; for the one to live, the other must die. The imminence of danger is fundamental: to kill an assailant or hostage-taker or prisoner of war after he or she has been disarmed, is regarded as murder.

[356] Executing a trussed human being long after the violence has ended, totally lacks proportionality in relation to the use of force, and does not fall within the principles of self-defence. From one point of view capital punishment, unless cruelly performed, is a contradiction in terms. The 'capital' part ends rather than expresses the 'punishment', in the sense that the condemned person is eliminated, not punished. A living being held for years in prison is punished; a corpse cannot be punished, only mutilated. Thus, execution ceases to be a punishment of a human being in terms of the Constitution, and becomes instead the obliteration of a sub-human from the purview of the Constitution.

[357] At its core, constitutionalism is about the protection and development of rights, not their extinction. In the absence of the clearest contextual indications that the framers of the Constitution intended that the State's sovereignty should be so extended as to allow it deliberately to take of the life of its citizens, Section 9 should be read to mean exactly what it says: Every person shall have the right to life. If not, the killer unwittingly achieves a final and perverse moral victory by making the state a killer too, thus reducing social abhorrence at the conscious extinction of human beings.

The Source of Values

- [358] The second issue that caused me special concern was the source of the values that we are to apply in assessing whether or not capital punishment is a cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment as constitutionally understood. The matter was raised in an amicus brief and argued orally before us by Ms. Davids on behalf of the Black Advocates Forum.
- [359] Her main contention was that we should not pronounce on the subject of capital punishment until we had been apprised by sociological analysis of the relevant expectations, sensitivities and interests of society as a whole. In the past, she stated, the all-white minority had imposed Eurocentric values on the majority, and an all-white judiciary had taken cognisance merely of the interests of white society. Now, for the first time, she added, we had the opportunity to nurture an open and democratic society and to have due regard to an emerging national consensus on values to be upheld in relation to punishment.
- [360] Many of the points she made had a political rather than a legal character, and as such should have been directed to the Constitutional Assembly rather than to the Constitutional Court. Nevertheless, much of her argument has a bearing on the way this court sees its functions, and deserves the courtesy of a reply.
- [361] To begin with, I wish firmly to express my agreement with the need to take account of the traditions, beliefs and values of all sectors of South African society when developing our jurisprudence.
- [362] In broad terms, the function given to this court by the Constitution is to articulate the fundamental sense of justice and right shared by the whole nation as expressed in the text of the Constitution. The Constitution was the first public document of legal force in South African history to emerge from an inclusive process in which the overwhelming majority were represented. Reference in the Constitution to the role of public international law [sections 35(1) and 231] underlines our common adherence to internationally accepted principles. Whatever the status of earlier legislation and jurisprudence may be, the Constitution speaks for the whole of society and not just one section.

- [363] The preamble, postamble and the principles of freedom and equality espoused in sections 8, 33 and 35 of the Constitution, require such an amplitude of vision. The principle of inclusivity shines through the language provisions in section 3, and underlies the provisions which led to the adoption of the new flag and anthem, and the selection of public holidays.
- [364] The secure and progressive development of our legal system demands that it draw the best from all the streams of justice in our country. This would include benefiting from the learning of those judges who in the previous era managed to articulate a sense of justice that transcended the limits of race, as well as acknowledging the challenging writings of academics such as the late Dr. Barend van Niekerk, who bravely broke the taboos on criticism of the legal system.³
- [365] Above all, however, it means giving long overdue recognition to African law and legal thinking as a source of legal ideas, values and practice. We cannot, unfortunately, extend the equality principle backwards in time to remove the humiliations and indignities suffered by past generations, but we can restore dignity to ideas and values that have long been suppressed or marginalized.
- [366] Redressing the balance in a conceptually sound, methodologically secure and functionally efficient way, will be far from easy. Extensive research and public debate will be required. Legislation will play a key role; indeed, the Constitution expressly acknowledges situations where legal pluralism based on religion can be recognised [14(3)], and where indigenous law can be applied (s.181). Constitutional Principle XIII declares that "..... Indigenous law, like common law, shall be recognised and applied by the courts, subject to the fundamental rights contained in the Constitution and to legislation dealing specifically therewith".

³Cf. 1969 SALJ 455 and 1970 SALJ 60; S v Van Niekerk 1970 (3) SA 655.

55 LS

SACHS J

[367] Yet the issue raised by Ms Davids goes beyond the question of achieving recognition of different systems of personal law.

[368] In interpreting Chapter 3 of the Constitution, which deals with fundamental rights, all courts must promote the values of an open and democratic society based on freedom and equality [s.35(1)]. One of the values of an open and democratic society is precisely that the values of all sections of society must be taken into account and given due weight when matters of public import are being decided. Ms. David's concern is that when it comes to interpreting Chapter 3, and in particular, the concept of punishment, the values of only one section of the community are taken into account.

[369] Paul Sieghart points out that "the hallmarks of a democratic society are pluralism, tolerance and broad-mindedness. Although individual interests must on occasion be subordinated to those of a group, democracy does not mean that the views of a majority must always prevail: a balance must be achieved which ensures the fair and proper treatment of minorities and avoids any abuse of a dominant position".⁴ The principle that cognisance must be taken of minority opinions should apply with at least equal force to majority opinions; if one of the functions of the Constitution is to protect unpopular minorities from abuse, another must surely be to rescue the majority from marginalization.

[370] In a democratic society such as we are trying to establish, this is primarily the task of Parliament, where the will of the majority can be directly expressed within the framework of a system of fundamental rights. Our function as members of this court - as I see it - is, when interpreting the Constitution, to pay due regard to the values of all sections of society, and not to confine ourselves to the values of one portion only, however, exalted or subordinate it might have been in the past.

[371] It is a distressing fact that our law reports and legal textbooks contain few references to African sources as part of the general law of the country. That is no reason for this court to continue to ignore the legal institutions and values of a very large part of the population, moreover, of that section that suffered the most violations of fundamental rights under previous legal regimes, and that perhaps has the most to hope for from the new constitutional order.

[372] Appropriate source material is limited and any conclusions that individual members of this court might wish to offer would inevitably have to be tentative rather than definitive. We would certainly require much fuller research and argument than we had in the present case. The paucity of materials, however, is a reason for putting the issue on the agenda, not a justification for postponing it.

[373] The evolution of core values in all sections of the community is particularly relevant to the characterization of what at any moment are regarded as cruel, inhuman and degrading punishments [s.11(2)]. In my view, s.35(1) requires this court not only to have regard to public international law and foreign case law, but also to all the dimensions of the evolution of South African law which may help us in our task of promoting freedom and equality. This would require reference not only to what in legal discourse is referred to as 'our common law' but also to traditional African jurisprudence.

[374] I must stress that what follows relates to matters not properly canvassed in argument. The statements I make should not be regarded as an attempt on my part to 'lay down the law' on subjects that might well be controversial. Rather, the materials are presented for their possible relevance to the search for core and enduring values consistent with the text and spirit of the Constitution. It is unfortunate they were not placed before us to enable their reliability and their merits to be debated; they are intended to indicate that, speaking for myself, these are the kinds of scholarly sources which I would have regarded as helpful in determining questions such as the present one, if Ms. Davids had presented them to us rather than complain about their absence. I might add that there is nothing to indicate that had these sources been properly presented and subjected to the rigorous analysis which our judicial procedure calls for, the decision of this Court would have been different. There does not appear to be any foundation for her plea that we postpone the matter. On the contrary, the materials that I will refer to point to a source of values entirely consistent with the overall thrust of the President's judgment, and, in particular, with his reference to the constitutionally acknowledged principle of ubuntu.⁵

[375] Our libraries contain a large number of studies by African and other scholars of repute, which delineate in considerable detail how disputes were resolved and punishments meted out in traditional African society. There are a number of references to capital punishment and I can only repeat that it is unfortunate that their import was never canvassed in the present matter.

⁵See the postamble, also referred to as the epilogue or afterword, where reference is made to the "need for ubuntu".

SACHS J

[376] In the first place, the sources indicate that it is necessary to acknowledge that systems of law enforcement based on rational procedures were well entrenched in traditional society. In his classic study of the Tsonga-speaking people, Henri Junod observes that "... the Bantus possess a strong sense of justice. They believe in social order and in the observance of the laws, and, although these laws were not written, they are universal and perfectly well known".⁶ The Cape Law Journal, in a long and admiring report on what it refers to as a Kafir Law Suit, declares that in a typical trial 'the Socratic method of debate appears in all its perfection.'⁷ John Henderson Soga points out that offences were considered to be against the community or tribe rather than the individual, and punishment of a constructive or corrective nature was administered for disturbing the balance of tribal life.⁸

[377] More directly for our purposes, the materials suggest that amongst the Cape Nguni, the death penalty was practically confined to cases of suspected witchcraft, and was normally spontaneously carried out after accusation by the diviners.⁹ Soga says that the death penalty was never imposed, the reasoning being as follows: 'Why sacrifice a second life for one already lost?'¹⁰ Professor Z.K. Mathews is in broad agreement.¹¹ The Cape Law Journal notes that summary executions were usually inflicted for assault on the wives of chiefs or aggravated cases of witchcraft, but otherwise the death sentence 'seldom followed even murder, when committed without the aid of supernatural powers; and as banishment, imprisonment and corporal punishment are all unknown in (African) jurisprudence, the property of the people constitutes the great fund out of which debts of justice are paid'.¹²

[378] Similar approaches were apparently followed in other African communities. The Sotho King Moshoeshe was said to be well known for his opposition to capital punishment, even for supposed witchcraft,¹³ as was Montshiwa during his long reign as King of the Barolong.¹⁴ The absence of capital punishment among the Zulu people apparently angered Shepstone, Lieutenant Governor of Natal. Donald Morris writes as follows:

[379] 'Hearken to Shepstone on November 25, 1850, substituting capital punishment for the native system of cattle fines in the case of murder:

- [380] "... Know ye all a man's life has no price : no cattle can pay for it. He who intentionally kills another, whether for Witchcraft or otherwise, Shall die himself."¹⁵
- [381] Thus, if these sources are reliable, it would appear that the relatively well-developed judicial processes of indigenous societies did not in general encompass capital punishment for murder. Such executions as took place were the frenzied, extra-judicial killings of supposed witches, a spontaneous and irrational form of crowd behaviour that has unfortunately continued to this day in the form of necklacing and witch-burning. In addition, punishments by military leaders in terms of military discipline were frequently of the harshest kind and accounted for the lives of many persons. Yet, the sources referred to above indicate that, where judicial procedures were followed, capital punishment was in general not applied as a punishment for murder.
- [382] In seeking the kind of values which should inform our broad approach to interpreting the Constitution, I have little doubt as to which of these three contrasted aspects of tradition we should follow and which we should reject. The rational and humane adjudicatory approach is entirely consistent with and re-enforcing of the fundamental rights enshrined in our Constitution; the exorcist and militarist concepts are not.
- [383] We do not automatically invoke each and every aspect of traditional law as a source of values, just as we do not rely on all features of the common law. Thus, we reject the once powerful common law traditions associated with patriarchy and the subordination of servants to masters, which are inconsistent with freedom and equality, and we uphold and develop those many aspects of the common law which feed into and enrich the fundamental rights enshrined in the Constitution. I am sure that there are many aspects and values of traditional African law which will also have to be discarded or developed in order to ensure compatibility with the principles of the new constitutional order.

[384] It is instructive to look at the evolution of values in the colonial settlement as well as in African society. In the Dutch settlement, as yet unaffected by the changes sweeping Europe, torture was used until the end of the 18th century as an integral part of the judicial process.¹⁶ Persons were not only condemned to death, the judges specified in detail gruesome modes of execution designed to produce maximum pain and greatest indignity over the longest period of time. The concept of a dignified execution was seen as a contradiction in terms. The public was invited to witness the lingering death, the mutilation and the turning of human beings into carrion for the birds. This is logical. If executions are to deter, they should receive the maximum publicity, and the killers should undergo an agony equal to that to which they subjected their victims.

[385] Yet the British colonial administration that took over at the time of the Napoleonic wars, adopted a different position. Torture was abolished. The multiple degrees of severity of capital punishment were replaced by the single relatively swift mode of hanging. The reason for this was that torture and cruel modes of execution were regarded as barbaric in themselves and degrading to the society which practised them. The incumbent judges protested that whatever might have been appropriate in Britain, in the conditions of the Cape to rely merely on hangings, corporal punishment and prison was to invite slave uprisings and mayhem. The public executioner was so distressed that he hanged himself. All this is a matter of record.¹⁷

[386] Two centuries have passed since then, and it would not be surprising if the framers of the Constitution felt that a further qualitative evolution had taken place. Current practices in the Southern African region as a whole with regard to capital punishment, testify to such an evolution. Information placed before this court¹⁸ showed that of six countries sharing a frontier with South Africa, only one has carried out executions in recent years (Zimbabwe). The last judicial execution in Lesotho was in 1984, in Swaziland in 1983 and in Botswana in 1986, although capital punishment still remains on the statute books and people have in fact been sentenced to death in these countries. Mozambique and Namibia both expressly outlaw capital punishment in their constitutions.

[387] The positions adopted by the framers of the Mozambican and Namibian constitutions were not apparently based on bending the knee to foreign ideas, as was implicit in Ms. David's contention, but rather on memories of massacres and martyrdom in their own countries. As Churchill is reputed to have said, the grass never grows green under the gallows.¹⁹ Germany after Nazism, Italy after fascism, and Portugal, Peru, Nicaragua, Brazil, Argentina, the Philippines and Spain all abolished capital punishment for peacetime offences after emerging from periods of severe repression. They did so mostly through constitutional provisions.²⁰

[388] It is not unreasonable to think that similar considerations influenced the framers of our Constitution as well. In avoiding any direct or indirect reference to the death sentence, they were able to pay due regard to the fact that one of this country's greatest assets was the passion for freedom, democracy and human rights amongst the generation of persons who fought hardest against injustice in the past. Included in this was a deep respect, amounting to veneration, for life. The emerging nation could squander this precious asset at its peril. The framers could not have been unaware of the fact that the time to guard against future repression was when memories of past injustice and pain were still fresh. If they chose sweeping language in favour of life, this could well in part have been because of a realisation that this was the moment to remove any temptation in coming years to attempt to solve grave social and political problems by means of executing opponents.

- [389] Historically, constitutionalism was a product of the age of enlightenment. It was associated with the overthrow of arbitrary power and the attempt to ensure that government functioned according to established principles and processes and in the light of enduring values. It came together with the abolition of torture and the opening up of dungeons. It based itself on the twin propositions that all persons had certain inherent rights that came with their humanity, and that no one had a God-given right to rule over others.
- [390] The second great wave of constitutionalism after World War II, was also a reaction to gross abuse of power, institutionalised inhumanity and organised disrespect for life. Human rights were not merely declared to exist: against the background of genocide and crimes against humanity committed in the name of a racial ideology linked to state sovereignty, firm constitutional limits were placed on state power. In particular, the more that life had been cheapened and the human personality disregarded, the greater the entrenchment of the rights to life and dignity.
- [391] Constitutionalism in our country also arrives simultaneously with the achievement of equality and freedom, and of openness, accommodation and tolerance. When reviewing the past, the framers of our Constitution rejected not only the laws and practices that imposed domination and kept people apart, but those that prevented free discourse and rational debate, and those that brutalised us as people and diminished our respect for life.
- [392] Accordingly, the idealism that we uphold with this judgment is to be found not in the minds of the judges, but in both the explicit text of the Constitution itself, and the values it enshrines. I have no doubt that even if, as the President's judgment suggests, the framers subjectively intended to keep the issue open for determination by this court, they effectively closed the door by the language they used and the values they required us to uphold. It is difficult to see how they could have done otherwise. In a founding document dealing with fundamental rights, you either authorize the death sentence or you do not. In my view, the values expressed by section 9 are conclusive of the matter. Everyone, including the most abominable of human beings, has the right to life, and capital punishment is therefore unconstitutional.

Introduction

[1] The applicants¹ for leave to appeal are the Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development (Justice Minister), the Minister of Home Affairs (Home Affairs Minister), ¹ In this Court, although the Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development and the Minister of Home Affairs and officials under the latter's control brought separate applications, this is one matter. There seems to be confusion in the Notice of Motion and the Founding Affidavit of the Minister of Home Affairs' application to this Court as to whether it was direct access or direct appeal under Rule 19, but it will be treated as an application for direct appeal under Rule 19.

ZONDO AJ

the Government of the Republic of South Africa (Government), the Director-General of the Department of Home Affairs and various officials of that Department. The respondents include Mr Emmanuel Tsebe and Mr Jerry Ofense Pitsoe (Phale).² The applicants were some of the respondents in two applications that were brought separately by Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale in the South Gauteng High Court (High Court) but were later consolidated into one matter.³

[2] The primary purpose⁴ of Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's applications was to obtain an order restraining the Government, the Home Affairs Minister, certain officials of the Department of Home Affairs, as well as the Justice Minister and others from extraditing or deporting the applicant in each case to the Republic of Botswana (Botswana) in the absence of a written assurance from Botswana that, if convicted of murder, the death penalty would not be imposed, or, if imposed, it would not be executed (requisite assurance). Mr Tsebe also sought an order declaring that, in the absence of the requisite assurance, his extradition or deportation would be unlawful and unconstitutional.

[3] The Justice Minister and the Government brought a counter-application in the High Court in which they sought an order declaring in effect that, where the Government

² At some stage in Mr Pitsoe's life he used the surname Phale and later used the surname Pitsoe. Phale is the surname of his stepfather and Pitsoe is his mother's cousin's surname which he used from the time when he lived with his mother's cousin in former Bophuthatswana.

³ In the High Court, Lamont J granted an order consolidating the Tsebe and Phale matters.

⁴ This refers to the purpose of the two applications as at the hearing of the applications before the High Court where some orders that had been asked for in the Notices of Motion were abandoned.

has been requested to extradite a person to a foreign State to face a criminal charge which could lead to the imposition and execution of a death sentence and the Government has asked that State to give the requisite assurance but that State has refused, the Government is then entitled to extradite or deport the person concerned to that State.

[4] The applications were heard by a Full Court.⁵ The High Court granted Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's applications and dismissed the Justice Minister's and the Government's counter-application.⁶

[5] The applicants now apply for leave to appeal directly to this Court against the Full Court's judgment and order. Before the applications can be considered, it is necessary to set out the factual background to the matter.

⁵ The Full Court consisted of Mojapelo DJP, Claassen J and Bizos AJ.

⁶ The order that was made by the High Court in both cases 27682/10 and 51010/10 was in the following terms:

1. Declaring the deportation and/or extradition and/or removal of the applicant to the Republic of Botswana unlawful and unconstitutional, to the extent that such deportation and/or extradition and/or removal be carried out without the written assurance from the Government of Botswana that the applicant will not face the death penalty there under any circumstance.
2. Prohibiting the respondents from taking any action whatsoever to cause the applicant to be deported, extradited or removed from South Africa to Botswana until and unless the Government of the Republic of Botswana provides a written assurance to the respondents that the applicant will not be subject to the death penalty in Botswana under any circumstances.
3. Directing the first and second respondent and any other party who opposed the relief sought herein to pay the applicants' costs inclusive of the cost of two counsel.
4. The counter-applications are dismissed with costs which are to include the costs of two counsel."

The judgment of the Full Court has been reported as Tsebe and Another v Minister of Home Affairs and Others; Pitsoe v Minister of Home Affairs and Others 2012 (1) BCLR 77 (GSJ) (The High Court judgment).

Background

[6] In July 2008 Mr Tsebe, a national of Botswana, was accused of murdering his wife or romantic partner in Botswana. A similar accusation was made against Mr Phale in relation to his girlfriend or wife in October 2009. It is not necessary to give details of how they are alleged to have murdered their partners but it suffices to say that, if the allegations about how they killed their partners are true, the killings were brutal. When the police in Botswana tried to arrest Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale in separate incidents and at separate times, they fled to South Africa.

[7] It is common cause that Mr Tsebe's entry into South Africa was illegal. Mr Phale disputes the contention that his entry into South Africa was illegal. He says that he is a South African citizen and was issued a South African identity document. The Department of Home Affairs says that he is not a South African citizen and that he obtained the South African identity document fraudulently. After Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's flight from Botswana, the authorities in Botswana issued warrants of arrest against them. Botswana also requested South Africa to extradite the men to Botswana to face murder charges.

[8] On or about 27 July 2008 Mr Tsebe was arrested. He was initially detained at Tomberg Police Station and Polokwane Prison from 28 July 2008 to 25 August 2009, and later at Lindela Holding Facility from 26 August 2009 onwards. The detention at Tomberg Police Station was effected pending the outcome of extradition proceedings.

ZONDO AJ

The detention at Lindela Holding Facility was effected pending a final decision whether he would be extradited to Botswana to face the murder charge. He appeared in the Mokopane Magistrate's Court a number of times in connection with his extradition proceedings.

[9] An extradition inquiry was initiated in the Mokopane Magistrate's Court, in terms of the Extradition Act⁷ (EA), to establish whether Mr Tsebe was liable for extradition. The then Justice Minister, Mr Surty, wrote to his counterpart in Botswana and informed him that South Africa would not extradite Mr Tsebe unless Botswana gave South Africa the requisite assurance. Botswana's response was that it would not give the requisite assurance because there was no provision for it in its domestic law and in its extradition treaty with South Africa.

[10] A meeting between the current Justice Minister and his counterpart from Botswana was held without success on 14 July 2009 to try and resolve the impasse between the two countries. Botswana's Justice Minister then suggested that South Africa should put Mr Tsebe on trial in South Africa for the murder. The Justice Minister subsequently wrote to the Justice Minister of Botswana and informed him that South Africa had not passed legislation that would give the South African courts jurisdiction to try people for crimes committed outside its borders. On 11 March 2009 the extradition inquiry in the ⁷ Act 67 of 1962.

Mokopane Magistrate's Court was completed. The Magistrate found that Mr Tsebe was liable for extradition.

[11] On 25 August 2009 the Justice Minister issued an order in terms of section 11(b)(iii) of the EA⁸ to the effect that Mr Tsebe should not be surrendered to Botswana to face the charge of murder. The Justice Minister's order in this regard was based on internal legal advice given to him in the light of the provisions of section 11(b)(iii) of the EA and the decision of this Court in *Mohamed and Another v President of the RSA and Others*⁹ (Mohamed).

[12] Mr Tsebe was subsequently transferred to the Lindela Holding Facility pending deportation to Botswana despite the Justice Minister's order that he should not be surrendered to Botswana. Mr Tsebe was transferred because certain officials of the Department of Home Affairs, despite the Justice Minister's order, took the view that

⁸ In so far as it is relevant, section 11 of the EA reads as follows:

"The Minister may—

...

(b) order that a person shall not be surrendered:

(iii) at all, or before the expiration of a period fixed by the Minister, if he or she is satisfied that by reason of the trivial nature of the offence or by reason of the surrender not being required in good faith or in the interest of justice, or that for any other reason it would, having regard to the distance, the facilities for communication and to all the circumstances of the case, be unjust or unreasonable or too severe a punishment to surrender the person concerned."

Mr Tsebe should be deported since he was an illegal foreigner and in terms of the Immigration Act¹⁰ (IA) he was required to be deported. For quite some time officials of the Department of Justice and officials of the Department of Home Affairs took contradictory positions on whether Mr Tsebe should be deported, with officials of the Department of Justice saying he should not and officials of the Department of Home Affairs saying he should be deported.

[13] Although the Justice Minister had issued a non-extradition order in respect of Mr Tsebe, he subsequently deposed to an affidavit opposing Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's applications. He made an about-turn saying that he had not applied his mind to all the issues when he took the decision to issue the non-extradition order. He contended that, since Botswana had refused to give the requisite assurance, the Government was entitled to extradite Mr Tsebe to Botswana. He said this despite the fact that the extradition may have posed a risk for the imposition of the death penalty if Mr Tsebe was convicted. The Justice Minister said that South Africa would use other forums under the auspices of the Southern African Development Community (SADC) to try and get Botswana not to execute the death penalty. The Justice Minister did not say what would prevent Botswana from executing the death penalty if South Africa's efforts in the SADC failed, since Mr Tsebe would have already been extradited by the time those efforts failed.

¹⁰ Act 13 of 2002. Section 32(2) of the IA reads: "Any illegal foreigner shall be deported."

ZONDO AJ

[14] Ultimately, the Home Affairs Minister took the decision that Mr Tsebe should be deported. It would appear that she based her decision, at least in part, on the legal opinions given to her by certain internal legal advisors in the Department of Home Affairs. One reason for the Home Affairs Minister's decision to deport Mr Tsebe to Botswana, despite the fact that Botswana had refused to give the requisite assurance, was that, even after Mr Tsebe's deportation, South Africa could still continue to put pressure on Botswana not to execute the death penalty if Mr Tsebe was convicted of the murder and sentenced to death. The Home Affairs Minister also did not say what would happen if Botswana did not give in to the pressure at a time when Mr Tsebe was already in Botswana. Another reason was that Mr Tsebe remained an illegal foreigner and the IA required that he be deported.

[15] To prevent his imminent deportation, Mr Tsebe brought an urgent application in the High Court for an interim interdict to restrain the Home Affairs Minister, certain officials of the Department of Home Affairs, the Justice Minister and the Government from extraditing or deporting him to Botswana in the absence of the requisite assurance. Victor J granted an interim interdict pending the outcome of an application by Mr Tsebe for the review and setting aside of the decision of the Home Affairs Minister that he be deported. After Mr Tsebe had launched his application in the High Court, he was charged with contraventions of the IA and taken to Krugersdorp Prison where he was detained as an awaiting trial prisoner. Mr Tsebe passed away on 27 November 2010 before the High Court could hear his application.

[16] After his arrest in Limpopo, Mr Phale was detained by the South African Police Service. He subsequently appeared in the Mankweng Magistrate's Court. His last appearance there was on 2 March 2010. On that day he was told that the criminal case against him had been withdrawn.

[17] The withdrawal of the case against Mr Phale occurred because an official of the Department of Justice had advised the National Prosecuting Authority (NPA) that, in the light of the non-extradition order in Mr Tsebe's matter, the Justice Minister would not order the extradition of Mr Phale in the absence of the requisite assurance and the NPA had then shared this information with the Director of Public Prosecutions in Botswana. After consultation with the Executive in Botswana, the Director of Public Prosecutions in Botswana advised the NPA that Botswana would not give the requisite assurance in Mr Phale's case either. It seems that, as a result of these communications, the NPA decided not to pursue extradition proceedings in regard to Mr Phale and that is why the "criminal case" was withdrawn against him. All this happened without the Justice Minister having taken any decision with regard to extradition proceedings concerning Mr Phale and Botswana's request for Mr Phale's extradition.

[18] Mr Phale was informed that he was to be deported to Botswana. In December 2010 he launched his application in the High Court. After this, the Department of Home Affairs had criminal charges initiated against him in the Rustenburg

ZONDO AJ

Magistrate's Court. One of the charges was a charge of fraud. It was alleged that he had fraudulently obtained a South African identity document. Other charges related to contraventions of the IA.

The decision of the High Court

[19] There was only one issue for determination by the High Court. That was whether or not the Government had the power to extradite or deport Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale to Botswana to face their respective murder charges even though Botswana had refused to give the requisite assurance.¹¹ If the answer to this question was in the affirmative, that would be the end of the matter and Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's applications would fall to be dismissed. If the answer was in the negative, Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale would be entitled to the declaratory order and interdict they sought.

[20] In a very thorough judgment the Full Court considered the issue and concluded that it was bound by the decision of this Court in Mohamed and that there was no basis on which the present case could be distinguished from Mohamed.¹² In the light of this the Court concluded that, if the Government extradited, deported or removed Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale to Botswana, the extradition or deportation would subject them to the risk of the imposition of the death penalty and would be unlawful.¹³ The Full Court held that the respondents before it would also be in breach of their constitutional obligations under section 7(2) of the Constitution¹⁴ if they extradited or deported or in any way removed Mr Phale to Botswana without the requisite assurance.

Jurisdiction of this Court

[21] There can be no doubt that this Court has jurisdiction over this matter because the matter concerns the constitutionality of the deportation or extradition by the State of a person to a country in which the death penalty is a competent sentence for the offence for which he will stand trial in circumstances where that country has refused to give the requisite assurance. The questions are whether in effecting an extradition or deportation of a person in such a case the State will be acting in breach of its obligations provided for in section 7(2) of the Constitution and whether such an extradition or deportation would violate Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's right to life, right to human dignity and right not to be treated or punished in a cruel, inhuman or degrading way.¹⁵

Condonation

[22] The applicants were late in lodging their applications. They have applied for condonation. Having regard to the explanation that they have given and the importance of the issues raised, there can be no doubt that it is in the interests of justice that condonation be granted.

ZONDO AJ

Is it in the interests of justice to grant leave to appeal to this Court?

[23] It is clear that there is much uncertainty within the Executive as to the effect of the Constitution and this Court's decision in Mohamed. Between the parties there are no substantive disagreements on the facts. There is no reason why this Court should first have the views of the Supreme Court of Appeal before it can entertain this matter. The matter raises important constitutional issues. There is also some urgency in the need to ensure that the Executive knows exactly what is expected of it in cases of extradition and deportation involving persons in the position of Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale. Furthermore, the Justice Minister and the Home Affairs Minister are faced with, on the one hand, the decision of this Court in Mohamed, which, if applicable to this case, would preclude the extradition or deportation of Mr Phale in the absence of the requisite assurance and, on the other, the provisions of the IA which require that an illegal foreigner be deported. In my view it is in the interests of justice that this Court should grant the applicants leave to appeal directly to it.

The merits of the appeal

[24] The issue for determination is whether or not the Government has the power to extradite or deport or in any way surrender a person, including an illegal foreigner, to another country to stand trial on capital charges if the death penalty is a competent sentence in that country and that country is not prepared to give the requisite assurance. Within the context of an appeal the question is whether the High Court's decision that the

ZONDO AJ

Government had no power to extradite, deport or surrender Mr Tsebe or Mr Phale to Botswana in the absence of the requisite assurance and interdicting the Government from extraditing or deporting them and the decision dismissing the Justice Minister's and Government's counter-application were correct.

[25] The approach taken by this Court in Mohamed was that, when South African authorities hand someone over to another country to stand trial on a charge which, to the knowledge of the South African authorities, could lead to the imposition and execution of the death penalty on such person if he is found guilty, they facilitate the imposition of the death penalty and that is a breach of their obligations contained in section 7(2) of the Constitution.¹⁶ In Mohamed this Court held that the conduct of the South African authorities in handing Mr Mohamed over to the authorities of the United States of America (US) to stand trial in that country, in the full knowledge¹⁷ that, if convicted, he could be sentenced to death, without obtaining the requisite assurance from the US government, violated Mr Mohamed's constitutional right to life, right to human dignity and right not to be treated or punished in a cruel, inhuman or degrading way.¹⁸

[26] If the correctness of Mohamed is not challenged, the answer to this question before us will depend on two further questions. One will be whether the present case is distinguishable from Mohamed. If it is, the Court will then deal with the matter in the light of that distinction. If it is not, the next question will be whether or not, if extradited or deported, Mr Phale would face a sufficient risk of the imposition and execution of the death penalty to justify this Court holding that his extradition or deportation would constitute a violation of the Constitution or a facilitation by South Africa of the imposition of the death penalty on him in Botswana if he is convicted.

The Constitution

[27] This country is founded on, among others, the following values:¹⁹

- (a) Human dignity, the achievement of equality and the advancement of human rights and freedoms.
- (b) Supremacy of the Constitution and the rule of law.

Our Constitution is the supreme law of the Republic. Law or conduct inconsistent with it is invalid and the obligations imposed by it must be fulfilled.²⁰

¹⁹ Section 1 of the Constitution.

²⁰ Section 2 of the Constitution.

LS
SS

ZONDO AJ

[28] Section 7(1) of the Constitution provides that our Bill of Rights, which covers sections 7 to 39, is a cornerstone of our democracy. It enshrines the rights of all people in our country and affirms the democratic values of human dignity, equality and freedom.

Section 7(2) reads:

“The state must respect, protect, promote and fulfill the rights in the Bill of Rights.”

[29] Section 7(3) provides that the rights in the Bill of Rights are subject to the limitations contained or referred to in section 36 or elsewhere in the Bill of Rights. Section 8(1) of the Constitution provides that the Bill of Rights “applies to all law, and binds the legislature, the executive, the judiciary and all organs of state.” Section 9(1) provides that everyone is equal before the law and has the right to equal protection and benefit of the law.

[30] Sections 10, 11 and 12 of the Constitution deal, respectively, with the right to human dignity, the right to life and the right to freedom and security of the person.

Section 10 reads:

“Everyone has inherent dignity and the right to have their dignity respected and protected.”

Section 11 reads:

“Everyone has the right to life.”

ZONDO AJ

Section 12(1) reads:

“Everyone has the right to freedom and security of the person, which includes the right—

- (a) not to be deprived of freedom arbitrarily or without just cause;
- (b) not to be detained without trial;
- (c) to be free from all forms of violence from either public or private sources;
- (d) not to be tortured in any way; and
- (e) not to be treated or punished in a cruel, inhuman or degrading way.”

The provisions which this matter directly raises for consideration are those relating to the values upon which the democratic South Africa is founded, sections 2, 7(1) and (2), 10, 11 and 12 of the Constitution.

International law

[31] It is necessary also to refer to some instruments or treaties relating to extradition and the fight against crime to which both South Africa and Botswana are parties. In 1969 South Africa and Botswana concluded a treaty on extradition (Extradition Treaty). In terms of that treaty Botswana and South Africa agreed that they may refuse to extradite a person for a crime punishable by death. That treaty is still in operation. Article 6 reads:

“Capital Punishment

Extradition may be refused if under the law of the requesting Party the offence for which extradition is requested is punishable by death and if the death penalty is not provided for such offence by the law of the requested Party.”

ZONDO AJ

[32] Furthermore, South Africa and Botswana and certain other SADC countries are also parties to the Protocol on Extradition concluded under the auspices of the SADC (SADC Extradition Protocol). Article 5(c) of the Protocol allows a State which is being requested to extradite a person to refuse to do so—

“if the offence for which extradition is requested carries a death penalty under the law of the Requesting State, unless that State gives such assurance, as the Requested State considers sufficient that the death penalty will not be imposed or, if imposed, will not be carried out.”

This article goes on to say:

“Where extradition is refused on this ground, the Requested State shall, if the other State so requests, submit the case to its competent authorities with a view to taking appropriate action against the person for the offence for which extradition had been requested”.

[33] This is the second instrument, to which both South Africa and Botswana are parties, that allows one of them to refuse extradition of a suspect charged with a capital offence in the absence of the requisite assurance. From this it is clear that South Africa has acted in accordance with the Extradition Treaty between itself and Botswana and in accordance with the SADC Extradition Protocol in insisting on the requisite assurance before it could extradite Mr Tsebe.

[34] Article 5(c) of the SADC Extradition Protocol goes even further because it obliges the requested State (South Africa in the present case), if the requesting State (Botswana in the present case) so requests, to take steps to have the person whom it refuses to extradite put on trial before its own courts for the crime for which extradition was sought. Under the SADC Extradition Protocol South Africa has agreed that, if so requested by, for example Botswana, to do so, it will put persons in the position of Mr Phale on trial before the South African courts. South Africa and Botswana are also signatories to other SADC treaties and protocols in terms of which they have bound themselves to work together and with other SADC countries to combat crime in the SADC region.²¹

ZONDO AJ

The death penalty in Botswana

[35] It is also necessary to have regard to the statutory provisions governing the imposition of the death penalty for murder in Botswana. Section 203 of the Penal Code of Botswana reads as follows:

- “(1) Subject to the provisions of subsection (2), any person convicted of murder shall be sentenced to death.
 - (2) Where a court in convicting a person of murder is of the opinion that there are extenuating circumstances, the court may impose any sentence other than death.
 - (3) In deciding whether or not there are any extenuating circumstances the court shall take into consideration the standards of behaviour of an ordinary person of the class of the community to which the convicted person belongs.”
- (Emphasis added.)

²¹ For example, the Protocol on Combating Illicit Drugs which came into operation on 20 March 1999; the Protocol on Politics, Defence and Security Co-operation which came into force on 2 March 2004; the Protocol on the Control of Firearms, Ammunition and Other Related Materials, which came into force on 8 November 2004; the Protocol on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters which came into force on 1 March 2007; and the SADC Mutual Defence Pact which came into force on 17 August 2008.

ZONDO AJ

This provision makes the imposition of the death sentence on those convicted of murder in Botswana mandatory where there are no extenuating circumstances. The Penal Code of Botswana also provides that, where a person has been sentenced to death, he shall be hanged by the neck until he dies.²²

Statutory framework

[36] It is also necessary to refer to provisions of the EA and the IA which may have a bearing on the dispute between the parties. In part, section 11(b)(iii) of the EA²³ gives the Justice Minister the power to order that a person should not be surrendered to another State if the offence for which he is wanted is of a trivial nature or if his surrender is not required in the interests of justice or if, for any other reason and having regard to all the circumstances of the case, it would be unjust, unreasonable or if the punishment would be too severe. In other words, the EA recognises that there are circumstances in which South Africa should refuse to extradite a person and sets out those situations in section 11(b)(iii). Such situations include a situation where the Justice Minister considers the punishment or sentence that the person will or may face, if he is extradited, to be severe. The Justice Minister has stated in his affidavit that it was on the basis of the provisions of section 11(b)(iii), read with Mohamed, that he issued the non-extradition order in Mr Tsebe's case. There are also provisions of the IA which need to be referred to but these will be referred to later in this judgment.

[37] Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's cases were based on the provisions of the Constitution as interpreted and given effect to by this Court in both *Makwanyane*²⁴ and Mohamed. The decision of the High Court in the present matter also sought to give effect to the decision of this Court in Mohamed. In the light of this a word or two on these two decisions is necessary.

Makwanyane

[38] In *Makwanyane*²⁵ this Court held that the death penalty was inconsistent with provisions of the interim Constitution and declared it unconstitutional.²⁶ In his judgment, which enjoyed the broad support of a number of the other Justices, Chaskalson P pointed out that, by committing ourselves to a society founded on the recognition of human rights, we were required to give particular value to the rights to life and dignity and that "this must be demonstrated by the State in everything it does".²⁷

²⁴ S v Makwanyane and Another [1995] ZACC 3; 1995 (3) SA 391 (CC); 1995 (6) BCLR 665 (CC) (Makwanyane).

²⁶ Section 9 of the interim Constitution provided: "Every person shall have the right to life." Section 10 of the interim Constitution provided: "Every person shall have the right to respect for and protection of his or her dignity." Section 11(2) of the interim Constitution read thus: "No person shall be subject to torture of any kind, whether physical, mental or emotional, nor shall any person be subject to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment."

Mohamed

[39] Mr Mohamed was a Tanzanian national who, after allegedly taking part in the bombing of two US embassies in Nairobi and Dar es Salaam, entered South Africa illegally. In the full knowledge that, if taken to the US, Mr Mohamed would stand trial for multiple murders arising from the bombings and that, if convicted, he could be sentenced to death, the South African authorities handed him over to US officials without making any acceptable arrangement to ensure either that the death penalty would not be imposed on him if he was convicted or that, if imposed, it would not be executed.

[40] One of the questions in Mohamed was whether the South African authorities were in the above circumstances entitled to hand Mohamed over to the US authorities. This Court found that Mr Mohamed's deportation from South Africa to the US was unlawful. This finding must be understood within the context of the fact that in Makwanyane this Court had already held that the death penalty was unconstitutional because it violated the right to life, the right to human dignity and constituted cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment.²⁸ In Mohamed this Court held that the provisions of section 7(2) of the Constitution oblige the State to respect, protect, promote and fulfil the rights in the Bill of Rights. This includes the right to life, the right to human dignity and the right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment or treatment.

ZONDO AJ

[41] This Court's conclusion that Mr Mohamed's deportation was unlawful was based in part on Makwanyane, section 7(2) of the Constitution, the knowledge of the South African authorities of the risk of the imposition of the death penalty that Mr Mohamed would face in the US if he was removed from South Africa and taken to the US and the fact that the removal or deportation in the circumstances in which it happened violated Mr Mohamed's right to life, right to human dignity and right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment.²⁹

[42] In Mohamed this Court stated that under our Constitution there are no exceptions to the protection of the right to life, the right to human dignity and the right not to be treated or punished in a cruel, inhuman or degrading way.³⁰ However, the Court said that it must be remembered that, like all the rights in the Bill of Rights, these rights are subject to limitation as provided for in section 36 of the Constitution.³¹ This Court also said:

“Where the removal of a person to another country is effected by the State in circumstances that threaten the life or human dignity of such person, sections 10 and 11 of the Bill of Rights are implicated.”³²

The Court went on to say in the next sentence that there was no doubt that “the removal of Mohamed to the United States of America posed such a threat.” It found that “[t]he fact that Mohamed is now facing the possibility of a death sentence is the direct result of the failure by the South African authorities to secure” an undertaking from the US that the death penalty would not be imposed or, if imposed, would not be executed.³³

[43] The question that arises is: What is the principle that Mohamed established? The principle is that the Government has no power to extradite or deport or in any way remove from South Africa to a retentionist State³⁴ any person who, to its knowledge, if deported or extradited to such a State, will face the real risk of the imposition and execution of the death penalty.³⁵ This Court’s decision in Mohamed means that if any official in the employ of the State, without the requisite assurance, hands over anyone from within South Africa, or under the control of South African officials, to another country to stand trial knowing that such person runs the real risk of a violation of his right to life, right to human dignity and right not to be treated or punished in a cruel, inhuman or degrading way in that country, he or she acts in breach of the duty provided for in section 7(2) of the Constitution.

³³ Id at para 53.

³⁴ A retentionist State is a State that has retained the death penalty.

³⁵ The proposition that the test is a real risk is supported by the fact that, after quoting from Soering v United Kingdom (1989) 11 EHRR 439 (Soering); Hilal v United Kingdom (2001) 33 EHRR 31 (Hilal); and Chahal v United Kingdom (1996) 23 EHRR 413 (Chahal), all of which referred to “a real risk”, this Court in Mohamed went on to say at para 58:

“These cases are consistent with the weight that our Constitution gives to the spirit, purport and objects of the Bill of Rights and the positive obligation that it imposes on the State to ‘protect, promote and fulfil the rights in the Bill of Rights’.” (Footnotes omitted.)

[44] In Mohamed this Court discussed a number of foreign cases³⁶ dealing with how various courts and other tribunals have dealt with the question under consideration in this case. It is not necessary to repeat that discussion in this judgment even though parties have referred to such cases in their argument. We are not called upon to reconsider the correctness of this Court's decision in Mohamed. Accordingly, unless the present case is distinguishable from Mohamed we are bound to decide it in accordance with the principle established in that case.

[45] The principle established in Mohamed has a direct connection with the provisions of sections 7(2), 10, 11 and 12 of the Constitution and the values upon which our new constitutional democracy is based. When the first democratically elected Parliament adopted our Constitution we, as a nation, turned our back on a very ugly past which had caused untold suffering to many in our society. We committed ourselves to the building of a new society founded on the values of human dignity, the achievement of equality and the advancement of human rights and freedoms, non-racialism, non-sexism and the supremacy of the Constitution and the rule of law. We sought to create a society whose cornerstone³⁷ is our Bill of Rights which enshrines the rights of all people in our country and affirms the democratic values of human dignity, equality and freedom.

³⁶ The foreign cases included United States v Burns [2001] 1 RCS 283; Kindler v Canada (Minister of Justice) [1991] 2 RCS 779; Reference re Ng Extradition (Canada) (1991) 6 CRR (2d) 252; Halm v Canada (Minister of Employment and Immigration) (TD) 1996 1 F.C. 547; R v Brixton Prison (Governor), ex parte Soblen (1962) 3 All ER 641 (CA); Soering above n 35; Hilal above n 35; and Chahal above n 35.

³⁷ Section 7 of the Constitution.

ZONDO AJ

[46] One of the values of our Constitution on which our new society is based is the advancement of human rights. The effect of our commitment to a society based on, among others, this value is that, as a nation, we have committed ourselves to advancing human rights in all that we do. Furthermore, the State is enjoined by section 7(2) of the Constitution not only to respect, protect and fulfil all the rights in the Bill of Rights but, very importantly in the context of this case, also to promote all rights in the Bill of Rights. Accordingly, it is in this context that the principle established in Mohamed must be seen. In *Kaunda and Others v President of the Republic of South Africa*³⁸ this Court also emphasised in effect the centrality of the advancement of human rights and freedoms in our society. It said:

“The advancement of human rights and freedoms is central to the Constitution itself. It is a thread that runs throughout the Constitution and informs the manner in which government is required to exercise its powers. To this extent the provisions of section 7(2) are relevant, not as giving our Constitution extraterritorial effect, but as showing that our Constitution contemplates that government will act positively to protect its citizens against human rights abuses.”³⁹

This passage applies also when the Government deals with foreigners who are within the borders of this country who face the real risk of the abuse of their human rights if they were to be extradited, deported or in any way surrendered to another country in which they would be exposed to such violations.

Is Mohamed distinguishable?

[47] It is important to record that at the hearing of this matter neither counsel for the Justice Minister nor counsel for the Home Affairs Minister argued that Mohamed was wrongly decided and should be revisited. On the contrary counsel for the Justice Minister informed the Court that he embraced⁴⁰ this Court's decision in Mohamed. For his part, counsel for the Home Affairs Minister indicated that, on the facts of the Mohamed case and on the correct application of the relevant legal principles to the facts in Mohamed, no court could have reached any conclusion other than the conclusion that was reached by this Court.

[48] Although counsel for the Justice Minister initially announced that he would not seek to distinguish the present case from Mohamed, he later sought to do so. He pointed out that in Mohamed there was no possibility of Mr Mohamed going free whereas in the present case there was a possibility that Mr Phale could go free if he could not be extradited or deported. What counsel was referring to was that, if Mr Phale cannot be deported, he will have to be freed from detention because he cannot be detained indefinitely. The fact that there was no possibility of Mr Mohamed going free is not a basis to distinguish the present case from Mohamed. One need only go back to the principle established in Mohamed to appreciate this because the decision was not dependent upon whether Mr Mohamed could or could not go free.

⁴⁰ That was the term used by counsel in argument.

ZONDO AJ

[49] The Justice Minister also submitted in his affidavit that the present case was distinguishable from Mohamed because in that case the Court did not have to consider the provisions of the EA whereas in this case the Court has to consider the provisions of the EA. We do not agree. The submission ignores the fact that in Mohamed this Court made it clear that the obligation of the Government to secure the requisite assurance could not depend on whether the removal is by extradition or deportation. This Court said that the constitutional obligation depends on the facts of the particular case and the provisions of the Constitution, not on the provisions of the empowering legislation or extradition treaty under which the deportation or extradition is carried out.⁴¹

[50] Counsel for the Justice Minister also submitted that, when the Justice Minister performs his statutory extradition duties, he performs an act of State. This submission seems to suggest that in such a case the Justice Minister is not obliged to respect, protect, promote, or fulfil the rights in the Bill of Rights as required by section 7(2) of the Constitution. I am unable to agree with this submission. Section 7(2) is not qualified in any way. Accordingly, the obligations it places upon the State apply to everything that the State does. This Court has already made it clear in Mohamed that there are no exceptions to the right to life, the right to human dignity and the right not to be subjected to treatment or punishment that is cruel, inhuman or degrading.⁴² These are the rights that the State must respect, protect, promote and fulfil in a case such as the present one.

[51] Counsel for the Justice Minister also submitted that the Court should find that to require that the Government should ask Botswana to give the requisite assurance would constitute interference with the prosecutorial independence of the prosecuting authority of Botswana and with the independence of the Judiciary of Botswana. One answer to this is that it is not an essential requirement of the assurance that the death penalty will not be asked for by the prosecutorial authorities of Botswana nor is it an essential requirement that the trial Judge in Botswana will not impose the death penalty. What is of critical importance is the giving of the assurance that, if the death penalty is imposed, it will not be executed. Accordingly, this does not in any way affect the independence of the courts of Botswana or the prosecutorial independence of the Director of Public Prosecutions in Botswana. The execution of the death penalty falls within the authority of the Executive. It is up to the Executive whether it is prepared to provide the requisite assurance. The Constitution of Botswana gives the President of that country power to intervene and substitute a term of imprisonment for the death penalty.⁴³ Another answer is that in terms of the SADC Extradition Protocol, to which both Botswana and South Africa are parties, Botswana has agreed that South Africa may request it to provide the requisite assurance in a case such as Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's.

⁴² Id at para 52. It was accepted in Mohamed (at paras 47 and 52) that, like all rights in the Bill of Rights, these rights are also subject to the limitation contained in section 36 of the Constitution.

[52] Counsel for the Justice Minister also submitted that the Executive must be given an opportunity to resolve the dispute between South Africa and Botswana politically through the Organ of Politics, Defence and Security under the auspices of the SADC. This is correct and a resolution in that forum is desirable. Although one has some understanding of the Justice Minister's concern in this regard, the fact of the matter is that Mr Phale has a dispute with the Government that can be resolved by the application of law and he has a right in terms of section 34 of the Constitution to have that dispute resolved through the application of law by the courts.⁴⁴ Once he has brought the dispute to the courts, the courts must decide the dispute. If this Court comes to the conclusion that the Government cannot extradite or deport Mr Phale to Botswana in the absence of the requisite assurance without being in breach of the Constitution, this will not mean that the Executive may not pursue a political solution to the problem through some or other structures of the SADC. That may be done and, indeed, is to be encouraged. However, to avoid a breach of the Constitution, it is necessary to protect the rights of Mr Phale pending the exhaustion of those avenues. Accordingly, this Court cannot uphold the Justice Minister's contention.

⁴⁴ Section 34 of the Constitution reads:

"Everyone has the right to have any dispute that can be resolved by the application of law decided in a fair public hearing before a court or, where appropriate, another independent and impartial tribunal or forum."

[53] In the affidavits delivered by the Department of Home Affairs one of the bases upon which the judgment of the High Court was criticised was that it approached the Mohamed case as if it laid down an absolute rule that precluded the consideration of each case on its merits. It seems that this criticism may have been based on the statement in Mohamed that the Government's obligation to secure the requisite assurance depended "on the facts of the particular case and the provisions of the Constitution".⁴⁵ The reference to the facts of the particular case in *Mohamed*⁴⁶ was nothing more than a reference to the facts relating to whether or not it could be said that there was a real risk that, if the person concerned was extradited or deported, he would face the imposition and execution of a death penalty or he would face treatment or punishment that would be cruel, inhuman or degrading. What was meant was that, once it was accepted that the facts established such a risk, the principle in Mohamed applies. That statement did not mean that there were exceptions to the principle established. The position is, therefore, that, if the extradition or deportation of a person will expose him to a real risk of the imposition and execution of the death penalty, the State may not extradite or deport that person. There is no exception to this principle. If the requisite assurance is given, there is, as a general proposition, no such real risk and the person may be deported or extradited.

[54] The Justice Minister also suggested in his affidavit that the decision of the High Court was based upon an excessive concern about the rights of Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale and a complete disregard for the rights of the rest of the people of South Africa who are also entitled to the protection of their rights contained in the Bill of Rights and the obligation which the Government has of protecting the rest of the population against people who may have committed violent crimes. The implication of the Justice Minister's suggestion was that, if the Court below had also paid attention to the rights of people other than Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale, it would have concluded that the Government was entitled to extradite or deport Mr Phale. In support of this contention reference was made to Carmichele v Minister of Safety and Security.⁴⁷

[55] Part of the answer to this is that neither Mr Tsebe nor Mr Phale had been convicted of murder. In terms of our law anyone who is charged with a crime or who is suspected of the commission of a crime is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty. That principle applies to persons in the position of Mr Phale as well. In any event there are many citizens of our own country who are not in jail or detention and who are out in society even though they face serious charges like murder. We do not say that they must never get bail merely because they are charged with serious crimes. After all, the obligation to protect the population, which the Government has, requires nothing more than that the Government must put in place reasonable measures to discharge that obligation. The decision of this Court in Carmichele is not necessarily inconsistent with the non-extradition or non-deportation of a person in Mr Phale's position. Finally, as Carmichele was relied upon without any elaboration, no further consideration thereof is warranted.

⁴⁷ [2001] ZACC 22; 2001 (4) SA 938 (CC); 2001 (10) BCLR 995 (CC) (Carmichele).

ZONDO AJ

[56] In any event the approach taken by this Court in Mohamed in consequence of sections 7(2), 10, 11 and 12(1) of the Constitution is one that many progressive societies in the world adopt. As indicated earlier, section 11(b)(iii) of the EA also contemplates that the Justice Minister may order that someone wanted for a crime in another country shall not be surrendered to that country. In this regard it needs to be pointed out that section 11(b)(iii) is not a pre-democracy provision. Although the EA was enacted before 1994, section 11(b)(iii) was introduced into the EA after 1994.⁴⁸ Furthermore, the SADC Extradition Protocol contemplates that a State that is party to that Protocol may refuse to extradite a person in Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's position.

[57] The allegations against Mr Phale are very serious. He should, indeed, face justice. The question is how to reconcile the need to bring him to justice with the protection the Constitution affords him against the death penalty. The reconciliation, as I have suggested elsewhere, lies in the sphere of inter-governmental relations because it is clear that, under international law, Botswana is able to give the requisite assurance and South Africa is entitled to decline to surrender Mr Phale until that has happened.

[58] All the complaints which the Justice Minister, the Home Affairs Minister, the Director-General of Home Affairs and various officials of the Department of Home Affairs have articulated about the implications or difficulties which they perceive will arise if the legal position is that Mr Phale may not be surrendered, extradited or deported to Botswana are implications that would arise in any event if the Justice Minister were to decide, as he decided in the case of Mr Tsebe, that he would use his powers under section 11(b)(iii) of the EA to order that Mr Phale or anybody in Mr Phale's or Mr Tsebe's position for that matter, should not be extradited despite the fact that he is wanted for a serious crime in another country. That is a power which the Justice Minister already had before this Court's decision in Mohamed. The Justice Minister has had the power since the coming into effect of section 9 of the Extradition Amendment Act 77 of 1996. This Court's decision in Mohamed was handed down in 2001.

[59] The concerns which both the Home Affairs Minister as well as the Director-General of Home Affairs raise concerning the obligations that they have under the IA to ensure the deportation of illegal foreigners and the question of what such a person's status in the country would be if he was not deported or extradited are concerns which would also arise if the Justice Minister were to use his powers under section 11(b)(iii) of the EA even if this Court's decision in Mohamed had not been made. This does not detract from the fact that these are legitimate concerns. However, the provision of the IA⁴⁹ relating to the obligation to deport an illegal foreigner must be read consistently with the Constitution. It cannot be read to require the deportation of a person in circumstances in which the deportation would be a breach of the Constitution. It is true that the continued presence of Mr Phale in the country, an alleged illegal foreigner who is wanted by another country for a crime as serious as murder, would be a continuing concern for the Government and the people of South Africa in general. However, it needs to be pointed out that the IA defines “deport” in wide terms which include the Director-General ordering an illegal foreigner to leave South Africa, but if such foreigner thereafter remains in the country, he is guilty of an offence punishable by imprisonment in terms of the IA.⁵⁰ Having said this, I am of the view that the preferable solution to the problem lies, as already pointed out, in inter-governmental interaction and an acceptance by Botswana that South Africa’s conduct is not in breach of but is in accordance with the Extradition Treaty between and in accordance with the SADC Extradition Protocol.

[60] The Justice Minister also referred in his affidavit to the fact that his department is working on revised draft extradition legislation. The purpose of that draft legislation is to give the South African courts jurisdiction to try crimes that have been committed outside the borders of this country in cases such as Mr Tsebe’s and Mr Phale’s because ordinarily the South African courts do not have jurisdiction to try such cases. The Justice Minister ⁴⁹ Section 32(2) of the IA. See above n 10.

⁵⁰ Section 1 of the IA defines “deport” or “deportation” as “the action or procedure aimed at causing an illegal foreigner to leave the Republic” in terms of the IA. Section 49(1)(b) of the IA provides that:

“Any illegal foreigner who fails to depart when so ordered by the Director-General, shall be guilty of an offence and liable on conviction to a fine or to imprisonment not exceeding nine months.”

LS

revealed that there are instances where South Africa has already put in place legislation that gives the South African courts jurisdiction to try certain specified offences despite the fact that they were committed outside South Africa. He gave two examples of pieces of legislation that have been passed in this regard, namely, the Prevention and Combating of Corrupt Activities Act⁵¹ and the Implementation of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court Act.⁵²

[61] It seems that, if South Africa could pass legislation to give its courts jurisdiction to try crimes which have been committed outside South Africa, there is no reason why similar legislation cannot or should not be put in place to ensure that persons in Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's position can be tried by the South African courts when countries in which they allegedly committed the crimes are not prepared to give the requisite assurance. Such legislation would prevent persons in the position of Mr Tsebe or Mr Phale not being put to trial at all because South Africa will not extradite or deport them in the absence of the requisite assurance and cannot also put them on trial and the other State cannot try them because they are not there and will also not give South Africa the requisite assurance. In doing so, South Africa would also be discharging its obligations under the SADC Extradition Protocol to put on trial before its courts persons in Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's position where the SADC country requesting extradition refuses to give South Africa the requisite assurance and requests it to put such person on trial before its own courts.

[62] The Justice Minister has indicated that there will be difficulties in bringing foreign witnesses to South Africa to testify in trials relating to crimes committed outside South Africa. We do not see this as an insurmountable difficulty. Obviously, such trials will need the co-operation of the country which would have sought the extradition of the person concerned. It is unlikely that such countries would prefer that such persons should not be put on trial at all if they cannot be put on trial in those countries. It is likely that they would rather have them tried in South Africa and hope that they will get long terms of imprisonment instead of not being punished at all. For that reason it is likely that such countries will co-operate with South Africa to put such persons on trial in South Africa. In this case Botswana did suggest to the Justice Minister that Mr Tsebe be put on trial in South Africa but South Africa could not accede to the request because it had not passed the necessary legislation to give the South African courts jurisdiction. It seems to me that Botswana would have taken whatever steps were necessary to ensure that the state witnesses who would have been used in Botswana are brought to South Africa at the time of the trial to give evidence.

[63] The Justice Minister has also expressed the concern that the Government does not want our country to be perceived as a safe haven for illegal foreigners and fugitives from justice wanted for serious crimes in other countries. This concern was discussed by the High Court.⁵³ Although it is a legitimate concern, it will not arise if countries seeking an extradition of someone in Mr Phale's position would be prepared to give the requisite assurance. Furthermore, our concern about that perception cannot override the need for us as a nation to stay on course on the path we have chosen for ourselves to respect, protect, promote and fulfil human rights, to observe our Constitution and deepen the values upon which we have chosen to create our new society. Those values include human dignity, the achievement of equality and the advancement of human rights and freedoms.

[64] It also seems implied in the Justice Minister's statements in the affidavit that he or the Government may also be concerned that, if the Government cannot deport or extradite persons in Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's position, this may be seen as undermining its obligations under treaties concluded with other states in terms of which they must cooperate to fight crime, particularly in the SADC region. This Court regards these concerns as legitimate because it is true that the Government must not only fight crime but it must also be seen to be sparing no effort in fighting crime. However, it must be remembered that our Constitution is our supreme law and in section 7(2) it places on the State the obligation to respect, protect, promote and fulfil, among others, the right to life, the right to human dignity and the right not to be treated or punished in a cruel, inhuman or degrading way. In addition the SADC Extradition Protocol entitles the signatories to it to refuse to extradite suspects if the requesting State does not furnish the requisite assurance. Accordingly, among the SADC countries South Africa's conduct will not be perceived negatively because the SADC Extradition Protocol contemplates South Africa's conduct. So, the Government will not be doing anything wrong if it refuses to extradite or deport Mr Phale. In terms of the SADC Extradition Protocol it will be within its rights to do so. In any event, the obligations South Africa incurs in terms of treaties concluded with other countries are required to be consistent with its constitutional obligations.

⁵³ High Court judgment above n 6 at paras 102-9.

[65] The human rights provided for in sections 10, 11 and 12 of our Constitution are not reserved for only the citizens of South Africa. Every foreigner who enters our country – whether legally or illegally – enjoys these rights and the State's obligations contained in section 7(2) are not qualified in any way. Therefore, it cannot be said that they do not extend to a person who enters our country illegally. In the light of this the question then would be: How does the Government discharge its section 7(2) obligations in respect of such a person if it extradites, deports or surrenders him to a State where, to its knowledge, he runs the real risk of the imposition and execution of the death penalty if he is convicted of the crime for which he is wanted?

[66] The question in the preceding paragraph leads one to the counter-application for an order that would allow the Government to extradite, deport or surrender persons in Mr Tsebe's and Mr Phale's position after the Government has asked the State concerned to give the requisite assurance and that State has refused. That application was correctly dismissed by the High Court. What would be the value of South Africa's request for the requisite assurance if its rejection would have no consequences for the other State? The other side of every legal obligation is a legal right. In this context the State has section 7(2) obligations and the person who has the legal right to the State's protection, promotion and fulfilment of his right to life, right to human dignity and right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment is the person sought by the other State for extradition. If the position was that, after South Africa has asked such a State for the requisite assurance and such State has refused, South Africa may extradite, deport or surrender such person to such State, that person would be entitled to say: The right to life, the right to human dignity and the right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment and the State's obligations under section 7(2) are not worth anything. That would be untenable.

[67] We as a nation have chosen to walk the path of the advancement of human rights. By adopting the Constitution we committed ourselves not to do certain things. One of those things is that no matter who the person is and no matter what the crime is that he is alleged to have committed, we shall not in any way be party to his killing as a punishment and we will not hand such person over to another country where to do so will expose him to the real risk of the imposition and execution of the death penalty upon him. This path that we, as a country, have chosen for ourselves is not an easy one. Some of the consequences that may result from our choice are part of the price that we must be prepared to pay as a nation for the advancement of human rights and the creation of the kind of society and world that we may ultimately achieve if we abide by the constitutional values that now underpin our new society since the end of apartheid.

[68] If we as a society or the State hand somebody over to another State where he will face the real risk of the death penalty, we fail to protect, respect and promote the right to life, the right to human dignity and the right not to be subjected to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of that person, all of which are rights our Constitution confers on everyone. This Court's decision in Mohamed said that what the South African authorities did in that case was not consistent with the kind of society that we have committed ourselves to creating. It said in effect that we will not be party to the killing of any human being as a punishment – no matter who they are and no matter what they are alleged to have done.⁵⁴

[69] Counsel for the Home Affairs Minister also submitted at some stage during argument that the matter should be remitted to the High Court for that Court to assess whether the risk to which Mr Phale would be exposed if he was deported to Botswana was real. Later counsel submitted that the Home Affairs Minister must be given an opportunity to assess that risk. In my view there is no need to do so because there is enough before this Court to make the assessment of the risk.

⁵⁴ This does not necessarily include a war situation: see Makwanyane above n 24 at para 149.

ZONDO AJ

[70] In their affidavits, the Justice Minister and Mr Modiri Matthews of the Department of Home Affairs advanced various other bases upon which they contended that the present case should be distinguished from Mohamed. In our view those bases were not material and cannot be relied upon to distinguish the present case from Mohamed.

Application of the Mohamed principle to the facts

[71] The dispute between the parties is whether the Government has the power to deport or extradite Mr Phale to Botswana to face a trial for murder in that country in the absence of the requisite assurance. In the light of the fact that in oral argument no party argued that Mohamed was wrongly decided, and no basis exists to distinguish the present case from Mohamed, the only question that requires determination in order to decide whether the decision of the High Court was right is whether it can be said that, if Mr Phale was to be extradited or deported to Botswana, he would, if convicted of the alleged murder, face a real risk of the imposition and execution of the death penalty.

Would Mr Phale face the real risk of a death penalty if extradited or deported?

[72] Counsel for the Home Affairs Minister submitted that there was only a possibility and not a real risk or likelihood of the imposition and execution of the death penalty on Mr Phale if he was deported. He submitted that a mere possibility of the imposition and execution of the death penalty was not enough. We do not agree that in this case there is only a mere possibility of the imposition and execution of the death penalty on Mr Phale if he is extradited or deported to Botswana and is thereafter convicted of murder. First, the alleged killing was brutal. Second, the law in Botswana is that for murder the death penalty is mandatory if there are no extenuating circumstances. Third, none of the parties placed before the Court any extenuating circumstances. Accordingly, this Court must assess the risk of the imposition of the death sentence on Mr Phale, if he is convicted, on the basis that he will have been found guilty of murder without any extenuating circumstances. In such a case the imposition of the death penalty will be mandatory. Accordingly, there can be no doubt that, if Mr Phale were deported or extradited to Botswana, he would face a real risk of the imposition of the death penalty if he were to be found guilty.

[73] Once the death penalty is imposed, there will be nothing to prevent the State of Botswana from executing the death penalty. Indeed, a study of the execution of the death penalty in Botswana conducted by the International Federation for Human Rights reveals that there has only been one case in which the death penalty was not executed. The evidence put before this Court showed that there were 32 executions between 1966 and 1998. According to my calculations, that amounts to an average of at least one execution per year. In any event, if Botswana did not intend to execute the death penalty on Mr Phale if one was imposed, there is no reason why it would not have given South Africa the requisite assurance. In the light of this, the conclusion is that, if Mr Phale were extradited or deported to Botswana, he will face a real risk of the imposition and execution of the death penalty if he is found guilty of the murder.

ZONDO AJ

[74] Accordingly, in terms of section 7(2) of the Constitution the Government is under an obligation not to deport or extradite Mr Phale or in any way to transfer him from South Africa to Botswana to stand trial for the alleged murder in the absence of the requisite assurance. Should the Government deport or extradite Mr Phale without the requisite assurance, it would be acting in breach of its obligations in terms of section 7(2), the values of the Constitution and Mr Phale's right to life, right to human dignity and right not to be subjected to treatment or punishment that is cruel, inhuman or degrading. In my view no grounds exist upon which the judgment of the High Court can be faulted.

[75] The appeals fall to be dismissed. With regard to costs there is no reason why the applicants should not be ordered to pay the costs of the Society for the Abolition of the Death Penalty in South Africa and Mr Phale, including the costs consequent upon the employment of two counsel. As indicated earlier, Mr Tsebe died before his application could be heard by the High Court. I note that an attorney from Lawyers for Human Rights deposed to an affidavit in opposition of the applicants' application before this Court and indicated in that affidavit that she was doing so "on behalf of" Mr Tsebe. She indicated that she was doing so because all the parties were of the view that it was in the public interest that Mr Tsebe's matter should also be heard. It seems to me that there is no basis for making an order of costs in respect of Mr Tsebe's matter in the proceedings before this Court since Mr Tsebe died prior to the hearing in the High Court. In any event, the issues raised in respect of Mr Phale's matter were in substance the same issues as those raised in respect of Mr Tsebe. That being the case, I am of the view that if only Mr Phale's matter was proceeded with, it would not have been necessary also to oppose the applicants' application "on behalf of" the late Mr Tsebe. Accordingly, I propose to confine the order of costs to Mr Phale and the Society for the Abolition of the Death Penalty in South Africa.

[76] In the result the following order is made:

1. Condonation is granted.
2. Leave to appeal is granted.
3. The appeals are dismissed.
4. The applicants are ordered to pay the costs of Mr Phale, and the Society for the Abolition of the Death Penalty in South Africa, including the costs consequent upon the employment of two counsel.

YACOOB ADCJ:

[78] I have read the judgment of Zondo AJ and cannot agree that leave to appeal should be granted. I would refuse leave to appeal.

[79] This is an application for leave to appeal against a decision of the Full Court of the South Gauteng High Court⁵⁵ (High Court) in effect holding that the extradition or deportation of Mr Jerry Ofense Phale⁵⁶ (second respondent), a Botswana national, to Botswana to face capital charges in that country was unconstitutional. The High Court reached its decision on the basis of the judgment of this Court in *Mohamed*⁵⁷ which held that our Constitution did not allow a Tanzanian national to be deported or extradited to the United States of America to face capital charges there without first receiving an assurance that the death penalty would not be imposed, or, if imposed, that it would not be executed.

[80] The High Court had two applications before it, which were consolidated and heard together. The one was by Mr Emmanuel Tsebe⁵⁸ (first respondent) and the Society for ⁵⁵ Tsebe and Another v Minister of Home Affairs and Others; Phale v Minister of Home Affairs and Others 2012 (1) BCLR 77 (GSI).

YACOOB ADCJ

the Abolition of the Death Penalty in South Africa and the other by Mr Phale against the Minister of Home Affairs (Home Affairs Minister) and the Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development (Justice Minister). They both sought the following order:

- “1. Declaring the deportation and/or extradition and/or removal of the applicant to the Republic of Botswana unlawful and unconstitutional, to the extent that such deportation and/or extradition and/or removal be carried out without the written assurance from the Government of Botswana that the applicant will not face the death penalty there under any circumstance;
2. Prohibiting the respondents from taking any action whatsoever to cause the applicant to be deported, extradited or removed from South Africa to Botswana until and unless the Government of the Republic of Botswana provides a written assurance to the respondents that the applicant will not be subject to the death penalty in Botswana under any circumstances;
3. Directing the first and second respondent and any other party who opposes the relief sought herein to pay the applicants’ costs inclusive of the cost of two counsel.”

[81] The Justice Minister, in a counter-application, asked for an order declaring that:

“[T]he Minister for Justice and Constitutional Development is authorised by the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa 1996, read with the provisions of the Extradition Act 67 of 1962 (more particularly section 11 thereof) to order any person, accused of an offence included in an extradition agreement and committed within the jurisdiction of a foreign State party to such agreement, and who has been committed to prison under section 10 of the said Act, to be surrendered to any person authorised by such foreign State to receive him or her, notwithstanding that the extraditable offence for which extradition has been requested carries a death penalty under the law of that State, in circumstances where:

because of the public importance of the issues raised in this case and its relevance for people like Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale.

YACOOB ADCJ

- (a) the Republic of South Africa has sought an assurance from the foreign State that the death penalty will not be imposed, or if imposed, would not be carried out; and
- (b) the foreign State has refused to provide such an assurance by virtue of provisions contained in its domestic law.”

[82] The High Court granted the order sought in both applications with costs and dismissed the Justice Minister’s counter-application, also with costs.

[83] The High Court handed down only one judgment. The application for leave to appeal by the Home Affairs Minister, Justice Minister and other government entities is against the whole of the judgment of the High Court. The submissions by the applicants for leave to appeal in both cases overlap considerably. I will therefore refer to the applicants jointly as the government and to the submissions as government submissions.

The relevant facts

[84] The relevant facts are common cause and it is not necessary to set them out in great detail. In brief:

- a. Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale fled to South Africa and were both charged with murder in Botswana in that they intentionally killed their partners.
- b. Botswana sought separately to have Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale extradited.
- c. Capital punishment remains alive in Botswana.

YACOOB ADCJ

- d. The Justice Minister requested an assurance from Botswana that, upon extradition, the death sentence would not be imposed on Mr Tsebe and that if it was, it would not be executed. This request was refused.
- e. With respect to Phale, it appears that Botswana refused to give the assurance that the death penalty would not be imposed and that it would not be executed if imposed.
- f. The Extradition Agreement between South Africa and Botswana provides, in effect, that South Africa is not obliged to extradite any person to Botswana in respect of an offence for which the death penalty is competent.

Application for leave to appeal

[85] This case is concerned with the lawfulness and constitutionality of the intended deportation of Mr Phale. The only issue that needs our attention is whether it is in the interests of justice to grant leave to appeal.

[86] It is true that there was initially a difference between the Home Affairs Minister and the Justice Minister on whether or not Mr Tsebe should be removed from the country.⁵⁹ The Justice Minister took the view, on the authority of Mohamed, that extradition was not competent without the requisite assurance while the Home Affairs Minister came to the conclusion that deportation was competent despite the decision in ⁵⁹ The initial positions of the Ministers with regard to Mr Phale are unclear. See High Court judgment above n 53 at paras 46-8.

YACOOB ADCJ

Mohamed and the threat of the death penalty. Indeed, the Home Affairs Minister would have deported Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale in the face of the reasoning in Mohamed without approaching any court! The Justice Minister's opinion has now changed as is apparent from the declarator applied for by him and by the fact that he did not request any assurance in relation to Mr Phale.⁶⁰ I do not think there is any uncertainty. Both the Justice Minister and the Home Affairs Minister are of the view that it is not unconstitutional or unlawful to extradite or deport Mr Phale to Botswana absent an assurance that the death penalty will not be imposed. It was on the basis of this conviction that the Home Affairs Minister opposed the application in the High Court and the Justice Minister sought the declarator there.

[87] It is worth re-emphasising that the Home Affairs Minister sought to remove Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale without approaching a Court despite the judgment in Mohamed.⁶¹ Having applied her mind to Mohamed, the Minister should have realised, that at best the deportation or extradition of Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale was far from straightforward and, potentially contrary to a judgment of this Court. Government should indeed be more careful and sensitive, especially where a decision to be taken is likely to have an impact on fundamental rights. In this case Mr Phale would have faced the likelihood of a death sentence if the plans of the Home Affairs Minister were not rendered awry by the actions of Lawyers for Human Rights and the Society for the Abolition of the Death Penalty. We cannot expect that third parties will come to the aid of vulnerable people in the position of Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale at the last minute. One would have thought that at the very least, government would have approached the High Court for clarification before attempting to proceed with their removal in these circumstances. All the more so, since the relevant Ministries were not initially wholly in agreement as to the approach to be followed.

[88] If indeed there was any uncertainty, it was resolved by the detailed High Court judgment, which deals extensively and persuasively with many of the arguments re-advanced in this Court by reference to the provisions of our Constitution, international law, South African extradition law, and in particular Mohamed.

[89] I accept that the matter is of some importance but where, in a matter of public importance, the judgment of a High Court is detailed and convincing it will ordinarily be in the interests of justice to grant leave to appeal only if there is a reasonable prospect that the High Court was wrong. We cannot ordinarily grant leave to appeal where the criticisms of a High Court judgment do not amount to prospects of success.⁶² There may be cases in which a High Court's reasoning is questionable even though the decision might be correct. I now turn to the contentions advanced by the government in order to determine whether it establishes reasonable prospects of success or whether there is any respect in which the reasoning of the High Court might be said to be wrong.

[90] The government accepted the correctness of Mohamed and that it remains valid law in our country. The contentions advanced were that the cases before us are distinguishable from Mohamed in certain respects. I deal with each of these separately.

[91] The first distinguishing feature relied upon by government is that Mr Mohamed was a Tanzanian national who had been deported to the United States of America, while Mr Phale was to be deported to his own country. This proposition is unarguable. How can it make any difference whether the person is sentenced to death in his own country rather than in some other country? The fact is that he will, if extradited or deported, be sent from this country and that creates a causal link between his extradition or deportation and the imposition of the death penalty. The notion that this difference is sufficiently material to distinguish these cases from Mohamed falls to be rejected. There is no prospect that this argument will succeed.

Another v Fleecytex Johannesburg CC and Others [1998] ZACC 3; 1998 (2) SA 1143 (CC); 1998 (4) BCLR 415 (CC) at paras 6-7; and S v Pennington and Another [1997] ZACC 10; 1997 (4) SA 1076 (CC); 1997 (10) BCLR 1413 (CC) at paras 44 and 51.

YACOOB ADCJ

[92] The second purported distinction is that there is not a real risk, as was the case in Mohamed, that Mr Phale would be sentenced to death. This proposition too is untenable for two reasons. First, if the state's allegations are correct, Mr Phale committed a murder which may well attract the death sentence. Second, it is destroyed by the insistence of the Botswana government to not give the necessary assurance. Why refuse if there is no possibility that the death penalty would be imposed anyway?

[93] The third equally untenable distinguishing feature contended for was that there was a possibility that Mr Phale would go free in this case if not extradited while there was no such possibility in Mohamed. This implies that the Constitutional Court in Mohamed would, if Mr Mohamed had still been inside South Africa at the time the application was made, have allowed his deportation or extradition to go ahead even if there had been a real risk that the death penalty would have been imposed. In other words, this Court's decision on the unlawfulness of Mr Mohamed's removal was based on the fact that he was no longer in this country. This is an unacceptable contortion of Mohamed and has no prospect of acceptance by this Court.⁶³

[94] The final distinguishing feature relied upon was that Mohamed was not concerned with the Extradition Act.⁶⁴ This submission ignores the whole thrust of the decision to the effect that it did not matter whether Mr Mohamed was extradited or deported. An ⁶³ See Mohamed above n 53 at paras 60, 70-1 and 73.

⁶⁴ Act 67 of 1962.

YACOOB ADCJ

extradition occurs in terms of the Extradition Act. Again, the proposition is not worthy of consideration.

[95] Other arguments advanced before this Court were that:

- a. The Justice Minister performed his extradition function as an act of state and it should not be impinged upon;
- b. requiring the assurance impacted negatively on prosecutorial and judicial independence in Botswana;
- c. the Executive must be given the opportunity to negotiate delicate instances of this kind;
- d. the decision of the High Court precluded a consideration of the case before it on its particular facts and circumstances; and
- e. the High Court judgment showed excessive concern for people like Mr Tsebe and Mr Phale.

[96] These submissions have nothing to do with the contention that the cases before us are distinguishable from Mohamed. Rather, they are an attempt at criticisms of Mohamed and to seek its modification. This attempt cannot be entertained. Mohamed requires no modification.

[97] As is apparent from the judgment of the High Court, Mohamed is simply not capable of the construction that it is permissible to extradite someone if a request for the necessary assurance is refused. Nor is it capable of meaning that a deportation would be competent absent an assurance. The High Court was undoubtedly right and it is unnecessary, in my view, to cover the terrain so well traversed by the High Court in relation to the legal issues and their resolution all over again.

[98] In the circumstances it is not in the interests of justice to grant leave to appeal. Accordingly, I would refuse leave to appeal with costs.

[99] To the extent that uncertainty is the pivot for granting leave to appeal, I must point out in conclusion that this judgment leaves the government in no doubt that deportation, extradition or any form of removal under these circumstances is wholly unacceptable.

Dear Mr July

Re: YOUR APPOINTMENT TO CONDUCT AN INVESTIGATION ON THE POSSIBLE INVOLVEMENT OF LIEUTENANT GENERAL DRAMAT; MAJOR GENERAL SHADRACK SIBIYA; AND OTHER MEMBERS OF THE DIRECTORATE FOR PRIORITY CRIMES INVESTIGATION ("DPCI") IN THE ILLEGAL RENDITION OF THE ZIMBABWEAN NATIONALS IN 2010

1. Serious allegations of misconduct and possible criminal acts have been made against the Head of the Directorate for Priority Crime Investigations ("DPCI"), Lieutenant-General Dramat; the Provincial Head of DPCI, Gauteng, Major-General Shadrack Sibiyá, and other members of the DPCI. It has been reported in the media and elsewhere that these members of the DPCI have authorised, and participated in the illegal rendition of Zimbabwean nationals, i.e. Shepard Chuma; Maqhawe Sibanda; Prichard Chuma; Johnson Ndoni; Gugu Dube and Bongani Moyo.

LS
SS

2. Mr I H Khuba, who was the Provincial Head of Independent Police Investigative Directorate, Limpopo at the time, led a task team that was commissioned to conduct an investigation into these allegations. Mr Khuba and his team conducted an extensive investigation and produced a report which was signed by Mr Khuba on page 35 of the report with the following recommendations:

"1) Based on the available evidence the Independent Police Investigative Directorate recommends that Lieutenant-General Dramat, Major-General Sibiya, Lieutenant Colonel M Maluleke, constable Radebe, Captain S E Nkosi and Warrant Officer Makoe be charged criminally for:

- 1.1 kidnapping;
- 1.2 defeating the end of justice;
- 1.3 assault and theft (only applicable to Captain M L Maluleke, Warrant Officer Makoe, Constable P M Radebe and Captain S E Nkosi)."

3. The above mentioned report was submitted to the National Prosecuting Authority ("NPA") for a decision to prosecute. No decision was taken by the NPA to date. After Mr Khuba had submitted his report, another report surfaced, also signed by Mr Khuba. The said report is dated at the bottom by Mr M Sesoko and Mr R J McBride 9 April 2014. In this report the recommendation had been changed to the following:

"Based on the available evidence, the Independent Police Investigative Directorate recommends that no charges should be brought against Lieutenant-General Dramat and Major-General Sibiya. The investigation established that there is no prima facie case against them. However with regard to Lieutenant Colonel M Maluleke, there is a prima facie case to sustain charges of kidnaping and defeating the ends of justice."

LS
SS

4. In the report which purports to exonerate Lieutenant-General Dramat and Major-General Sibiya, there is also no longer any mention of Constable Radebe; Captain Nkosi and Warrant Officer Makoe and whether they have been exonerated as well or not.
5. Your terms of reference in the investigation are the following:
 - 5.1 who and under what circumstances was the original report altered or how the second report came about with both reports signed by the same person; i.e. Mr Khuba;
 - 5.2 whether any misconduct or offence has been committed and if so by whom?;
 - 5.3 whether there is prima facie evidence of misconduct and criminal liability by Lieutenant-General Dramat; Major-General Sibiya; and any other officers mentioned in the original report;
 - 5.4 the circumstances under which the report and the docket handed in the NPA and what happened to the docket whilst in the NPA's possession;
 - 5.5 Any other matter that might come to your attention during the investigation which is relevant to your conclusions and findings.
6. In your investigation, you will interview the relevant witnesses at your own discretion and have access to all relevant documentation including the two reports, the docket and witness statements made so far.

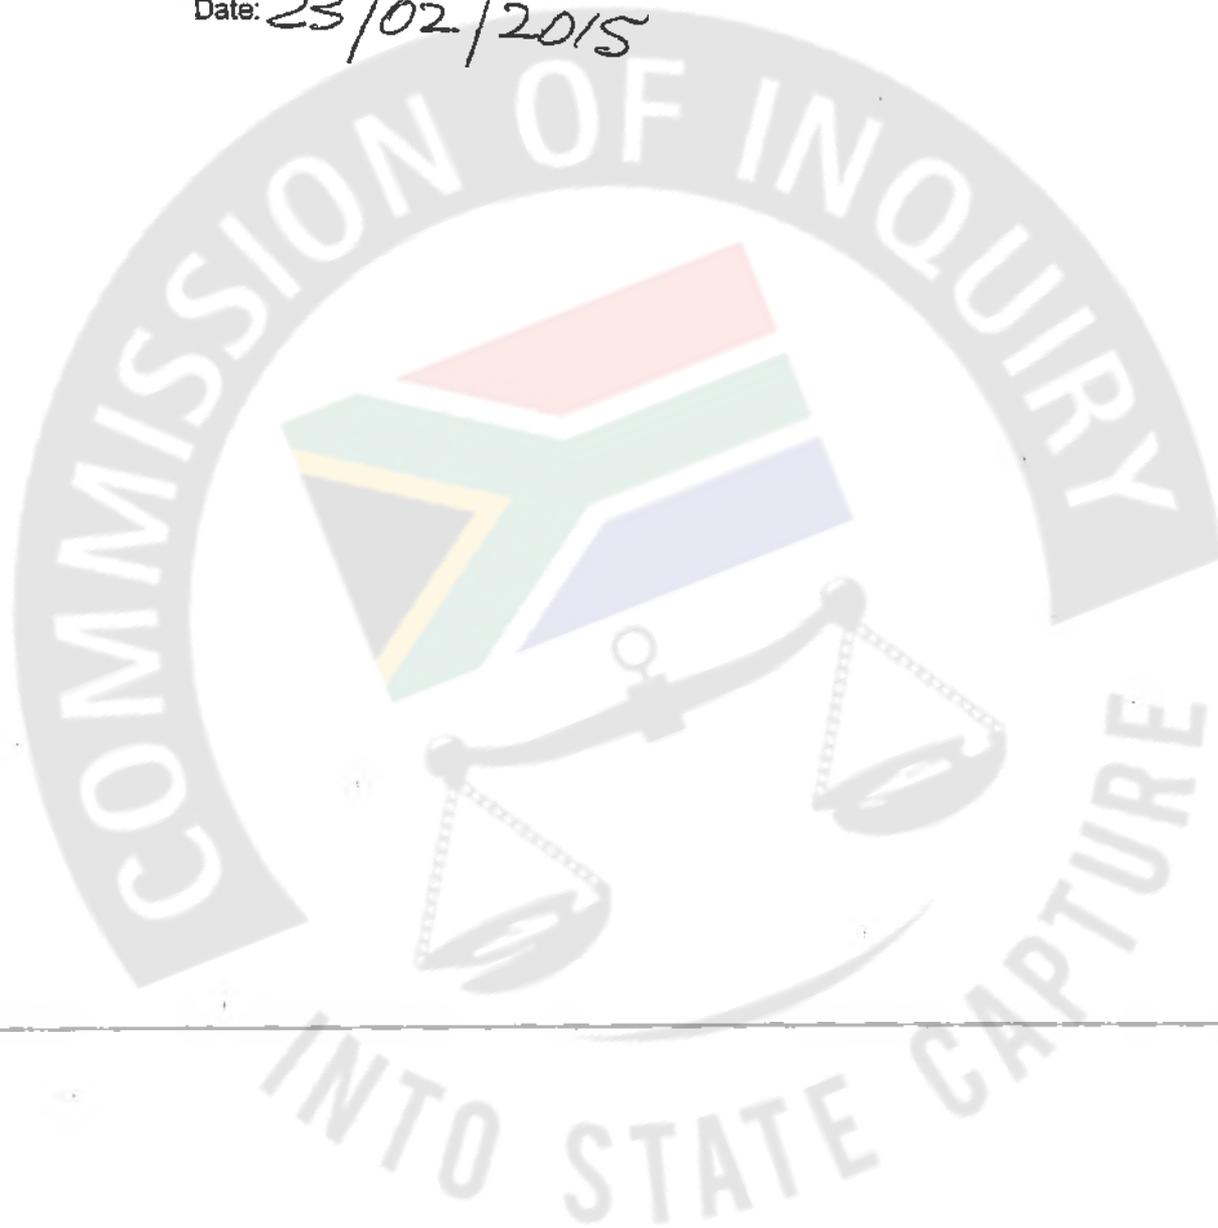

- 7. I require your report within two weeks from the date of your appointment, an extension may however be granted at your request.

Yours faithfully,

NP Mhleko
Minister of Police

1. BACKGROUND

- 1.1 The Independent Police Investigative Directorate received a complaint of alleged rendition involving members of the DPCI headed by General Sibya. The case was reported as result of parliamentary question by Cope Member of Parliament and an article by Sunday Times. The case was referred to the Independent Police Investigative Directorate by Civilian Secretariat for further investigation.

2. SUMMARY OF ALLEGATIONS

The following allegations were made:

- 2.1 It is alleged that between 04/11/2010 and 31/01/2011 Captain M L Maluleke, Warrant Officer Makoe and Constable Radebe, through the direction of General Sibya and Lt General Dramat, conducted operations in Soweto and Diepsloot to trace Zimbabwean Nationals. The suspects were wanted in connection with the murder of a Zimbabwean police Colonel in Bulawayo. The members were accompanied by Zimbabwean Police. Five Zimbabweans were arrested in Diepsloot and detained at various stations as illegal immigrants and others for fictitious crimes. They were allegedly assaulted by SAPS members and Zimbabwean Police and transported to Beit Bridge where they were handed over to the Zimbabwean Authorities. Four of them were reported murdered in the hands of Zimbabwean Police.
- 2.2 According to the allegation, Major General Sibya was also part of the operation.

3. CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY MANDATE

- 3.1 Section 206(8) of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa provide that, on receipt of a complaint lodged by a Provincial Executive, an Independent Complaints body established by the national legislation must investigate any alleged misconduct or offences allegedly committed by members of SAPS.
- 3.2 Section 28 (a) (h) of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act 1 of 2011 provides that the Directorate must investigate any matter referred to as a result of a decision of the Executive Director, or if so requested by the Minister, an MEC or the Secretary as the case maybe, in the prescribed manner.

4. AVAILABLE EVIDENCE

4.1 STATEMENTS OBTAINED FROM INDEPENDENT WITNESSES

The following witnesses were interviewed and statements obtained.

Shepard Chuma: He will state that on Friday 06/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at 6854 John Malalje Street Diepsloot together with Nelson, Maghawe and Witness standing when they were approached by two unknown Black males. One of them produced an appointment card and the other produced a firearm and ordered them to lie down. He will further state that one of the Police Officer then took out a paper and started reading names like Mthethi Sibanda, Godl Dube, Prichard Chuma and John. He asked them whether they know such people but none of such names were known to them. The officer was wearing a cowboy hat and they heard other police officers calling him Cowboy. Few minutes later, Cowboy asked the other Police Officers about where to detain them. While they argued about the place to detain them, the other officer suggested that General Sibya be consulted to provide direction in the matter. A short while later General Sibya alighted from a Black BMW. He will state that they were assaulted and when they arrived at Orlando Police Station one of the Officers called "Leburu" took his R300 which was in a wallet in his back pocket. They were detained and on 2010/11/06 at 12h00 the officer called "Cowboy" came and took the finger prints of his co-accused but his fingerprints were not taken. He was informed that his finger prints will be taken at Musina.

459

On Monday 2010/11/08 at 12h00 Cowboy came to collect them. They were taken into a marked vehicle of Orlando SAPS driven by the officer in uniform. They followed Cowboy who was driving a white Nissan D/C. They were taken to a certain place called Bronkhorstpruit where they were moved into a Toyota being handcuffed. They were then taken to Musina and they arrived at 17h00. They took one officer at Musina whom Cowboy said he will make matters easy for them to cross the border. He will further state that at the border, Cowboy went to Home Affairs office and few minutes later came back. They were transported in a Nissan D/C and crossed the border with Cowboy using a wrong lane but they were never stopped. When they were on the other side Zimbabwean police came and placed handcuffs on top of other handcuffs and Cowboy came and removed his handcuffs. They were taken to a Zimbabwean police car. He will state that they were interrogated by the Zimbabwean Police Officers about a Zimbabwean police Colonel who was killed. They were placed in separate cells and after 11 days he was released. When he enquired about his friend he was told that he was killed by the Zimbabwean police.

Moghave Sibanda: He will state that on 06/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at his residential place in Diepsloot when he was approached by two Black Males who identified themselves as Police Officers. They instructed them to lie down and they cooperated with them. Few minutes later there were many cars of Police Officers in civilian clothes and they started searching them. He will further state that they were assaulted and the police also took R500,00 which was in his pocket. There was another police officer wearing Cowboy hat reading names on the paper and asking them whether they knew the names of such people. He will state further that he saw General Sibya coming out of a black BMW and gave instruction that they should be taken to Orlando SAPS.

Bongani Henry Yende: He will state that he is a member of the South African Police Services attached to Crime Intelligence. During October 2010 he was nominated to be a member of Task Team called Tactical Operations Management Section (TOMS) which was led by General Sibya. On 2010/11/05 he received a call from W/O Makoe of DPCI in Gauteng who was also part of TOMS informing him that General Sibya wanted them to meet in order to look for four suspects who are wanted in connection with the murder of police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He then went to Fourways Shopping Center with Constable/Deemond Campbell who was also part of TOMS to meet with W/O Makoe. On their arrival at the Shopping Center W/O Makoe also introduced two Zimbabwean police to them. He will further state that he was informed by W/O Makoe that the two officers came through the office of General Dramat. At that time General Sibya was seated in a navy blue BMW and he could not go and greet him. They went to Diepsloot together with Captain Maluleke (also known as Cowboy), W/O Jawuke and Constable Leburu Radebe to identify the house of the suspects.

Captain Maluleke came back and informed them that he left the two officers observing the movements of the suspects at their residence. On their arrival at the suspect's place of residence, Captain Maluleke searched the suspects and confiscated their passports. There were four men who were lying on the ground and the two Zimbabwean police said that the four men are wanted in connection with murder of a Zimbabwean police Colonel in Bulawayo. The suspects were taken to Orlando and detained as illegal immigrants. On 23/11/2010 he was briefed by W/O Makoe that the two suspects who were arrested were subsequently killed in Zimbabwe. He will further state that the suspect Pritchard Chuma was detained in Alexandra Police station. He will further state that Captain Maluleke was reporting directly to General Sibiyi and whenever torture of the suspects was to be carried out, he condoned it.

Nelson Ndlovu: He will state that on 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at his younger brother's residential place in Diepsloot when he was approached by two Black Males who identified themselves as Police Officers. They ordered them to lie down and then started to assault them. He identified one of the Police Officer by the nickname Leburu. After their arrest the Police Officers argued about where they should detain them and one of them suggested Randburg. General Sibiyi gave the instruction that they must be detained at Orlando SAPS. They were then taken to Orlando SAPS but Shepard Chuma and Witness went with the police to show them where John stays.

Petros Jawuke: He will state that during October 2010 he was nominated to be part of a Task Team Called "TOMS" in Gauteng Province and that the team operated under the command of General Sibiyi. On 2010/11/05 in the evening he received a call from W/O Makoe that their Commander Gen. Sibiyi wanted all TOMS members to meet in Fourways because there was a Colonel who was murdered. He will state that he collected W/O Ndoke and rushed to Fourways where they met with other members.

He will state that W/O Makoe instructed him to join Captain Cowboy Maluleke and Constable Leburu Radebe to identify the suspects address. On their arrival at the identified house they found a car standing outside but there was no one inside the car. He will state that four men came to the vehicle and that they arrested them and detained them at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants but not the Zimbabwe murder case as indicated at the beginning of the tracing process.

He will further state that on 2010/11/23 the second operation was arranged and that he got a call from W/O Makoe that their Commander General Sibiyi wanted them to meet at Diepsloot Shoprite. General Sibiyi was present in the second operation. They went to Diepsloot where an African Male Pritchard Chuma was found and arrested for murder of the Colonel in Zimbabwe.

Amoud Campbell: He will state that on 2010/11/05 General Sibiyi arranged with W/O Makoe to call them for operation at Diepsloot for tracing wanted suspects in a murder case where a Colonel was killed. He received a call from Constable Radebe that they have already arrested the suspects.

He will further state that the suspects were assaulted since he heard screams but did not take part in the assault of the suspects. The suspects were arrested in connection with a murder of the police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He will state that the four suspects were then detained at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants and not on the Zimbabwe Murder case of the Colonel. On 22/11/2010 until the early hours of 23/11/2010 Prichard Chuma was arrested and detained in Alexandra. He never saw General Sibya being involved in the operation but that there was a person who was always seated in the black tinted BMW and W/O Makoe referred to the person as General Sibya.

Alfred Ndobe: He will state that during October 2010 he was nominated to be part of Task Team called "TOMS" in Gauteng Province headed by General Sibya. On 2010/11/05 Gen. Sibya arranged with W/O Makoe to call them for operation at Diepsloot for tracing wanted suspects in a murder case where a Colonel was killed. He was not aware that the suspects that they were tracing were needed in a Zimbabwe case. He received a call from Constable Radebe that they have already arrested the suspects.

The suspects were assaulted by General Sibya, Captain Cowboy and W/O Makoe. He will state that the four suspects were then detained at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants but not on the Zimbabwe murder case of the murdered Colonel.

Andrew Mark Sampson: He will state that he is a White Male self employed as a Project Manager of House Constructions. He knew Maghawe Sibanda as a sub-contractor on his building sites. He will state that Mr. Sibanda vanished for a week and resurfaced again. He was informed by Mr. Sibanda that his disappearance was as result of his arrest in connection with the alleged murder of a Zimbabwean Colonel. He was taken to Beit Bridge but released along the way and he had to find his way back because he did not have money and his cell phone was confiscated by the police. He will state that he was requested by Mr. Sibanda to call the said police Captain for his cell phone. He called the police Captain and he confirmed that the cell phone will be returned. He does not know whether such phone was finally returned to Mr. Sibanda.

Sibongile Mochu: She will state that she is a neighbor of the deceased Johnson Nyoni. She will state that she witnessed a group of unknown Policemen assaulting the deceased who was lying down on the furrow of running water as it was raining. She will state that the deceased was assaulted by means of being kicked with booted feet. She will state that she cannot recall the exact date but it was during January 2011. She will state that the deceased was also pepper sprayed on his face and that he was having bloodied mucous coming out of his nostrils.

She will state that she was standing at the distance of about 20 meters when she witnessed the incident and that it was still in the morning around 10:00. She will state that she never saw what happened inside the shack. She will state that she learnt that the deceased was indeed murdered after a month from his younger brother. She will state that she may not be able to identify them if she can see them again.

Reasons Mula: Maghawe Sibanda: He will state that on November 2010, on the date in which he cannot remember the date he visited his ex-girlfriend Brightness Nka Ncube who was staying with his distant sister Rachel Ncube. He slept over and in the middle of the night he was woken up by the police looking for John the boyfriend of Rachel. He was assaulted by a police whom he cannot identify, since it was in the dark. There was another Police Officer who was flashing a cellphone on their faces trying to identify them. He will further state that John was not there and they were freed when they indicated to the police that none of them was John.

Rachel Ncube: She will state that she is the wife of the deceased John Nyonl. It was on 28/11/2011 at 10h00 when she was in her shack with her husband Johnson Nyonl when police arrived and started assaulting him. The police entered the shack and said that they were looking for a firearm which they alleged that her husband used to kill a policeman in Zimbabwe. There were five (5) police vehicles, and her husband was taken away by the police and that was the last time she saw him. In February 2011 she received a call from Biko Nyonl, the brother of the deceased that Johnson Nyonl has died.

Brightness Nka Ncube: she will state that she is the sister-in-law of the late Johnson Nyonl. On the 6th or 6th of November while she was asleep she was woken up by the police who pretended to be Johnson Nyonl and later changed to indicate that they are in fact Police Officers. She will further state that she was assaulted by the police who were looking for Johnson Nyonl. The police freed them after they realized that Johnson was not amongst them. She learned later that Johnson Nyonl was murdered by the police in Zimbabwe.

Melate Bhokosia Nyonl: He will state that he is the brother of late Johnson Nyonl and on 01 March 2011 he telephonically contacted his brother in law Orbed Ndlovu from Bulawayo in Zimbabwe who informed him that his brother Johnson Nyonl is late and was found at Central Mortuary in Bulawayo. He will further state that he then went to Bulawayo in Zimbabwe and at the mortuary he found the body of his brother. The body of Johnson Nyonl had a bullet wound on the collar (neck) just above the chest and it exited at the back. There was an information note attached to the body stating that Johnson Nyonl was involved in the crossfire at Gwanda in Zimbabwe. He will further state that he attended Johnson Nyonl's funeral which was held at Tsholotsho in Zimbabwe.

4.2 STATEMENTS OF MEMBERS AT ORLANDO POLICE STATION

The following statements were obtained from members of SAPS based at Orlando police station who are witnesses in the case.

Brigadier Mthokozelwa Zangwe: He will state that he is a Station Commander of Orlando Police Station. He became aware of the allegation of deportation of Zimbabwean foreign Nationals in 2012. He will state that as part of his own investigation he perused the registers to check if there were indeed Zimbabwean nationals detained at Orlando Police Station. According to OB 279/11/2010 the said Foreign Nationals were arrested by Captain M L Maluleke. He also discovered that the Foreign Nationals were detained until 08/11/2010. The procedure is that when a person is arrested and is suspected to be illegal immigrant, Home Affair official is called to verify the status of the person before he or she is taken to Lindela for deportation. He does not know why the procedure was not followed by the police in this case. He will further state that Captain Maluleke confirmed that he indeed took the said Foreign Nationals to Bell Bridge.

Thomas Phene Setogana: He is a member of SAPS stationed at Orlando. On 06/11/2010 Captain Maluleke came to the holding cells with four foreign national namely Dumisani Wimbwe Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghabane Sibanda and Shepard Chuma. The four Foreign Nationals were registered on the OB and cell register. He will state that it was for the first time for him to experience a situation where a member of DPCI arrest and detain a person for being an illegal immigrant.

Padile Abrina Papp: She will state that she is a Constable and that during the time of incident she was still a trainee. On 2010/11/08 at 05h46 she reported on duty and she was posted at the cells. On the same day she was tasked by W/O Marula to write the Occurrence Book. She made entries as directed and not as she observed because she was a Trainee.

4.3 STATEMENTS OF HOME AFFAIRS OFFICIALS

Notwanda Qaba: She will state that she is a Director responsible for Deportation. She will further state that the incident that took place in 2010 occurred before she joined the department but upon being informed of the facts of the case by her juniors, she realized that members of the SAPS did not comply with the procedure when they deported the four Zimbabwean Foreign Nationals. She stated that a member of SAPS is not allowed to deport any person without the involvement of Home Affairs. The person suspected to be illegal foreigner must be verified by the Immigration Officer and the High Commissioner or the Embassy must confirm that such person is their citizen.

Peter Nohwandwe: He will state that he is an Assistant Director with the Department of Home Affairs in Soweto. He started knowing about the incident involving four Zimbabwean Foreign Nationals in 2012 when he was contacted by Mr. M Matthews who is a Chief Director at their Head Office. He will further state that the four Zimbabwean nationals were not supposed to be deported because from 20/09/2010 to 31/12/2010 there was DZP which is Dispensation for Zimbabwean Project Initiated by the Minister to allow all Zimbabweans without legal documents to stay in the country for 90 days in order to apply for legal documents. There is no Zimbabwean who was supposed to be deported on the basis of illegal documents during that period.

He will also further state that in 2012, few days after receiving a call from Mr. M Matthews a Police Officer by the name of Makuleke visited his office and showed him Home Affairs documents with signature and asked him whether he could identify any signature on the documents. He told Mr. Makuleke that the signature does not belong to any of his people. The documents were copies and Mr. Makuleke left in a hurry without showing him the documents in full.

He will further state that no police officer is allowed to deport any person and any person suspected to be an illegal foreigner must be screened by Immigration Officer.

Job Jackson: He will state that he is an Acting Deputy Director responsible for the day to day running of Lindela Holding facility. In his statement he outlined the process

Involved in the deportation of a person from Lindela. He will further state that the incident took place before he was transferred to Lindela.

Polwane Skoema: She will state that she is an Immigration Officer Station at Soweto. She will further state that the form Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigner (BI-1726) was discontinued in 2008 and that the Notification of Deportation Form must be accompanied by the fingerprints. She will further state that in all cases police call them to screen the illegal foreigners before such persons are taken to Lindela.

Johannes Lodewickus: He will state that he is a Deputy Director in the Department of Home Affairs at Soweto. He confirmed that the number on the Detention Warrant and Notification of Deportation form provided by the police does not belong to any Home Affairs official in Soweto.

Richard Peter Elberg: He state that he is an Immigration Officer based at Belt Bridge. He will further state that when SAPS bring an illegal foreigner at Port of Entry they must hand in a Body Receipt form and not the Detention Warrant. The Warrant of Detention is not a deportation document and must not be produced or stamped at Port of Entry.

He will dismiss the allegation that the stamp used on the documents claimed to be Home Affairs documents by the police is a deportation stamp.

Kobela Margaret Molehle: She will state that she is an Immigration Officer based at Belt Bridge and she had been a custodian of Stamp 20 since 2010. She had been in control of stamp 20 and when she is not in the office the stamp would be locked in the safe. She is the only person in possession of the key. She will state that on the 7th and 8th of November 2010 she was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe. She does not know how stamp 20 appears on the documents which the police claim to be deportation papers because on the day in which the documents were stamped she was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe.

4.4 STATEMENTS OF MEMBERS OF SAPS IN LIMPOPO

Ndandakeni Richard Madlana: He will state that he is a Police Officer in the South African Police Service holding a rank of Lieutenant Colonel stationed at Thohoyandou SAPS as a Commander of Crime Prevention.

He will further state that the statement is additional to the statement he signed with a member of the Hawks from Pretoria. He wants to clarify certain issues pertaining to his previous statement.

Before he was transferred to Thohoyandou SAPS, he was working at Belt Bridge Police Station as a Commander. His duties included Crime Prevention, liaison with the Immigration Officials and other police officials from other stations.

In 2010, two weeks before the 8th November, there was a convoy of vehicles from Zimbabwe entering into South Africa. As he was suspicious, he approached them. The convoy was approaching the Immigration Offices. When he approached them, one of them introduced himself to him as the leader of the group and he told him that he is Superintendent Ncube from the Homicide Unit in Harare. He then requested him if they could not find a place to sit down and discuss.

Superintendent Ncube told him that he was going to Pretoria to meet General Dramat. He said to him that maybe he knew about the Chief Superintendent who had been murdered. He said that the suspects were in Gauteng and he had organized with General Dramat to assist them in tracing the suspects.

He will state that he told Superintendent Ncube that he has to verify with his seniors about the arrangements. He was given a number of General Dramat by Superintendent Ncube. He called Colonel Radziani to verify the information but she requested that he should call Brigadier Makushu who was a Provincial Head Protection and Security Services. He then called him on his cell phone and explained to him that there are police from Zimbabwe who are intending to have a meeting with General Dramat. Brigadier Makushu told him that he was not aware of the visit but if the people are saying that they are going to meet the General, he should call General Dramat directly. He phoned General Dramat on his cell phone and he responded by saying that he is aware of the Zimbabwean police and he must let them come.

For the period of two weeks, he never heard anything from Superintendent Ncube and his group. After two weeks he received a call from Superintendent Ncube who told him that he was in town and he wanted to say goodbye. He went to town and met with them in front of Tops bottle store. They bought liquor and they left to the border. He did not escort them; they went to the border and crossed to Zimbabwe. They did not discuss anything about the operation they had in Gauteng with General Dramat.

The following day after the departure of Zimbabwean police, he received a call from Captain Makuleke who is also known as "Cowboy". It was on 08 November 2010 between 16 and 17:00, when he called and introduced himself as Cowboy and I asked as to who is Cowboy. He said that he is a Captain Makuleke and was with him at Paarl in Cape Town in 2005. When he said that he is Captain Makuleke, he remembered very well who he was. Captain Makuleke asked him where he was, and he said he had already crossed the checkpoint. He was told to stop and wait for him. After thirty minutes he arrived and was driving a Sedan which he thinks is a BMW. He was with a male person who was seated on the front passenger seat. He then entered into the vehicle after the passenger had moved to the back seat.

While he was on the front passenger seat heading to the border gate, he told him that the Zimbabwean police whom he assisted some weeks back were looking for suspects in connection with the death of police chief in Zimbabwe, and now they have found them. He told him that he was sent by his big bosses to assist in deporting them because the country does not have extradition agreement with Zimbabwe. He said that since the Zimbabwe police entered the country there had been busy trying to trace the suspect.

While they were driving, he realized that there were other BMW cars which were following them and he knew that it was a convoy. Captain Makuleke told him that suspects are in the vehicle behind them. He said that there are two suspects and the third one is still not yet found. He will further state that he never stopped anywhere at the border and no documents were stamped for the purpose of deportation.

When they arrived at the Zimbabwean side the vehicle stopped and immediately all the vehicles were surrounded by Zimbabwean police. They then pulled the suspects from the back seat of the vehicle behind them. He knew that they were Police Officers because he had been working at the border for a long time and he knew them. He even saw the vehicles that crossed two weeks ago when Superintendent Ncube entered the country.

Thereafter one of the Zimbabwean police came and thanked them and said that they must not use the other gate but use the one they used when they entered.

Captain Makuleke told him that what happened is top secret and people must not know about it.

In 2012 of which he cannot remember the month and date, Captain Makuleke phoned and told him that there is a person from Head Office who will be coming for investigation and that he must cooperate with him.

Later a person came to Thohoyandou and he had a draft statement. He was told that there is a problem with the operation which was once done by the Hawks and they would like his statement to be in a particular format. He told him that the statement is for covering up and the parliament has some issues about the operation. He will further state that he read the statement and realize that it was to close the gaps and not a true reflection of what happened.

Brigadier Joseph Makushu: He will state that in 2010 he was the Head of Security and Protection Services responsible for eight Borders of which one of them is Belt Bridge. He will further state that Colonel Madlonga was one of his team members posted at Belt Bridge reporting under Colonel Radziani. He remembers receiving a call from Colonel Madlonga in 2010 requesting permission to allow Zimbabwean Police who were going to see Major General Dramat. He then instructed him to call General Dramat directly because he did not want to be involved in the operation which he was not previously informed about. He will further state that it was the last time he spoke to Colonel Madlonga about the Zimbabwean Police.

Colonel Doreen Sharon Radziani: She will state that in 2010 she was the direct supervisor of Colonel Madlonga at the Belt Bridge Port of entry. She will further state that in 2010 Colonel Madlonga informed her about the Zimbabwean Police who were about to enter the country to see Major General Dramat. She cannot remember whether he informed her telephonically or he came to her office. She will further state that she told Colonel Madlonga to speak with Brigadier Makushu about the issue.

4.5 STATEMENTS OF TOMS MEMBERS IN GAUTENG WHO PARTICIPATED IN THE OPERATION.

Lt Col Neethling: He stated that he is a member of South African Police Services stationed at the Directorate of Priority Crimes, Provincial Office in Gauteng. In November 2010 of which he cannot remember the exact date, he received a request from Captain Maluleke to assist in arresting a suspect in the Fourways area. He met with Captain Maluleke at Diepsloot who then led him to the spot where the suspect was. Captain Maluleke walked towards him and briefed him, informing him that he is investigating a case of murder of a Zimbabwean police officer.

He did not ask any question because he knew Captain Maluleke to be working for "Cross Border Desk" at the Head Office of the Hawks. He also did not ask question because he knew that Captain Maluleke was representing the Head Office. He considers himself to be less knowledgeable in Cross Border crimes than Captain Maluleke. He discussed the tactical approach of the operation with his team since he considered the operation to be high risk. He positioned himself at the back of the vehicle convoy down a very narrow alley leading to an informal structure. There were three Police Officers whom later he discovered that they were Zimbabwean police. They were dressed in neat trousers, collar shirts and suits jackets.

After 15 minutes his members came out and informed him that they found the intended target and that Captain Maluleke had arrested him. They drove out of the settlement and stopped at the shopping center. Captain Maluleke informed him that they also have to arrest other suspects in Soweto. He was informed the next day that other two suspects were also arrested.

He also remember receiving a call from Captain Maluleke requesting escort of high risk suspects to Musina since he had to hand them over to Zimbabwean Authorities. He did provide a team to escort the suspects. He believes he must have reported such arrests to Major General Sibiyi.

Captain Arnold Boonstra: He will state that in November 2010 (a date and time of which he cannot remember) he was requested by Lt Col Neethling to assist in tracing the suspects who were wanted by Captain Maluleke. He went to Dlepsoot shopping Centre and waited for the members involved in the operation to come and fetch him. They came in a convoy and he followed. It was at night and he cannot remember the exact time. He approached Lt Col Matuleke known as Cowboy to provide him with the case number or reference number. He gave him a reference number from the file he was holding. He also told him that the suspects were wanted in connection with murder of a Police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He also mentioned that the police Colonel was killed during the Shoprite robbery. He does not remember precisely whether he said Shoprite robbery took place in Zimbabwe or South Africa.

The operation moved to Soweto but he did not see people who were arrested. He did not witness any assault because he was not near the operation. He just heard Lt Col Maluleke saying that he will detain the suspects in Soweto.

Warrant Officer PJD Selape: He will state that he is employed by DPCI in Gauteng on a rank of a Warrant Officer. In November 2010 of which he cannot remember the exact date he received a call from his Commander Lt Col Neethling requesting him to assist Captain Maluleke in escorting a suspect. He told him that Captain Maluleke will provide details of the trip.

He then called Captain Maluleke who confirmed that he needed assistance to transport a suspect to Musina. He requested him to use his vehicle because it had a blue light. He was in possession of BMW 330 with registration number TJH568 GP. He cannot remember the details of the trip but he remembers arranging with Captain Maluleke to meet at Alexandra Police Station on 23/11/2010 as recorded in the Occurrence Book to book out the said suspect. Captain Maluleke arrived and was driving a Nissan Hard body Double Cab.

Captain Maluleke told the officer at the Service Centre the name of the suspect and the suspect by the name of Prichard Chuma was brought to him. Captain Maluleke handcuffed the suspect and took him to the BMW. He then drove the vehicle being escorted by Captain Maluleke. He did not know what the suspect was wanted for and that he was just carrying out the request of his commander. He was told by Captain Maluleke that the suspected should be taken to Silverton Police station. He drove the suspect to Silverton where he was booked in the cells. He does not remember whether he booked the suspect himself or Captain Maluleke did it. After booking the suspect Captain Maluleke told him that on 24/11/2010 he must assist in escorting the suspect to Musina.

On 24/11/2010 he went to Silverton DPCI's office as directed telephonically by Captain Maluleke. When he arrived the following day, he discovered that the suspect he transported the previous day was no longer in the cells in Silverton Police Station but with Captain Maluleke. He was then brought to his vehicle and after he sat down, Captain Maluleke placed iron legs on him. They then drove to Musina while Captain Maluleke was providing escort. Captain Maluleke was in the company of a female person not known to him.

On arrival at Musina Captain Maluleke signaled using the head lights that they have to proceed straight to the border. He then proceeded to the border and when they arrived, they found the entry gate having a long queue. He used the exit gate as entrance gate. The police stopped them before they proceeded any further but when he put the blue light of his vehicle on, they gave way. He stopped in front of the police station at Beit Bridge and Captain Maluleke came over to his car, released iron legs from the suspect and headed to the Community Service Centre. He then went back and slept over in Polokwane.

4.8 STATEMENTS OF TRT MEMBERS WHO ASSISTED IN THE ARREST OF JOHNSON NYONI.

Ayhasroni Desmond Takalani: He is employed by the South African Police Services in Gauteng stationed at Johannesburg Central Police station under the TRT unit. On 2011/01/12 at 11h00 in the morning he was on duty in a full uniform posted at Diepsloot for Crime Prevention purpose. While busy with his duties with other members of TRT unit from Johannesburg Central, they received a request from members of the Hawks (DPCI) TOMS who were at Diepsloot SAPS to provide backup in the arrest of wanted suspect. When they arrived at Diepsloot SAPS, he decided to remain outside while others were briefed inside the station. From the station the vehicles proceeded to the Squatter Camp. Along the way his co-workers informed him that there was a suspect who was being traced at the Squatter Camp.

When they arrived at the place where the suspect was, he remained inside the vehicle because it was raining and he did not have a rain coat. He saw the suspect when they brought him to the vehicle. After members of the Hawks and Crime Intelligence who were unknown to him arrested the suspect, they were requested to escort the suspect to Silverton DPCI offices. They escorted the suspect and at Silverton DPCI offices he saw Captain Maluleke who was wearing a Cowboy hat with two unknown African males who were travelling in a white BMW with Zimbabwean registration numbers. Captain Maluleke further said that they were Zimbabwean police who came to take the suspect, referring to the suspect whom they had just arrested at Diepsloot.

While they were with the suspect, he told them that some weeks back he was in Zimbabwe attending a funeral of some of the people he committed crime with and also knew they were after him. He was telling them when Captain Maluleke and Zimbabwean police were inside the offices.

They were requested to take the suspect to Pretoria Moot SAPS for detention. Before they went to Pretoria Moot SAPS, photos of all members involved in the operation were taken. When they arrived at Pretoria Moot Police station, Captain Maluleke detained the suspect and they then knocked off.

Handwritten marks: A large '1' with a checkmark, 'H7', 'LS', and 'SS'.

Johannes Npali Moutshu: He will state that in January 2011 he was on duty posted at Diepsloot as a result of xenophobic violence prevalent at the time. At 13h00 on that particular day, he received a call via two ways radio from his commander to go Diepsloot police station. When he arrived with his colleagues he found the commander of Diepsloot Police station who introduced them to Captain Maluleke who was with two male persons and a female. The two male persons and a female were introduced as members of Crime Intelligence. Captain Maluleke informed them that there is a person who has committed serious cases in Zimbabwe and he is very dangerous. Captain Maluleke further said that the suspect was with the informer and had to be arrested. He will further state that they went into Diepsloot where the suspect and the informer were pointed out. After the arrest of the suspect they went to a certain shack where members of Crime Intelligence conducted a search but nothing was found. They were told by Captain Maluleke to transport the suspect to DPCI offices in Silverton. At Silverton Captain Maluleke requested them to book the suspect at Moot Police with the instruction that no visitor is allowed for the suspect. He cannot remember the name of the suspect but he remembers taking photos with the officers from Zimbabwe.

Sello John Phaswana: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani in all material aspects.

Tshatoa Jacob Seletela: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani and that of Sello John Phaswana in all material aspects.

Matsobane Silas Mokopelo: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani and that of Sello John Phaswana as well that of Tshatoa Jacob Seletela.

4.7. STATEMENTS OF CRIME INTELLIGENCE MEMBERS WHO TRACED AND ARRESTED GORDON DUBE AND JOHNSON NYONI.

Wendine Makrobu: She will state that she is employed by the South African Police Services stationed at Crime Intelligence in Pretoria with a rank of Constable. On 12/01/2011 while in the office they received information from their Contact/Informer and he tipped them about a crime that was going to take place at Diepsloot. They then proceeded there with a backup of members from Ivory Park Police Station where they effected the arrest of Gordon Dube at Diepsloot. In January 2011 they received information from CIAC at Wierdeburch regarding the wanted suspect John Nyoni. The person they liaised with at CIAC was Constable Sombhene who also gave them the number of Captain Maluleke. She also spoke to Maluleke over the phone while they were there. They then drove to the Hawks offices to meet with Captain Maluleke who told them that the suspect has murdered a police officer in Zimbabwe.

They then tasked their Contact/Informer to look for the suspect, who did and the suspect was arrested. After the arrest of John Nyoni, they all proceeded to the Hawks offices where they gathered together for a photo shoot. Captain Maluleke exchanged the taking of photos with the Zimbabwean police. The photo of the suspect was also taken and the exhibit which is a firearm was also photographed. After the photo shoot she went to the shop, but when she came back she was told that General Dramat was with Colonel McIntosh and he had just addressed the people in her absence. She felt

Superintendent Ncube from Zimbabwe who was wearing black shirt and spectacles told us that he will be sending us letters of congratulation from Zimbabwe. She still recalls that later they were called by Brigadier Britz from Crime Intelligence Provincial office, and he showed them an appreciation letter from Zimbabwean government. He told them that they would be called by Provincial Commissioner Mzwandile Petros to meet with them as a result of their good work. She does not know what happened to John Nyoni thereafter.

Emmanuel Dinkulu Mkhabe: His statement corroborates that of Plalimah Mokgobu in all material aspects. He will state further that shortly after the photos were taken, he saw General Dramat of the Hawks. General Dramat was with the spokesperson of the Hawks known to him as Colonel McIntosh Poleko. They then gathered together and Captain Maluleke introduced General Dramat and the spokesperson. General Dramat addressed and thanked them for arresting the suspect. General Dramat warned them not tell anyone about the operation we had just done.

After he said that he left and Captain Maluleke told us that he was organizing a celebration braai. While they were busy enjoying themselves, a lady working at the Hawks offices with Captain Maluleke came and joined them. She wanted the meat to take home because there was too much meat. She was requested to download the photos from the camera by Captain Maluleke.

He will state further that he then decided to follow her to the office. When she downloaded the photos he requested her to print the photos for him. She agreed and printed many photos which he took home and still have them even now.

Constable Mngwenya: will state under oath that on the 28/01/2011 he was called by his colleagues after the arrested Johnson Nyoni to join the at DPCI offices in Silverton for a braai. He will further state that when he arrived he found Zimbabwean police and some of his colleagues participating in a photo shoot. Shortly after the photo shoot Lt General Dramat came and thanked them for the job well done.

STATEMENTS OF DIEPSLOOT SAPS MEMBERS REGARDING GORDON DUBE

Avhasel Witness Rambahda: He will state that in January 2011 he was working Diepsloot as a Detective. There were three suspects who were arrested after they were involved in the shooting incident with the police. They recovered firearm which was booked into SAPS 13 and received exhibit number SAPS 13/31/2011. He was involved in the charging of the suspects and they were attending court at Atteridgeville. After some few days he received a call from Captain Maluleke of the Hawks asking him to go to Ballistic Pretoria and collect the firearm as he had already made arrangement with them. He collected the firearm and handed it Captain Maluleke. Captain Maluleke told him that he has a case he is investigation against one of the suspects. He informed him that the firearm belongs to Zimbabwe. He typed a letter a letter on his computer acknowledging the firearm but he does not remember where he put the letter.

He will further state that Captain Maluleke told him that he had made an arrangement with the prosecutor at Atteridgeville to withdraw the case so that he could be able to transport the suspect and the firearm to Zimbabwe.

Isaac Dlamini: He will state that in January 2011 docket Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 was assigned to him for further investigation. The docket had three suspect arrested for possession of unlicensed firearm and ammunition. The names of the suspects were Menzi Dube, God Dube and Sidingumunzi Dumanl. He received a call from "Cowboy" Makuleke of the Hawks to hand the Case dockets Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 to his office in Silverton. He said the docket had to be investigated together with other dockets wherein God Dube is a suspect. He further said that the firearm which is an exhibit in his docket was used to kill a senior officer in Zimbabwe. Captain Makuleke took the docket and gave them acknowledgement of receipt.

He will further state that Captain Cowboy in the presence of Constable Rambuda told him that he will facilitate the release of the suspect from prison and he will talk to the Prosecutor to withdraw the case. After sometimes seeing that the docket was under his name, he opened a duplicate and sent it to the prosecutor. The prosecutor decided to decline to prosecute and the duplicate docket was filed.

Leon Meyer: He will state that he was investigating several cases wherein Godl Dube was a suspect. The case were as follows, Wierdebrug CAS 631/12/2010, Wierdebrug CAS 220/02/2010, Wierdebrug CAS 147/11/2010, Wierdebrug CAS 1022/12/2010, Wierdebrug CAS 310/10/2010 and Diepsloot 93/01/2011. He was informed by Captain Makuleke from the Hawks that suspect Alfred Godl Dube was also wanted in Zimbabwe. According to Makuleke he was also wanted for murder as per Bulawayo CR 438/09/2010. He will further state that he booked out suspect Godl Dube and handed him to Captain Makuleke. Captain Makuleke informed him that suspect Gordon Dube will be handed over to the Zimbabwean government through immigration channels.

Sindy Daisy Dorous Sombhane: She will state that during 2010 and 2011 she was based at Wierdebrug attached to Crime Intelligence unit. During 2010 she gave Constable Rikotso a list of wanted suspects in Wierdebrug. She also met Captain Makuleke at Wierdebrug who told her that he is looking for a suspect known as Godl Dube. She contacted Constable Rikotso and informed him that Captain Makuleke was at Wierdebrug inquiring about Godl Dube. She gave him the contact numbers of Captain Makuleke.

She will further state that on the 11/01/2011 she saw the name of Godl Dube on the cell Register and decided to call Constable Rikotso. Constable Rikotso confirmed that he arrested Godl Dube the previous night (11/01/2011). She went to the cells and interviewed Godl Dube who said he would get a lawyer because the police assaulted him.

5. DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE ACQUIRED FROM VARIOUS POLICE STATIONS

5.1.1. EXTRACTS FROM OCCURRENCE BOOKS & SAPS 14 REGISTERS

The investigation at Orlando Police Station uncovered the following:

Y6-HIK-SUP-271

Specific reference to OB 276 to 279: The entries made from 04h10 of 06/11/2010 to 12h00 of the 08/11/2010 confirms that Captain M L Maluleke of the DPCI with force number 0822729618 arrested Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maqhabane Sibanda and Shepard Chuma.

SAPS 14: The cell register dated 2010/11/05 to 2010/11/08 indicates that the following suspects were charged and detained, Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maqhabane Sibanda, Shepard Chuma. The reason for detention of the suspects as per register is stated as 'Illegal Immigrants'. The entry was made by Sergeant Thomas Pixane Setage who also later confirmed this in a sworn statement.

The investigation at Alexandra Police Station uncovered the following:

OB entry 22/11/10: The entry made on 22/11/2010 shows the booking of Prichard Chuma by Captain Nkozi. However Nkozi wrote the name and contact numbers of Captain Maluleke as the person who is the Investigating Officer of the case.

OB entry 23/11/2010: The entry dated 23/06/2010 shows the booking out of Prichard Chuma by Warrant Officer Selepe.

The investigation at Silverton Police Station uncovered the following:

OB entry 23/11/12: Warrant Officer Selepe booked in Prichard Chuma at Silverton Police station with Bulawayo case number.

OB entry 24/11/2012: Warrant officer Selepe booked out Chuma to Ball Bridge. However Captain Maluleke also signed, acknowledging the release of Prichard Chuma into his hands/custody.

The investigation at Pretoria Moot Police station uncovered the following:

OB entry 28/01/11: Warrant Officer Johannes Mpati Moetsah booked in Johnson Nyoni by the instruction of Captain Maluleke for Fraud.

OB entry 28/01/11: Captain Maluleke booked out Johnson Nyoni to Ball Bridge for Fraud.

SAPS 14: Captain Maluleke appended his signature on the entry and it shows that the release of Johnson Nyoni to Captain Maluleke was for extradition purpose.

The investigation at Witbank Police Station uncovered the following:

OB entry 12/01/12: Gordon Dube, Andrew Dube, Dumanl Stimusy were detained for possession of unlicensed firearm. The same firearm was found to belong to the murdered Zimbabwean Police Officer.

Body Receipts SAPS 216: They show that Gordon Dube, Andrew Dube and Dumanl Stimusy were received from court on 14/01/2011 together but on 28/01/2011 Gordon Dube was not amongst the other suspects. Pretoria Prison records show that Dube was release on the 28th January 2013 to Constable Mayer of Wierdabrug Police station.

Copies of dockets linking Gordon Dube: Wierdabrug CAS 531/12/2010, Wierdabrug CAS 22/02/2010, Wierdabrug CAS 147/11/2010, Wierdabrug CAS 1022/12/2010, Wierdabrug CAS 310/10/2010 and Diepsloot 83/01/2011. One of these cases is Murder, where a firearm of a murdered Zimbabwean Police officer was used. The investigating officer is having a challenge in explaining to Court Officials what happened to the suspect because he handed the suspect to Captain Maluleke who in turn handed the suspect to the Zimbabwean police. The majority of these cases could not be closed in the system because of nonprocedural case disposal.

5.2 DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE ACQUIRED FROM DPCI OFFICES.

Success report dated 04/02/2011: The report was addressed to General Dramat, General Hlatshwayo and General Toke with a heading that reads, "CONSOLIDATED SUCCESS REPORT: MOST WANTED FUGITIVE: WANTED FOR MURDER AND ROBBERY: DPCI TOMS REF: 3/12/2010: AND ZIMBABWE (BULAWAYO CR 348/09/2010): WITNESS DUMISANI NKOSI@NDEYA: ZIMBABWEAN NATIONALS AND OTHERS.

The report bears reference 14/02/01 and was signed by Col Leonie Verster. Paragraph "A1" of the report states that on 05/11/2010, General Dramat held a meeting with Zimbabwean police at DPCI offices about the Nationals who shot and killed one of their senior officers. Paragraph "3" states that Captain Maluleke was tasked to trace and arrest the said Nationals. The report also covers the arrest of Gordon Dube and appreciation of TRT members and members of Crime Intelligence.

Success report dated 11/11/2013: The report bears reference number 26/02/1 and again addressed to Deputy National Commissioner DPCI. The person to whom enquiries must be directed is Captain Maluleke whereas the signatory is Col P J Sekundu. Paragraph "4" of the report states that the Zimbabwean Police visited the office of the Divisional National Commissioner regarding Zimbabwean Nationals who were hiding in South Africa. The report further stated the arrest of Dumisani Witness Vundla @ Ndeya and Shepard Chuma.

Overtime and Itineraries of Captain Maluleke: On 08/11/2010 went to Beit Bridge (Limpopo) for investigation and claimed overtime. On 24/11/2010 he went to Beit Bridge and also claimed overtime. On 28/01/2011 he went to Beit Bridge and also claimed overtime. All this dates corresponds with cellphone records and OB entries indicating the dates in which the suspects were booked out from the stations.

5.3 EVIDENCE ACQUIRED FROM CAPTAIN MALULEKE'S SEIZED LAPTOP.

Success report ref: 26/2/1 and 14/02/01: They were generated in Captain Maluleke's laptop before being signed by Col L Verster and forwarded to General Dramat. The report recovered from the computer has a different reference number but same content. Report 14/02/01 has reference 0627239-8/5

Y6-HIK-SUP-273

Letter to Diepsloot Station Commander: The recovered letter states that the firearm which was found in Gordon Dube's possession and handed to Captain Makuleke after ballistic examination was taken to Zimbabwe permanently.

Emails by Captain Makuleke: He sent e-mails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. The emails were sent to the PA of General Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime Intelligence. He also sent email to Zimbabwean police trying to find out how they travelled back home and that he is still tracing the remaining suspects.

Photos: More than 70 photos were found, the majority of them relate to the operation involving Zimbabwean Nationals. Zimbabwean police appear on the photos and the white BMW with clear Zimbabwean registration number.

Letter to Home Affairs dated 08/11/2010: The letter was addressed to home affairs requesting assistance in the Deportation of the Zimbabwean nationals involved in the murder of Zimbabwean police. Even though the letter is dated 08/11/2010, it was generated in November 2011, shortly after the news about illegal deportation of Zimbabwean nationals hit the media.

Letter to stakeholders dated 20/08/2012: The letter was generated the same day indicating that in August 2010 General Sibiya and General Dramat went to Zimbabwe to discuss matters of cooperation on cross border crimes. General Sibiya was appointed as the coordinator on the cooperation issue between two countries. Other letters about the arrest of Zimbabwean national in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police refers to the cooperation agreed during the same meeting.

Documents regarding Bongani Moyo's case: This case is separate from the events that led to the arrest and deportation of the Zimbabwean Nationals into the hands of Zimbabwean authority. However it is a clear case of return of favor by Zimbabwean authorities to South Africa. In terms of the documents retrieved, Bongani Moyo escaped from Eokaburg prison on 2011/03/28, a month and half after South Africa deported illegally the Zimbabwean nationals who were wanted by Zimbabwean authorities. An amount of R50 000 rewards was also provided for any information that could lead to the arrest of Moyo. Captain Makuleke stated that his informer told him that Moyo was on his way to cross the border in South Africa after being shot by Zimbabwean police. According to the formal statement of Captain Makuleke, he arrested Moyo on the 13/05/2011 after he was found in the vehicle that crossed the border into South Africa. The other information retrieved provides contrary account of what happened. In a letter routed to General Dramat he stated that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011. Moyo was subsequently shot at transported to the border with the help of Zimbabwean police.

Statement of Bongani Moyo: he will state under oath that in May 2011 he was in Zimbabwe Bulawayo busy speaking over the cellphone when Zimbabwean police arrived at his house. After identifying him they assaulted him and handcuffed him. They put him in the back and drove to the bush where they ordered him to lie down. They then shot him on both knees. He was then taken to Central Hospital in Zimbabwe where he was treated before released to the hands of the Zimbabwean Police. After being release he was transported to Beit Bridge by seven Zimbabwean police. He will further state that they were travelling in a white fortuner and he was handed to the South African Police at Beit bridge.

5.4 DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE FROM HOME AFFAIRS

Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigners (BI-1726) – This document was produced by the SAPS as a proof that Shepard Chuma, Witness Ndeya and Nelson Ndlovu were detained for being illegal foreigners and they were seen by an Immigration Officer. However the signature that appears on the docket does not belong to any member of Home Affairs in Gauteng and the appointment number 037152 does not exist. It was also uncovered that the BI-1725 used was discontinued in 2008 according to Home Affairs and in 2010 it was no longer part of the official documents of Home Affairs. The stamp on both documents clearly shows that whosoever completed the document used the old form already completed and deleted affiliated information to put the information of the three foreign nationals. The handwriting expert in her findings has indicated that the signature in each document does not resemble the sampled signature provided by members of Home Affairs.

Notification of The Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DHA-1689) documents were produced by SAPS as proof that the Nelson Ndlovu, Shepard Chuma and Maghawe Sibanda were deported through Beit Bridge Border. However the form has been wrongly stamped and does not have finger prints of the deportees as required. The stamp number 20 belonging to Beit Bridge was used and such stamp is not for that purpose. The stamp is individualized and belongs to Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlahlo who on the day in which the stamp was used was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe, she is the only person in possession of the key to the safe.

Beit Bridge Duty Roster – This is a duty register used by Immigration Officers at Beit Bridge. The register confirms that Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlahlo was off duty on 7th and 8th of November 2010.

Beit Bridge Movement data: The data entails information pertaining to the entry and exit of people who were identified by Colonel Madlonga as members of Zimbabwean police who approached him with a request to see Lt General Dramat.

5.6 EVIDENCE IN TERMS OF SECTION 205 OF THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE ACT.

Cellphone record of Major General Sibya (0725953168): Upon perusal of the cellphone records it was discovered that Major General Sibya communicated with officers who were involved in the operation, e.g. Captain Makuleke and sent 30 SMS to Major General Dramat (0826516311). However Major General Dramat never responded to the SMS. These SMS were sent at various milestones of the operation as deduced from witnesses statements and documentary proofs.

Y6-HIK-SUP-275

Cellphone records of Captain "Cowboy" Maluleke (0827728518): The interaction between Major General Sibya and Captain Maluleke was also found in a form of received and outgoing calls. Captain Maluleke also communicated with General Dramat in terms of outgoing SMS at a very important milestone of the operation. However General Dramat never responded to the SMS which he received from Captain Maluleke at 23:12:15 on 05/11/2010. He also called Zimbabwean number twice between the 5th November 2010 and 8th November 2010. The number called on these two occasions is the same and was called at times preceding critical milestones of the operation. Captain Maluleke also called Colonel Madlonga on 08/11/2010 at 19:10:47, when he was approaching Musha. The information is also corroborated by Colonel Madlonga.

Cellphone records of Lt Colonel Neebling (0824): He was directly reporting to Major General Sibya. He contacted General Sibya telephonically and in his statement he stated that he believed he reported the operation to Major General Sibya.

Cell Phone records of Lt Col Madlonga: He is police officer who was posted at the border during the operation. He assisted Captain Maluleke to cross the border with the suspects. He contacted Lt General Dramat when he well come the Zimbabwean police the first time. His cellphone records his interaction with Captain Maluleke in line with his statement.

5.6 STATEMENTS OF SENIOR MEMBERS OF SAPS

Lt General Mkhwanazi: He will state that in late 2011 when he was an acting National Commissioner of South African Police Services, he heard on the news when Minister Hadebe was commenting about the alleged death of Zimbabwean Citizens as a result of being handed to the Zimbabwean Authorities by South African Police Services. He immediately contacted the Head of the DPCI Lt General Dramat and inquired about the issue. Lt General Dramat confirmed that members of his unit did transport the Zimbabwean Citizens but as illegal immigrants. He then summoned Lt General Dramat to his office. Lt General Dramat came with an officer who was introduced to him as "Cowboy". He was informed that Cowboy was in charge of the group that transported the Zimbabwean Citizens. Cowboy said that he was investigating a case of ATM bombing which led him to the Zimbabwean Citizens. After he realized they were not linked to the case he decided to transport them to Bell Bridge because they did not have valid documents. Cowboy further said that he got valid deportation documents from Home Affairs before he could transport them. He will further state that he could not understand why Cowboy did not hand over the immigrants to Home Affairs. When he asked whether it was necessary to transport illegal immigrants, Lt General Dramat could not offer any explanation.

Lt General Lebaya: He will state that when he commented on the success report regarding the Zimbabwean Nationals arrested, he only did it as a practice. He will further state that Major General Sibya has an automated messaging which include his number wherein automated success report or information are sent. He cannot remember what was the message all about which was sent on 05/11/2010

6. ANALYSIS OF EVIDENCE AND FINDINGS.

The following findings were made;

- The operation carried out by TOMS to arrest Zimbabwean foreign nationals in Diepsloot in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police Colonel was led by Captain M L Makufoko also known as Cowboy. According to the letter retrieved from Captain Makufoko's laptop, there was a meeting in August 2010 held between Zimbabwean Authorities, General Dramat and General Sibya wherein General Sibya was appointed as a coordinator regarding cooperation between two countries. The obligation to assist Zimbabwe in tracing wanted suspects emanate from the agreement of the same meeting as cited in success reports addressed to General Dramat and other senior officials.
- There is enough evidence that shows that General Dramat did not only know about the operation that led to rendition of Zimbabwean Nationals but sanctioned it through the following ways;
 - The Zimbabwean police came into the country for the purpose of arresting the wanted Zimbabwean Nationals and Lt General Dramat directed that they be allowed to proceed since they were coming to see him. The statement of Lt Colonel Madlonga clearly spell out that the police from Zimbabwe were received by him and he contacted General Dramat who confirmed that they were coming to him. Colonel Madlonga's version is corroborated by Brigadier Makushu and Colonel Radzilani. The cellphone records of general Dramat and Belt bridge Telekom records (Col Madlonga's extension) show that General Dramat received a call from 015534 6300 at 20h56 on 04/11/2010. This corroborates the version of Madlonga, Lt Col Radzilani and Brigadier Makushu about the call made in connection with the Zimbabwean police. According to Lt Col Madlonga he was informed that the purpose of the Zimbabwean police to enter into the country was to arrest wanted Zimbabwean Nationals wanted in connection with the murder of Senior Police Officer in Zimbabwe.
 - Evaluation of the above findings: In the entire cellphone records of General Dramat requested for the period 20/10/2010 to 28/02/2011, the number 0155346300 only appear once which rules out any form of communication before 04/11/2010 and after the said date.
 - He held a meeting on 05/11/2010 with Zimbabwean police planning the operation. Success report dated 04/02/2011 addressed to General Dramat, General Hlatshwayo and General Toka with a heading that reads, "CONSOLIDATED SUCCESS REPORT: MOST WANTED FUGITIVE: WANTED FOR MURDER AND ROBBERY: DPCI TOMS REF: 3/12/2010: AND ZIMBABWE (BULAWAYO CR 348/09/2010): WITNESS DUMISANI NKOSI@NDEYA: ZIMBABWEAN NATIONALS AND OTHERS. The report bears reference 14/02/01 and was signed by Col Leonie Verster. Paragraph "A1" of the report states that on 05/11/2010, General Dramat held a meeting with Zimbabwean police at DPCI offices about the Nationals who shot and killed one of their senior officers. He appointed Captain Maluleke to be a lead person during the operation.

Evaluation of the above findings: The success report signed by Leonie Verster was traced to Lt Col Maluleke's laptop as picked from the retrieved deleted data. The report was amended on 28/01/2011 and 31/01/2011 before it could be emailed to a female officer, Warrant Officer Thabiso Mafala on 09/02/2011 at 14h32. There is no material difference between the document retrieved from the laptop and that found at the Hawks offices during investigation. This proves that Leonie Verster did not generate success report but only signed the report drafted by Captain Maluleke. The date of the meeting between Zimbabwean Police and General Dramat which took place on 05/11/2010 coincide with the date of the 4th of November 2010 which according to cellphone records, General Dramat was called at 20h56 by Lt Col Madllonga seeking permission to allow Zimbabwean Police to enter into the country. Since the Zimbabwean Police were at Beit Bridge between 20h00 and 21h00, it is logical that they arrived in Gwelo late at night, leaving them with the opportunity to have the meeting with General Dramat in the morning of the 5th of November 2010.

- o He committed the government resources into the operation: Apart from other resources used, on 08/11/2010 Captain Maluleke went to Beit Bridge (Limpopo) for Transporting Zimbabwean Nationals and claimed overtime. On 24/11/2010 he went to Beit Bridge and also claimed overtime. On 28/01/2011 he went to Beit Bridge and also claimed overtime. All this dates corresponds with cellphone records and OB entries indicating the dates in which the suspects were booked out from the stations.

Evaluation of the above findings: Despite the fact that General Dramat as an Accounting Officer did not sign any claim of Captain Maluleke, delegating responsibility to Major General Sibya to assist the Zimbabwean Police in tracing wanted suspects invariably commit government resources into an unlawful operation that amount to a criminal offense.

- o He congratulated officers for arresting Johnson Nyoni and advised them to keep it a secret: According to Constable Mkasibe and Mgwanya, shortly after the photos were taken, they saw General Dramat of the Hawks walking towards them from house number 1. General Dramat addressed them and thanked them for arresting the suspect. He warned them not to tell anyone about the operation they had just done.

Evaluation of the above findings: Words of appreciation from General Dramat show both interest in the arrest of the Zimbabwean Nationals and his knowledge of the unlawfulness of the operation. If the operation was lawful he would not have warned them not to tell anyone about it.

Y6-HIK-SUP-278

- o He received communication regarding successes and photos of the operation through his Personal Assistance Phumla: According to the information retrieved from the seized laptop, Captain Maluleke sent e-mails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. The emails were sent to the PA of General Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime Intelligence.
 - o He was kept informed of the developments in the operations that led to the arrest of wanted Zimbabwean Nationals: The cellphone records of General Sibya shows 30 SMS sent to General Dramat at various milestones of the operation. He also received an SMS from Captain Maluleke shortly after the arrest of Zimbabwean Nationals. He never responded to any of the SMS which may suggest that they were only informing him of the progress.
 - o Report to parliament in response to the allegation: A copy of the letter sent by Zimbabwean authority to Col Ntonteni clearly mention the names of people whom General Dramat in his report to parliament stated that they were deported for being illegal immigrants. The letter clearly indicates that the suspects were wanted for murdering Superintendent Chetkobo of Bulawayo on 18th September 2010. It goes further to state that there was a joint operation between South African Police and Zimbabwean police to trace and arrest the suspects.
- There is evidence and witnesses corroborate each other that General Sibya was both at the scene and planning venue. The meeting held between IPID and General Dramat on 2010/03/07 confirmed that General Sibya was appointed to be the Head of TOMS which he created to trace wanted suspects. The telephone records of both Captain Maluleke and Major General Sibya show interaction between them at various milestones of the operation. Following suggest the involvement of General Sibya;
 - o Witness stated that he was seen during the operation that took place on 22/11/2010 which led to the arrest of Prichard Chuma
 - o In other operations cellphone record of Warrant Officer Makoe, Captain Maluleke and Col Neethling clearly show continuous contacts with General Sibya during and shortly after the operation. Col Neethling also stated that he should have reported progress to General Sibya during the operation. However the cell phone records of General Sibya does not place him at the scene and planning venues as claimed by witnesses. It is also clear that some of the witness claim to have heard that General Sibya was in the car rather than seeing him personally.
 - o The meeting held in Zimbabwe wherein General Sibya was appointed as a coordinator on cooperation matters involving the two countries suggests that the operation could not have been done without his knowledge more so because his Gauteng Team was involved in the operation. However this inference cannot provide prima facie case that he was involved.
 - There is insufficient evidence for the involvement of Former General Mzwandile Petros. However he addressed a letter dated 31/06/2011 to Provincial Head of Crime intelligence in Gauteng appreciating the good work that members of Crime

Secret

LS
SS

Intelligence have done when they arrested Zimbabwean Nationals involved in the murder of Senior Police Officer in Zimbabwe. The letter was as a result of a request made by Former General Toka of Crime Intelligence requesting General Mzwandile Petros to appreciate members of Crime Intelligence.

- The involvement of Captain Maluleke as a foot soldier in the operation has overwhelming evidence. The following evidence against Captain Maluleke were uncovered;

- The documents which the police claimed to be valid Home Affairs documents used in the deportation of the four Zimbabweans are forged and have employee number that does not exist in the Home Affairs Department. The Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigner (BI-1725) document was produced by the SAPS as a proof that Shepard Chuma, Witness Ndeya and Nelson Ndlovu were detained for being illegal foreigners and they were seen by an Immigration Officer. However the signature that appears on the documents does not belong to any member of Home Affairs in Gauteng and the appointment number 037152 does not exist.

It was also uncovered that the BI-1725 used was discontinued in 2008 according to Home Affairs and in 2010 it was no longer part of the official documents of Home Affairs. The stamp on three documents also clearly shows that whosoever completed the documents used an old form already completed and deleted affiliated information to put the new information of the three foreign nationals. The Notification of the Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DHA-1688) documents were produced by SAPS as proof that Nelson Ndlovu, Shepard Chuma and Maghawe Sibanda were deported through Beit Bridge border. However the forms were wrongly stamped and do not have fingerprints of the deportees as required.

The stamp number 20 belonging to Beit Bridge was used and such stamp is not for deportation purpose. The stamp is individualized and belongs to Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlahlo who on the day in which the stamp was purported to be used was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe and she is the only person in possession of the key. The stamp could have been easily duplicated.

There is a duty roster used by Immigration Officers at Beit Bridge, which confirms that Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlahlo was off duty on the 7th and 8th of November 2010.

- The cellphone record also show Captain Maluleke contacting Zimbabwean number in the morning of the 08th November 2010 shortly before booking the suspects to Beit Bridge.
- On 23/11/2010 on the request of Captain Maluleke, Warrant Officer Selepe booked out Prichard Chuma from Alexander Police station. He transported him to Beit Bridge border on 24/11/2010, to be handed to the Zimbabwean Police. Captain Maluleke provided escort, handed him over to Zimbabwean Authorities and Prichard Chuma was never seen again.
- The Zimbabwean Nationals were arrested and detained during DZP period which gave the Zimbabwean grace period of 90 days to apply for valid documents. During the DZP which is Dispensation for Zimbabwean Projects, all Zimbabweans were given 90 days to stay in the country in order to apply for legal documents and surrender illegally obtained South African ID's without consequence. The project according to Home Affairs started on 20 September 2010 and ended in 31 December 2010 with extension which ultimately ended in July 2011. The letter retrieved from Captain Maluleke's laptop addressed to home affairs requesting assistance in the Deportation of the Zimbabwean nationals involved in the murder of Zimbabwean police (dated 08/11/2010) was generated in November 2011, shortly after the news about illegal deportation of Zimbabwean nationals hit the media. This shows that the letter was not meant to acquire assistance or approval if generated after the fact. In addition he stated that the DZP as a challenge in the deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals and he wanted assistance from Home Affairs. This clearly shows that he was aware of the Dispensation for Zimbabwean Projects which gave Zimbabwean Nationals grace period.

- o Statements of Constable Rammuda and Meyer provide valuable evidence that Captain Maluleke took Gordon Dube to Zimbabwe even though he was facing serious charges (five cases including murder) in South Africa. Statements provided to Constable Meyer by Captain Maluleke states that Gordon Dube was handed to Zimbabwean police and was sentenced to life imprisonment. He also acknowledges in a letter retrieved from the laptop that he handed back the firearm permanently to Zimbabwean authority.
- o The OB entry dated 28/01/11 shows that Captain Maluleke hooked out Johnson Nyoni to Belt Bridge for fraud. However at Silverton, the investigation uncovered that a case of Fraud against John Nyoni and Mike Dube was opened on 28/01/2011, the same day when Johnson Nyoni and Gordon Dube were transported to Belt Bridge. The warning statement of Mike Dube, whom it was discovered that his real name is not Mike Dube, stated that his cousin was communicating with the police in a deal in which he was to collect jewelry. After the deportation of the suspect to Zimbabwe the case against John Nyoni and Mike Dube was withdrawn and never continued. This case was used as a decoy for investigators to follow the wrong leads. Both suspects were persuaded to be involved in the collection of jewelry because one of them has a name similar to the Zimbabwean National wanted for murder, Johnson Nyoni.
- o The e-mails retrieved from Captain Maluleke's laptop also show communication with Zimbabwean police where he asked them about the trip going back home and that he would continue to trace remaining suspects. He also exchanged photographs with them of the suspects and the team involved in the operation.

The following members' involvements were found limited to two incidents which took place on 05/11/2010 and 20-22/11/2010; Constable Radeba, Captain S E Nkosi and Warrant Officer Makoe. They were involved in the assault of Zimbabwean Nationals during arrest.

article by Sunday Times. The case was referred to the Independent Police Investigative Directorate by Civilian Secretariat for further investigation.

2. SUMMARY OF ALLEGATIONS

The following allegations were made:

- 2.1 It is alleged that between 04/11/2010 and 31/01/2011 Captain M L Maluleke, Warrant Officer Makoe and Constable Radebe, through the direction of General Sibiya and Lt General Dramat, conducted operations in Soweto and Diepsloot to trace Zimbabwean Nationals. The suspects were wanted in connection with the murder of a Zimbabwean police Colonel in Bulawayo. The members were accompanied by Zimbabwean Police. Five Zimbabweans were arrested in Diepsloot and detained at various stations as illegal immigrants and others for fictitious crimes. They were allegedly assaulted by SAPS members and Zimbabwean Police and transported to Beit Bridge where they were handed over to the Zimbabwean Authorities. Four of them were reported murdered in the hands of Zimbabwean Police.
- 2.2 According to the allegation, Major General Sibiya was also part of the operation.

3. CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY MANDATE

- 3.1 Section 206(6) of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa provide that, on receipt of a complaint lodged by a Provincial Executive, an independent Complaints body established by the national legislation must investigate any alleged misconduct or offences allegedly committed by members of SAPS.
- 3.2 Section 28 (a) (h) of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act 1 of 2011 provides that the Directorate must investigate any matter referred to as a result of a decision of the Executive Director, or if so requested by the Minister, an MEC or the Secretary as the case maybe, in the prescribed manner.

4. AVAILABLE EVIDENCE

4.1 STATEMENTS OBTAINED FROM INDEPENDENT WITNESSES

The following witnesses were interviewed and statements obtained.

Shepard Chuma A1: He will state that on Friday 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at 6954 John Malajile Street Diepsloot together with Nelson, Maqhawe and Witness standing when they were approached by two unknown Black males. One of them produced an appointment card and the other produced a firearm and ordered them to lie down. He will further state that one of the Police Officer then took out a paper and started reading names like Mthelisi Sibanda, Godi Dube, Prichard Chuma and John. He asked them whether they know such people but none of such names were known to them. The officer was wearing a cowboy hat and they heard other police officers calling him Cowboy. Few minutes later, Cowboy asked the other Police Officers about where to detain them. While they argued about the place to detain them, the other officer suggested that General Sibiya be consulted to provide direction in the matter. A short while later General Sibiya alighted from a Black BMW. He will state that they were assaulted and when they arrived at Orlando Police Station one of the Officers called "Leburu" took his R300 which was in a wallet in his back pocket. They were detained and on 2010/11/06 at 12h00 the officer called "Cowboy" came and took the finger prints of his co-accused but his fingerprints were not taken. He was informed that his finger prints will be taken at Musina.

On Monday 2010/11/08 at 12H00 Cowboy came to collect them. They were taken into a marked vehicle of Orlando SAPS driven by the officer in uniform. They followed Cowboy who was driving a white Nissan D/C. They were taken to a certain place called Bronkhorspruit where they were moved into a Toyota being handcuffed. They were then taken to Musina and they arrived at 17h00. They took one officer at Musina whom Cowboy said he will make matters easy for them to cross the border. He will further state that at the border, Cowboy went to Home Affairs office and few minutes later came back. They were transported in a Nissan D/C and crossed the border with Cowboy using a wrong lane but they were never stopped. When they were on the other side Zimbabwean police came and placed handcuffs on top of other handcuffs and Cowboy came and removed his handcuffs. They were taken to a Zimbabwean police car. He will state that they were interrogated by the Zimbabwean Police Officers about a Zimbabwean police Colonel who was killed. They were placed in separate cells and after 11 days he was released. When he enquired about his friend he was told that he was killed by the Zimbabwean police.

Machawe Sibanda A2: He will state that on 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at his residential place in Diepsloot when he was approached by two Black Males who identified themselves as Police Officers. They instructed them to lie down and they cooperated with them. Few minutes later there were many cars of Police Officers in civilian clothes and they started searching them. He will further state that they were assaulted and the police also took R500-00 which was in his pocket. There was another police officer wearing Cowboy hat reading names on the paper and asking them whether they knew the names of such people. He will state further that he saw General Sibiya coming out of a black BMW and gave instruction that they should be taken to Orlando SAPS.

Nelson Ndlovu A3: He will state that on 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at his younger brother's residential place in Diepsloot when he was approached by two Black Males who identified themselves as Police Officers. They ordered them to lie down and then started to assault them. He identified one of the Police Officer by the nickname Leburu. After their arrest the Police Officers argued about where they should detain them and one of them suggested Randburg. General Sibiya gave the instruction that they must be detained at Orlando SAPS. They were then taken to Orlando SAPS but Shepard Chuma and Witness went with the police to show them where John stays.

Bongani Henry Yende A4: He will state that he is a member of the South African Police Services attached to Crime Intelligence. During October 2010 he was nominated to be a member of Task Team called Tactical Operations Management Section (TOMS) which was led by General Sibiya. On 2010/11/05 he received a call from W/O Makoe of DPCI in Gauteng who was also part of TOMS informing him that General Sibiya wanted them to meet in order to look for four suspects who are wanted in connection with the murder of police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He then went to Fourways Shopping Center with Constable Desmond Campbell who was also part of TOMS to meet with W/O Makoe. On their arrival at the Shopping Center W/O Makoe also introduced two Zimbabwean police to them. He will further state that he was informed by W/O Makoe that the two officers came through the office of General Dramat. At that time General Sibiya was seated in a navy blue BMW and he could not go and greet him. They went to Diepsloot together with Captain Maluleke (also known as Cowboy), W/O Jawuke and Constable Leburu Radebe to identify the house of the suspects.

Captain Maluleke came back and informed them that he left the two officers observing the movements of the suspects at their residence. On their arrival at the suspect's place of residence, Captain Maluleke searched the suspects and confiscated their passports. There were four men who were lying on the ground and the two Zimbabwean police said that the four men are wanted in connection with murder of a Zimbabwean police Colonel in Bulawayo. The suspects were taken to Orlando and detained as illegal immigrants. On 23/11/2010 he was briefed by W/O Makoe that the two suspects who were arrested were subsequently killed in Zimbabwe. He will further state that the suspect Prichard Chuma was detained in Alexandra Police station. He will further state that Captain Maluleke was reporting directly to General Sibiya and whenever torture of the suspects was to be carried out, he condoned it.

Petros Jawuke A5: He will state that during October 2010 he was nominated to be part of a Task Team Called "TOMS" in Gauteng Province and that the team operated under the command of General Sibiya. On 2010/11/05 in the evening he received a call from W/O Makoe that their Commander Gen. Sibiya wanted all TOMS members to meet in Fourways because there was a Colonel who was murdered. He will state that he collected W/O Ndobe and rushed to Fourways where they met with other members.

He will state that W/O Makoe instructed him to join Captain Cowboy Maluleke and Constable Leburu Radebe to identify the suspects address. On their arrival at the identified house they found a car standing outside but there was no one inside the car. He will state that four men came to the vehicle and that they arrested them and detained them at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants but not the Zimbabwe murder case as indicated at the beginning of the tracing process.

He will further state that on 2010/11/23 the second operation was arranged and that he got a call from W/O Makoe that their Commander General Sibiya wanted them to meet at Diepsloot Shoprite. General Sibiya was present in the second operation. They went to Diepsloot where an African Male Pritchard Chuma was found and arrested for murder of the Colonel in Zimbabwe.

Desmond Campbell A6: He will state that on 2010/11/05 General Sibiya arranged with W/O Makoe to call them for operation at Diepsloot for tracing wanted suspects in a murder case where a Colonel was killed. He received a call from Constable Radebe that they have already arrested the suspects.

He will further state that the suspects were assaulted since he heard screams but did not take part in the assault of the suspects. The suspects were arrested in connection with a murder of the police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He will state that the four suspects

LS
SS

She will state that she was standing at the distance of about 20 meters when she witnessed the incident and that it was still in the morning around 10:00. She will state that she never saw what happened inside the shack. She will state that she learnt that the deceased was indeed murdered after a month from his younger brother. She will state that she may not be able to identify them if she can see them again.

Reasons Mhlawumbe Sibanda A20: He will state that on November 2010, on the date in which he cannot remember the date he visited his ex-girlfriend Brightness Nka Ncube who was staying with his distant sister Rachel Ncube. He slept over and in the middle of the night he was woken up by the police looking for John the boyfriend of Rachel. He was assaulted by a police whom he cannot identify, since it was in the dark. There was another Police Officer who was flashing a cellphone on their faces trying to identify them. He will further state that John was not there and they were freed when they indicated to the police that none of them was John.

Rachel Ncube A21: She will state that she is the wife of the deceased John Nyoni. It was on 26/11/2011 at 10h00 when she was in her shack with her husband Johnson Nyoni when police arrived and started assaulting him. The police entered the shack and said that they were looking for a firearm which they alleged that her husband used to kill a policeman in Zimbabwe. There were five (5) police vehicles, and her husband was taken away by the police and that was the last time she saw him. In February 2011 she received a call from Bikinis Nyoni, the brother of the deceased that Johnson Nyoni has died.

Brightness Nka Ncube A22: she will state that she is the sister-in-law of the late Johnson Nyoni. On the 5th or 6th of November while she was asleep she was woken up by the police who pretended to be Johnson Nyoni and later changed to indicate that they are in fact Police Officers. She will further state that she was assaulted by the police who were looking for Johnson Nyoni. The police freed them after they realized that Johnson was not amongst them. She learned later that Johnson Nyoni was murdered by the police in Zimbabwe.

Madala Bhelisisa Nyoni A23: He will state that he is the brother of late Johnson Nyoni and on 01 March 2011 he telephonically contacted his brother in law Orbed Ndlovu from Bulawayo in Zimbabwe who informed him that his brother Johnson Nyoni is late and was found at Central Mortuary in Bulawayo. He will further state that he then went to Bulawayo in Zimbabwe and at the mortuary he found the body of his brother. The body of Johnson Nyoni had a bullet wound on the collar (neck) just above the chest and it exited at the back. There was an information note attached to the body stating that Johnson Nyoni was involved in the crossfire at Gwanda in Zimbabwe. He will further state that he attended Johnson Nyoni's funeral which was held at Tsholotsho in Zimbabwe.

4.2 STATEMENTS OF MEMBERS AT ORLANDO POLICE STATION

The following statements were obtained from members of SAPS based at Orlando police station who are witnesses in the case.

Brigadier Mthokozelwa Zanzwa A25: He will state that he is a Station Commander of Orlando Police Station. He became aware of the allegation of deportation of Zimbabwean foreign Nationals in 2012. He will state that as part of his own investigation he perused the registers to check if there were indeed Zimbabwean nationals detained at Orlando Police Station. According to OB 279/11/2010 the said Foreign Nationals were arrested by Captain M L Maluleke. He also discovered that the Foreign Nationals were detained until 08/11/2010. The procedure is that when a person is arrested and is suspected to be illegal immigrant, Home Affairs official is called to verify the status of the person before he or she is taken to Lindela for deportation. He does not know why the procedure was not followed by the police in this case. He will further state that Captain Maluleke confirmed that he indeed took the said Foreign Nationals to Beit Bridge.

Thomas Pixane Setagane A26: He is a member of SAPS stationed at Orlando. On 06/11/2010 Captain Maluleke came to the holding cells with four foreign national namely Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghabane Sibanda and Shepard Chuma. The four Foreign Nationals were registered on the OB and cell register. He will state that it was for the first time for him to experience a situation where a member of DPCI arrest and detain a person for being an illegal immigrant.

Padile Abrina Papo A27: She will state that she is a Constable and that during the time of incident she was still a trainee. On 2010/11/08 at 05h45 she reported on duty and she was posted at the cells. On the same day she was tasked by W/O Marule to write the Occurrence Book. She made entries as directed and not as she observed because she was a Trainee.

4.3 STATEMENTS OF HOME AFFAIRS OFFICIALS

Nolwandle Qaba 29: She will state that she is a Director responsible for Deportation. She will further state that the incident that took place in 2010 occurred before she joined the department but upon being informed of the facts of the case by her juniors, she realized that members of the SAPS did not comply with the procedure when they deported the four Zimbabwean Foreign Nationals. She stated that a member of SAPS is not allowed to deport any person without the involvement of Home Affairs. The person suspected to be illegal foreigner must be verified by the Immigration Officer and the High Commissioner or the Embassy must confirm that such person is their citizen.

Peter Ndwandwe A28: He will state that he is an Assistant Director with the Department of Home affairs in Soweto. He started knowing about the incident involving four Zimbabwean Foreign Nationals in 2012 when he was contacted by Mr. M Matthews who is a Chief Director at their Head Office. He will further state that the four Zimbabwean nationals were not supposed to be deported because from 20/09/2010 to 31/12/2010 there was DZP which is Dispensation for Zimbabwean Project initiated by the Minister to allow all Zimbabweans without legal documents to stay in the country for 90 days in order to apply for legal documents. There is no Zimbabwean who was supposed to be deported on the basis of illegal documents during that period.

He will also further state that in 2012, few days after receiving a call from Mr. M Matthews a Police Officer by the name of Maluleke visited his office and showed him Home Affairs documents with signature and asked him whether he could identify any signature on the documents. He told Mr. Maluleke that the signature does not belong to any of his people. The documents were copies and Mr. Maluleke left in a hurry without showing him the documents in full.

He will further state that no police officer is allowed to deport any person and any person suspected to be an illegal foreigner must be screen by Immigration Officer.

Job Jackson A33: He will state that he is an Acting Deputy Direct responsible for the day to day running of Lindela Holding facility. In his statement he outlined the process involved in the deportation of a person from Lindela. He will further state that the incident took place before he was transferred to Lindela.

Potiswa Skosana A31: She will state that she is an Immigration Officer Station at Soweto. She will further state that the form Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigner (BI-1725) was discontinued in 2008 and that the Notification of Deportation Form must be accompanied by the fingerprints. She will further state that in all cases police call them to screen the illegal foreigners before such persons are taken to Lindela.

Johannes Lodewickus A30: He will state that he is a Deputy Director in the Department of Home Affairs at Sowelo. He confirmed that the number on the Detention Warrant and Notification of Deportation form provided by the police does not belong to any Home Affairs official in Sowelo.

Richard Peter Elberg A37: He state that he is an Immigration Officer based at Beit Bridge. He will further state that when SAPS bring an illegal foreigner at Port of Entry they must hand in a Body Receipt form and not the Detention Warrant. The Warrant of Detention is not a deportation document and must not be produced or stamped at Port of Entry.

He will dismiss the allegation that the stamp used on the documents claimed to be Home Affairs documents by the police is a deportation stamp.

Kobela Margret Mohlahlo A39: She will state that she is an Immigration Officer based at Beit Bridge and she had been a custodian of Stamp 20 since 2010. She had been in control of stamp 20 and when she is not in the office the stamp would be locked in the safe. She is the only person in possession of the key. She will state that on the 7th and 8th of November 2010 she was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe. She does not know how stamp 20 appears on the documents which the police claim to be deportation papers because on the day in which the documents were stamped she was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe.

4.4 STATEMENTS OF MEMBERS OF SAPS IN LIMPOPO

Ndanduleni Richard Madilonga A51: He will state that he is a Police Officer in the South African Police Service holding a rank of Lieutenant Colonel stationed at Thohoyandou SAPS as a Commander of Crime Prevention.

LS
SS

He will further state that the statement is additional to the statement he signed with a member of the Hawks from Pretoria. He wants to clarify certain issues pertaining to his previous statement.

Before he was transferred to Thohoyandou SAPS, he was working at Belt Bridge Police Station as a Commander. His duties included Crime Prevention, liaison with the Immigration Officials and other police officials from other stations.

In 2010, two weeks before the 8th November, there was a convoy of vehicles from Zimbabwe entering into South Africa. As he was suspicious, he approached them. The convoy was approaching the Immigration Offices. When he approached them, one of them introduced himself to him as the leader of the group and he told him that he is Superintendent Ncube from the Homicide Unit in Harare. He then requested him if they could not find a place to sit down and discuss.

Superintendent Ncube told him that he was going to Pretoria to meet General Dramat. He said to him that maybe he knew about the Chief Superintendent who had been murdered. He said that the suspects were in Gauteng and he had organized with General Dramat to assist them in tracing the suspects.

He will state that he told Superintendent Ncube that he has to verify with his seniors about the arrangements. He was given a number of General Dramat by Superintendent Ncube. He called Colonel Radzilani to verify the information but she requested that he should call Brigadier Makushu who was a Provincial Head Protection and Security Services. He then called him on his cell phone and explained to him that there are police from Zimbabwe who are intending to have a meeting with General Dramat. Brigadier Makushu told him that he was not aware of the visit but if the people are saying that they are going to meet the General, he should call General Dramat directly. He phoned General Dramat on his cell phone and he responded by saying that he is aware of the Zimbabwean police and he must let them come.

For the period of two weeks, he never heard anything from Superintendent Ncube and his group. After two weeks he received a call from Superintendent Ncube who told him that he was in town and he wanted to say goodbye. He went to town and met with them in front of Tops bottle store. They bought liquor and they left to the border. He did not escort them; they went to the border and crossed to Zimbabwe. They did not discuss anything about the operation they had in Gauteng with General Dramat.

The following day after the departure of Zimbabwean police, he received a call from Captain Makuleke who is also known as "Cowboy". It was on 08 November 2010 between 16 and 17:00, when he called and introduced himself as Cowboy and I asked as to who is Cowboy. He said that he is a Captain Maluleke and was with him at Paarl in Cape Town in 2005. When he said that he is Captain Maluleke, he remembered very well who he was. Captain Maluleke asked him where he was, and he said he had already crossed the checkpoint. He was told to stop and wait for him. After thirty minutes he arrived and was driving a Sedan which he thinks is a BMW. He was with a male person who was seated on the front passenger seat. He then entered into the vehicle after the passenger had moved to the back seat.

While he was on the front passenger seat heading to the border gate, he told him that the Zimbabwean police whom he assisted some weeks back were looking for suspects in connection with the death of police chief in Zimbabwe, and now they have found them. He told him that he was sent by his big bosses to assist in deporting them because the country does not have extradition agreement with Zimbabwe. He said that since the Zimbabwe police entered the country there had been busy trying to trace the suspect.

LS
SS

While they were driving he realized that there were other BMW cars which were following them and he knew that it was a convoy. Captain Maluleke told him that suspects are in the vehicle behind them. He said that there are two suspects and the third one is still not yet found. He will further state that he never stopped anywhere at the border and no documents were stamped for the purpose of deportation.

When they arrived at the Zimbabwean side the vehicle stopped and immediately all the vehicles were surrounded by Zimbabwean police. They then pulled the suspects from the back seat of the vehicle behind them. He knew that they were Police Officers because he had been working at the border for a long time and he knew them. He even saw the vehicles that crossed two weeks ago when Superintendent Ncube entered the country.

Thereafter one of the Zimbabwean police came and thanked them and said that they must not use the other gate but use the one they used when they entered.

Captain Maluleke told him that what happened is top secret and people must not know about it.

In 2012 of which he cannot remember the month and date, Captain Maluleke phoned and told him that there is a person from Head Office who will be coming for investigation and that he must cooperate with him.

Later a person came to Thohoyandou and he had a draft statement. He was told that there is a problem with the operation which was once done by the Hawks and they would like his statement to be in a particular format. He told him that the statement is for covering up and the parliament has some issues about the operation. He will further state that he read the statement and realize that it was to close the gaps and not a true reflection of what happened.

Brigadier Joseph Makushu A53: He will state that in 2010 he was the Head of Security and Protection Services responsible for eight Borders of which one of them is Beit Bridge. He will further state that Colonel Madilonga was one of his team members posted at Beit Bridge reporting under Colonel Radzilani. He remembers receiving a call from Colonel Madilonga in 2010 requesting permission to allow Zimbabwean Police who were going to see Major General Dramat. He then instructed him to call General Dramat directly because he did not want to be involved in the operation which he was not previously informed about. He will further state that it was the last time he spoke to Colonel Madilonga about the Zimbabwean Police.

Colonel Dvhani Sharon Radzilani A54: She will state that in 2010 she was the direct supervisor of Colonel Madilonga at the Beit Bridge Port of entry. She will further state that in 2010 Colonel Madilonga informed her about the Zimbabwean Police who were about to enter the country to see Major General Dramat. She cannot remember whether he informed her telephonically or he came to her office. She will further state that she told Colonel Madilonga to speak with Brigadier Makushu about the issue.

4.5 STATEMENTS OF TOMS MEMBERS IN GAUTENG AND PRETORIA

Lt Col Neethling A55: He stated that he is a member of South African Police Services stationed at the Directorate of Priority Crimes, Provincial Office in Gauteng. In November 2010 of which he cannot remember the exact date, he received a request from Captain Maluleke to assist in arresting a suspect in the Fourways area. He met with Captain Maluleke at Diepsloot who then led him to the spot where the suspect was. Captain Maluleke walked towards him and briefed him, informing him that he is investigating a case of murder of a Zimbabwean police officer.

LS

He did not ask any question because he knew Captain Maluleke to be working for "Cross Border Desk" at the Head Office of the Hawks. He also did not ask question because he knew that Captain Maluleke was representing the Head Office. He considers himself to be less knowledgeable in Cross Border crimes than Captain Maluleke. He discussed the tactical approach of the operation with his team since he considered the operation to be high risk. He positioned himself at the back of the vehicle convoy down a very narrow alley leading to an informal structure. There were three Police Officers whom later he discovered that they were Zimbabwean police. They were dressed in neat trousers, collar shirts and suits jackets.

After 15 minutes his members came out and informed him that they found the intended target and that Captain Maluleke had arrested him. They drove out of the settlement and stopped at the shopping center. Captain Maluleke informed him that they also have to arrest other suspects in Soweto. He was informed the next day that other two suspects were also arrested.

He also remember receiving a call from Captain Maluleke requesting escort of high risk suspects to Musina since he had to hand them over to Zimbabwean Authorities. He did provide a team to escort the suspects. He believes he must have reported such arrests to Major General Sibiya.

Captain Arnold Boonstra A60: He will state that in November 2010 (a date and time of which he cannot remember) he was requested by Lt Col Neethling to assist in tracing the suspects who were wanted by Captain Maluleke. He went to Diepsloot shopping Centre and waited for the members involved in the operation to come and fetch him. They came in a convoy and he followed. It was at night and he cannot remember the exact time. He approached Lt Col Maluleke, known as Cowboy to provide him with the case number or reference number. He gave him a reference number from the file he was holding. He also told him that the suspects were wanted in connection with murder of a Police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He also mentioned that the police Colonel was killed during the Shoprite robbery. He does not remember precisely whether he said Shoprite robbery took place in Zimbabwe or South Africa.

The operation moved to Soweto but he did not see people who were arrested. He did not witness any assault because he was not near the operation. He just heard Lt Col Maluleke saying that he will detain the suspects in Soweto.

Captain Ernest Nkosi A77: He will state that on 22/11/2013 after the operation which was carried out at Diepsloot he was requested by Lt Col Maluleke from DPCI Head office to take suspect Prichard Chuma to Alexandra Police station for detention but without the case number. He detained the suspect at Alexandra Police Station, free of any injuries. He will further state that he wrote the cell number of Lt Col Maluleke in the Occurrence Book.

Warrant Officer PJD Selepe A56: He will state that he is employed by DPCI in Gauteng on a rank of a Warrant Officer. In November 2010 of which he cannot remember the exact date he received a call from his Commander Lt Col Neethling requesting him to assist Captain Maluleke in escorting a suspect. He told him that Captain Maluleke will provide details of the trip.

LS

He then called Captain Maluleke who confirmed that he needed assistance to transport a suspect to Musina. He requested him to use his vehicle because it had a blue light. He was in possession of BMW 330 with registration number TJH588 GP. He cannot remember the details of the trip but he remembers arranging with Captain Maluleke to meet at Alexandra Police Station on 23/11/2010 as recorded in the Occurrence Book to book out the said suspect. Captain Maluleke arrived and was driving a Nissan Hard body Double Cab.

Captain Maluleke told the officer at the Service Centre the name of the suspect and the suspect by the name of Prichard Chuma was brought to him. Captain Maluleke handcuffed the suspect and took him to the BMW. He then drove the vehicle being escorted by Captain Maluleke. He did not know what the suspect was wanted for and that he was just carrying out the request of his commander. He was told by Captain Maluleke that the suspected should be taken to Silverton Police station. He drove the suspect to Silverton where he was booked in the cells. He does not remember whether he booked the suspect himself or Captain Maluleke did it. After booking the suspect Captain Maluleke told him that on 24/11/2010 he must assist in escorting the suspect to Musina.

On 24/11/2010 he went to Silverton DPCI's office as directed telephonically by Captain Maluleke. When he arrived the following day, he discovered that the suspect he transported the previous day was no longer in the cells in Silverton Police Station but with Captain Maluleke. He was then brought to his vehicle and after he sat down, Captain Maluleke placed iron legs on him. They then drove to Musina while Captain Maluleke was providing escort. Captain Maluleke was in the company of a female person not known to him.

On arrival at Musina Captain Maluleke signaled using the head lights that they have to proceed straight to the border. He then proceeded to the border and when they arrived, they found the entry gate having a long queue. He used the exit gate as entrance gate. The police stopped them before they proceeded any further but when he put the blue light of his vehicle on, they gave way. He stopped in front of the police station at Beit Bridge and Captain Maluleke came over to his car, released iron legs from the suspect and headed to the Community Service Centre. He then went back and slept over in Polokwane.

Warrant officer Gianni John Sambo A59: He will state that on 23/11/2010 he was officially on duty at Silverton Police station when Detective Warrant Officer Selepe brought a black male Prichard Chuma. The prisoner was booked in as a transit without body receipt. He will further state that W/O Selepe was with an unknown African male. On 24/11/2010 W/O Selepe came and book out the prisoner Prichard Chuma from Silverton Police station to Beit Bridge under Bulawayo Case number 1337/11/2010. The same prisoner was received by the African male who was with W/O Selepe the previous day and he signed the Occurrence Book as a Captain.

McIntosh Polela A76: He will state that in December 2010 to May 2013 he was employed by South African Police Services as a spokesperson for the DPCI. He was reporting directly to Lt General Dramat and Brigadier Mashigo. He will further state that he remember one time being introduced to the Zimbabwean Police who were having a meeting with General Dramat. He cannot remember when and how the meeting was conducted since he was not part of the meeting. In 2011 he received an inquiry from Mziikazi wa Africa who wanted to be clarified of renditions of Zimbabwean nationals. A meeting was held between him and Lt General Dramat, Col Basi and Captain Maluleke to discuss the issue. During the meeting Captain Maluleke denied to have handed any person to Zimbabwean Authorities without the involvement of Home Affairs. Lt General Dramat also denied having known any renditions of the Zimbabwean nationals. He will further state that he telephonically contacted Major General Sibiya to find out whether he knew about the renditions of Zimbabwean nationals and he denied having knowledge of such. He will further state that he does not remember an incident in which he moved from house number to house number three at the DPCI office and Lt General Dramat addressing the people about the arrest of the Zimbabwean nationals.

Masocha Rodgers Nthlamu A80: he will state that on 11/11/2011 he received an investigation from his commander Colonel Basi by giving him a copy of a newspaper article that reads 'HAWKS AND SA POLICE ARRESTING SUSPECTS AND SENDING THEM OVER THE BORDER TO BE MURDERED'. He will further state that he investigated the case by interviewing members of the Hawks Lt Col Maluleke who also gave him copies of warrants of detentions of the following individuals, Dumisai Witness Ndeya born 1987/05/10, Nelson Ndlovu born 1985/11/14, Maghawe Sibanda born 1988/07/13 and Shepard Chuma born 1988/07/15. He also approached Interpol and checked whether the above suspects were on the list of wanted suspects. He obtained the statement of Lt Col Neethling, Major General Sibiya, and Mr WCR Voster. He will further state that during the investigation he was unable to find the person who leaked the documents to the media.

Avhashoni Desmond Takalani A62: He is employed by the South African Police Services in Gauteng stationed at Johannesburg Central Police station under the TRT unit. On 2011/01/12 at 11h00 in the morning he was on duty in a full uniform posted at Diepsloot for Crime Prevention purpose. While busy with his duties with other members of TRT unit from Johannesburg Central, they received a request from members of the Hawks (DPCI) TOMS who were at Diepsloot SAPS to provide backup in the arrest of wanted suspect. When they arrived at Diepsloot SAPS, he decided to remain outside while others were briefed inside the station. From the station the vehicles proceeded to the Squatter Camp. Along the way his co-workers informed him that there was a suspect who was being traced at the Squatter Camp.

When they arrived at the place where the suspect was, he remained inside the vehicle because it was raining and he did not have a rain coat. He saw the suspect when they brought him to the vehicle. After members of the Hawks and Crime Intelligence who were unknown to him arrested the suspect, they were requested to escort the suspect to Silverton DPCI offices. They escorted the suspect and at Silverton DPCI offices he saw Captain Maluleke who was wearing a Cowboy hat with two unknown African males who were travelling in a white BMW with Zimbabwean registration numbers.

Captain Maluleke further said that they were Zimbabwean police who came to take the suspect, referring to the suspect whom they had just arrested at Diepsloot.

While they were with the suspect, he told them that some weeks back he was in Zimbabwe attending a funeral of some of the people he committed crime with and also knew they were after him. He was telling them when Captain Maluleke and Zimbabwean police were inside the offices.

They were requested to take the suspect to Pretoria Moot SAPS for detention. Before they went to Pretoria Moot SAPS, photos of all members involved in the operation were taken. When they arrived at Pretoria Moot Polices station, Captain Maluleke detained the suspect and they then knocked off.

Johannes Mpati Moatshi A61: He will state that in January 2011 he was on duty posted at Diepsloot as a result of xenophobic violence prevalent at the time. At 13h00 on that particular day, he received a call via two ways radio from his commander to go Diepsloot police station. When he arrived with his colleagues he found the commander of Diepsloot Police station who introduced them to Captain Maluleke who was with two males persons and a female. The two male persons and a female were introduced as members of Crime Intelligence. Captain Maluleke informed them that there is a person who has committed serious cases in Zimbabwe and he is very dangerous. Captain Maluleke further said that the suspect was with the informer and had to be arrested. He will further state that they went into Diepsloot where the suspect and the informer were pointed out. After the arrest of the suspect they went to a certain shack where members of Crime Intelligence conducted a search but nothing was found. They were told by Captain Maluleke to transport the suspect to DPCI offices in Silverton. At Silverton Captain Maluleke requested them to book the suspect at Moot Police with the instruction that no visitor is allowed for the suspect. He cannot remember the name of the suspect but he remembers taking photos with the officers from Zimbabwe.

Sello John Phaswana A64: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani in all material aspects.

Tshatoa Jacob Seletela A63: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani and that of Sello John Phaswana in all material aspects.

Matsobane Silas Mokoatlo A78: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani and that of Sello John Phaswana as well that of Tshatoa Jacob Seletela.

Andries Nxumalo A65: will state that around 11 or 26 January 2011 he was working in Diepsloot as a result of xenophobic violence at that time. He heard over the radio that they were wanted at Diepsloot Police station. When he arrived at the station he found Captain Maluleke, two male officers and one female who were introduced to him as members of Crime Intelligence. He will further state that Captain Maluleke requested them to assist in the arrest of Zimbabwean National who committed serious crimes in Zimbabwe. Together with his colleagues they went to a section in Diepsloot where the suspect was said to reside. The suspect was arrested and taken to DPCI offices in Silverton; he participated in a photo shoot with members of Zimbabwean Police. After the photo shoot, they took the suspect to Moot Police station for detention.

Constable Hosea Tshabalala A83: He will state that on 26/11/2011 he was officially on duty posted at Diepsloot. While still on duty was requested together with his colleagues to assist them in tracing a suspect who was involved in the murder of Zimbabwean Colonel in Zimbabwe. Constable Rikhotso and his female co-worker briefed them that the suspect was with the informer. When they arrived at the exact place, they found the suspect standing in front of the tuck-shop. They arrested him and took him to his room where they found a woman with a small baby. Constable Rikhotso and his female colleague search the room. The suspect was taken to Silverton at the DPCI offices where they found two Zimbabwean police officers. He will further state that the suspect informed him that some few weeks while he was in Zimbabwe he attended the funeral of his colleague who was killed by the Zimbabwean police and the same Zimbabwean police will kill him when he arrive in Zimbabwe. He was requested to detain the suspect at Moot police but he cannot remember the person who made the request.

Masingita Rikhotso A67: He will state that in January 2011 of which he cannot remember the exact date he went to Wierdabrug police station at the CIAC office which is responsible for profiling and identification of crime hot spots. When he arrived he found Constable Sombhane who was working at the CIAC office. Constable Sombhane gave him a list of wanted suspects and on top of the list was Gordon Dube who was wanted in connection with murder in Zimbabwe and robberies in South Africa. He came back to his office and organizes with his contact to look for Gordon Dube. it took two week to find a wanted suspect. He will further state that his contact informed him that he found Gordon Dube and together with his colleagues they went to Thembisa in order to apprehend the suspect. He was informed that the suspect will be coming since he wanted to buy bullets from someone. He will further state that while they were in Thembisa they managed to see the suspect and when he moved they pursued until they arrested him in Diepsloot. They found the suspect in possession of an unlicensed firearm. He saw the same firearm with Captain Maluleke at the Hawks offices after it was returned from ballistic testing. The suspect was taken to Wierdabrug to detention. Again in January 2011 he received information from Captain Maluleke who requested him to look for John Nyoni. He then tasked his informer again to assist in the arrest of Nyoni. On 26/11/2011 he went to Diepsloot having organized with his Contact to arrest John Nyoni. When he arrived the Contact pointed out the suspect and he was arrested. After they arrested John Nyoni, his house was searched but nothing was found. They took the suspect to Silverton DPCI offices. They were assisted by members of TRT. He will further state that he participated in the photo shoot with the Zimbabwean police. He also heard Captain Maluleke requesting members of the TRT to take the suspect to Moot Police station.

Plantinah Mokgobu A69: She will state that she is employed by the South African Police Services stationed at Crime Intelligence in Pretoria with a rank of Constable. On 12/01/2011 while in the office they received information from their Contact/informer and he tipped them off about a crime that was going to take place at Diepsloot. They then proceeded there with a backup of members from Ivory Park Police Station where they effected the arrest of Gordon Dube at Diepsloot.

In January 2011 they received information from CIAC at Wierdeburg regarding the wanted suspect John Nyoni. The person they liaised with at CIAC was Constable Sombhane who also gave them the number of Captain Maluleke. She also spoke to Maluleke over the phone while they were there. They then drove to the Hawks offices to meet with Captain Maluleke who told them that the suspect has murdered a police officer in Zimbabwe.

They then tasked their Contact/Informant to look for the suspect, who did and the suspect was arrested. After the arrest of John Nyoni, they all proceeded to the Hawks offices where they gathered together for a photo shoot. Captain Maluleke exchanged the taking of photos with the Zimbabwean police. The photo of the suspect was also taken and the exhibit which is a firearm was also photographed. After the photo shoot she went to the shop, but when she came back she was told that General Dramat was with Colonel McIntosh and he had just addressed the people in her absence. She felt that she missed out on the speech of General Dramat but her colleagues told her that he was just congratulating them for a job well done.

Superintendent Ncube from Zimbabwe who was wearing black shirt and spectacles told us that he will be sending us letters of congratulation from Zimbabwe. She still recalls that later they were called by Brigadier Britz from Crime Intelligence Provincial office, and he showed them an appreciation letter from Zimbabwean government. He told them that they would be called by Provincial Commissioner Mzwandile Petros to meet with them as a result of their good work. She does not know what happened to John Nyoni thereafter.

Emmanuel Dinizulu Mkasibe A68: His statement corroborates that of Platinah Mkgobu in all material aspects. He will state further that shortly after the photos were taken, he saw General Dramat of the Hawks. General Dramat was with the spokesperson of the Hawks known to him as Colonel McIntosh Polelo. They then gathered together and Captain Maluleke introduced General Dramat and the spokesperson. General Dramat addressed and thanked them for arresting the suspect. General Dramat warned them not tell anyone about the operation we had just done.

After he said that he left and Captain Maluleke told us that he was organizing a celebration braai. While they were busy enjoying themselves, a lady working at the Hawks offices with Captain Maluleke came and joined them. She wanted the meat to take home because there was too much meat. She was requested to download the photos from the camera by Captain Maluleke.

He will state further that he then decided to follow her to the office. When she downloaded the photos he requested her to print the photos for him. She agreed and printed many photos which he took home and still have them even now.

Constable Polelo Fortune Mzwanya A75: He will state under oath that on the 26/01/2011 he was called by his colleagues after the arrest of Johnson Nyoni to join them at DPCI offices in Silverton for a braai. He will further state that when he arrived he found Zimbabwean police and some of his colleagues participating in a photo shoot. Shortly after the photo shoot Lt General Dramat came and thanked them for the job well done. He will further state that Lt General Dramat was wearing a white shirt and a red tie.

Statement of Brigadier A G Britz of Crime Intelligence A79: He will state that During January and February 2011, Constable Rikhotso and his female colleague visited his office and informed him that they arrested two Zimbabweans who were involved in a spate of arm robberies and recovered a firearm. He congratulated them without enquiring the details of the case. In March 2011 he received a letter which was addressed to Col Ntteni from CID Provincial Headquarters in Zimbabwe Bulawayo-Zimbabwe. A copy of the letter is attached to his statement. He then arranged with Col Ntteni to send the officers to the next Crime Intelligence Provincial Management meeting in order for them to be congratulated. After the management meeting he also wrote a letter to Lt General Toka's signature to the Provincial Commissioner in order for him to congratulate the members. On 15/07/2011 he received four letters from the Provincial Commissioner thanking members for good work. He will further state that he had no prior knowledge that the suspects arrested were wanted in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police.

STATEMENTS OF DIEPSLOOT SAPS MEMBERS REGARDING GORDON DUBE

Avhasei Witness Rambuda A72: He will state that in January 2011 he was working Diepsloot as a Detective. There were three suspects who were arrested after they were involved in the shooting incident with the police. They recovered a firearm which was booked into SAPS 13 and received exhibit number SAPS 13/31/2011. He was involved in the charging of the suspects and they were attending court at Atteridgeville. After some few days he received a call from Captain Maluleke of the Hawks asking him to go to Ballistic Pretoria and collect the firearm as he had already made arrangement with them. He collected the firearm and handed it Captain Maluleke. Captain Maluleke told him that he has a case he is investigation against one of the suspects. He informed him that the firearm belongs to Zimbabwe. He typed a letter a letter on his computer acknowledging the firearm but he does not remember where he put the letter.

He will further state that Captain Maluleke told him that he had made an arrangement with the prosecutor at Atteridgeville to withdraw the case so that he could be able to transport the suspect and the firearm to Zimbabwe.

Warrant Officer Isaac Dlamini A70: He will state that in January 2011 docket Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 was assigned to him for further investigation. The docket had three suspect arrested for possession of unlicensed firearm and ammunition. The names of the suspects were Menzi Dube, God Dube and Sidingumunzi Dumani. He received a call from "Cowboy" Maluleke of the Hawks to hand the Case dockets Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 to his office in Silverton. He said the docket had to be investigated together with other dockets wherein God Dube is a suspect. He further said that the firearm which is an exhibit in his docket was used to kill a senior officer in Zimbabwe. Captain Maluleke took the docket and gave them acknowledgement of receipt.

He will further state that Captain Cowboy in the presence of Constable Rambuda told him that he will facilitate the release of the suspect from prison and he will talk to the Prosecutor to withdraw the case. After sometimes seeing that the docket was under his name, he opened a duplicate and sent it to the prosecutor. The prosecutor decided to decline to prosecute and the duplicate docket was filed.

Lean Meyer A73: He will state that he was investigating several cases wherein Godi Dube was a suspect. The cases were as follows, Wierdabrug Cas 531/12/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 220/02/2010; Wierdabrug Cas 147/11/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 1022/12/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 310/10/2010 and Diepsloot 93/01/2011. He was informed by Captain Maluleke from the Hawks that suspect Alfred Godi Dube was also wanted in Zimbabwe. According to Maluleke he was also wanted for murder as per Bulawayo CR 438/09/2010. He will further state that he booked out suspect Godi Dube and handed him to Captain Maluleke. Captain Maluleke informed him that suspect Gordon Dube will be handed over to the Zimbabwean government through Immigration channels.

Sindy Daisy Dorcus Sombhane A74: She will state that during 2010 and 2011 she was based at Wierdabrug attached to Crime Intelligence unit. During 2010 she gave Constable Rikhotso a list of wanted suspects in Wierdabrug. She also met Captain Maluleke at Wierdabrug who told her that he is looking for a suspect known as Godi Dube. She contacted Constable Rikhotso and informed him that Captain Maluleke was at Wierdabrug inquiring about Godi Dube. She gave him the contact numbers of Captain Maluleke.

She will further state that on the 11/01/2011 she saw the name of Godi Dube on the cell Register and decided to call Constable Rikhotso. Constable Rikhotso confirmed that he arrested Godi Dube the previous night (11/01/2011). She went to the cells and interviewed Godi Dube who said he would get a lawyer because the police assaulted him.

5.2 DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE ACQUIRED FROM DPCI OFFICES:

Success report dated 04/02/2011 (A82/3): The report was addressed to General Dramat, General Hlatshwayo and General Toka with a heading that reads, "CONSOLIDATED SUCCESS REPORT: MOST WANTED FUGITIVE: WANTED FOR MURDER AND ROBBERY: DPCI TOMS REF: 3/12/2010: AND ZIMBABWE (BULAWAYO CR 348/09/2010): WITNESS DUMISANI NKOSI@NDEYA: ZIMBABWEAN NATIONALS AND OTHERS.

The report bears reference 14/02/01 and was signed by Col Leonie Verster. Paragraph "A1" of the report states that on 05/11/2010, General Dramat held a meeting with Zimbabwean police at DPCI offices about the Nationals who shot and killed one of their senior officers. Paragraph "3" states that Captain Maluleke was tasked to trace and arrest the said Nationals. The report also covers the arrest of Gordon Dube and appreciation of TRT members and members of Crime Intelligence.

Success report dated 11/11/2013 (A82/1-82/2): The report bears reference number 26/02/1 and again addressed to Deputy National Commissioner DPCI. The person to whom enquiries must be directed is Captain Maluleke whereas the signatory is Col P J Selundu. Paragraph "1" of the report states that the Zimbabwean Police visited the office of the Divisional National Commissioner regarding Zimbabwean Nationals who were hiding in South Africa. ~~The report further stated the arrest of Dumisani Witness Vundia @ Ndeya and Shepard Chuma.~~

Overtime and Itineraries of Captain Maluleke (B18): On 08/11/2010 went to Beit Bridge (Limpopo) for investigation and claimed overtime. On 24/11/2010 he went to Beit Bridge and also claimed overtime. On 28/01/2011 he went to Beit Bridge and also claimed overtime. All this dates corresponds with cellphone records and OB entries indicating the dates in which the suspects were booked out from the stations.

5.3 EVIDENCE ACQUIRED FROM CAPTAIN MALULEKE'S SEIZED LAPTOP (A89).

Success report ref: 26/2/1 and 14/02/01: They were generated in Captain Maluleke's laptop before being signed by Col L Verster and forwarded to General Dramat. The report recovered from the computer has a different reference number but same content. Report 14/02/01 has reference 0627239-8/5.

Letter to Diepsloot Station Commander: The recovered letter states that the firearm which was found in Gordon Dube's possession and handed to Captain Maluleke after ballistic examination was taken to Zimbabwe permanently.

Emails by Captain Maluleke: He sent e-mails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. The emails were sent to the PA of General Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime Intelligence. He also sent email to Zimbabwean police trying to find out how they travelled back home and that he is still tracing the remaining suspects..

Photos: More than 70 photos were found, the majority of them relate to the operation involving Zimbabwean Nationals. Zimbabwean police appear on the photos and the white BMW with clear Zimbabwean registration number.

Letter to Home Affairs dated 08/11/2010: The letter was addressed to home affairs requesting assistance in the Deportation of the Zimbabwean nationals involved in the murder of Zimbabwean police. Even though the letter is dated 08/11/2010, it was generated in November 2011, shortly after the news about illegal deportation of Zimbabwean nationals hit the media.

Letter to stakeholders dated 20/08/2012: The letter was generated the same day indicating that in August 2010 General Sibiya and General Dramat went to Zimbabwe to discuss matters of cooperation on cross border crimes. General Sibiya was appointed as the coordinator on the cooperation issue between two countries. Other letters about the arrest of Zimbabwean national in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police refers to the cooperation agreed during the same meeting.

Documents regarding Bongani Moyo's case: This case is separate from the events that led to the arrest and deportation of the Zimbabwean Nationals into the hands of Zimbabwean authority. However it is a clear case of return of favor by Zimbabwean authorities to South Africa. In terms of the documents retrieved, Bongani Moyo escaped from Boksburg prison on 2011/03/28, a month and half after South Africa deported illegally the Zimbabwean nationals who were wanted by Zimbabwean authorities. An amount of R50 000 rewards was also provided for any information that could lead to the arrest of Moyo. Captain Maluleke stated that his Informer told him that Moyo was on his way to cross the border in South Africa after being shot by Zimbabwean police. According to the formal statement of Captain Maluleke, he arrested Moyo on the 13/05/2011 after he was found in the vehicle that crossed the border into South Africa. The other information retrieved provides contrary account of what happened. In a letter routed to General Dramat he stated that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011. Moyo was subsequently shot at transported to the border with the help of Zimbabwean police.

Statement of Bongani Moyo: he will state under oath that in May 2011 he was in Zimbabwe Bulawayo busy speaking over the cellphone when Zimbabwean police arrived at his house. After identifying him they assaulted him and handcuffed him. They put him in the bakkie and drove to the bush, where they ordered him to lie down. They then shot him on both knees. He was then taken to Central Hospital in Zimbabwe where he was treated before released to the hands of the Zimbabwean Police. After being release he was transported to Beit Bridge by seven Zimbabwean police. He will further state that they were travelling in a white Toyota Fortuner and he was handed to the South African Police at Beit Bridge.

5.4 DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE FROM HOME AFFAIRS

Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigners (BI-1725) – This document was produced by the SAPS as a proof that Shepard Chuma, Witness Ndeya and Nelson Ndlovu were detained for being illegal foreigners and they were seen by an Immigration Officer. However the signature that appears on the docket does not belong to any member of Home Affairs in Gauteng and the appointment number 037152 does not exist.

It was also uncovered that the BI-1725 used was discontinued in 2008 according to Home Affairs and in 2010 it was no longer part of the official documents of Home Affairs. The stamp on both documents clearly shows that whosoever completed the document used the old form already completed and deleted affiliated information to put the information of the three foreign nationals. The handwriting expert in her findings has indicated that the signature in each document does not resemble the sampled signature provided by members of Home Affairs.

Notification of The Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DHA-1689) documents were produced by SAPS as proof that the Nelson Ndlovu, Shepard Chuma and Maghawe Sibanda were deported through Beit Bridge Border. However the form has been wrongly stamped and does not have finger prints of the deportee as required.

The stamp number 20 belonging to Beit Bridge was used and such stamp is not for that purpose. The stamp is individualized and belongs to Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlahlo who on the day in which the stamp was used was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe, she is the only person in possession of the key to the safe.

Beit Bridge Duty Roster – This is a duty register used by Immigration Officers at Beit Bridge. The register confirms that Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlahlo was off duty on 7th and 8th of November 2010.

Beit Bridge Movement data: The data entails information pertaining to the entry and exit of people who were identified by Colonel Madilonga as members of Zimbabwean police who approached him with a request to see Lt General Dramat.

Expert report on the Home Affairs Documents A81/1 and A81/2: The documents which were handed by Col Besi which are Notification of the deportation of the Illegal Foreigner and Warrant of Detention were sent to the forensic laboratory for analysis.

5.5 EVIDENCE IN TERMS OF SECTION 205 OF THE CRIMINALPROCEDURE ACT.

Cellphone record of Major General Sibiya (0725953168): Upon perusal of the cellphone records it was discovered that Major General Sibiya communicated with officers who were involved in the operation, e.g. Captain Maluleke and sent more than 20 SMS to Major General Dramat (0825515311). However Major General Dramat never responded to the SMS. The same automated SMS were sent to Lt General Lebeya at 0825751899. These SMS were sent at various milestone of the operation as deduced from witnesses' statements and documentary proofs.

Cellphone records of Captain "Cowboy" Maluleke (0827729518): The interaction between Major General Sibiya and Captain Maluleke was also found in a form of received and outgoing calls. Captain Maluleke also communicated with General Dramat in terms of outgoing SMS at a very important milestone of the operation. However General Dramat never responded to the SMS which he received from Captain Maluleke at 23:12:15 on 05/11/2010. He also called Zimbabwean number twice between the 5th November 2010 and 8th November 2010. The number called on these two occasions is the same and was called at times preceding critical milestones of the operation. Captain Maluleke also called Colonel Madilonga on 08/11/2010 at 19:10:47, when he was approaching Musina. The information is also corroborated by Colonel Madilonga.

Cell phone records of Lt Colonel Neethling (0827787624): He was directly reporting to Major General Sibiya. He contacted General Sibiya telephonically and in his statement he stated that he believed he reported the operation to Major General Sibiya.

Cell Phone records of Lt Col Madilonga: He is police officer who was posted at the border during the operation. He assisted Captain Maluleke to cross the border with the suspects. He contacted Lt General Dramat when he well come the Zimbabwean police the first time. His cellphone records his interaction with Captain Maluleke in line with his statement.

5.6 STATEMENTS OF SENIOR MEMBERS OF SAPS

Lt General Mkhwanazi: He will state that in late 2011 when he was an acting National Commissioner of South African Police Services, he heard on the news when Minister Hadebe was commenting about the alleged death of Zimbabwean Citizens as a result of being handed to the Zimbabwean Authorities by South African Police Services. He immediately contacted the Head of the DPCI Lt General Dramat and inquired about the issue. Lt General Dramat confirmed that members of his unit did transport the Zimbabwean Citizens but as illegal immigrants. He then summoned Lt General Dramat to his office. Lt General Dramat came with an officer who was introduced to him as "Cowboy". He was informed that Cowboy was in charge of the group that transported the Zimbabwean Citizens. Cowboy said that he was investigating a case of ATM bombing which led him to the Zimbabwean Citizens. After he realized they were not linked to the case he decided to transport them to Beit Bridge because they did not have valid documents. Cowboy further said that he got valid deportation documents from Home Affairs before he could transport them. He will further state that he could not understand why Cowboy did not hand over the immigrants to Home Affairs. When he asked whether it was necessary to transport illegal immigrants, Lt General Dramat could not offer any explanation.

Lt General Lebeja: He will state that when he commented on the success report regarding the Zimbabwean Nationals arrested, he only did it as a practice. He will further state that Major General Sibiya has an automated messaging which includes his number wherein automated success report or information is sent. He cannot remember what all the messages were about, which he received on 05/11/2010.

Innocent Humbulani Khuba A100: He will state that he is a member of Independent Police Investigative Directorate base in Limpopo. On 23 October 2012 he received a case docket from Mr. Sesoko and appointment letter to conduct investigation in all cases of alleged assault against Major General Sibiya. The docket received is Diepsloot Cas 390/07/2012. He also received a copy of the letter which was sent to Mr Sesoko by Major General Sibiya complaining about the conduct of North West Task Team which was tasked to investigate cases against him including Diepsloot Cas 390/07/2012. He was informed by Mr Sesoko who was the National head of IPID of investigation that the reason he was appointed to be the new Task Team Leader was that Major General Sibiya complained against the North West Task Team. He was advised to assemble a team that would assist me in the investigation of these cases. The team assembled comprised of the following individuals, Mr Kenneth Ratshitali, Mr. L Maphetho, Mr N Mulaudzi and Mr T Mashaphu who are all investigators from Limpopo Provincial office. They worked under his guidance and took instructions directly from him as the team leader.

Upon his perusal of Diepsloot Cas 390/07/2012 and other accompanying documents, he discovered that the Independent Police Investigative Directorate received a complaint of alleged renditions involving members of the DPCI headed by Lt General Dramat from Civilian Secretariat. The case was reported as result of parliamentary question by Cope Member of Parliament and an article by Sunday Times. The docket had following statements obtained by members of South African Police Services, the statement of Shepard Chuma, Maqhawe Sibanda, Nelson Ndlovu, Bongani Henry Yende, Petros Jawuke, Desmond Campbell, Alfred Ndobe, Andrew Mark Sampson, Reason Mhlawumbe Sibanda, Rachael Ncube, Brightness Nka Ncube, Madala Bhekisisa Nyoni and Sibongile Mpofu. There were also copies of Occurrence Book and cell Registers from Orlando police station regarding the detention and booking out of the following individuals, Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maqhawe Sibanda and Shepard Chuma.

He took over the case for further investigation in terms of Section 206(6) of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa which provides that, on receipt of a complaint lodged by a Provincial Executive, an Independent Complaints body established by the national legislation must investigate any alleged misconduct or offences allegedly committed by members of SAPS. It was also in terms of Section 28 (1) (f) and (h) of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act 1 of 2011 that the decision to investigate the case was made.

On 13 November 2012, a letter requesting an interview with Home Affairs officials and documents regarding the movement of people at Musina Belt Bridge port of entry was e-mailed to Mr. Ndlovu of the Deportation section at Home Affairs Head Office in Pretoria. On 08/02/2013 the permission was granted after he had a meeting with Mr. M Mathews, the Chief Director responsible for deportation and mending of Port of Entries. Prior to the interview with Home Affairs officials, he visited Orlando Police station on 10/01/2013 and interviewed Brigadier Zangwa and other members stationed at Orlando. He received copies of the Occurrence Book and cell registers include a color copy of the Sunday Newspaper regarding the incident. On 28/01/2013 he was called by the former Executive Director who gave him the following documents stating that she received them from the Secretary of Police, report on Ille al Renditions dated 25/06/2012 accompanied by Warrants of Detention (BI-1725) for the following individuals, Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Shepard Chuma, Nelson Ndlovu and three Notification of the Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DHA-1689) for Nelson Ndlovu, Shepherd Chuma and Maghwawe Sibanda. The documents are file in the docket as per A36. An enlarged copy of death certificate was made from a copy of Sunday Times Newspaper he received from Brigadier Zangwa dated 23/10/2011 titled "journey to death in an unmarked car" and is filed as per A35.

On 15/02/2013 he went to Home Affairs Department in Pretoria and interview Peter Ndwanwe and Notwandle Qaba about the incident and process involved in the deportation of undocumented persons or illegal immigrants. He received a copy of DZP policy from Mr Ndwanwe and the Immigration Act. On 21/02/2013 he went to Soweto and obtained the statements of the following individuals; Johannes L. Broodryk, Patiswa Skosana and Job Jackson. Job Jackson who is the Manager of Lindela Holding facility for illegal immigrants gave him a printout of all people who were deported during the DZP period which covers the time of the alleged deportation of the Zimbabwean Nationals. The list is filed as A34 in the docket.

On 25/02/2013 he went to Beit Bridge and obtained a statement of Peter Eiberg. He also gave him an example used copy of Notice of Deportation which is filed as A38 and Duty Rooster for the period 5 November 2010 to 13 November 2010 which is filed as per A40. On 26/02/2013 he went to Turfloop and obtained statement of Magret Mohlahlo, an immigration officer whose stamp was allegedly used in the documents that resulted in deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals.

During the investigation of the case he visited the office of Lt General Dramat on 07/03/2013 and a meeting was held between Lt General Dramat and him. He will further state that at that stage the investigation had not uncovered any evidence relating to the involvement of Lt General Dramat or any other senior officer of DPCI. The meeting was held at Lt General Dramat's office which is located at Silverton. During the meeting, Lt General Dramat was informed about the allegation of kidnapping and assault leveled against members of DCPCI most especially Captain Makuleke who is now a Lt Colonel. He said that he had sanctioned internal investigation in the matter and the outcome of the investigation cleared Lt Colonel Makuleke of any wrong doing. When I asked him whether they were any Zimbabwean police who visited the DPCI offices, he said that there were no Zimbabwean police who came into the country regarding the alleged matter and that all Zimbabwean Nationals were deported through Home Affairs for being illegal immigrants. Lt General Dramat was requested to provide statement with regard to the formation of TOMS, his knowledge about the DZP, source documents that informed the internal investigation, his report to parliament and knowledge about the involvement of Zimbabwean police in the operation of TOMS. He informed me that the request should be forwarded to Col Basi and he would hand all the necessary documents including his sworn statement to him.

On 07/03/2013, shortly after the meeting he generated and emailed a letter to Col Basi. On 19/04/2013 he met with Col Basi in front of the Interpol building on Pretorius Street in Pretoria. He handed to him a brown envelope containing following documents, cell phone records of Captain Makuleke, Lt Col Neethling and Major General Sibiya. There were also copies of sworn statements of, Willem Carel Stephenus Vorsier, Andree

Neethling, Captain Maluleke, Vincent Selotole, Major General Sibiya, Warrant Officer Makoe, Ndanduleni Madilonga and Warrant Officer Rodgers Nthlamu. Attached to the copy of the statement of Warrant Officer Nthlamu were copies of the following documents, Warrant of Detention (BI-1725) for the following individuals, Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Shepard Chuma and Nelson Ndlovu. There were also three Notification of the Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DHA-1689) for the following individuals, Nelson Ndlovu, Shepherd Chuma and Maghawe Sibanda. The Warrant of Detention and Notification of the Deportation forms attached to Warrant Officer Nthlamu statement appeared to be similar to the one received from Secretariat via the former Acting Executive Director Ms. K Mbeki on 28/01/2013. The Warrants of Detention and Notifications of Deportation received from Warrant Officer Nthlamu were the one sent to the Forensic Lab for analysis on 10/06/2013 and 21/08/2013. The documents given to him by Col Basi also include search result report from Interpol indicating that Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghawe Sibanda and Shepard Chuma were not in the wanted list. However there was no statement of Lt General Dramat in the envelope handed to him. The documents handed to him are filed in the docket as per A41-A50.

In April 2013 he called Constable Radebe and Warrant Officer Makoe for the purpose of obtaining their warning statements. He never compelled anyone to implicate Senior Members of the DPCI. However, he informed them that they can arrange a service of a lawyer in order for them to be guided during the process. Shortly after speaking with them he received a call from Lt Col Maluleke who told me that he was not supposed to request warning statements from his people because on the day he arrested Zimbabwean Nationals he was the lead man and Constable Radebe and Warrant Officer Makoe were taking instructions from him. He informed him that he cannot answer on their behalf and that when his turn comes he will be informed accordingly. He will further state that on the day set for interview none of the above members came for the interview.

On 08/04/2013 he interviewed Ndanduleni Madilonga and obtained his statement. On 15/04/2012 he went to Beit Bridge and interview Col Radzilani and obtained her statement. The following day he interviewed Brigadier Makushu in Polokwane and obtained his statement.

On 27/06/2013 he interviewed Lt Col Neethling in his office and obtained his statement. On 29/06/2013 he met with Warrant Officer Selepe at East gate in Johannesburg and obtained his statement. After being provided with information regarding the arrest and the transportation of Prichard Chuma to the boarder, Silverton and Alexander original SAPS 10 (occurrence books) were uplifted. Copies of the SAPS 10 are filed in the docket as per A57 and A58.

On 10/07/2013 he met with Ms. L Verster at Protea-Coin for the interview. She gave information regarding the success reports resulting from the arrest of Witness Ndeya and other Zimbabwean Nationals. She also assisted him by phoning Supply Chain of DPCI and obtained the serial number of Captain Maluleke's laptop which he used during 2010 and 2011. On the same day he generated a letter to Col Mabuyela who was assigned by Brigadier Kadwa to assist him with documents or items needed from the DPCI offices for the purpose of investigation. He hand-delivered the letter to Col Mabuyela on 11/07/2013, requesting the following things, Dell Laptop with serial number CNOJF242486436BL3424 which was assigned to Lt Col Maluleke, approved overtime claims for Lt Col Maluleke for the following period 01/11/2010-31/01/2011, approved trip itineraries' for Lt Col Maluleke for the period 01/11/2010-31/01/2011, Telkom call record for Lt Col Maluleke for the period 01/11/2010-31/03/2011, record regarding the disposal and if not yet disposed, the handset used by Lt Col Maluleke, record of successes of operations conducted between 01/11/2010-31/03/2011 and logbooks of vehicles used by Lt Col Maluleke for the period 01/11/2010-28/02/2011. On 12/07/2013 he went to meet with Col Mabuyela and he received success reports which are filed as per A82/1-A83/3.

The success report filed as per A82/3 contains names of officials who assisted in the arrest of Gordon Dube who are members of TRT and Crime Intelligence. On 16/07/2013 he went to Johannesburg Central Police Station and obtained the statements of members of TRT. One of the members by the name of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani (A62/2) had photos at home of Johnson Nyoni and Zimbabwean Police. He went to his house on the same day and collected the two photos which are filed as per A62/1. On 18/07/2013, he emailed a letter to the Commander of Crime Intelligence Pretoria Central, Col Ntentei requesting interview with his members who are mentioned in success report dated 04/02/2011 (A82/3). On 25/07/2013 he went to Crime Intelligence offices in Pretoria and obtain the statements of the members. The interview with the members also revealed that the arrest of Gordon Dube and Johnson Nyoni was also known by Brigadier Britz. On 16/07/2013 a letter was generated and emailed to Brigadier Britz requesting a meeting for the purpose of interview and obtaining statement. He interviewed Brigadier Britz on 26/07/2013 and after the interview Brigadier Britz promised to write his own statement. He collected Brigadier Britz statement from his office on 22/08/2013 which is situated at Old Stock Exchange building in Johannesburg. He also received Report number GO-D-004-D which is admission details of Gordon Dube from Correctional Services which is filed as per A84/3 and SAPS 206 (body receipts) filed as per A81-A82.

He also discovered that Gordon Dube was facing number of charges in South Africa including murder. Statements of Isaac Dlamini and Avhashoni Rambau were obtained in connection with Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 which they were investigating (A70 and A72). Original SAP 10 (Occurrence Book) was uplifted from Wierdabrug Police Station and copies are filed as per A71. Statement of Constable Meyer from Wierdabrug was obtained in relation to cases he was investigating against Gordon Dube and how he booked him out of prison and handed him to Captain Maluleke to be transported to Beit Bridge. He also obtained copies of the following dockets which are cases against Gordon Dube Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011, Wierdabrug Cas 147/11/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 310/10/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 431/10/2010 and Wierdabrug Cas 531/12/2010. All the copies of the docket are filed under B22 Arch file.

On 16/07/2013, he received a Laptop Dell Col Mabuyela and Warrant Officer Danie bearing serial number CNJF24286436BL3424. The Laptop was handed to Precision Forensics on 31/07/2013 at 18h00. The report from Precision Forensic was received on 22/08/2013 and is filed as per A89 arch file.

In October 2011 he approached the Head of DPCI accompanied by Mr. Sesoko who was an Acting Head of investigation for IPID requested his warning statement. He was advised to seek an assistance of a lawyer for the purpose of guiding him before the warning statements is obtained. He agreed and informed them that he will telephonically contact Mr. Khuba regarding the suitable date. He will further state that he received a call from a person who introduced himself to him as Adv. P Seleka representing Lt General Dramat. He requested questions in writing and summary of the allegation which was e-mailed to him. After he received the questions, he was informed via e-mail that Lt General Dramat is represented by a new company and they will continue to liaise with him. He emailed the questions and after two weeks he received a copy of his statement and is file as per A94.

On 22/10/2013 he called Lt General Lebeya and requested an interview with regarding Renditions as his name appears on one of the success reports. On 23/10/2013 he met with Lt General Lebeya and interviewed him about the deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals in connection with the death of senior officer in Zimbabwe. After the interview he requested that he send questions in writing and that he would be able to respond to them. The questions were drafted and emailed to him the same day. On 07/11/2013 he received a call from his office to collect his statement including accompanying documents. The following documents were attached on his statement, copy of e-mail regarding documents requested from DPCI, mandate of TOMS, unsigned success report regarding Witness Ndeya and other success reports not related to the Diepsloot Cas 390/07/2012.

In November 2013 he engaged Captain Boonstra to arrange for a meeting between him and the two officers, Constable Radebe and Warrant Officer Makoe. Captain Boonstra informed him telephonically that he informed Warrant Officer Makoe and that Constable Radebe was attending training at Hamanskraal. He tried to contact him on 0737313808 for a warning statement but he was not reachable. In late November 2013, he again requested Captain Boonstra to assist but he informed him that the members were informed and they do not want to cooperate.

During the investigation of the case no one was either intimidated or assaulted. He never requested or forced any witness to implicate any person.

6. ANALYSIS OF EVIDENCE AND FINDINGS.

The following findings were made;

- The operation carried out by TOMS to arrest Zimbabwean foreign nationals in Diepsloot in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police Colonel was led by Captain M L Maluleke also known as Cowboy. According to the letter retrieved from Captain Maluleke's laptop, there was a meeting in August 2010 held between Zimbabwean Authorities, General Dramat and General Sibiya wherein General Sibiya was appointed as a coordinator regarding cooperation between two countries. The obligation to assist Zimbabwe in tracing wanted suspects should have emanated from the agreement of the same meeting as cited in success reports addressed to General Dramat and other senior officials. The letter dated 2010/07/29 addressed to Commissioner Chibage of Zimbabwe by Lt General Dramat request a meeting on 05/08/2010 to discuss operational matter but limited to fugitive of serious crime like robberies, cash in transit and extradition.
- There is enough evidence that shows that General Dramat did not only know about the operation that led to renditions of Zimbabwean Nationals but sanctioned it through the following ways;
 - The Zimbabwean police came into the country for the purpose of arresting the wanted Zimbabwean Nationals and Lt General Dramat directed that they be allowed to proceed since they were coming to see him. The statement of Lt Colonel Madilonga clearly spell out that the police from Zimbabwe were received by him and he contacted General Dramat who confirmed that they were coming to him. Colonel Madilonga's version is corroborated by Brigadier Makushu and Colonel Radzilani. The cellphone records of Lt General Dramat and Beit bridge Telekom records (Col Madilonga's extension) show that General Dramat received a call from 015534 6300 at 20h56 on 04/11/2010. This corroborates the version of Madilonga, Lt Col Radzilani and Brigadier Makushu about the call made in connection with the Zimbabwean police. According to Lt Col Madilonga he was informed that the purpose of the Zimbabwean police to enter into the country was to arrest Zimbabwean Nationals wanted in connection with the murder of Senior Police Officer in Zimbabwe.

LS
SS

- Evaluation of the above findings: In the entire cellphone records of Lt General Dramat requested for the period 20/10/2010 to 28/02/2011, the number 0155346300 only appear once which rules out any form of communication before 04/11/2010 and after the said date. This supports his version that he called Lt General Dramat in connection with the Zimbabwean police.
- o He held a meeting on 05/11/2010 with Zimbabwean police planning the operation. Success report dated 04/02/2011 addressed to General Dramat, General Hlatshwayo and General Toka with a heading that reads, "CONSOLIDATED SUCCESS REPORT: MOST WANTED FUGITIVE: WANTED FOR MURDER AND ROBBERY: DPCI TOMS REF: 3/12/2010: AND ZIMBABWE (BULAWAYO CR 348/09/2010): WITNESS DUMISANI NKOSI@NDEYA: ZIMBABWEAN NATIONALS AND OTHERS. The report bears reference 14/02/01 and was signed by Col Leonie Verster. Paragraph "A1" of the report states that on 05/11/2010, General Dramat held a meeting with Zimbabwean police at DPCI offices about the Nationals who shot and killed one of their senior officers. He appointed Captain Maluleke to be a lead person during the operation.
 - Evaluation of the above findings: The success report signed by Leonie Verster was traced to Lt Col Maluleke's laptop as picked from the retrieved deleted data. The report was amended on 26/01/2011 and 31/01/2011 before it could be emailed to a female officer, Warrant Officer Thabiso Mafatla on 09/02/2011 at 14h32. There is no material difference between the document retrieved from the laptop and that found at the Hawks' offices during investigation. This proves that Leonie Verster did not generate success report but only signed the report drafted by Captain Maluleke. The date of the meeting between Zimbabwean Police and General Dramat which took place on 05/11/2010 coincide with the date of the 4th of November 2010 which according to cellphone records, General Dramat was called at 20h56 by Lt Col Madilonga seeking permission to allow Zimbabwean Police to enter into the country. Since the Zimbabwean Police were at Beit Bridge between 20h00 and 21h00, it is logical that they arrived in Gauteng late at night, leaving them with the opportunity to have the meeting with General Dramat in the morning of the 5th of November 2010 as stated in the Success Report.

LS
SS

- o He committed the government resources into the operation: Apart from other resources used, on 08/11/2010 Captain Maluleke went to Beit Bridge (Limpopo) for Transporting Zimbabwean Nationals and claimed overtime. On 24/11/2010 he went to Beit Bridge and also claimed overtime. On 28/01/2011 he went to Beit Bridge and also claimed overtime. All this dates corresponds with cellphone records and OB entries indicating the dates in which the suspects were booked out from the stations.
 - Evaluation of the above findings: Despite the fact that General Dramat as an Accounting Officer did not sign any claim of Captain Maluleke, delegating responsibility to Major General Sibiya to assist the Zimbabwean Police in tracing wanted suspects invariably commit government resources into an unlawful operation that amount to a criminal offense.
- o He congratulated officers for arresting Johnson Nyoni and advised them to keep it a secret: According to Constable Mkasibe and Mgwenya, shortly after the photos were taken, they saw General Dramat of the Hawks walking towards them from house number 1. General Dramat addressed them and thanked them for arresting the suspect. He warned them not tell anyone about the operation they had just done.
 - Evaluation of the above findings: Words of appreciation from General Dramat show both interest in the arrest of the Zimbabwean Nationals and his knowledge of the unlawfulness of the operation. If the operation was lawful he would not have warned them not to tell anyone about it.
- o He received communication regarding successes and photos of the operation through his Personal Assistance Phumla: According to the information retrieved from the seized laptop, Captain Maluleke sent e-mails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. The emails where sent to the PA of General Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime Intelligence.
- o He was kept informed of the developments in the operations that led to the arrest of wanted Zimbabwean Nationals: The cellphone records of General Sibiya shows 30 SMS sent to General Dramat at various milestones of the operation. He also received an SMS from Captain Maluleke shortly after the arrest of Zimbabwean Nationals. He never responded to any of the SMS which may suggest that they were only informing him of the progress.
- o Report to parliament in response to the allegation: A copy of the letter sent by Zimbabwean authority to Col Ntenti clearly mention the names of people whom General Dramat in his report to parliament stated that they were deported for being illegal immigrants. The letter clearly indicates that the suspects were wanted for murdering Superintendent Chatikobo of Bulawayo on 18th September 2010. It goes further to state that there was joined operation between South African Police and Zimbabwean police to trace and arrest the suspects.

- There is evidence and witnesses corroborate each other that General Sibiya was both at the scene and planning venue. The meeting held between IPID and General Dramat on 2013/03/07 confirmed that General Sibiya was appointed to be the Head of TOMS which he created to trace wanted suspects. The telephone records of both Captain Maluleke and Major General Sibiya show interaction between them at various milestones of the operation. Following suggest the involvement of General Sibiya;
 - Witness stated that he was seen during the operation that took place on 22/11/2010 which led to the arrest of Prichard Chuma
 - In other operations cellphone record of Warrant Officer Makoe, Captain Maluleke and Col Neethling clearly show continuous contacts with General Sibiya during and shortly after the operation. Col Neethling also stated that he should have reported progress to General Sibiya during the operation. However the cell phone records of General Sibiya does not place him at the scenes and planning venues as claimed by witnesses. It is also clear that some of the witness claim to have heard that General Sibiya was in the car rather than seeing him personally.
 - The meeting held in Zimbabwe wherein General Sibiya was appointed as a coordinator on cooperation matters involving the two countries suggests that the operation could not have been done without his knowledge more so because his Gauteng Team was involved in the operation. However this inference cannot provide prima facie case that he was involved.
- There is no evidence for the involvement of Former General Mzwandile Petros. However he addressed a letter dated 31/05/2011 to Provincial Head of Crime Intelligence in Gauteng appreciating the good work that members of Crime Intelligence have done when they arrested Zimbabwean Nationals involved in the murder of Senior Police Officer in Zimbabwe. The letter was as a result of a request made by Former General Toka of Crime Intelligence requesting General Mzwandile Petros to appreciate members of Crime Intelligence.
- There is also no evidence that suggest that Lt General Toka, Lt General Lebeya and Major General Hlatshwayo was involved except that they received communication regarding this matter.
- The involvement of Captain Maluleke as a foot soldier in the operation has overwhelming evidence. The following evidence against Captain Maluleke where uncovered;
 - The documents which the police claimed to be valid Home Affairs documents used in the deportation of the four Zimbabweans are forged and have employee number that does not exist in the Home Affairs Department. The Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigner (BI-1725) document was produced by the SAPS as a proof that Shepard Chuma, Witness Ndeya and Nelson Ndlovu were detained for being illegal foreigners and they were seen by an Immigration Officer. However the signature that appears on the documents does not belong to any member of Home Affairs in Gauteng and the appointment number 037162 does not exist.

It was also uncovered that the BI-1725 used was discontinued in 2008 according to Home Affairs and in 2010 it was no longer part of the official documents of Home Affairs. The stamp on three documents also clearly shows that whosoever completed the documents used an old form already completed and deleted affiliated information to put the new information of the three foreign nationals. The Notification of the Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DHA-1689) documents were produced by SAPS as proof that Nelson Ndlovu, Shepard Chuma and Maghawe Sibanda were deported through Beit Bridge border. However the forms were wrongly stamped and do not have fingerprints of the deportees as required.

The stamp number 2D belonging to Beit Bridge was used and such stamp is not for deportation purpose. The stamp is individualized and belongs to Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlahlo who on the day in which the stamp was purported to be used was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe and she is the only person in possession of the key. The stamp could have been easily duplicated.

There is a duty roster used by Immigration Officers at Beit Bridge, which confirms that Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlahlo was off duty on the 7th and 8th of November 2010.

- The cellphone record also show Captain Maluleke contacting Zimbabwean number in the morning of the 08th November 2010 shortly before booking the suspects to Beit Bridge.
- On 23/11/2010 on the request of Captain Maluleke, Warrant Officer Selepe booked out Prichard Chuma from Alexander Police station. He transported him to Beit Bridge border on 24/11/2010, to be handed to the Zimbabwean Police. Captain Maluleke provided escort, handed him over to Zimbabwean Authorities and Prichard Chuma was never seen again.
- The Zimbabwean Nationals were arrested and detained during DZP period which gave the Zimbabwean grace period of 90 days to apply for valid documents. During the DZP which is Dispensation for Zimbabwean Projects, all Zimbabweans were given 90 days to stay in the country in order to apply for legal documents and surrender illegally obtained South African ID's without consequence. The project according to Home Affairs started on 20 September 2010 and ended in 31 December 2010 with extension which ultimately ended in July 2011. The letter retrieved from Captain Maluleke's laptop addressed to home affairs requesting assistance in the Deportation of the Zimbabwean nationals involved in the murder of Zimbabwean police (dated 08/11/2010) was generated in 08 November 2010 shortly before he booked out the Zimbabwean Nationals out of Orlando Police station. It is doubtful that the permission was acquired given the time at which the Zimbabwean Nationals were booked out. In addition, he cited the DZP as a challenge in the deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals and he wanted assistance from Home Affairs. This does not only show that he was aware of the Dispensation for Zimbabwean Projects which gave Zimbabwean Nationals grace period, but also that there was ulterior motive way above deportation on the basis of being illegal immigrants.
- The request that Captain Maluleke made to Constable Meyer, Detective Constable Rambuda, Warrant Officer Dlamini in connection with the Gordon Dube demonstrate the extent to which he was ready to go in order to handover the suspect to the Zimbabwean police. The suspects was awaiting trial prisoner who was connected in five cases including murder. Statements of Constable Rambuda and Meyer provide valuable evidence that Captain Maluleke took Gordon Dube to Zimbabwe even though he was facing serious charges (five cases including murder) in South Africa. Statements provided to Constable Meyer by Captain Maluleke states that Gordon Dube was handed to Zimbabwean police and was sentenced to life imprisonment. He also acknowledges in a letter retrieved from the laptop that he handed back the firearm permanently to Zimbabwean authority.

LS

- o The OB entry dated 28/01/11 shows that Captain Maluleke booked out Johnson Nyoni to Beit Bridge for fraud. However at Silverton, the investigation uncovered that a case of Fraud against John Nyoni and Mike Dube was opened on 28/01/2011 (Silverton Cas 566/01/2011), the same day in which Johnson Nyoni and Gordon Dube were transported to Beit Bridge. The warning statement of Mike Dube, whom it was discovered that his real name is Shadrack Wisley Kebini, stated that his cousin was communicating with the police in a deal in which he was to collect jewelry. After the deportation of the suspect to Zimbabwe, the case against John Nyoni and Mike Dube was withdrawn and never continued. This case was used as a decoy for to go on wild chase, following the wrong leads. Both suspects were persuaded to be involved in the collection of jewelry because one of them has a name similar to the Zimbabwean National wanted for murder, Johnson Nyoni.
- o The e-mails retrieved from Captain Maluleke's laptop also show communication with Zimbabwean police where he asked them about the trip going back home and that he would continue to trace remaining suspects. He also exchanged photographs with them of the suspects and the team involved in the operation.
- o The overtime claim of Captain Maluleke corresponds with the dates on SAP 10's from various stations regarding the booking out of the Zimbabwean Nationals. On 08/11/2010 he transported Zimbabwean Nationals to Beit Bridge. The Itinerary shows that on 08/11/2010 he went to Beit Bridge and came back on 10/11/2010 and claimed a total of R1845-00. On 24/11/2010 he went to Beit Bridge and came back 26/11/2010 and claimed a total of R1845-00. On 28/01/2011 he went to Beit Bridge and claimed a total of R552-00. The records also correspond with his cell record towers recordings.

The following members' involvements were found limited to two incidents which took place on 05/11/2010 and 20-22/11/2010; Constable Radebe, Captain S E Nkosi and Warrant Officer Makoe. They were involved in the assault of Zimbabwean Nationals during arrest.

RENDITIONS DIEPSLOOT CAS 990/07/2012

2. SUMMARY OF ALLEGATIONS

The following allegations were made:

- 2.1 It is alleged that between 04/11/2010 and 31/01/2011 Captain M L Mahuleke, Warrant Officer Makoe and Constable Radebe, through the direction of General Sibiya and LI General Dramal, conducted operations in Soweto and Diepsloot to trace Zimbabwean Nationals. The suspects were wanted in connection with the murder of a Zimbabwean police Colonel in Bulawayo. The members were accompanied by Zimbabwean Police. Five Zimbabweans were arrested in Diepsloot and detained at various stations as illegal immigrants and others for fictitious crimes. They were allegedly assaulted by SAPS members and Zimbabwean Police and transported to Bell Bridge where they were handed over to the Zimbabwean Authorities. Four of them were reported murdered in the hands of Zimbabwean Police.
- 2.2 According to the allegation, Major General Sibiya was also part of the operation.

3. CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY MANDATE

- 3.1 Section 206(6) of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa provide that, on receipt of a complaint lodged by a Provincial Executive, an independent Complaints body established by the national legislation must investigate any alleged misconduct or offences allegedly committed by members of SAPS.
- 3.2 Section 28 (a) (h) of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act 1 of 2011 provides that the Directorate must investigate any matter referred to as a result of a decision of the Executive Director, or if so requested by the Minister, an MEC or the Secretary as the case maybe, in the prescribed manner.

4. AVAILABLE EVIDENCE4.1 STATEMENTS OBTAINED FROM INDEPENDENT WITNESSES

The following witnesses were interviewed and statements obtained.

Shepard Chuma A1: He will state that on Friday 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at 6954 John Matalje Street Diepsloot together with Nelson, Maghawe and Witness standing when they were approached by two unknown Black males. One of them produced an appointment card and the other produced a firearm and ordered them to lie down. He will further state that one of the Police Officer then took out a paper and started reading names like Mihelisi Sibanda, Godi Dube, Prichard Chuma and John. He asked them whether they know such people but none of such names were known to them. The officer was wearing a cowboy hat and they heard other police officers calling him Cowboy. Few minutes later, Cowboy asked the other Police Officers about where to detain them. While they argued about the place to detain them, the other officer suggested that General Sibiya be consulted to provide direction in the matter. A short while later General Sibiya alighted from a Black BMW. He will state that they were assaulted and when they arrived at Orlando Police Station one of the Officers called "Leburu" took his R300 which was in a wallet in his back pocket. They were detained and on 2010/11/06 at 12h00 the officer called "Cowboy" came and took the finger prints of his co-accused but his fingerprints were not taken. He was informed that his finger prints will be taken at Musina.

On Monday 2010/11/06 at 12H00 Cowboy came to collect them. They were taken into a marked vehicle of Orlando SAPS driven by the officer in uniform. They followed Cowboy who was driving a white Nissan D/C. They were taken to a certain place called Bronkhorstpruit where they were moved into a Toyota being handcuffed. They were then taken to Musina and they arrived at 17h00. They took one officer at Musina whom Cowboy said he will make matters easy for them to cross the border. He will further state that at the border, Cowboy went to Home Affairs office and few minutes later came back. They were transported in a Nissan D/C and crossed the border with Cowboy using a wrong lane but they were never stopped. When they were on the other side Zimbabwean police came and placed handcuffs on top of other handcuffs and Cowboy came and removed his handcuffs. They were taken to a Zimbabwean police car. He will state that they were interrogated by the Zimbabwean Police Officers about a Zimbabwean police Colonel who was killed. They were placed in separate cells and after 11 days he was released. When he enquired about his friend he was told that he was killed by the Zimbabwean police.

Machawe Sibanda A2: He will state that on 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at his residential place in Diepsloot when he was approached by two Black Males who identified themselves as Police Officers. They instructed them to lie down and they cooperated with them. Few minutes later there were many cars of Police Officers in civilian clothes and they started searching them. He will further state that they were assaulted and the police also took R500-00 which was in his pocket. There was another police officer wearing Cowboy hat reading names on the paper and asking them whether they knew the names of such people. He will state further that he saw General Sibiyi coming out of a black BMW and gave instruction that they should be taken to Orlando SAPS.

Nelson Ndlovu A3: He will state that on 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at his younger brother's residential place in Diepsloot when he was approached by two Black Males who identified themselves as Police Officers. They ordered them to lie down and then started to assault them. He identified one of the Police Officer by the nickname Leburu. After their arrest the Police Officers argued about where they should detain them and one of them suggested Randburg. General Sibiyi gave the instruction that they must be detained at Orlando SAPS. They were then taken to Orlando SAPS but Shepard Chuma and Witness went with the police to show them where John stays.

Bongani Henry Yende A4: He will state that he is a member of the South African Police Services attached to Crime Intelligence. During October 2010 he was nominated to be a member of Task Team called Tactical Operations Management Section (TOMS) which was led by General Sibiyi. On 2010/11/05 he received a call from W/O Makoe of DPCI in Gauteng who was also part of TOMS informing him that General Sibiyi wanted them to meet in order to look for four suspects who are wanted in connection with the murder of police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He then went to Fourways Shopping Center with Constable Desmond Campbell who was also part of TOMS to meet with W/O Makoe. On their arrival at the Shopping Center W/O Makoe also introduced two Zimbabwean police to them. He will further state that he was informed by W/O Makoe that the two officers came through the office of General Dramat. At that time General Sibiyi was seated in a navy blue BMW and he could not go and greet him. They went to Diepsloot together with Captain Makuleke (also known as Cowboy), W/O Jawuke and Constable Leburu Radebe to identify the house of the suspects.

Captain Makuleke came back and informed them that he left the two officers observing the movements of the suspects at their residence. On their arrival at the suspect's place of residence, Captain Makuleke searched the suspects and confiscated their passports. There were four men who were lying on the ground and the two Zimbabwean police said that the four men are wanted in connection with murder of a Zimbabwean police Colonel in Bulawayo. The suspects were taken to Orlando and detained as illegal immigrants. On 23/11/2010 he was briefed by W/O Makoe that the two suspects who were arrested were subsequently killed in Zimbabwe. He will further state that the suspect Prichard Chuma was detained in Alexandra Police station. He will further state that Captain Makuleke was reporting directly to General Sibiyi and whenever torture of the suspects was to be carried out, he condoned it.

Petros Jawuke A5: He will state that during October 2010 he was nominated to be part of a Task Team Called "TOMS" in Gauteng Province and that the team operated under the command of General Sibiyi. On 2010/11/05 in the evening he received a call from W/O Makoe that their Commander Gen. Sibiyi wanted all TOMS members to meet in Fourways because there was a Colonel who was murdered. He will state that he collected W/O Ndobe and rushed to Fourways where they met with other members.

He will state that W/O Makoe instructed him to join Captain Cowboy Makuleke and Constable Leburu Radebe to identify the suspects address. On their arrival at the identified house they found a car standing outside but there was no one inside the car. He will state that four men came to the vehicle and that they arrested them and detained them at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants but not the Zimbabwe murder case as indicated at the beginning of the tracing process.

He will further state that on 2010/11/23 the second operation was arranged and that he got a call from W/O Makoe that their Commander General Sibiyi wanted them to meet at Diepsloot Shoprite. General Sibiyi was present in the second operation. They went to Diepsloot where an African Male Prichard Chuma was found and arrested for murder of the Colonel in Zimbabwe.

Desmond Campbell A6: He will state that on 2010/11/05 General Sibiyi arranged with W/O Makoe to call them for operation at Diepsloot for tracing wanted suspects in a murder case where a Colonel was killed. He received a call from Constable Radebe that they have already arrested the suspects.

He will further state that the suspects were assaulted since he heard screams but did not take part in the assault of the suspects. The suspects were arrested in connection with a murder of the police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He will state that the four suspects were then detained at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants and not on the Zimbabwe Murder case of the Colonel. On 22/11/2010 until the early hours of 23/11/2010 Prichard Chuma was arrested and detained in Alexandra. He never saw General Sibiyi being involved in the operation but that there was a person who was always seated in the black tinted BMW and W/O Makoe referred to the person as General Sibiya.

Alfred Ndobe A7: He will state that during October 2010 he was nominated to be part of Task Team called "TOMS" in Gauteng Province headed by General Sibiya. On 2010/11/05 Gen. Sibiya arranged with W/O Makoe to call them for operation at Diepsloot for tracing wanted suspects in a murder case where a Colonel was killed. He was not aware that the suspects that they were tracing were needed in a Zimbabwe case. He received a call from Constable Radebe that they have already arrested the suspects.

The suspects were assaulted by General Sibiya, Captain Cowboy and W/O Makoe. He will state that the four suspects were then detained at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants but not on the Zimbabwe murder case of the murdered Colonel.

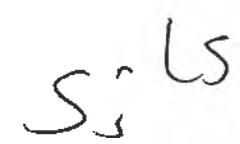

Desmond Campbell A11-Additional statement: He will state that he was based at Johannesburg Central Crime Intelligence before receiving a call up instruction from Gauteng Provincial DPCI Head, Major General Sibiya to report at Gauteng TOMS office. On 22/11/2010 of which he cannot remember the exact time they detained Prichard Chuma whom he does not know whether is related to Shepard Chuma. He will further state that he witnessed an assault on 2010/11/05 on Zimbabwean Nationals carried out by Captain Mabileke, W/O Makoe and Constable Leburu. He will further state that on 2010/11/05 and 22 to 23/11/2010 when they carried out the operation, there would be a figure seated in a black BMW whom Warrant Officer Makoe referred as Major General Sibiya.

Andrew Mark Semposon A12: He will state that he is a White Male self employed as a Project Manager of House Constructions. He knew Maghawe Sibanda as a sub-contractor on his building sites. He will state that Mr. Sibanda vanished for a week and resurfaced again. He was informed by Mr. Sibanda that his disappearance was as result of his arrest in connection with the alleged murder of a Zimbabwean Colonel. He was taken to Bell Bridge but released along the way and he had to find his way back because he did not have money and his cell phone was confiscated by the police. He will state that he was requested by Mr. Sibanda to call the said police Captain for his cell phone. He called the police Captain and he confirmed that the cell phone will be returned. He does not know whether such phone was finally returned to Mr. Sibanda.

Sibongile Mofu A24: She will state that she is a neighbor of the deceased Johnson Nyoni. She will state that she witnessed a group of unknown Policemen assaulting the deceased who was lying down on the furrow of running water as it was raining. She will state that the deceased was assaulted by means of being kicked with booted feet. She will state that she cannot recall the exact date but it was during January 2011. She will state that the deceased was also pepper sprayed on his face and that he was having bloodied mucous coming out of his nostrils.

She will state that she was standing at the distance of about 20 meters when she witnessed the incident and that it was still in the morning around 10:00. She will state that she never saw what happened inside the shack. She will state that she learnt that the deceased was indeed murdered after a month from his younger brother. She will state that she may not be able to identify them if she can see them again.

Reasons Mhlawumbe Sibanda A20: He will state that on November 2010, on the date in which he cannot remember the date he visited his ex-girlfriend Brightness Nka Ncube who was staying with his distant sister Rachel Ncube. He slept over and in the middle of the night he was woken up by the police looking for John the boyfriend of Rachel. He was assaulted by a police whom he cannot identify, since it was in the dark. There was another Police Officer who was flashing a cellphone on their faces trying to identify them. He will further state that John was not there and they were freed when they indicated to the police that none of them was John.

Rachel Ncube A21: She will state that she is the wife of the deceased John Nyoni. It was on 26/01/2011 at 10h00 when she was in her shack with her husband Johnson Nyoni when police arrived and started assaulting him. The police entered the shack and said that they were looking for a firearm which they alleged that her husband used to kill a policeman in Zimbabwe. There were five (5) police vehicles, and her husband was taken away by the police and that was the last time she saw him. In February 2011 she received a call from Bikini Nyoni, the brother of the deceased that Johnson Nyoni has died.

Brightness Nka Ncube A22: she will state that she is the sister-in-law of the late Johnson Nyoni. On the 5th or 6th of November while she was asleep she was woken up by the police who pretended to be Johnson Nyoni and later changed to indicate that they are in fact Police Officers. She will further state that she was assaulted by the police who were looking for Johnson Nyoni. The police freed them after they realized that Johnson was not amongst them. She learned later that Johnson Nyoni was murdered by the police in Zimbabwe.

Madala Bhokisisa Nyoni A23: He will state that he is the brother of late Johnson Nyoni and on 01 March 2011 he telephonically contacted his brother in law Orbed Ndlovu from Bulawayo in Zimbabwe who informed him that his brother Johnson Nyoni is late and was found at Central Mortuary in Bulawayo. He will further state that he then went to Bulawayo in Zimbabwe and at the mortuary he found the body of his brother. The body of Johnson Nyoni had a bullet wound on the collar (neck) just above the chest and it exited at the back. There was an information note attached to the body stating that Johnson Nyoni was involved in the crossfire at Gwanda in Zimbabwe. He will further state that he attended Johnson Nyoni's funeral which was held at Tsholotsho in Zimbabwe.

4.2 STATEMENTS OF MEMBERS AT ORLANDO POLICE STATION

The following statements were obtained from members of SAPS based at Orlando police station who are witnesses in the case.

Brigadier Mthokozelwa Zangwa A25: He will state that he is a Station Commander of Orlando Police Station. He became aware of the allegation of deportation of Zimbabwean foreign Nationals in 2012. He will state that as part of his own investigation he perused the registers to check if there were indeed Zimbabwean nationals detained at Orlando Police Station. According to OB 279/11/2010 the said Foreign Nationals were arrested by Captain M L Makufeka. He also discovered that the

RENDITIONS [ORPS/DOOT CAS 390/07/2012]

Foreign Nationals were detained until 08/11/2010. The procedure is that when a person is arrested and is suspected to be illegal immigrant, Home Affairs official is called to verify the status of the person before he or she is taken to Lindela for deportation. He does not know why the procedure was not followed by the police in this case. He will further state that Captain Maluleke confirmed that he indeed took the said Foreign Nationals to Beit Bridge.

Thomas Pixane Setogane A26: He is a member of SAPS stationed at Orlando. On 06/11/2010 Captain Maluleke came to the holding cells with four foreign national namely Dumisani Wilness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghabane Shanda and Shepard Chuma. The four Foreign Nationals were registered on the OB and cell register. He will state that it was for the first time for him to experience a situation where a member of DPCI arrest and detain a person for being an illegal immigrant.

Padile Abrina Pano A27: She will state that she is a Constable and that during the time of incident she was still a trainee. On 2010/11/08 at 05h45 she reported on duty and she was posted at the cells. On the same day she was tasked by W/O Marule to write the Occurrence Book. She made entries as directed and not as she observed because she was a Trainee.

4.3 STATEMENTS OF HOME AFFAIRS OFFICIALS

Notwandile Qaha 29: She will state that she is a Director responsible for Deportation. She will further state that the incident that took place in 2010 occurred before she joined the department but upon being informed of the facts of the case by her juniors, she realized that members of the SAPS did not comply with the procedure when they deported the four Zimbabwean Foreign Nationals. She stated that a member of SAPS is not allowed to deport any person without the involvement of Home Affairs. The person suspected to be illegal foreigner must be verified by the Immigration Officer and the High Commissioner or the Embassy must confirm that such person is their citizen.

Peter Ndwandwe A28: He will state that he is an Assistant Director with the Department of Home Affairs in Soweto. He started knowing about the incident involving four Zimbabwean Foreign Nationals in 2012 when he was contacted by Mr. M Matthews who is a Chief Director at their Head Office. He will further state that the four Zimbabwean nationals were not supposed to be deported because from 20/09/2010 to 31/12/2010 there was DZP which is Dispensation for Zimbabwean Project initiated by the Minister to allow all Zimbabweans without legal documents to stay in the country for 90 days in order to apply for legal documents. There is no Zimbabwean who was supposed to be deported on the basis of illegal documents during that period.

He will also further state that in 2012, few days after receiving a call from Mr. M Matthews a Police Officer by the name of Maluleke visited his office and showed him Home Affairs documents with signature and asked him whether he could identify any signature on the documents. He told Mr. Maluleke that the signature does not belong to any of his people. The documents were copies and Mr. Maluleke left in a hurry without showing him the documents in full.

He will further state that no police officer is allowed to deport any person and any person suspected to be an illegal foreigner must be screen by Immigration Officer.

Job Jackson A33: He will state that he is an Acting Deputy Direct responsible for the day to day running of Lindela Holding facility. In his statement he outlined the process involved in the deportation of a person from Lindela. He will further state that the incident took place before he was transferred to Lindela.

Potlswa Skosana A31: She will state that she is an Immigration Officer Station at Soweto. She will further state that the form Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigner (BI-1725) was discontinued in 2008 and that the Notification of Deportation Form must be accompanied by the fingerprints. She will further state that in all cases police call them to screen the illegal foreigners before such persons are taken to Lindela.

Johannes Lodewickus A30: He will state that he is a Deputy Director in the Department of Home Affairs at Soweto. He confirmed that the number on the Detention Warrant and Notification of Deportation form provided by the police does not belong to any Home Affairs official in Soweto.

Richard Peter Elberg A37: He state that he is an Immigration Officer based at Belt Bridge. He will further state that when SAPS bring an illegal foreigner at Port of Entry they must hand in a Body Receipt form and not the Detention Warrant. The Warrant of Detention is not a deportation document and must not be produced or stamped at Port of Entry.

He will dismiss the allegation that the stamp used on the documents claimed to be Home Affairs documents by the police is a deportation stamp.

Kobela Margaret Mofahlo A39: She will state that she is an Immigration Officer based at Belt Bridge and she had been a custodian of Stamp 20 since 2010. She had been in control of stamp 20 and when she is not in the office the stamp would be locked in the safe. She is the only person in possession of the key. She will state that on the 7th and 8th of November 2010 she was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe. She does not know how stamp 20 appears on the documents which the police claim to be deportation papers because on the day in which the documents were stamped she was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe.

4.4 STATEMENTS OF MEMBERS OF SAPS IN LIMPOPO

Ndanduleni Richard Madlona A51: He will state that he is a Police Officer in the South African Police Service holding a rank of Lieutenant Colonel stationed at Thohoyandou SAPS as a Commander of Crime Prevention.

He will further state that the statement is additional to the statement he signed with a member of the Hawks from Pretoria. He wants to clarify certain issues pertaining to his previous statement.

Before he was transferred to Thohoyandou SAPS, he was working at Belt Bridge Police Station as a Commander. His duties included Crime Prevention, liaison with the Immigration Officials and other police officials from other stations.

In 2010, two weeks before the 8th November, there was a convoy of vehicles from Zimbabwe entering into South Africa. As he was suspicious, he approached them. The convoy was approaching the Immigration Offices. When he approached them, one of them introduced himself to him as the leader of the group and he told him that he is Superintendent Ncube from the Homicks Unit in Harare. He then requested him if they could not find a place to sit down and discuss.

Superintendent Ncube told him that he was going to Pretoria to meet General Dramat. He said to him that maybe he knew about the Chief Superintendent who had been murdered. He said that the suspects were in Gauteng and he had organized with General Dramat to assist them in tracing the suspects.

For the period of two weeks, he never heard anything from Superintendent Ncube and his group. After two weeks he received a call from Superintendent Ncube who told him that he was in town and he wanted to say goodbye. He went to town and met with them in front of Tops bottle store. They bought liquor and they left to the border. He did not escort them; they went to the border and crossed to Zimbabwe. They did not discuss anything about the operation they had in Gauteng with General Dramat.

The following day after the departure of Zimbabwean police, he received a call from Captain Maluleke who is also known as "Cowboy". It was on 08 November 2010 between 16 and 17:00, when he called and introduced himself as Cowboy and I asked as to who is Cowboy. He said that he is a Captain Maluleke and was with him at Paarl in Cape Town in 2005. When he said that he is Captain Maluleke, he remembered very well who he was. Captain Maluleke asked him where he was, and he said he had already crossed the checkpoint. He was told to stop and wait for him. After thirty minutes he arrived and was driving a Sedan which he thinks is a BMW. He was with a male person who was seated on the front passenger seat. He then entered into the vehicle after the passenger had moved to the back seat.

While they were driving he realized that there were other BMW cars which were following them and he knew that it was a convoy. Captain Maluleke told him that suspects are in the vehicle behind them. He said that there are two suspects and the third one is still not yet found. He will further state that he never stopped anywhere at the border and no documents were stamped for the purpose of deportation.

When they arrived at the Zimbabwean side the vehicle stopped and immediately all the vehicles were surrounded by Zimbabwean police. They then pulled the suspects from the back seat of the vehicle behind them. He knew that they were Police Officers because he had been working at the border for a long time and he knew them. He even saw the vehicles that crossed two weeks ago when Superintendent Ncube entered the country.

Thereafter one of the Zimbabwean police came and thanked them and said that they must not use the other gate but use the one they used when they entered.

Captain Maluleke told him that what happened is top secret and people must not know about it.

In 2012 of which he cannot remember the month and date, Captain Maluleke phoned and told him that there is a person from Head Office who will be coming for investigation and that he must cooperate with him.

Later a person came to Thohoyandou and he had a draft statement. He was told that there is a problem with the operation which was once done by the Hawks and they would like his statement to be in a particular format. He told him that the statement is for covering up and the parliament has some issues about the operation. He will further state that he read the statement and realize that it was to close the gaps and not a true reflection of what happened.

Briader Joseph Makushu A53: He will state that in 2010 he was the Head of Security and Protection Services responsible for eight Borders of which one of them is Beit Bridge. He will further state that Colonel Madifonga was one of his team members posted at Beit Bridge reporting under Colonel Radzilani. He remembers receiving a call from Colonel Madilonga in 2010 requesting permission to allow Zimbabwean Police who were going to see Major General Dramat. He then instructed him to call General Dramat directly because he did not want to be involved in the operation which he was not previously informed about. He will further state that it was the last time he spoke to Colonel Madilonga about the Zimbabwean Police.

Colonel Duvhani Sharon Radzilani A54: She will state that in 2010 she was the direct supervisor of Colonel Madilonga at the Beit Bridge Port of entry. She will further state that in 2010 Colonel Madilonga informed her about the Zimbabwean Police who were about to enter the country to see Major General Dramat. She cannot remember whether he informed her telephonically or he came to her office. She will further state that she told Colonel Madilonga to speak with Brigadier Makushu about the issue.

4.5 STATEMENTS OF TOMS MEMBERS IN GAUTENG AND PRETORIA

Lt Col Neethling A55: He stated that he is a member of South African Police Services stationed at the Directorate of Priority Crimes, Provincial Office in Gauteng. In November 2010 of which he cannot remember the exact date, he received a request from Captain Maluleke to assist in arresting a suspect in the Fourways area. He met with Captain Maluleke at Diepsloot who then led him to the spot where the suspect was. Captain Maluleke walked towards him and briefed him, informing him that he is investigating a case of murder of a Zimbabwean police officer.

He did not ask any question because he knew Captain Maluleke to be working for "Cross Border Desk" at the Head Office of the Hawks. He also did not ask question because he knew that Captain Maluleke was representing the Head Office. He considers himself to be less knowledgeable in Cross Border crimes than Captain Maluleke. He discussed the tactical approach of the operation with his team since he considered the operation to be high risk. He positioned himself at the back of the vehicle convoy down a very narrow alley leading to an informal structure. There were three Police Officers whom later he discovered that they were Zimbabwean police. They were dressed in neat trousers, collar shirts and suits jackets.

After 15 minutes his members came out and informed him that they found the intended target and that Captain Maluleke had arrested him. They drove out of the settlement and stopped at the shopping center. Captain Maluleke informed him that they also have to arrest other suspects in Soweto. He was informed the next day that other two suspects were also arrested.

He also remember receiving a call from Captain Maluleke requesting escort of high risk suspects to Musina since he had to hand them over to Zimbabwean Authorities. He did provide a team to escort the suspects. He believes he must have reported such arrests to Major General Sibiye.

Captain Arnold Boonstra A60: He will state that in November 2010 (a date and time of which he cannot remember) he was requested by Lt Col Neethling to assist in tracing the suspects who were wanted by Captain Maluleke. He went to Diepsloot shopping Centre and waited for the members involved in the operation to come and fetch him. They came in a convoy and he followed. It was at night and he cannot remember the exact time. He approached Lt Col Maluleke known as Cowboy to provide him with the case number or reference number. He gave him a reference number from the file he was holding. He also told him that the suspects were wanted in connection with murder of a Police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He also mentioned that the police Colonel was killed during the Shoprite robbery. He does not remember precisely whether he said Shoprite robbery took place in Zimbabwe or South Africa.

The operation moved to Soweto but he did not see people who were arrested. He did not witness any assault because he was not near the operation. He just heard Lt Col Maluleke saying that he will detain the suspects in Soweto.

Captain Ernest Nkasi ATT: He will state that on 22/11/2013 after the operation which was carried out at Diepsloot he was requested by Lt Col Maluleke from DPCI Head office to take suspect Prichard Chuma to Alexandra Police station for detention but without the case number. He detained the suspect at Alexandra Police Station free of any injuries. He will further state that he wrote the cell number of Lt Col Maluleke in the Occurrence Book.

Warrant Officer PJD Selapa A56: He will state that he is employed by DPCI in Gauteng on a rank of a Warrant Officer. In November 2010 of which he cannot remember the exact date he received a call from his Commander Lt Col Neethling requesting him to assist Captain Maluleke in escorting a suspect. He told him that Captain Maluleke will provide details of the trip.

He then called Captain Maluleke who confirmed that he needed assistance to transport a suspect to Musina. He requested him to use his vehicle because it had a blue light. He was in possession of BMW 330 with registration number: TJH588 GP. He cannot remember the details of the trip but he remembers arranging with Captain Maluleke to meet at Alexandra Police Station on 23/11/2010 as recorded in the Occurrence Book to book out the said suspect. Captain Maluleke arrived and was driving a Nissan Hard body Double Cab.

Captain Maluleke told the officer at the Service Centre the name of the suspect and the suspect by the name of Prichard Chuma was brought to him. Captain Maluleke handcuffed the suspect and took him to the BMW. He then drove the vehicle being escorted by Captain Maluleke. He did not know what the suspect was wanted for and that he was just carrying out the request of his commander. He was told by Captain Maluleke that the suspected should be taken to Silverton Police station. He drove the suspect to Silverton where he was booked in the cells. He does not remember whether he booked the suspect himself or Captain Maluleke did it. After booking the suspect Captain Maluleke told him that on 24/11/2010 he must assist in escorting the suspect to Musina.

On 24/11/2010 he went to Silverton DPCI's office as directed telephonically by Captain Maluleke. When he arrived the following day, he discovered that the suspect he transported the previous day was no longer in the cells in Silverton Police Station but with Captain Maluleke. He was then brought to his vehicle and after he sat down, Captain Maluleke placed iron legs on him. They then drove to Musina while Captain Maluleke was providing escort. Captain Maluleke was in the company of a female person not known to him.

On arrival at Musina Captain Maluleke signaled using the head lights that they have to proceed straight to the border. He then proceeded to the border and when they arrived, they found the entry gate having a long queue. He used the exit gate as entrance gate. The police stopped them before they proceeded any further but when he put the blue light of his vehicle on, they gave way. He stopped in front of the police station at Belt Bridge and Captain Maluleke came over to his car, released iron legs from the suspect and headed to the Community Service Centre. He then went back and slept over in Polokwane.

Warrant officer Givani John Sambo A59: He will state that on 23/11/2010 he was officially on duty at Silverton Police station when Detective Warrant Officer Selepe brought a black male Prichard Chuma. The prisoner was booked in as a transit without body receipt. He will further state that W/O Selepe was with an unknown African male. On 24/11/2010 W/O Selepe came and book out the prisoner Prichard Chuma from Silverton Police station to Belt Bridge under Bulawayo Case number 1337/11/2010. The same prisoner was received by the African male who was with W/O Selepe the previous day and he signed the Occurrence Book as a Captain.

McIntosh Potele A76: He will state that in December 2010 to May 2013 he was employed by South African Police Services as a spokesperson for the DPCI. He was reporting directly to LI General Dramat and Brigadier Mashigo. He will further state that he remember one time being introduced to the Zimbabwean Police who were having a meeting with General Dramat. He cannot remember when and how the meeting was conducted since he was not part of the meeting. In 2011 he received an inquiry from Mzilikazi wa Africa who wanted to be clarified of renditions of Zimbabwean nationals. A meeting was held between him and LI General Dramat, Col Basi and Captain Maluleke to discuss the issue. During the meeting Captain Maluleke denied to have handed any person to Zimbabwean Authorities without the involvement of Home Affairs. LI General Dramat also denied having known any renditions of the Zimbabwean nationals. He will further state that he telephonically contacted Major General Sibiya to find out whether he knew about the renditions of Zimbabwean nationals and he denied having knowledge of such. He will further state that he does not remember an incident in which he moved from house number to house number three at the DPCI office and LI General Dramat addressing the people about the arrest of the Zimbabwean nationals.

Masocha Rodgers Nthlamu A80: he will state that on 11/11/2011 he received an investigation from his commander Colonel Basi by giving him a copy of a newspaper article that reads 'HAWKS AND SA POLICE ARRESTING SUSPECTS AND SENDING THEM OVER THE BORDER TO BE MURDERED'. He will further state that he investigated the case by interviewing members of the Hawks LI Col Maluleke who also gave him copies of warrants of detentions of the following individuals, Dumsai Witness Ndeya born 1987/05/10, Nelson Ndlovu born 1985/11/14, Maqhawe Sibanda born 1988/07/13 and Shepard Chuma born 1988/07/15. He also approached Interpol and checked whether the above suspects were on the list of wanted suspects. He obtained the statement of LI Col Neethling, Major General Sibiya, and Mr WCR Vosler. He will further state that during the investigation he was unable to find the person who leaked the documents to the media.

Avhaashoni Desmond Takalani A62: He is employed by the South African Police Services in Gauteng stationed at Johannesburg Central Police station under the TRT unit. On 2011/01/12 at 11h00 in the morning he was on duty in a full uniform posted at Diepsloot for Crime Prevention purpose. While busy with his duties with other members of TRT unit from Johannesburg Central, they received a request from members of the Hawks (DPCI) TOMS who were at Diepsloot SAPS to provide backup in the arrest of wanted suspect. When they arrived at Diepsloot SAPS, he decided to remain outside while others were briefed inside the station. From the station the vehicles proceeded to the Squatter Camp. Along the way his co-workers informed him that there was a suspect who was being traced at the Squatter Camp.

When they arrived at the place where the suspect was, he remained inside the vehicle because it was raining and he did not have a rain coat. He saw the suspect when they brought him to the vehicle. After members of the Hawks and Crime Intelligence who were unknown to him arrested the suspect, they were requested to escort the suspect to Silverton DPCI offices. They escorted the suspect and at Silverton DPCI offices he saw Captain Maluleke who was wearing a Cowboy hat with two unknown African males who were travelling in a white BMW with Zimbabwean registration numbers. Captain Maluleke further said that they were Zimbabwean police who came to take the suspect, referring to the suspect whom they had just arrested at Diepsloot.

While they were with the suspect, he told them that some weeks back he was in Zimbabwe attending a funeral of some of the people he committed crime with and also knew they were after him. He was telling them when Captain Maluleke and Zimbabwean police were inside the offices.

They were requested to take the suspect to Pretoria Moot SAPS for detention. Before they went to Pretoria Moot SAPS, photos of all members involved in the operation were taken. When they arrived at Pretoria Moot Police station, Captain Maluleke detained the suspect and they then knocked off.

Johannes Mpeti Moatshi A61: He will state that in January 2011 he was on duty posted at Diepsloot as a result of xenophobic violence prevalent at the time. At 13h00 on that particular day, he received a call via two ways radio from his commander to go Diepsloot police station. When he arrived with his colleagues he found the commander of Diepsloot Police station who introduced them to Captain Maluleke who was with two male persons and a female. The two male persons and a female were introduced as members of Crime Intelligence. Captain Maluleke informed them that there is a person who has committed serious cases in Zimbabwe and he is very dangerous. Captain Maluleke further said that the suspect was with the informer and had to be arrested. He will further state that they went into Diepsloot where the suspect and the informer were pointed out. After the arrest of the suspect they went to a certain shack where members of Crime Intelligence conducted a search but nothing was found. They were told by Captain Maluleke to transport the suspect to DPCI offices in Silverton. At Silverton Captain Maluleke requested them to book the suspect at Moot Police with the instruction that no visitor is allowed for the suspect. He cannot remember the name of the suspect but he remembers taking photos with the officers from Zimbabwe.

Tshatoa Jacob Seletela A63: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani and that of Sello John Phaswana in all material aspects.

Matsobane Silas Mokontlo A78: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani and that of Sello John Phaswana as well that of Tshatoa Jacob Seletela.

Andries Nxumalo A65: will state that around 11 or 26 January 2011 he was working in Diepsloot as a result of xenophobic violence at that time. He heard over the radio that they were wanted at Diepsloot Police station. When he arrived at the station he found Captain Maluleke, two male officers and one female who were introduced to him as members of Crime Intelligence. He will further state that Captain Maluleke requested them to assist in the arrest of Zimbabwean National who committed serious crimes in Zimbabwe. Together with his colleagues they went to a section in Diepsloot where the suspect was said to reside. The suspect was arrested and taken to DPCI offices in Silverton; he participated in a photo shoot with members of Zimbabwean Police. After the photo shoot, they took the suspect to Moot Police station for detention.

Constable Hosea Tshabalala A83: He will state that on 28/11/2011 he was officially on duty posted at Diepsloot. While still on duty was requested together with his colleagues to assist them in tracing a suspect who was involved in the murder of Zimbabwean Colonel in Zimbabwe. Constable Rikhotso and his female co-worker briefed them that the suspect was with the informer. When they arrived at the exact place, they found the suspect standing in front of the luck-shop. They arrested him and took him to his room where they found a woman with a small baby. Constable Rikhotso and his female colleague search the room. The suspect was taken to Silverton at the DPCI offices where they found two Zimbabwean police officers. He will further state that the suspect informed him that some few weeks while he was in Zimbabwe he attended the funeral of his colleague who was killed by the Zimbabwean police and the same Zimbabwean police will kill him when he arrive in Zimbabwe. He was requested to detain the suspect at Moot police but he cannot remember the person who made the request.

4.7. STATEMENTS OF CRIME INTELLIGENCE MEMBERS WHO TRACED AND ARRESTED GORDON DUBE AND JOHNSON NYONI.

Masiloa Rikhotso A67: He will state that in January 2011 of which he cannot remember the exact date he went to Wierdabrug police station at the CIAC office which is responsible for profiling and identification of crime hot spots. When he arrived he found Constable Sombhane who was working at the CIAC office. Constable Sombhane gave him a list of wanted suspects and on top of the list was Gordon Dube who was wanted in connection with murder in Zimbabwe and robberies in South Africa. He came back to his office and organized with his contacts to look for Gordon Dube. It took two weeks for the contact to trace the suspect. He will further state that his contact informed him that he found Gordon Dube and together with his colleagues they went to Thembe in order to apprehend the suspect. He was informed that the suspect will be coming since he wanted to buy bullets from someone. He will further state that while they were in Thembisa and they managed to spot the suspect. When he moved they pursued him until they arrested him in Diepsloot. They found the suspect in possession of an unlicensed firearm. He saw the same firearm with Captain Maluleke at the Hawks offices after it was returned from the ballistics. The suspect was taken to Wierdabrug for detention. Again in January 2011 he received information from Captain Maluleke who requested him to look for John Nyoni. He then tasked his informer again to assist in the arrest of Nyoni. On 26/11/2011 he went to Diepsloot having organized with his Contact to arrest John Nyoni. When he arrived the Contact pointed out the suspect and he was arrested. After they arrested John Nyoni, his house was searched but nothing was found. They took the suspect to Silverton DPCI offices. They were assisted by members of TRT. He will further state that he participated in the photo shoot with the Zimbabwean police. He also heard Captain Maluleke requesting members of the TRT to take the suspect to Moot Police station.

Platnash Mokgobu A69: She will state that she is employed by the South African Police Services stationed at Crime Intelligence in Pretoria with a rank of Constable. On 12/01/2011 while in the office they received information from their Contact/Informer and he tipped them off about a crime that was going to take place at Diepsloot. They then proceeded there with a backup of members from Ivory Park Police Station where they effected an arrest on Gordon Dube at Diepsloot.

In January 2011 they received information from CIAC at Wierdaburg regarding the wanted suspect John Nyoni. The person they liaised with at CIAC was Constable Sombhane who also gave them the number of Captain Maluleke. She also spoke to Maluleke over the phone while they were there. They then drove to the Hawks offices to meet with Captain Maluleke who told them that the suspect has murdered a police officer in Zimbabwe.

They then tasked their Contact/Informer to look for the suspect, who did and the suspect was arrested. After the arrest of John Nyoni, they all proceeded to the Hawks offices where they gathered together for a photo shoot. Captain Maluleke exchanged the taking of photos with the Zimbabwean police. The photo of the suspect was also taken and the exhibit which is a firearm was also photographed. After the photo shoot she went to the shop, but when she came back she was told that General Dramat was with Colonel McIntosh and he had just addressed the people in her absence. She felt that she missed out on the speech of General Dramat but her colleagues told her that he was just congratulating them for a job well done.

Superintendent Ncube from Zimbabwe who was wearing a black shirt and spectacles told us that he will be sending us letters of congratulation from Zimbabwe. She still recalls that later they were called by Brigadier Britz from Crime Intelligence Provincial office, and he showed them an appreciation letter from the Zimbabwean government. He told them that they would be called by Provincial Commissioner Mzwandile Petros to meet with them as a result of their good work. She does not know what happened to John Nyoni thereafter.

Emmanuel Dinizulu Mkasibe A68: His statement corroborates that of Platnash Mokgobu in all material aspects. He will state further that shortly after the photos were taken, he saw General Dramat of the Hawks. General Dramat was with the spokesperson of the Hawks known to him as Colonel McIntosh Polefo. They then gathered together and Captain Matuleke introduced General Dramat and the spokesperson. General Dramat addressed and thanked them for arresting the suspect. After he said that he left and Captain Matuleke told us that he was organizing a celebration braai. While they were busy enjoying themselves, a lady working at the Hawks offices with Captain Matuleke came and joined them. She wanted the meat to take home because there was too much meat. She was requested to download the photos from the camera by Captain Matuleke.

He will state further that he then decided to follow her to the office. When she downloaded the photos he requested her to print the photos for him. She agreed and printed many photos which he took home and still have them even now.

Constable Pololo Fortune Mngwenya A75: He will state under oath that on the 29/01/2011 he was called by his colleagues after the arrest of Johnson Nyoni to join them at DPCI offices in Silverton for a braai. He will further state that when he arrived he found Zimbabwean police and some of his colleagues participating in a photo shoot. Shortly after the photo shoot Lt. General Dramat came and thanked them for the job well done.

Statement of Briandier A G Britz of Crime Intelligence A79: He will state that During January and February 2011, Constable Rikholso and his female colleague visited his office and informed him that they arrested two Zimbabweans who were involved in a spate of arm robberies and recovered a firearm. He congratulated them without enquiring the details of the case. In March 2011 he received a letter which was addressed to Col Mnteni from CID Provincial Headquarters in Zimbabwe Bulawayo-Zimbabwe. A copy of the letter is attached to his statement. He then arranged with Col Mnteni to send the officers to the next Crime Intelligence Provincial Management meeting in order for them to be congratulated. After the management meeting he also wrote a letter to Lt. General Toka's signature to the Provincial Commissioner in order for him to congratulate the members. On 15/07/2011 he received four letters from the Provincial Commissioner thanking members for good work. He will further state that he had no prior knowledge that the suspects arrested were wanted in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police.

STATEMENTS OF DIEPSLOOT SAPS MEMBERS REGARDING GORDON DUBE

Witness Rambuda A72: He will state that in January 2011 he was working Diepsloot as a Detective. There were three suspects who were arrested after they were involved in the shooting incident with the police. They recovered a firearm which was booked into SAPS 13 and received exhibit number SAPS 13/31/2011. He was involved in the charging of the suspects and they were attending court at Altridgville. After some few days he received a call from Captain Matuleke of the Hawks asking him to go to Ballistic Pretoria and collect the firearm as he had already made arrangement with them. He collected the firearm and handed it Captain Matuleke. Captain Matuleke told him that he has a case he is investigation against one of the suspects. He informed him that the firearm belongs to Zimbabwe. He typed a letter on his computer acknowledging the firearm but he does not remember where he put the letter.

He will further state that Captain Maluleke told him that he had made an arrangement with the prosecutor at Atteridgeville to withdraw the case so that he could be able to transport the suspect and the firearm to Zimbabwe.

Warrant Officer Isaac Dlamini A70: He will state that in January 2011 docket Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 was assigned to him for further investigation. The docket had three suspect arrested for possession of unlicensed firearm and ammunition. The names of the suspects were Menzi Dube, God Dube and Sidingumunzi Dumanl. He received a call from "Cowboy" Maluleke of the Hawks to hand the Case dockets Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 to his office in Silverton. He said the docket had to be investigated together with other dockets wherein God Dube is a suspect. He further said that the firearm which is an exhibit in his docket was used to kill a senior officer in Zimbabwe. Captain Maluleke took the docket and gave them acknowledgement of receipt.

He will further state that Captain Cowboy in the presence of Constable Rambuda told him that he will facilitate the release of the suspect from prison and he will talk to the prosecutor to withdraw the case. After sometimes seeing that the docket was under his name, he opened a duplicate and sent it to the prosecutor. The prosecutor decided to decline to prosecute and the duplicate docket was filed.

Leon Meyer A73: He will state that he was investigating several cases wherein Godi Dube was a suspect. The cases were as follows, Wierdabrug Cas 531/12/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 220/02/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 147/11/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 1022/12/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 310/10/2010 and Diepsloot 93/01/2011. He was informed by Captain Maluleke from the Hawks that suspect Alfred Godi Dube was also wanted in Zimbabwe. According to Maluleke he was also wanted for murder as per Butawayo CR 438/09/2010. He will further state that he booked out suspect Godi Dube and handed him to Captain Maluleke. Captain Maluleke informed him that suspect Gordon Dube will be handed over to the Zimbabwean government through immigration channels.

Sindy Daisy Dorcus Sombhane A74: She will state that during 2010 and 2011 she was based at Wierdabrug attached to Crime Intelligence unit. During 2010 she gave Constable Rikhotso a list of wanted suspects in Wierdabrug. She also met Captain Maluleke at Wierdabrug who told her that he is looking for a suspect known as Godi Dube. She contacted Constable Rikhotso and informed him that Captain Maluleke was at Wierdabrug inquiring about Godi Dube. She gave him the contact numbers of Captain Maluleke.

She will further state that on the 11/01/2011 she saw the name of Godi Dube on the cell Register and decided to call Constable Rikhotso. Constable Rikhotso confirmed that he arrested Godi Dube the previous night (11/01/2011). She went to the cells and interviewed Godi Dube who said he would get a lawyer because the police assaulted him.

5.1.1. EXTRACTS FROM OCCURRENCE BOOKS & SAPS 14 REGISTERSThe Investigation at Orlando Police Station uncovered the following:

Specific reference to OB 278 to 279 (A8): The entries made from 04h10 of 06/11/2010 to 12h00 of the 08/11/2010 confirm that Captain M L. Makuleke of the DPCI with force number 0622729518 arrested Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghabane Sibanda and Shepard Chuma.

Specific Reference to OB 429 (A9): Entry made at 11h00 of 08/11/2010 confirm that that Captain M L. Makuleke of the DPCI with cell number 0827729518 booked out Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghabane Sibanda and Shepard Chuma to Bell Bridge.

SAPS 14 (A10): The cell register dated 2010/11/05 to 2010/11/08 indicates that the following suspects were charged and detained, Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghabane Sibanda, Shepard Chuma. The reason for detention of the suspects as per register is stated as "Illegal Immigrants". The entry was made by Sergeant Thomas Pixene Satage who also later confirmed this in a sworn statement.

The Investigation at Alexandra Police Station uncovered the following:

OB entry 22/11/10 (A57/1): The entry made on 22/11/2010 shows the booking of Prichard Chuma by Captain Nkosi. However Nkosi wrote the name and contact numbers of Captain Makuleke as the person who is the Investigating Officer of the case.

OB entry 23/11/2010 (A57/2): The entry dated 23/08/2010 shows the booking out of Prichard Chuma by Warrant Officer Selepe.

The Investigation at Silverton Police Station uncovered the following:

OB entry 23/11/12 A58/1: Warrant Officer Selepe booked in Prichard Chuma at Silverton Police station with Bulawayo case number.

OB entry 24/11/2012 A58/2: Warrant officer Selepe booked out Chuma to Bell Bridge. However Captain Makuleke also signed, acknowledging the release of Prichard Chuma into his hands/custody.

The Investigation at Pretoria Mpol Police station uncovered the following:

OB entry 28/01/11 (A56/1): Warrant Officer Johannes Mpall Moatshi booked in Johnson Nyoni by the instruction of Captain Makuleke for Fraud.

OB entry 28/01/11 (A56/2): Captain Makuleke booked out Johnson Nyoni to Bell Bridge for Fraud.

SAPS 14: Captain Makuleke appended his signature on the entry and it shows that the release of Johnson Nyoni to Captain Makuleke was for extradition purpose.

RENDITIONS (DIEPSLOOT CAS 930/07/2012)

The investigation at Wierdebrog Police Station uncovered the following:

OB entry 12/01/12 (A71/1): Gordon Dube, Andrew Dube, Dumani Stimusy were detained for possession of unlicensed firearm. The same firearm was found to belong to the murdered Zimbabwean Police Officer.

Body Receipts SAPS 216 (A71/2): They show that Gordon Dube, Andrew Dube and Dumani Stimusy were received from court on 14/01/2011 together but on 28/01/2011 Gordon Dube was not amongst the other suspects. Pretoria Prison records show that Dube was release on the 28th January 2013 to Constable Meyer of Wierdebrog Police station.

Copies of case dockets linking Gordon Dube, which were discontinued after Gordon Dube's deportation (B20).

Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011:

The case docket was opened after Gordon Dube was found in possession of an unlicensed firearm. The original docket was handed to Captain Maluleke and a duplicate docket had to be constructed without some of the statements in the original docket. The suspect Gordon Dube was attending court in terms of admission detail report of Pretoria Central Correctional Services and the body receipt form both filed as per AB4/1 and AB4/2 respectively.

Wierdebrog Cas 531/12/2010:

The case docket was opened after Gordon Dube allegedly robbed a certain business at Olivenhoutbosch where a shot was fired. An empty cartridge was successfully linked with a firearm which Gordon Dube was found in possession of in Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011. There is also a copy of a statement made by Captain Maluleke indicating that because of the seriousness of the cases committed by Gordon Dube in Zimbabwe, Dube was handed over to Zimbabwean Government and he was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Wierdebrog Cas 280/02/2010:

The case docket was opened after Gordon Dube allegedly murdered a person at Serebeli area. The projectile found in the body of the deceased was linked to the firearm recovered from Gordon Dube during his arrest as per Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011. Gordon Dube was still attending court with the next court date set for 30/03/2011. Captain Maluleke also submitted a statement in which he indicated that because of the seriousness of the cases committed by Gordon Dube in Zimbabwe, Dube was handed over to Zimbabwean Government and he was sentenced to life imprisonment.

5.2 DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE ACQUIRED FROM DPCI OFFICES.

Success report dated 04/02/2011 (A82/3): The report was addressed to General Dramat, General Hlatshwayo and General Toka with a heading that reads, "CONSOLIDATED SUCCESS REPORT: MOST WANTED FUGITIVE: WANTED FOR MURDER AND ROBBERY: DPCI TOMS REF: 3/12/2010: AND ZIMBABWE (BULAWAYO CR 348/09/2010): WITNESS DUMISANI NKOSI@NDEYA: ZIMBABWEAN NATIONALS AND OTHERS.

The report also covers the arrest of Gordon Dube and appreciation of TRT members and members of Crime Intelligence.

Success report dated 11/11/2013 (A82/1-82/2): The report bears reference number 28/02/1 and again addressed to Deputy National Commissioner DPCI. The person to whom enquiries must be directed is Captain Maluleke whereas the signatory is Col P J Selundu. The report further stated the arrest of Dumisani Witness Vundla @ Ndeya and Shepard Chuma.

Overtime and Itineraries of Captain Maluleke (B18): On 08/11/2010 went to Beit Bridge (Limpopo) for investigation and claimed overtime. On 24/11/2010 he went to Beit Bridge and also claimed overtime. 5.3 EVIDENCE ACQUIRED FROM CAPTAIN MALULEKE'S SEIZED LAPTOP (A87).

Success report ref: 26/2/1 and 14/02/01: They were generated in Captain Maluleke's laptop before being signed by Col L Versier and forwarded to General Dramat. The report recovered from the computer has a different reference number but same content. Report 14/02/01 has reference 0627239-8/5

Letter to Diepsfontein Station Commander: The recovered letter states that the firearm which was found in Gordon Dube's possession and handed to Captain Maluleke after ballistic examination was taken to Zimbabwe permanently.

Emails by Captain Maluleke: He sent e-mails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. He sent email to Zimbabwean police trying to find out how they travelled back home and that he is still tracing the remaining suspects..

Photos: More than 70 photos were found, the majority of them relate to the operation involving Zimbabwean Nationals. Zimbabwean police appear on the photos and the white BMW with clear Zimbabwean registration number.

Letter to Home Affairs dated 08/11/2010: The letter was addressed to home affairs requesting assistance in the Deportation of the Zimbabwean nationals involved in the murder of Zimbabwean police. Even though the letter is dated 08/11/2010, it was generated in November 2011, shortly after the news about illegal deportation of Zimbabwean nationals hit the media.

Letter to stakeholders dated 20/08/2012: The letter was generated the same day indicating the trip to Zimbabwe to discuss matters of cooperation on cross border crimes.

Documents regarding Bongani Moyo's case: This case is separate from the events that led to the arrest and deportation of the Zimbabwean Nationals into the hands of Zimbabwean authority. However it is a clear case of return of favor by Zimbabwean authorities to South Africa. In terms of the documents retrieved, Bongani Moyo escaped from Boksburg prison on 2011/03/28, a month and half after South Africa deported illegally the Zimbabwean nationals who were wanted by Zimbabwean authorities. An amount of R50 000 rewards was also provided for any information that could lead to the arrest of Moyo. Captain Maluleke stated that his informer told him that Moyo was on his way to cross the border in South Africa after being shot by Zimbabwean police. According to the formal statement of Captain Maluleke, he arrested Moyo on the 13/05/2011 after he was found in the vehicle that crossed the border into South Africa. The other information retrieved provides contrary account of what happened. In a letter he states that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011. Moyo was subsequently shot at transported to the border with the help of Zimbabwean police.

Statement of Bongani Moyo: he will state under oath that in May 2011 he was in Zimbabwe Bulawayo busy speaking over the cellphone when Zimbabwean police arrived at his house. After identifying him they assaulted him and handcuffed him. They put him in the back and drove to the bush, where they ordered him to lie down. They then shot him on both knees. He was then taken to Central Hospital in Zimbabwe where he was treated before released to the hands of the Zimbabwean Police. After being release he was transported to Bell Bridge by seven Zimbabwean police. He will further state that they were travelling in a white Toyota Fortuner and he was handed to the South African Police at Bell Bridge.

5.4 DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE FROM HOME AFFAIRS

Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigners (BI-1725) – This document was produced by the SAPS as a proof that Shepard Chuma, Wilness Ndeya and Nelson Ndlovu were detained for being illegal foreigners and they were seen by an Immigration Officer. However the signature that appears on the docket does not belong to any member of Home Affairs in Gauteng and the appointment number 037152 does not exist.

It was also uncovered that the BI-1725 used was discontinued in 2008 according to Home Affairs and in 2010 it was no longer part of the official documents of Home Affairs. The stamp on both documents clearly shows that whosoever completed the document used the old form already completed and deleted affiliated information to put the information of the three foreign nationals. The handwriting expert in her findings has indicated that the signature in each document does not resemble the sampled signature provided by members of Home Affairs.

Notification of The Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DHA-1089) documents were produced by SAPS as proof that the Nelson Ndlovu, Shepard Chuma and Maqhawa Sibanda were deported through Bell Bridge Border. However the form has been wrongly stamped and does not have finger prints of the deportee as required. The stamp number 20 belonging to Bell Bridge was used and such stamp is not for that purpose. The stamp is individualized and belongs to Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Moflahlo who on the day in which the stamp was used was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe, she is the only person in possession of the key to the safe.

Bell Bridge Duty Roster – This is a duty register used by Immigration Officers at Bell Bridge. The register confirms that Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Moflahlo was off duty on 7th and 8th of November 2010.

Bell Bridge Movement data: The data entails information pertaining to the entry and exit of people who were identified by Colonel Madilonga as members of Zimbabwean police who approached him with a request to see Lt General Dramat.

Expert report on the Home Affairs Documents A81/1 and A81/2: The documents which were handed by Col Basl which are Notification of the deportation of the Illegal Foreigner and Warrant of Detention were sent to the forensic laboratory for analysis.

5.5 EVIDENCE IN TERMS OF SECTION 205 OF THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE ACT.

CELLPHONE RECORD OF MAJOR GENERAL SIBIYA (0725953168) AND (0724798484)

Reason for 205 application	Findings
To test the version of the witnesses who alleged to have seen Major General Sibiya at the crime scene	Major General Sibiya was never at the crime scenes or planning area as alleged by members of Crime Intelligence.

CELLPHONE RECORD OF LT GENERAL DRAMAT (0825515311)

Reason for 205 application	Findings
To verify whether he had interaction with the Zimbabwean Authority regarding the arrests of Zimbabwean Nationals. To clarify as alleged by the witnesses whether he received Zimbabwean police in relation to the murder case of a senior officer in Zimbabwe	The entire cellphone record of Lt General Dramat does show any interaction with the Zimbabwean counterparts. However the fact that Zimbabwean police might have entered the country is confirmed by photographs but there is no evidence that they were with Lt General Dramat. The photos show them with members of the TRT, Captain Maluleke and members of Crime Intelligence.

CELLPHONE RECORD OF MAJOR GENERAL HLATSWAYO (0828051210)

Reason for 205 application	Findings
To test the version that Captain Maluleke was reporting direct to Major General Hlatshwayo regarding cross border issues. During the interview with the said General she denied having known about the Zimbabwean police and requested us to do apply for 205 in order to clear her name.	Her interaction with Captain Maluleke confirms her version that she did not know anything about the arrest and deportations of Zimbabwean Nationals. She was never at the scene or at Fourways Shopping center where the alleged planning took place.

CELLPHONE RECORD OF LT GENERAL LEBEYA (0825761899)

Reason for 205 application	Findings
To verify the automated SMS send by Major General Sibiya and whether when he signed on one of the success report he had more information about the operation.	The evidence shows that he did not know anything about the operation that led to the arrest of the Zimbabwean Nationals.

CELLPHONE RECORD OF CAPTAIN MALULEKE (082 7729518)

Reason for 205 application	Findings
To test the version of the witnesses who alleged that Captain Maluleke led the operations that led to the arrest of Zimbabwean Nationals	There is prime facie case against Captain Maluleke.

Reason for 205 application	Findings
To test the version of the witnesses who alleged that they were at the crime scenes and they took money and assaulted the Zimbabwean Nationals.	The record confirms that they were at the scene even though the allegation of theft is not corroborated

CELLPHONE RECORD OF LT COL MADLONGA (078 520 9741) AND (0713550548)

Reason for 205 application	Findings
To test his version in which he alleged that he received a call from Captain Makuleke on 08/11/2010 regarding the deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals	Their interaction confirms the version of Madlonga.

5.6 STATEMENTS OF SENIOR MEMBERS OF SAPS AND SECRETARIAT

Lt General Mkhwanazi A99: He will state that in late 2011 when he was an acting National Commissioner of South African Police Services, he heard on the news when Minister Radebe was commenting about the alleged death of Zimbabwean Citizens as a result of being handed to the Zimbabwean Authorities by South African Police Services. He immediately contacted the Head of the DPCI Lt General Dramat and inquired about the issue. Lt General Dramat confirmed that members of his unit did transport the Zimbabwean Citizens but as illegal immigrants. He then summoned Lt General Dramat to his office. Lt General Dramat came with an officer who was introduced to him as "Cowboy". He was informed that Cowboy was in charge of the group that transported the Zimbabwean Citizens. Cowboy said that he was investigating a case of ATM bombing which led him to the Zimbabwean Citizens. After he realized they were not linked to the case he decided to transport them to Beit Bridge because they did not have valid documents. Cowboy further said that he got valid deportation documents from Home Affairs before he could transport them. He will further state that he could not understand why Cowboy did not hand over the immigrants to Home Affairs. When he asked whether it was necessary to transport illegal immigrants, Lt General Dramat could not offer any explanation.

Lt General Lebeva A97: He will state that when he commented on the success report regarding the Zimbabwean Nationals arrested, he only did it as a practice. He will further state that Major General Sibya has an automated messaging which includes his number wherein automated success report or information is sent. He cannot remember what all the messages were about, which he received on 05/11/2010.

Ms. Jennifer Irish-Ohobosheane A100: She will state that she is the Head of the Civilian Secretariat and the Secretary of Police. She became aware of the allegations of renditions on 22/10/2011 when she saw an article in a Sunday Times newspaper entitled, "Journey to death in an unmarked car". The Minister requested a detailed response from the DPCI to be submitted to him in writing. She received two official responses in a form of information notes to the Minister. Based on the different information supplied to the Minister of Police, the Minister felt that the matter needed further inquiry to establish whether there is any evidence that the SAPS might have violated international laws and procedures and/or South African laws.

Warning Statement of Lt General Dramat A94/1: He will state that he is the Deputy National Commissioner of the South African Police Services. He unequivocally point out that at no stage during his correct role as the National Head of the DPCI did he ever personally authorize the unlawful and intentional depriving of a person liberty, or movement, and/or his custodians of control on any basis whatsoever. He will further state that never authorized anyone or sanctioned the kidnapping any of the Zimbabwean Nationals. He knows of no action that he took or authorize which was aimed at defeating the administration of Justice.

Warning Statement of Major General Sibya A101: He will state that he was never appointed as the head of TOMS. However he received reports from his members regarding successes as routine. He was never part of the operation that arrested the Zimbabwean National who was wanted in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean Colonel in Zimbabwe.

5.7 STATEMENT ON HOW DIEPSLOOT Cas 390/07/2012 WAS INVESTIGATED

Innocent Humbulani Khuba A102: He will state that he is a member of Independent Police Investigative Directorate base in Limpopo. On 23 October 2012 he received a case docket from Mr. Sesoko and appointment letter to conduct investigation in all cases of alleged assault against Major General Sibya. The docket received is Diepsloot Cas 390/07/2012. He also received a copy of the letter which was sent to Mr Sesoko by Major General Sibya complaining about the conduct of North West Task Team which was tasked to investigate cases against him including Diepsloot Cas 390/07/2012. He was informed by Mr Sesoko who was the National head of IPID of investigation that the reason he was appointed to be the new Task Team Leader was that Major General Sibya complained against the North West Task Team. He was advised to assemble a team that would assist me in the investigation of these cases. The team assembled comprised of the following individuals, Mr Kenneth Ratshilal, Mr. L Maphetho, Mr N Mulaudzi and Mr T Mashaphu who are all investigators from Limpopo Provincial office. They worked under his guidance and took instructions directly from him as the team leader.

Upon his perusal of Diepsloot Cas 390/07/2012 and other accompanying documents, he discovered that the Independent Police Investigative Directorate received a complaint of alleged renditions involving members of the DPCI headed by Lt General Dramat from Civilian Secretariat. The case was reported as result of parliamentary question by Cope Member of Parliament and an article by Sunday Times. The docket had following statements obtained by members of South African Police Services, the statement of Shepard Chuma, Maghawe Sibanda, Nelson Ndlovu, Bongani Henry Yende, Petros Jawuke, Desmond Campbell, Alfred Ndoba, Andrew Mark Sampson, Reason Mhgwumbe Sibanda, Rachael Ncube, Brightness Nka Ncube, Madala Bhakisisa Nyoni and Sibongile Mpofo. There were also copies of Occurrence Book and cell Registers from Orlando police station regarding the detention and booking out of the following individuals, Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghawe Sibanda and Shepard Tshuma. There were also four Detention Warrants, four Deportations Notifications and a copy of Witness Ndeya's death certificate.

He took over the case for further investigation in terms of Section 206(6) of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa which provides that, on receipt of a complaint lodged by a Provincial Executive, an Independent Complaints body established by the national legislation must investigate any alleged misconduct or offences allegedly committed by members of SAPS. It was also in terms of Section 28 (1) (f) and (h) of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act 1 of 2011 that the decision to investigate the case was made.

On 13 November 2012, a letter requesting an interview with Home Affairs officials and documents regarding the movement of people at Musina Belt Bridge port of entry was e-mailed to Mr. Ndlovu of the Deportation section at Home Affairs Head Office in Pretoria. On 08/02/2013 the permission was granted after he had a meeting with Mr. M Mathews, the Chief Director responsible for deportation and mending of Ports of Entry. Prior to the interview with Home Affairs officials, he visited Orlando Police station on 10/01/2013 and interviewed Brigadier Zangwa and other members stationed at Orlando. He received copies of the Occurrence Book and cell registers include a color copy of the Sunday Newspaper regarding the incident.

On 15/02/2013 he went to Home Affairs Department in Pretoria and interview Peter Ndwandwe and Notwandle Qaba about the incident and process involved in the deportation of undocumented persons or illegal immigrants. He received a copy of DZP policy from Mr Ndwandwe and the Immigration Act. On 21/02/2013 he went to Soweto and obtained the statements of the following individuals, Johannes L. Broodryk, Patiswa Skoena and Job Jackson. Job Jackson who is the Manager of Lindela Holding facility for illegal immigrants gave him a printout of all people who were deported during the DZP period which covers the time of the alleged deportation of the Zimbabwean Nationals. The list is filed as A34 in the docket.

On 25/02/2013 he went to Bell Bridge and obtained a statement of Peter Eiberg. He also gave him an example used copy of Notice of Deportation which is filed as A38 and Duty Rooster for the period 5 November 2010 to 13 November 2010 which is filed as per A40. On 26/02/2013 he went to Turfloop and obtained statement of Magret Mohlako, an Immigration officer whose stamp was allegedly used in the documents that resulted in deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals.

During the investigation of the case he visited the office of LI General Dramat on 07/03/2013 and a meeting was held between LI General Dramat and him. He will further state that at that stage the investigation had not uncovered any evidence relating to the involvement of LI General Dramat or any other senior officer of DPCI. The meeting was held at LI General Dramat's office which is located at Silverton.

{DEPSUBOT CAS 390/07/2012}

During the meeting, Lt General Dramat was informed about the allegation of kidnapping and assault leveled against members of DCPCI most especially Captain Maluleke who is now a Lt Colonel. He said that he had sanctioned internal investigation in the matter and the outcome of the investigation cleared Lt Colonel Maluleke of any wrong doing. When I asked him whether they were any Zimbabwean police who visited the DPCI offices, he said that there were no Zimbabwean police who came into the country regarding the alleged matter and that all Zimbabwean Nationals were deported through Home Affairs for being illegal immigrants. Lt General Dramat was requested to provide statement with regard to the formation of TOMS, his knowledge about the DZP, source documents that informed the internal investigation, his report to parliament and knowledge about the involvement of Zimbabwean police in the operation of TOMS. He informed me that the request should be forwarded to Col Basi and he would hand all the necessary documents including his sworn statement to him.

On 07/03/2013, shortly after the meeting he generated and emailed a letter to Col Basi. On 19/04/2013 he met with Col Basi in front of the Interpol building on Pretorius Street in Pretoria. He handed to him a brown envelope containing following documents, cell phone records of Captain Maluleke, Lt Col Neethling and Major General Sibiya. There were also copies of sworn statements of, Willem Carel Stephanus Vorster, Andree Neethling, Captain Maluleke, Vincent Selotole, Major General Sibiya, Warrant Officer Makoe, Ndanduleni Madlonga and Warrant Officer Rodgers Nhlamu. Attached to the copy of the statement of Warrant Officer Nhlamu were copies of the following documents, Warrant of Detention (BI-1725) for the following individuals, Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Shepard Tshuma, Nelson Ndlovu and Maqhawe Sibanda. There were also four Notifications of the Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DHA-1889) for the following individuals, Nelson Ndlovu, Shepherd Chuma, Maqhawe Sibanda and Witness Ndeya. The Warrant of Detention and Notification of the Deportation forms attached to Warrant Officer Nhlamu statement appeared to be similar to the one received from Secretariat which were already part of the docket. The Warrants of Detentions and Notifications of Deportation received from Warrant Officer Nhlamu were the one sent to the Forensic Lab for analysis on 10/08/2013 and 21/08/2013. The documents given to him by Col Basi also include search result report from Interpol indicating that Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maqhawe Sibanda and Shepard Tshuma were not in the wanted list. However there was no statement of Lt General Dramat in the envelope handed to him. The documents handed to him are filed in the docket as per A41-A50.

In April 2013 he called Constable Radebe and Warrant Officer Makoe for the purpose of obtaining their warning statements. He never compelled anyone to implicate Senior Members of the DPCI. However, he informed them that they can arrange a service of a lawyer in order for them to be guided during the process. Shortly after speaking with them he received a call from Lt Col Maluleke who told me that he was not supposed to request warning statements from his people because on the day he arrested Zimbabwean Nationals he was the lead man and Constable Radebe and Warrant Officer Makoe were taking instructions from him. He informed him that he cannot answer on their behalf and that when his turn comes he will be informed accordingly. He will further state that on the day set for interview none of the above members came for the interview.

She also assisted him by phoning Supply Chain of DPCI and obtained the serial number of Captain Maluleke's laptop which he used during 2010 and 2011. On the same day he generated a letter to Col Mabuyela who was assigned by Brigadier Kadwa to assist him with documents or items needed from the DPCI offices for the purpose of investigation. He hand-delivered the letter to Col Mabuyela on 11/07/2013, requesting the following things, Dell Laptop with serial number CNOJF242486436BL3424 which was assigned to Lt Col Maluleke, approved overtime claims for Lt Col Maluleke for the following period 01/11/2010-31/01/2011, approved trip itineraries for Lt Col Maluleke for the period 01/11/2010-31/01/2011, Telkom call record for Lt Col Maluleke for the period 01/11/2010-31/03/2011, record regarding the disposal and if not yet disposed, the handset used by Lt Col Maluleke, record of successes of operations conducted between 01/11/2010-31/03/2011 and logbooks of vehicles used by Lt Col Maluleke for the period 01/11/2010-28/02/2011. On 12/07/2013 he went to meet with Col Mabuyela and he received success reports which are filed as per A82/1-A83/3.

The success report filed as per A82/3 contains names of officials who assisted in the arrest of Gordon Dube who are members of TRT and Crime Intelligence. On 18/07/2013 he went to Johannesburg Central Police Station and obtained the statements of members of TRT. One of the members by the name of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani (A82/2) had photos at home of Johnson Nyoni and Zimbabwean Police. He went to his house on the same day and collected the two photos which are filed as per A82/1. On 18/07/2013, he emailed a letter to the Commander of Crime Intelligent Pretoria Central, Col Ntonteni requesting interview with his members who are mentioned in success report dated 04/02/2011 (A82/3). On 25/07/2013 he went to Crime Intelligence offices in Pretoria and obtained the statements of the members. The interview with the members also revealed that the arrest of Gordon Dube and Johnson Nyoni was also known by Brigadier Britz. On 18/07/2013 a letter was generated and emailed to Brigadier Britz requesting a meeting for the purpose of interview and obtaining statement. He interview Brigadier Britz on 28/07/2013 and after the interview Brigadier Britz promised to write his own statement. He collected Brigadier Britz statement from his office on 22/08/2013 which is situated at Old Stock Exchange building in Johannesburg. He also received Report number GO-D-004-D which is admission details of Gordon Dube from Correctional Services which is filed as per A84/3 and SAPS 206 (body receipts) filed as per A81-A82.

He also discovered that Gordon Dube was facing number of charges in South Africa including murder. Statements of Isaac Dlamini and Avhashoni Rambau were obtained

In connection with Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 which they were investigating (A70 and A72). Original SAP 10 (Occurrence Book) was uplifted from Wierdabrug Police Station and copies are filed as per A71. Statement of Constable Meyer from Wierdabrug was obtained in relation to cases he was investigating against Gordon Dube and how he booked him out of prison and handed him to Captain Makuleka to be transported to Bell Bridge. He also obtained copies of the following dockets which are cases against Gordon Dube Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011, Wierdabrug Cas 147/11/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 310/10/2010, Wierdabrug Cas 431/10/2010 and Wierdabrug Cas 531/12/2010. All the copies of the docket are filed under B22 (arch file).

On 16/07/2013, he received a Dell Laptop from Col Mabuyela and Warrant Officer Danie bearing serial number CNJF242884368L3424. The Laptop was handed to Precision Forensics on 31/07/2013 at 18h00. The report from Precision Forensic was received on 22/08/2013 and is filed as per A89 (arch file).

In October 2013 he approached the Head of DPCI accompanied by Mr. Sesoko who was an Acting Head of investigation for IPID requested his warning statement. He was advised to seek an assistance of a lawyer for the purpose of guiding him before the warning statements is obtained. He agreed and informed them that he will telephonically contact Mr. Khuba regarding the suitable date. He will further state that he received a call from a person who introduced himself to him as Adv. P Seleka representing Lt General Dramat. He requested questions in writing and summary of the allegation which was e-mailed to him. After he received the questions, he was informed via e-mail that Lt General Dramat is represented by a new company and they will continue to liaise with him. He emailed the questions and after two weeks he received a copy of his statement and is file as per A94.

On 22/10/2013 he called Lt General Lebeya and requested an interview with regarding Renditions as his name appears on one of the success reports. On 23/10/2013 he met with Lt General Lebeya and interviewed him about the deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals in connection with the death of senior officer in Zimbabwe. After the interview he requested that he send questions in writing and that he would be able to respond to them. The questions were drafted and emailed to him the same day. On 07/11/2013 he received a call from his office to collect his statement including accompanying documents. The following documents were attached on his statement, copy of e-mail regarding documents requested from DPCI, mandate of TOMS, unsigned success report regarding Witness Ndeya and other success reports not related to the Diepsloot Cas 390/07/2012.

In November 2013 he engaged Captain Boonsira to arrange for a meeting between him and the two officers, Constable Radebe and Warrant Officer Makoe. Captain Boonsira informed him telephonically that he informed Warrant Officer Makoe and that Constable Radebe was attending training at Hamanskraal. He tried to contact him on 0797313608 for a warning statement but he was not reachable. In late November 2013, he again requested Captain Boonsira to assist but he informed him that the members were informed and they do not want to cooperate.

On 02 December 2013 he requested Principal Investigator Mr Mdunge based at East London IPID office to obtain a statement of Bongani Moyo who is serving his sentence at Kokstad Correctional Services A98. On 21/12/2013 he requested Mandla Mahlangu who is a Principal Investigator based in Gauteng IPID office to obtain a statement of a former acting National Commissioner Lt General Mkhwanazi A99. On 17/02/2014 he obtained a statement of the Secretary of Police Ms J Irish-Chobosheane and is filed as per A100 with the attachments of her internal inquiry. I also obtained the results of Lt Col Madifonga's statement analysis from Precision Forensics.

During the investigation of the case no one was either intimidated or assaulted. He never requested or forced any witness to implicate any person.

6. ANALYSIS OF EVIDENCE AND FINDINGS.

The operation carried out by TOMS to arrest Zimbabwean foreign nationals in Diepsloot in connection with the murder of Zimbabwean police Colonel was led by Captain M L. Maluleke also known as Cowboy.

Captain Maluleke was appointed as the head of cross border desk at the DPCI office to assist in the coordination and apprehending of cross border crime fugitives. In this responsibility he mends the desk alone thereby forging very strong ties with the law enforcement agencies of the neighboring countries such as Zimbabwe and Mozambique. His unique role and the fact that he was based at DPCI head office gave him the respect that even officers at the ranks of colonels and captains carried out his request without questions. This is corroborated by Lt Colonel Neethling who stated that he was requested by Captain Maluleke to assist in both tracing of the Zimbabwean Nationals and providing escort for their transportation to Beit Bridge border. He further stated that he felt obligated to assist because Captain Maluleke was based at DPCI head office and responsible for Cross border desk. During the interview with Ms. Leonie Verster who was the direct commander of Captain Maluleke, she stated that Captain Maluleke carried out his responsibility on cross border desk without supervision from her and she did not know much of what was happening. Captain Boonstra who worked under the command of Lt Col Neethling also stated that the operation which led to the arrest of Zimbabwean Nationals was led by Captain Maluleke. He inquired about the case number which the Zimbabwean nationals were sought for and a Bulawayo case number was given to him. Captain Nkosi corroborates many of Gauteng TOMS members that his participation in the operation was as a result of Captain Maluleke's request.

However the important question to ask is whether a crime was committed in the arrest and deportation of Zimbabwean national. The documents sourced from Interpol clearly outline the procedures which are to be followed by any law enforcement agency of any country if they want suspect/s who are in another country. During the interview with Warrant Officer Kgomo of Interpol coupled with the search done on Interpol database, it was established that procedures were not followed since the Zimbabwean Nationals arrested were not on the list of wanted fugitives and no warrants were issued in their names. The following evidences were found and can be analyzed as follows,

- The arrest of Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghawe Sibanda and Shepard Tshuma on 05/11/2010.

The operation that led to the arrest of Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghawe Sibanda and Shepard Tshuma was led by Captain Maluleke with a backup of the Gauteng TOMS members and Crime Intelligence. None of the participants in the operation ever stated that a request was made by any senior official of the DPCI requesting them to assist Captain Maluleke. The statements of members of Crime Intelligence who participated in this operation corroborate each other in that the group firstly met at Fourways Shopping Centre. The TOMS AVL also confirms, backed by the cellphone records of Captain Matuleke and Warrant Officer Makoe. However the claims made by Bongani Henry Yende (A4), Petros Jawuke (A5) and Desmond Campbell (A6) that Major General Sibiyi was at the planning venue (Fourways Shopping Complex) could not be substantiated. The cellphone record of Major General Sibiyi were analyzed by an expert and indicated that at the time of the alleged planning, Major General Sibiyi was in Pretoria. None of the witnesses who claim that Major General Sibiyi was at Fourways ever saw him in person but allude that they were informed by Warrant Officer Makoe that Major General Sibiyi was in the blue BMW. This information highlights the depicting false picture that can be created by hearsay evidence. It is immaterial of how many people heard Warrant Officer Makoe saying that Major General Sibiyi was in a blue BMW at Fourways Shopping Center but the evidence from the analysis of his cellphone records proves otherwise.

After planning at Fourways shopping Centre, Captain Matuleke went Diepsloot where two Zimbabwean Nationals were arrested. Other members who assisted Captain Matuleke in the arrest of Zimbabwean Nationals cannot be charged of any crime of kidnapping because they were rendering assistance to a normal police operation without any prior knowledge whether Captain Matuleke followed the procedures required in the arrest of a fugitive wanted by the law enforcement agency of another country. It also need to be proven that Captain Matuleke knew that the Zimbabwean Nationals were wanted by the Zimbabwean police and deliberately arrested or requested assistance in their arrest without following the correct procedures as required in terms of the law.

Shepard Tshuma (1) stated that one of the officer known as 'Leburu' took his wallet which was in his back pocket and removed R300-00. Constable Radebe was identified by other members of Crime Intelligence as "Leburu" and together with Warrant Officer Makoe carried out assaults on Zimbabwean Nationals while they were lying down. There was nothing wrong for Constable Radebe known as 'Leburu' and Warrant Officer Makoe to provide assistance to a police operation but stealing money and carryout assault on anyone constitute both theft and assault. However it is important that the version of the victim be corroborated in order to sustain a prima facie case against Warrant Office Makoe and Constable Radebe. From the available evidence it is clear that there is corroboration that Zimbabwean nationals were assaulted, but there is no medical evidence to prove such. It is also noteworthy that members of the DPCI contradict members of Crime Intelligence who corroborates the victims. If the assault did take place, it could also have been witnessed by members of DPCI. If the members of Crime Intelligence witnessed the assault why did they not stop it, or even immediately report what they witnessed. Because they had legal duty to act, the credibility of their version becomes questionable.

There is also insufficient evidence to prove that Constable Radebe took money from Shepard Tshuma. In addition Maghawe Sibanda (A2) claim that the police took his R500-00 but the identity of the officer who took the money is unknown.

Shepherd Tshuma (A1) stated that at the time of their arrest, Major General Sibiyi alighted from the black BMW and came to where they were lying. This version is disapproved by the cellphone records of Major General Sibiyi which shows that at the time of the arrest he was not at the scene. It is also inconsistent with the evidence provided by Petros Jawuke (A5) and Desmond Campbell (A6) who stated that they heard that General Sibiyi was in a blue BMW and did not see him in person. Captain Boonstra and Lt Col Neethling corroborate each other in that while they were aware of the presence of Zimbabwean police at the scene, Major General Sibuya was not at the scene. After the four Zimbabwean Nationals were arrested, they were taken to Orlando police station where they were detained. With specific reference to OB 276 to 279 (A8), entries made from 04h10 of 08/11/2010 to 12h00 of the 08/11/2010 confirm that Captain M L Makuleke of the DPCI with force number 0622729516 arrested Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghabe Sibanda and Shepard Chuma. Again with specific reference to OB 429 (A9), entry made at 11h00 of 08/11/2010 confirm that that Captain M L Makuleke of the DPCI with cell number 0827729516 booked out Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maghabe Sibanda and Shepard Chuma to Beit Bridge. The telephone records of Captain Makuleke also show his movement from Orlando Police station until Beit Bridge in Musina. The statement of LI Col Ndanduleni Madilonga and his cellphone records confirms that he received a call from Captain Makuleke when he was approaching Musina on 08/11/2010. According to LI Colonel Madilonga (A51) he assisted Captain Makuleke to cross the border and the two Zimbabwean Nationals who were in the vehicles were handed to the Zimbabwean police.

The documents used in the deportation of the Zimbabwean Nationals were part of the internal investigation conducted by Warrant Officer Nthlamu (A80). In his statement he outlined the documents received from Captain Makuleke as four warrants of detentions and four notices of deportations. The documents which the Captain Makuleke claimed to be valid Home Affairs documents used in the deportation of the four Zimbabweans appear to have been forged as they have employee number that does not exist in the Home Affairs Department. The Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigner (BI-1725) document was produced by Captain Makuleke as a proof that Shepard Chuma, Witness Ndeya and Nelson Ndlovu and Maghabe Sibanda were detained for being illegal foreigners and they were seen by an Immigration Officer. However the signature that appears on the documents does not belong to any member of Home Affairs in Gaulteng and the appointment number 037152 does not exist.

Poliswa Skosana (A31) an Immigration Officer stated that BI-1725 used was discontinued in 2008 and in 2010 it was no longer part of the official documents of Home Affairs. The stamp on four documents according to the handwriting expert, shows that whosoever completed the documents used an old form already completed and deleted affiliated information to put the new information of the four foreign nationals. The Notification of the Deportation of an Illegal Foreigner (DHA-1689) documents were produced by Captain Makuleke as proof that Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Shepard Chuma and Maghabe Sibanda were deported through Beit Bridge border. According to Peter Elberg (A37) the forms were wrongly stamped and do not have fingerprints of the deportees as required.

The stamp number 20 belonging to Beit Bridge was used and such stamp is not for deportation purpose. According to Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlalho (A39) the stamp is individualized and belong her and on 08/11/2010 she was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe. This is confirmed by the duty roster which clearly shows that on the 7th and 8th of November 2010 Immigration Officer Kobelo Margret Mohlalho was off duty. The stamp could have been easily duplicated.

The letter retrieved from Captain Makuleke's laptop provides a vital clue that his engagement in the operation did not receive the blessing of his superior. The letter was addressed to the Director General of Home Affairs requesting assistance in the Deportation of the Zimbabwean nationals involved in the murder of Zimbabwean police. Protocol dictates that a letter to such a senior person in the Home Affairs department could not have been signed off by an officer at a rank of Captain but could have needed the head of the DPCI. However the letter retrieved clearly shows that Captain Maluleke was the author and he also wrote his name as an approving authority of the request. In addition when the renditions issue hit the media at the end 2011, acting National Commissioner of the South African Police Services Lt General Mkhwanazi (A99) called the head of DPCI Lt General Dramat to explain what happened. Lt General Dramat attended the meeting with Captain Maluleke and for the entire duration of the meeting, Captain Maluleke explained why he arrested Zimbabwean Nationals. If Lt General Dramat had full knowledge of the purpose of the arrest, he could have provided explanation or justification during the meeting thereby convincing the acting National Commissioner that the operation was both lawful and necessary. It is in the same breath that Captain Maluleke provided a report to Lt General Dramat which was used as a basis to respond to a parliamentary question.

• The arrest of Prichard Chuma on 23/11/2010

On 23/11/2010 an operation led by Captain Maluleke was carried out at Diepsloot and Soweto in search of Prichard Chuma who was wanted in connection with a murder of Zimbabwean police Colonel. The investigation did not gather much in relation to the arrest of Prichard Chuma. However the statement of Lt Col Naethling, Captain Nkosi and Warrant Officer Selepe are at the center of the arrest and deportation of Prichard Chuma. In this operation Desmond Campbell (A6) and Petros Jawuke claim that Major General Sibuya was involved. Desmond Campbell stated that he saw a person seated in a BMW whom Warrant Officer Makoe referred as Major General Sibuya. It is clear that members of Crime Intelligence had been trying hard to pull Major General Sibuya into the operation. This can be deduced from the following quotations in their statements, "I saw a figure in a BMW and Warrant Officer Makoe referred to him as General Sibuya" and "I heard that General Sibuya was in a blue BMW". These remarks justify the drawing of an inference that members of crime intelligence tried hard to implicate Major General Sibuya, most especially because his cellphone records provide concrete alibi that he was not at the crime scene.

The involvement of Captain Maluleke in the arrest and transportation of Prichard Chuma provide for a prima facie case of kidnapping. With specific reference to an OB entry dated 22/11/10 (A57/1) made on 22/11/2010 Captain Nkosi booked in Prichard Chuma at Alexandra Police Station. However Nkosi wrote the name and contact numbers of Captain Maluleke as the person who is the Investigating Officer of the case. In his statement he stated that he was personally requested by Captain Maluleke to detain Prichard Chuma at Alexandra Police station.

With specific reference to OB entry dated 23/11/2010 (A57/2) Warrant Officer Selepe booked out Prichard Chuma from Alexandra Police station for a Bulawayo case. He confirmed in his statement that he was requested by Lt Col Naethling to assist Captain Maluleke. Lt Col Naethling corroborates Warrant Selepe in that he was requested by Captain Maluleke to provide assistance and requested one of his members. Warrant Officer Selepe stated that he transported Prichard Chuma with Captain Maluleke on 24/11/2010 to Beil Bridge. The version of Warrant Officer Selepe is corroborated by cellphone records and itineraries of Captain Maluleke.

• The arrest of Gordon Dube and Johnson Nyoni on 11/01/2011 and 26/01/2011.

The arrest of Gordon Dube and John Nyoni started when Constable Rikotso (A67) went to Wierdebrug police station at the CIAC office which is responsible for profiling and identification of crime hot spots. When he arrived, he found Constable Sombhane who gave him a list of wanted suspects and on top of the list was Gordon Dube who was wanted in connection with murder in Zimbabwe and robberies in South Africa. At that time the name of Captain Maluleke had not yet surfaced and members of Crime Intelligence were just carrying out the daily duties. Constable Rikotso is corroborated by Constable Sombhane and Constable Plantinah Mokgobu who stated that the information about the wanted Zimbabwean National initially surfaced when she visited CIAC office at Wierdebrug.

Gordon Dube was arrested on 11/01/2011 and was found in possession of an unlicensed firearm. Constable Rikotso later saw the same firearm with Captain Maluleke at the Hawks offices after it was returned from ballistics. It is also clear that the suspect Gordon Dube was facing many charges in South Africa including murder and robbery. Most of the cases against Gordon Dube were investigated by Constable Meyer except Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 which was investigated by Warrant Officer Dlamini. According to Constable Meyer the following cases were against Gordon Dube, Wierdebrug Cas 531/12/2010, Wierdebrug Cas 220/02/2010, Wierdebrug Cas 147/11/2010, Wierdebrug Cas 1022/12/2010, Wierdebrug Cas 310/10/2010 and Diepsloot 93/01/2011. He was informed by Captain Maluleke from the Hawks that suspect Alfred Gordon Dube was also wanted in Zimbabwe. According to Constable Meyer, Captain Maluleke informed him that Gordon Dube was also wanted for murder as per Bulawayo CR 438/09/2010. He stated that he booked out suspect Gordon Dube and handed him to Captain Maluleke. Captain Maluleke informed him that suspect Gordon Dube will be handed over to the Zimbabwean government through immigration channels. The request that Captain Maluleke made to Constable Meyer, Detective Constable Rambuda, Warrant Officer Dlamini in connection with the Gordon Dube demonstrate the extent to which he was ready to go in order to handover the suspect to the Zimbabwean police. The suspect was awaiting trial prisoner who was connected in five cases including murder. Statements of Constable Rambuda and Constable Meyer provide valuable evidence that Captain Maluleke took Gordon Dube to Zimbabwe even though he was facing serious charges (five cases including murder) in South Africa. Statements provided to Constable Meyer by Captain Maluleke states that Gordon Dube was handed to Zimbabwean police and was sentenced to life imprisonment. He also acknowledges in a letter retrieved from the laptop that he handed back the firearm to Zimbabwean Police. In January 2011 members of Crime Intelligence received information from CIAC at Wierdebrug regarding the wanted suspect John Nyoni. The person they talked with at CIAC was Constable Sombhane who also gave them the number of Captain Maluleke. She also spoke to Maluleke over the phone while they were there. They then drove to the Hawks offices to meet with Captain Maluleke who told them that the suspect murdered a police officer in Zimbabwe. The request to arrest John Nyoni was after a successful operation that led to the arrest of Gordon Dube. According to members of TRT, they received a call via two ways radio from the commander to go to Diepsloot police station. When they arrived they found the Station Commander of Diepsloot Police station who introduced them to Captain Maluleke. Captain Maluleke was with two male persons and a female who were introduced as members of Crime Intelligence. Captain Maluleke informed them that there was a person who committed serious cases in Zimbabwe and he is very dangerous. After the arrest of Johnson Nyoni, he was taken to DPCI head office in Silverton. At the DPCI offices photos were taken and members of TRT and Crime Intelligence corroborate each other in that regard. However Constable Mkasibe stated that Lt General Dramat came to house number 3 from house number 1 and addressed them. There were six members of TRT and none of them ever mentioned the incident. If it is true that he addressed them, other people could have had a recollection of the incident more so because Lt General Dramat is the head of the DPCI. According to Constable Mkasibe and Constable Mugwenya, Lt General Dramat was with Colonel Polelo when he addressed them but Colonel Polelo cannot remember such event. It is clear that the version Mugwenya and Mkasibe are not corroborated and therefore do not provide basis for a prima facie case against Lt General Dramat.

However there is corroboration in that Captain Maluleke was the driver of the operation that led to the arrest of Johnson Nyoni. He met with members of Crime Intelligence and tasked them to look for Johnson Nyoni after they successfully traced and arrested Gordon Dube. The OB book at Mool Police station clearly shows that John Nyoni was booked in by a member of TRT and booked out by Captain Maluleke.

The Zimbabwean Nationals were arrested and detained during DZP period which gave the Zimbabwean grace period of 90 days to apply for valid documents. During the DZP which is Dispensation for Zimbabwean Projects, all Zimbabweans were given 90 days to stay in the country in order to apply for legal documents and surrender illegally obtained South African ID's without consequence. The project according to Home Affairs started on 20 September 2010 and ended in 31 December 2010 with extension which ultimately ended in July 2011. The letter retrieved from Captain Maluleke's laptop addressed to home affairs requesting assistance in the Deportation of the Zimbabwean nationals involved in the murder of Zimbabwean police (dated 08/11/2010) was generated on 08 November 2010 shortly before he booked out the Zimbabwean Nationals out of Orlando Police station. It is doubtful that the permission was acquired given the time at which the Zimbabwean Nationals were booked out. In addition, he cited the DZP as a challenge in the deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals and he wanted assistance from Home Affairs. This does not only show that he was aware of the Dispensation for Zimbabwean Projects which gave Zimbabwean nationals a grace period, but also that there was ulterior motive way above deportation on the basis of being illegal immigrants.

The e-mails retrieved from Captain Maluleke's laptop also show communication with Zimbabwean police where he asked them about the trip going back home and that he would continue to trace remaining suspects. He also exchanged photographs with them of the suspects and the team involved in the operation.

The overtime claim of Captain Maluleke corresponds with the dates on SAP 10's from various stations regarding the booking out of the Zimbabwean nationals. On 08/11/2010 he transported Zimbabwean Nationals to Beit Bridge. The Itinerary shows that on 08/11/2010 he went to Beit Bridge and came back on 10/11/2010 and claimed a total of R1845-00. On 24/11/2010 he went to Beit Bridge and came back 26/11/2010 and claimed a total of R1845-00. On 28/01/2011 he went to Beit Bridge and claimed a total of R552-00. The records also correspond with his cellphone movement as depicted by towers recordings.

7. FINDINGS

- The IPID investigation established that Captain Maluleke led the operation that resulted in the arrest of Zimbabwean nationals wanted in connection with the murder of a Zimbabwean senior police officer. The evidence gathered clearly shows that the Zimbabweans Nationals were not wanted in connection with ATM bombing as initially claimed and they were not deported for being illegal immigrants.
- There is overwhelming evidence that Captain Maluleke was not only the lead person but also used his position of being the only member of the "Cross Border Desk" to acquire cooperation in an operation he knew that it did not follow the legal procedure.
- It was found that the claim made by Shepard Tshuma that Constable Radebe took his R300-00 could not be corroborated. Maqhawe Sibanda (A2) also made a claim that the police took his R500-00 but the identity of the officer who took the money is unknown.
- There are contradictions with regard to assault by Captain Maluleke, Captain Nkoal, Warrant Officer Makoe and Constable Radebe.
- It was also found that the senior members of DPCI could not have known that Captain Maluleke did not follow procedures as it is the duty of the officer in question to comply with the legal imperatives of the particular operation. He generated a letter to the Director General of Home Affairs and still put his name as an approving authority thereby confirming that he did not want his seniors to either know or become aware of his activities.
- The success report that claim that Lt General Dramat had a meeting with the Zimbabwean police lacks detail about the meeting itself. There is no indication of what was discussed and who was part of the meeting. It is on that basis that a prima facie case cannot be premised on speculation, but need corroborated facts.
- The evidence that suggest that Major General Sibiya was at the scene during the arrest of Zimbabwean nationals is contradicted by cell phone evidence that suggest he was nowhere near the scene. It is clear that members of Crime Intelligence had been trying hard to pull Major General Sibiya into the operation. This can be deduced from the following quotations in their statements, "I saw a figure in a BMW and Warrant Officer Makoe referred to him as General Sibiya" and "I heard that General Sibiya was in a blue BMW". The cellphone record of Major General Sibiya was acquired and analyzed by an expert, it was discovered that at the time the witnesses claim that he was at Fourways Shopping Centre, he was in Pretoria.
- There is no evidence for the involvement of Former General Mzwandile Petros. However he addressed a letter dated 31/05/2011 to Provincial Head of Crime Intelligence in Gauteng appreciating the good work that members of Crime Intelligence have done when they arrested Zimbabwean nationals involved in the murder of Senior Police Officer in Zimbabwe. The letter was as a result of a request made by Former General Toka of Crime Intelligence requesting General Mzwandile Petros to appreciate members of Crime Intelligence.
- There is also no evidence that suggest that Lt General Dramat, Lt General Toka, Lt General Lebeya and Major General Hatshwayo were involved.

RENDITIONS [01EPSLOOT CAS 380/07/2012]

8. RECOMMENDATION

Based on the available evidence, the Independent Police Investigative Directorate recommends that no charges should be brought against Lt General Dramat and Major General Sibiya. The investigation established that there is no prima facie case against them. However with regard Lt Col M Mabuleke, there is a prima facie case to sustain charges of kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice.

Office note

IN RE: SO-CALLED RENDITION MATTER (PROJECT X)-DIEPSLOOT CAS 390/07/2012

DPP JHB REF: 9/2/4/1 (2014/236)

1. BACKGROUND -TIMELINE

- a. Received internal memorandum from the Head Special Projects Division, Office of the NDPP dated 14 February 2014. The exact date of receipt is unclear as no official stamp or date had been affixed to this effect.
- b. According to office note by adv Van Zyl SC this must have been late in February 2014.
- c. Before any decision could be taken by this office messrs Khuba and Angus from IPID collected all the dockets from Van Zyl SC on 7 March 2014 and signed for receipt thereof.
- d. On 18 June 2014 Van Zyl SC phoned mr Khuba who told him that his head mr McBride had instructed him that the dockets must be returned to the NDPP and it was duly done
- e. On 23 June 2014 Van Zyl SC once again spoke to mr Khuba who informed him that it was never his intention to return the dockets to him.
- f. On 27 June 2014 adv Mosing of the Special Projects Division of the Office of the NDPP told Adv Van Zyl SC that the dockets were never returned to him.
- g. These series of events were then brought to the attention of the NDPP by letter dated 3 July 2014.
- h. On 20 August 2014 the NDPP officially responded to the letter by the DPP Adv Chauke, by apologizing for the late response and indicating that he, the NDPP, is in the process of considering the matter and that Adv Chauke may close his file.
- i. On 31 March 2015 the NDPP wrote another letter to the DPP informing him that he had subsequently referred the matter to the DPP North Gauteng who recommended that the accused including Dramat and Sibiyi be prosecuted for inter alia kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice. The letter of the DPP Pretoria is dated 6 March 2015.
- j. This letter of the NDPP inter alia states that the matter is now returned to Johannesburg because the matter now resorts under the jurisdiction of the DPP Johannesburg since 1 December 2014 as from that date Diepsloot falls under Johannesburg North (Ranburg) in terms of Government Notice No 861 of 31 October 2014. The NDPP also indicated that further investigation should be conducted in the matter.
- k. On 1 April 2015 the Head: National Prosecution Services (NPS) send a letter to the DPP Johannesburg to conduct specific further investigation.
- l. On 10 April 2015 Adv Chauke requested me to advise him on certain aspects after I have looked at the documentation in this matter.

2. It is clear that this matter is being regarded as a "hot potato" and therefore the case is being sent from pillar to post.

LS
SJ

3. There are certain legal issues that need to be address before we even go to the facts of the matter.

4. DISCUSSION OF MATTER

a. JURISDICTION

- i. It is trite law that jurisdiction cannot be conferred retrospectively.
- ii. When these crimes were committed during 2011 all these crimes resorted under the jurisdiction of the DPP North Gauteng. Even the court appearances were done at Attridgeville falling under the DPP Pta's area of jurisdiction.
- iii. The demarcation altered the position as from 1 December 2014. It does not alter the jurisdictional position prior to 1 December 2014, which to my mind remains with the DPP Pretoria. This fact cannot now conferred jurisdiction on the DPP Jhb for all crimes committed prior to 1 December 2014 especially where decisions were previously take by the DPP Pta or prosecutors resorting under him.
- iv. Furthermore the majority of crimes were committed under the jurisdiction of Pretoria and not Johannesburg. It furthermore seems that crucial phone calls implicating Dramat, were also made between Beit Bridge and Pretoria, falling within the jurisdiction of Pretoria.
- v. We must also clearly distinguish between Court jurisdiction and Prosecutor jurisdiction. The best way to explain this is by way of example. The Regional Court jurisdiction is in accordance with the boundaries of the provincial province, Gauteng. This means for instance that it will be within the jurisdiction of the court being the Regional Division of Gauteng (meaning the whole province). On the other hand the prosecutors' jurisdiction has been divided with reference to the seats of the two High Courts in this province of Gauteng. The fact that the DPP of Pta is appointed in the provincial division of the High Court, does not give him more or concurrent jurisdiction over the cases falling within the jurisdiction of the DPP of Jhb being the Local Division. These areas are two distinct areas and the DPP Pta cannot overrule decision taken by the DPP of Jhb merely because he is appointed at the Provincial Division of the High Court in Pta. If that would have been the case, it would never have been necessary for the DPP Pta to request permission to centralize matters from Jhb within his area of jurisdiction. Therefore it means that a specific court might have jurisdiction to do the trial based on the principal of concurrent jurisdiction but that the prosecution's jurisdiction must also be established through with reference to the specific area of jurisdiction. There is no such thing as "concurrent jurisdiction" with reference to the jurisdiction of a DPP. In the old days there were indeed instances where two cities would have concurrent jurisdiction. However at that stage only one DPP or Attorney-General was appointed for the whole area and the smaller area was being controlled by a Deputy who fell under the control and supervision of the AG of DPP. That is a totally different scenario than the current one. It is therefore my opinion that the DPP Pta has no concurrent jurisdiction on any matters falling under the DPP Jhb and that the DPP Jhb is totally independent from any interference by his Pretorian colleague.

LS
SS

b. FUNCTUS OFFICIO

- i. I am also of the view that a prosecutor can very seldom resort to a claim of being functus officio. Prosecutors are frequently taking decisions and by virtue of this they can alter their decision at any stage, especially in view of new evidence coming to their attention or representations being lodged. This happens on a daily basis at all prosecutor's offices and is nothing strange.
- ii. The fact that a file has being closed therefore does not bar the DPP or prosecutor to revisit the decision initially taken. This can be done and in fact is being done frequently at this office.

c. POWERS OF NDPP

- i. It must be established whether the NDPP has any inherent powers to prosecute or not. Are the powers of the NDPP curtailed to reviewing decision taken by his subordinates, the DPPs or does he possess inherent power to prosecute.
- ii. In order to answer this we must look at the relevant legislation empowering the NDPP.
- iii. The Constitution dictates in sec 179(1)(a) that the NDPP heads the national prosecuting authority. Sec 179(2) states that the national prosecuting authority has the power to institute criminal proceedings on behalf of the state ect.
- iv. Sec 179(5)(c) gives him the power to intervene in a prosecution and subsection (d) the power to review any decision of a DPP after consulting the relevant DPP.
- v. The NPA act, no 32 of 1998 echoes these provisions. Sec 20 states that the power to institute and conduct prosecutions vests in the prosecuting authority and all subordinate officials shall exercise these powers under the control and direction of the NDPP.
- vi. Sec 22 of the NPA Act specifically deals with the powers of the NDPP.
- vii. He heads the national prosecuting authority
- viii. Have authority over ALL the powers conferred or imposed by the Constitution or any other Act.
- ix. It is therefore clear that the NDPP has inherent and original powers to prosecute.
- x. Sec 22(2)(c) of the NPA act gives the NDPP the power to review a decision to prosecute or not after consultation with the relevant DPP and after taking representations of the accused, the complainant and ANY other person or party whom the NDPP considers to be relevant.

LS
SS

- x. The question now is whether the NDPP may consult other DPPs and not only the relevant DPP, when reviewing the decision? In principle there can be no objection for the NDPP in order to take a decision, to ask other DPPs for a recommendation provided that the relevant DPP is also consulted as required. In terms of the sec 22(3) he may even direct that an offence be decided and prosecuted within the jurisdiction of another DPP.
- xii. Sec 22(4)(a)(i) and (ii) gives the NDPP wide powers to ask for reports and submissions from a DPP.
- xiii. It therefore seems that the NDPP is entitled to request a report from this office in order to assist him in taking a final decision in this matter.
- xiv. In para 3 of his letter to Adv Chauke dated 31/03/2015, he request the DPP to urgently advise him on his decision. Although the phrase is a bit ambiguous it is capable of a construction that the DPP make a recommendation to the NDPP in the same vain as the DPP of North Gauteng has done. This matter is one of those matters where the NDPP has to exercise his inherent and original powers and where he should take the final decision.

5. RECOMMENDATION

- a. I therefore am of the view that this office cannot pass the bug back to the NDPP on the score of jurisdiction or even that the DPP Pta has taken a decision because it is clear that Pretoria only made a recommendation to the NDPP.
- b. However before any decision is taken the required further investigating must be conducted as instructed by the NDPP as well as the subsequent letter from the Head of the NPS.
- c. The way forward is to draft a letter to the new Investigating officer, apparently now someone at the DPCI, to investigate further in line with the queries issued by the NDPP and the NPS. How any subordinate I/O from DPCI can investigate a case against the National and Provincial Heads of the DPCI, is beyond comprehension.

5 March 2015

Dear Sir

RE: REQUEST TO CONSULT WITH MR IH KHUBA

- 1 We refer to the above matter. We acknowledge receipt of your email dated 4 March 2015.
- 2 We find it difficult to comprehend why it is taking a long time to give permission to Mr Khuba to consult with us in this regard. This is a matter of extreme urgency as per the Minister's directive. The Minister gave us two weeks to give a report on the investigation. Mr Khuba remains a key player in this investigation, hence the urgent consultation with him is highly significant.
- 3 Should we not get confirmation from you by close of business tomorrow 5 march 2015, we will have no alternative but to seek for the urgent intervention of the Minister in this regard.
- 4 We look forward to your urgent response.
- 5 We hope you find the above in order.

where it was held by the Honourable Judge that "I do believe that part B is arguable, and it does have reasonable prospects of success" (paragraph 15). Our client's view in respect of the Minister's powers as presently formulated in the IPID Act is fortified by the views expressed by the Honourable Fabricius J. Our client has accordingly requested the Minister to agree to expedited time periods for the hearing of Part B of the aforesaid application. We await to hear from the Minister in this regard.

4. Our client is confident that your inquiry will not lead to any adverse findings against our client, in relation to the allegations contained in your Terms of Reference (or at all). We confirm that our client's cooperation with your investigation is without prejudice to its rights in relation to the unlawfulness of the Minister's powers referred to above and the pending litigation.
5. We will consult with our client's Mr. Sesoko as soon as possible whereafter we will revert regarding suitable dates and times for an interview. To assist you with planning we confirm that our client's Mr. M. Sesoko has indicated he will probably be out of town tomorrow. We are, however, appreciative of the time pressures that you are under and will therefore endeavour to revert as soon as possible.

Dear Sir

REQUEST TO CONSULT: RE IPID REPORTS

- 1 The above matter bears reference.
- 2 As you are aware that Werksmans Attorneys has been appointed to conduct an investigation into the two reports that were submitted to the National Prosecuting Authority. For ease of reference, we attach hereto a copy of the appointment letter from the Minister of Police.
- 3 We have interviewed Mr Khuba, and Mr Sesoko who are members of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate ("IPID"). During the said interviews, you have been mentioned as one of the people who were involved in one of the reports in question.
- 4 In the circumstances, we would like to consult with you at our offices on 7 April 2015 at 15h00. We would appreciate it if you could accede to our request and attend such consultation.
- 5 We look forward to your most urgent response.
- 6 Should you have any queries, do not hesitate to contact us.

ATTENTION: Mr S July

Dear Mr July

IN RE: INVESTIGATION BY THE MINISTER OF POLICE ON THE POSSIBLE INVOLVEMENT OF LIEUTENANT GENERAL DRAMAT: MAJOR GENERAL SHADRACK SIBIYA; AND OTHER MEMBERS OF THE DIRECTORATE FOR PRIORITY CRIMES INVESTIGATION ("DPCI") IN THE ILLEGAL RENDITION OF ZIMBABWEAN NATIONALS IN 2010

1. We refer to the above matter and your correspondence addressed to Mr. Kganyane, dated 13 April 2015, as well as the email addressed to Mr. McBride, dated 2 April 2015, which has been forwarded for our consideration and reply on behalf of Mr. McBride ("our client").
2. We place on record that our client did not receive your email of 2 April 2015 as it was apparently sent to RMcBride@ipid.gov.za, an email address that he does not have access to. The email came to his attention via Mr. Kganyane yesterday, to whom our client consented to his contact details being provided to you.
3. Despite our repeated requests for all correspondence relating to Mr. McBride to be directed via our offices, we have not heard from you in this regard. To the contrary, you seem to still be directing your correspondence in relation to Mr. McBride elsewhere.

SS

4. Our client has on numerous occasions confirmed his commitment to assist with the Werksmans Investigation, and we have requested you to address correspondence to us in this regard.
5. It has also come to our attention that our client has received two telephone calls from your office during the course of this afternoon wherein a tentative consultation has been arranged for Friday, 17 April 2015 at 12h00. We will procure instructions from our client in this regard.
6. Notwithstanding the aforementioned our client remains committed to assisting you with the Investigation and in this regard we look forward to hearing from you.
7. We thank you in anticipation.

Dear Sir

IN RE: INVESTIGATION BY MINISTER OF POLICE IN THE ILLEGAL RENDITION OF ZIMBABWEAN NATIONALS IN 2010

- 1 We acknowledge receipt of your letter dated 15 April 2015.
- 2 We place on record that we have never, at any stage, before 2 April 2015 requested to interview your client.
- 3 Although you have advised in your letters addressed to us that you were representing Khuba, Sesoko and McBride and indicated your willingness to arrange dates for the interviews with your clients. On 26 March 2015, you made two telephone calls to the writer hereof. During the first telephone call, you indicated that you were representing IPID and not individuals. You later called on the same day, during this telephone conversation you indicated that your mandate has been terminated by IPID.
- 4 Pursuant to the telephonic conversation, interviews were held with Sesoko and Khuba. On 2 April 2015 we addressed a letter to your client, which your client apparently did not receive. We never received a response from your client. We forwarded the letter to his employer, the IPID. We were advised by Mr Gamanyane of IPID that Mr McBride did not receive the letter. The letter was then provided to your client by Mr Gamanyane.
- 5 Instead of advising us that he is represented by you, he sent an SMS to Mr Gamanyane which was in turn forwarded to us, which reads as follows:

"Hi there. You can pass on my cell phone number to Werkismans. Thanks."

ROBERT McBRIDE

INDEPENDENT POLICE INVESTIGATIVE DIRECTORATE

Interview with:

5

ROBERT McBRIDE

PRESENT: MR ROBERT McBRIDE IPID
MR SANDILE JULY Director, Werksmans 10
MS KERRY BADAL Associate, Werksmans
MR SANDILE TOM Associate, Werksmans
MR KWAZI BUTHELEZI Candidate Attorney

17 April 2015 15

MR JULY: Mr McBride, my name is SANDILE JULY, I'm an attorney conducting this interview. This is SANDILE TOM, who is an Associate here, then we have KWAZI BUTHELEZI, who is a Candidate Attorney, and that is KERRY BADAL, who is an Associate here. 20

MR McBRIDE: Okay.

MR JULY: We were supposed to start this meeting at 12h00, but we are late. The reason for us being late is that we were stuck in traffic. 25
We do apologise. Today is 17 April 2015, and we are talking to MR McBRIDE.

SS 63

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

Mr McBride, I don't know how we start, but we will tell you what we know. We have interviewed a number of people.

MR McBRIDE: I just want to mention something. In your first communication with IPID, the email didn't reach me. By the time I was suspended you sent the next email to my work email address, and I don't have access to it. I was also expecting an SMS from you confirming today, so that I could have details, because I think both of you phoned me from ...

MR JULY: ... a landline?

MR McBRIDE: Yes, without a number on it.

MR JULY: I will tell you what happened, Mr McBride. After I spoke to you, we then received a letter which made reference to you. They then wrote us a letter to say: We know that we are not supposed to speak to you. That's how it works. When you have a lawyer, we don't then talk to you. But what has happened is this, and maybe we need to explain this, we sent you an email which you did not receive. We then forwarded that email to your employer to say: Listen, we wrote a letter to Mr McBride - we didn't know that you did not receive it - but

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

we have not received any response from him, can you liaise with him? Apparently MR KGAMANYANE directed him to send the letter to ADAMS & ADAMS. Remember, we don't know for the purposes of this interview, that you are 5 represented by ADAMS & ADAMS. Initially ADAMS & ADAMS indicated to us that they were representing IPID, they were not representing individuals at IPID. Therefore, if we wanted to speak to any person from IPID, we must come 10 through (?). Then on 26 March I got a call from MR JACQUES MARAIS, who said: When is KHUBA coming here? I said: No, the meeting with KHUBA is supposed to be at 11h00 and the time was 10h55. Then I said I wasn't sure 15 where he was, but we were supposed to meet with him at 11h00. He then said he was going to confirm his instructions with IPID. He came back to me to say he was no longer representing IPID. So when he said to me he 20 was no longer representing IPID, therefore the individuals at IPID were no longer represented by him, hence the letter to you and not to ADAMS & ADAMS. Hence when we couldn't find you and you couldn't respond to us, we didn't 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID

ROBERT McBRIDE

know the reason and we sent the letter to the employer, who then wrote to ADAMS & ADAMS. Then we received a letter from ADAMS & ADAMS telling us that we should not have contacted you, they have been on record several times - I think MR MARAIS forgot about our telephone conversation on 26 March, which I explained to him.

MR McBRIDE:

Okay.

MR JULY:

He came back to say today's meeting is proceeding. We also thought that you would be coming with him.

MR McBRIDE:

No, I think initially, from the beginning, we had indicated that we do not require lawyers to be present. But since I am suspended, and they are acting on my behalf, I obtained advice and guidance from them. The most important issue was you were not in contact with me, either via the lawyer or anybody, because I was not receiving this stuff. For me I was happy that at least you could make contact and sort out the legal issues between the lawyers. That was the most important thing.

MR JULY:

At least that has been sorted out now, Mr

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

McBride. The issue is this, you started at IPID in March.

MR McBRIDE:

Yes.

MR JULY:

If I'm not mistaken it was 3 March?

MR McBRIDE:

That's correct, 3 March I started, yes.

5

MR JULY:

Yes, 3 March. MR KHUBA tells us a few days later, which could have been 6 March, you contacted him and asked him about the report, and the report we are talking about is the report in question, which is the ZIMBABWEAN report. He came to you and he talked about the report, and the following day you again called him to talk about the report. In that meeting it was you, SESOKO, him and MR GLEN ANGUS, and there was talk about the report.

10

KHUBA says he was told by SESOKO that you wanted to speak to him, because he was attending a conference, and you didn't have his numbers, so you only contacted him through SESOKO. We want to know what happened when you received the report on either the 5th or the 6th, and what happened in the meeting with the four of you. Subsequent to that, according to MR KHUBA, there were other meetings. Firstly, there was an email

20

25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

exchange about the report, and later on there was a meeting where there was a signing of the report.

MR McBRIDE: I will answer your question. On the first issue I was initially concerned about the way I was not contacted when you started communicating with IPID, so I mention that. Then also the fact that a private law company is investigating a government investigative agency, albeit an independent one, before the NPA had made a decision. Just to say that I would have expected that there would have been a wait, for the NPA to make a decision. It's neither here nor there, but with the communication problem, and then this, it was a little bit of a concern to me. (External interruption.) Is it okay if I continue speaking?

MR JULY: If you can just hold on.

MR McBRIDE: On my appointment I had asked for a briefing on all high-profile cases, and I think it was CATO MANOR, it was RIAH PHIYEGA's matter, it was this one of SIBIYA and DRAMAT - I can't remember - but I can't recall ANGUS and KHUBA in the same meeting on this issue of DRAMAT's

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

case. Maybe in the CATO MANOR cases, but I don't see why he would have been in that meeting, because I don't think he was an investigator in this case. He could have been in a meeting with me, but I don't seem to recall ... 5

MR JULY:

Let me tell you what he says. He says he was called into that meeting because he had raised a number of issues. You wanted to know - you must have thought there was something that went wrong with the investigation, and then you wanted him to also be involved in the investigation. He was hesitant to do that, but it did not happen in any event that he became part of the investigation, because one of the things he raised about the investigation was the involvement of MOUKANGWE from Crime Intelligence. 10 15

MR McBRIDE:

My issue in the briefing - and I can't remember the exact sequence of events - was firstly Crime Intelligence was involved in the case from the beginning. That's the one issue. The second issue was that my predecessor, Acting, MS MBEKI, had told KHUBA: Mr Khuba, just report directly to me, don't 20 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

report to . This is what I was told. Then also that he must work with the Crime Intelligence guy, and the Crime Intelligence guy also linked him up with ADVOCATE MOSING.
So for me already independence in the 5 investigation was compromised, the way it had been said. In other words, bypass the Head of Investigations. Those were my issues.
Immediately that was my concern.

I was also concerned because it became 10 apparent that Crime Intelligence operatives were involved in the rest of the ZIMBABWEANS themselves. They were also involved in the illegal repatriation. Those were my concerns.
Then I questioned, because there were many 15 people involved: Who was involved at what stage in this crime that you mention to me, and to what extent? I also asked: What crime has been committed, by whom, and who was involved in it? What are the elements of that 20 crime? That's what it was. Basically that is how it was.

At a later stage they gave me a work session on MARIKANA. In fact KGAMANYANE was the investigator there. Then they briefed me 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

about CATO MANOR and its status, and so on. PHIEGA with LAMOER was completed. They were waiting for a warning statement from PHIEGA. On this matter of HAWKS, Rendition and Crime Intelligence, if my memory serves me correctly 5 there were some outstanding statements or warning statements at the stage when they spoke to me. If I'm not mistaken it could be SIBIYA's warning statement.

MR JULY: Did they tell you at that time that they had 10 asked SIBIYA about his warning statement?

MR McBRIDE: It's possible, yes. I can't remember the specifics. They could have said that they needed a warning statement from SIBIYA.

MR JULY: Can I also clarify this. In that meeting did 15 KHUBA indicate to you that: On 22 January I submitted the report to the NPA?

MR McBRIDE: No, no, no, no, what he did tell me was that he was in discussions with ADVOCATE MOSING. No, he didn't tell me, and I don't think he 20 would have - and I don't want to think on his behalf - because the investigation was not complete, as there were outstanding statements. In fact, I think there was a statement from JENNI IRISH-QUOBOSHEANE in that 25 thing. I can't remember the context of it. I remember after I had started, I bumped her, and she said my guys were there - meaning IPID people were there to take a statement from her. I don't know if she meant then or on a previous occasion before I had started with IPID.

MR JULY: So he didn't express it in so many words, that: My investigation is not complete, and the report that you are asking for is not complete?

MR McBRIDE: Look, the specifics of what was discussed in a meeting more than a year ago, where no minutes were taken - I think it would not be safe to rely on who said what and in which context. The key issue for me, is normally such a report, the way I understand the law, would not come to me. It would go from the provinces. But because it concerned two provinces this one had to come to me, and it was driven by National. So that's the issue. Normally I wouldn't even have the report, because reports and dockets move in every day to the NPA, they don't come past me.

MR JULY: You were still explaining.

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

MR McBRIDE: On the issue of details of the discussion and sequence of events, they were not really important to me. We did not take minutes of the meeting, so I can't confirm what was said. What I know is there is one report I have seen, which I have signed. The only issue on that report was that it was badly written: there were spelling errors, grammar and stuff like that. There were no other issues. I didn't even go through any of the evidence that was there. I looked at the recommendations that were made, and the analysis, and I signed it. 5

MR JULY: Let's make this supposition. If you knew about the existence of the report which had been given to the NPA, would you have asked for that report which had gone to the NPA? 10

MR McBRIDE: Well, the investigation was not completed. That was my impression. If you recall from the papers, we had briefed Minister Mthethwa on the status of various of these high-profile cases. It was just a status report, and it was soon afterwards. I think I indicated in that report that these cases were in the process of being finalised. It's in that 15 20 25 information note that you will see. Just as my memory serves me now, as you ask me questions, I'm being reminded. Therefore, the investigation was not complete, because in the info note I mentioned that the investigations were in the process of being completed. 5

MR JULY:

If KHUBA says the investigation was completed but there was new evidence that came up, would he be right in that? He said: I had completed the investigation, but there was this new evidence about the cellphones in relation to SIBIYA, which needed to be tightened up. 10

MR McBRIDE:

From memory my understanding is that it was new analysis of cellphone records, and additional statements and warning statements. I don't know whether I knew it at that stage or subsequently, now that we have had a chance to go through the report in detail because of this unhappiness in this matter. What I must also add is this, just as you get my mind going - and I have mentioned it in the papers at court also - that I had briefed the Minister on this matter on 4 August. That's our present Minister Nhleko. On 4 August, 15 20 25

SJLS

S July/IPID

ROBERT McBRIDE

when we had our first one-on-one, I briefed him about this case. I briefed him that I was concerned about this case, and that it appears that Crime Intelligence people tried to implicate a number of Generals from the HAWKS 5 falsely. I raised that with him then. I raised it with ADVOCATE MATHENJWA from the Reference Group. Then I raised these issues with the Minister in an info note, I think on the 26th, when he had asked for the docket I 10 think on the 24th. I think on 26 November - he gave me two days to give the docket and all exhibits, and so on. I felt uncomfortable about that, because I know MATHENJWA was looking for them, because he had phoned KHUBA, 15 but I was advised: Let's give everything to the Minister, because you don't want to appear to be obstreperous or anything, so give the Minister the docket.

MR JULY: So the docket you were going to give to the 20 Minister.

MR McBRIDE: He asked for the docket. In fact, the Minister asked for the docket, he asked for all exhibits, colour photos - that's what he asked - which made me kind of uncomfortable, 25

SJLS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

because I wasn't sure who it was going to and why he wanted it. But I gave him everything.
I gave him the whole copy and I sealed it for him and signed every page so that he had it.
Remember, we were plagued also by leaks. Now 5 that I have been able to check, there were lots of leaks. That's why, when we took the docket and the report which I wrote - which I signed and we gave to the NPA, we got it directly to the National Director of Public 10 Prosecutions, because of the leaks that were coming out of the NORTH GAUTENG DPP.

MR JULY: I want to clarify this point. At one stage you gave the docket to the Minister.

MR McBRIDE: Yes. 15

MR JULY: At what point did you give it to the NPA?

MR McBRIDE: 14 April 2014. Yes, that's the date signed.
The 14th or 13th, so it was like eight months before the Minister asked for it. I think the Minister was not even appointed as Minister 20 yet, when we submitted the full docket to the National Director of Public Prosecutions.

MR JULY: So the Minister asked for this somewhere in November?

MR McBRIDE: In November. On 22 or 23 December, when 25

SS 25

S July/IPID

ROBERT McBRIDE

DRAMAT was suspended, and the Minister's spokesperson made a statement that as a result of the IPID report the Minister had suspended DRAMAT, I got a fright, because there is no way that it could be like that based on our 5 report that I gave to the Minister - the one and only report, and which is the same one I gave to the NPA - that the Minister could have come to that conclusion.
Of course, later on it became clear that the 10
Minister said he disagrees with our report.
Now, I'm not sure whether his disagreement with the report is merely an opinion at a stage when the NPA hadn't made a decision. I heard our Minister speaking in Parliament, but 15
I just kept quiet, because I had briefed him.
Then on 8 January 2015, in CAPE TOWN, I met the Minister, and I said to the Minister:
Minister, this decision has caused confusion.
I said: Minister, I have met with Dramat and 20 his lawyers, I met in the presence of my provincial head in the Western Cape, and we told him we can't discuss the case. But I confirmed, as I did on a previous occasion, that they are not suspects from our point of 25

SJLS

S July/IPID

view. But I told the Minister: Minister, I have spoken to Dramat, and he is willing to assist you to de-escalate this issue. That's what I told him. The Minister said: That's a good idea, I'll think about it. I wasn't 5 sure how he had come to the decision to suspend, based on our report, because it couldn't have been from our report. There is no link between that.

At that meeting I also briefed the Minister on 10 other investigations concerning KwaZULU NATAL, the Provincial Commissioner and the National Commissioner's negligence of duty. Then the Minister said by the 13th or 14th, which was a few days after, he wanted a full report, 15 making recommendations on the Provisional Commissioner, KZN and the National Commissioner. So I prepared those reports and then met him later on in January - I can't remember when - and I gave him the 20 recommendations.

MR JULY:

Maybe before you proceed, Mr McBride, did you know that KHUBA and somebody else went to fetch the docket from the NPA or DPP SOUTH GAUTENG? Before it came to you, it was 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

already with the DPP SOUTH GAUTENG for a decision.

MR McBRIDE: Well, it couldn't have been because there were no warning statements in it. It couldn't have been sent for a decision, because no docket goes to the NPA for decision without warning statements or such things. 5

MR JULY: Let me tell you what we have been told, because we are not in a court of law here, and I don't intend to trick you, but KHUBA says he went to fetch the docket. CHAUKE says the docket was with a certain MR VAN ZYL, SC because he got it from the NPA. 10

MR McBRIDE: I don't know any of that. I wouldn't have known who was sitting with it, and stuff like that. The only issue I knew was MOSING had the docket. That's all I knew. At some stage in between - and at some stage there was a leak, long before I was appointed in IPID, in November 2013 in MAIL & GUARDIAN or whichever newspaper, but there was a leak talking about this issue. Obviously I didn't have an acute interest in it then, but it was in the newspapers. On this issue of KHUBA fetching a docket, I wouldn't know. If he fetched a 15 20 25

55 LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

docket on this day, I'm not in a position to negate anything he says he did, nor would I do it for the sake of it. All I know is there is one report, with one set of dockets, which I signed. There is only one report I know. I 5 think just in fairness, when our Minister asked for the docket, he said: All progress reports and final recommendations - or final report. So he asked for all of that, the progress reports and the final document. For 10 me the investigation had been finished then, and the docket was with the NPA. I think where the confusion came in is that the Minister may have forgotten that I told him on 4 August that it had already been submitted to 15 the NPA for decision. I think that might have caused some confusion.

MR JULY: What you are saying you had with you at the time was an inconclusive report?

MR McBRIDE: No, no, I'm not saying that. Mr July, please 20 let's be honest with each other. I didn't say that. I said I got one final report which I signed. I didn't say it was an inconclusive report.

MR JULY: No, no, no, no. 25

SS LS

MR McBRIDE: So there was no inconclusive report, there was a final report, which was prepared by KHUBA and signed by SESOKO.

MR JULY: Maybe I should have said at the discussions, when you were discussing it and were looking at this report which had bad language. That's the one I'm talking about.

MR McBRIDE: No, it was a final report with bad language. There was no interim or progress report, or anything like that. If you look at the time lines, you will see the report was given to me, signed by these guys, I think on the 9th, and I signed it on 13 or 14 April, something like that. I can't remember the exact sequence. I think I received the report in April, but there were a few days between receiving it and when I signed it.

MR JULY: If KHUBA is lying, that you called him two days after you signed it - you called him and asked for the report ...

MR McBRIDE: No, no, I could not have called KHUBA, and I'll tell you why, because I didn't have his number. I could not have called him. I only got his number recently, when this started, so I could not have called KHUBA directly.

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

MR JULY: Okay, let me put it this way, that you met with him to discuss a report.

MR McBRIDE: No, no. There were many high-profile matters. KHUBA was also involved in the CATO MANOR investigation. So there is CATO MANOR, there are a lot of other cases. One case I asked for a briefing on was PHIYEGA's report - and I think KHUBA might have been involved in that one also at the investigation stage. So I asked for a briefing on all the issues, which anyone who is heading an organisation should do.

MR JULY: I think you have said this, but you have never had sight of any other report?

MR McBRIDE: Look, a report comes to me, it's signed by the Head of Investigations and by the investigator. I signed it.

MR JULY: It came to you already signed?

MR McBRIDE: Yes, it was signed by the two people. That's the report I signed, the one with the corrected language and spelling.

MR JULY: KHUBA then says the three of you were working on a report, which is different from what you are saying. You were working on a report, there was to-ing and fro-ing before the actual signing, and you were involved in that.

SS LS

MR McBRIDE:

No, no, this is not true. I looked at the spelling, and, as I indicated to you, the questions indicated to me are what the crimes are, what the elements are of that crime, who was involved and at what stage. Because it is over a period. If you want my opinion on issues, I can give you my opinion. My opinion was, and still is, quite firmly - and I stand by that report I signed; I stand by it - there was no crime committed by anybody until the time the ZIMBABWEANS were arrested. There was no crime committed.

5

10

MR JULY:

No crime committed by anybody ...

MR McBRIDE:

By anybody that I was aware of, or that the evidence shows on that issue.

15

MR JULY:

I don't think we will then have to take you through the report of 22 January, because you have never seen this report.

MR McBRIDE:

Which one?

20

MR JULY:

The one which was submitted by KHUBA on 22 January.

MR McBRIDE:

The one that has KHUBA's signature on it?

MR JULY:

Yes.

MR McBRIDE:

I had never seen that report until this 25 hullabaloo started here.

MR JULY: In the same breath then ...

MR McBRIDE: No, I had never seen that report.

MR JULY: In the same breath then, we can't ask you about the inconsistencies that exist between 5 the two because you don't know anything about that?

MR McBRIDE: Well, KHUBA can tell you about that. KHUBA can tell you about inconsistencies in the report. I don't even think there are 10 inconsistencies, there is additional evidence.
One report is longer than the other. One report has additional information to the other one. One report has an analysis of cellphone records and it has warning statements, which 15 is a normal thing. So I wouldn't say inconsistencies, I would maybe say a change of analysis. I know in one case they had to send a statement to be analysed, to say whether the 20 guy was truthful or not, because of evidence which came out from a cellphone, where people placed SIBIYA at the scene, and then from SIBIYA's cellphone records he could not have been on the scene. Then they had to look at other people's statements again and analyse 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

them. Out of that was a protest which showed that if these guys lied about SIBIYA being on the scene, where else have they lied.

MR JULY: Then, to be fair to you about the inconsistencies, although we know you know 5 nothing about this report, I think we can't conclude this conversation without showing you the inconsistencies.

MR McBRIDE: No, I don't want to look at them because then I would be interfering in the investigation. 10 So I don't want to look at them, because if there are inconsistencies in a document which I did not have at the time of signing the final report, you can't question me on that.

MR JULY: No, no, I thought you said there are no 15 inconsistencies.

MR McBRIDE: No, your definition of inconsistency - you must talk to the investigator about that. Talk to KHUBA about it. My view was they were not inconsistencies, it is additional analysis 20 and additional evidence. That's what I'm saying. So I'm not conceding to you that - look, Mr July, you're a lawyer, you have your brief, and when you put something to me about inconsistencies, I'm saying from what I have 25

627

24

S July/IPID

been told and have been informed, and what the analysis says, there is additional information and additional analysis. That's all I'm saying, and a review of initial assumptions. If I can go through it, there are some statements made which point to people being involved in a crime. Then later on, with additional information, new information, new analysis, a different assumption needs to be made, so there is a review of that. I understand - and after the suspension of DRAMAT I then asked KHUBA: Did you make a mistake anywhere in your statement? I asked him: Is there anything where there is a problem? I even asked about this other report and when it was signed. Because at some stage our spokesperson said the media were asking about a report, and when is this decision going to be made. Our view was: Let the NPA decide. Then he had a report. So I asked: Where did you get this report from, and is it signed? It has "signed" written, but it's not signed. Then I said: Well, it's got no status if it is not signed. I signed only one report. I only signed one report. There is only one report with my signature on.

SJ
LS

S July/IPID

MR JULY: Anything else, Mr McBride, that you would want to share with us?

MR McBRIDE: No, no, no, I think I have said everything. You can ask me additional questions and you 5 can call me back. What I would like to add, is there is a notion somehow that there has been some impropriety on this issue. As far as I'm aware there is none. If I look at DRAMAT and SIBIYA, before I came to IPID I 10 knew about them, but I had never sat like this - like I'm sitting with MR TOM - and looked at DRAMAT or SIBIYA. I know DRAMAT's background, it's similar to mine. My father was on ROBBEN ISLAND with him. So I know him, and that he 15 was involved in the taking down of PAGAD, but I didn't know the guy until I came to IPID. There is no reason for me, in a democratic SOUTH AFRICA, to want to do any favours for anyone in an independent investigative body. 20
There is no reason to want to help anybody on this issue. We work on the evidence that is there.
But I will even go so far as to say there is no court in this country that will be able to 25

55 65

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ROBERT McBRIDE

convict DRAMAT and SIBIYA. There is no evidence against them. This evidence of people receiving - a simple question was this:
Three Crime Intelligence people arrested the ZIMBABWEANS. Those three went with MALULEKE 5 to take them across. I don't hear anyone saying: The Crime Intelligence Heads must be suspended. No-one is saying that.
There is another issue I want to add on this.
There were assaults made on the ZIMBABWEANS. 10
I had asked MR KHUBA and MR SESOKO: Why aren't you recommending charges when there is evidence from statements saying there were assaults on these guys and police were present? They said: Let's wait for the NPA 15 decision on this, and then we can add the charges after. Even afterwards, when the report was with the NPA, I asked MR KHUBA a number of times: Please can you start preparing the charges on the assaults, and get 20 warning statements on that. That's what I did. I'm just sending a message because I'm late for my other meeting.

MR JULY:

I think we are finished. Thank you.

MR SANDILE TOM - Associate, Werksmans

26 March 2015 15

MR JULY: Maybe we should just start by introducing ourselves, as to who is who. Today is 26 March 2015. My name is SANDILE JULY from WERKMANS, with KERRY BADAL, an Associate from WERKMANS, and SANDILE TOM is also an Associate from WERKMANS. And we have MR KHUBA from IPID. You can proceed, Mr Khuba. 20

MR KHUBA: Okay. At the time when I got the docket, I was given the responsibility to investigate cases of alleged assaults against MAJOR GENERAL SIBIYA. The tasking came as a result of the request by the then Chairperson of the 25

631

2

S July/IPID
27.03.15

Portfolio Committee, or Acting Chairperson, MRS VAN WYK. I concentrated a lot on the investigation of the assault cases, I did complete them, and sent them back to the DPP.
One of the cases the DPP had declined to prosecute, but, after gathering evidence, I recommended that MAJOR GENERAL SIBIYA be charged for assault in one case which is a BOKSBURG case. I cannot remember the case number. 5 10

Then I started with the investigation of the Rendition, which is DIEPSLOOT case 397/2012.
As I have indicated, the case was brought to me by MR SESOKO, who indicated that I had to investigate the case. Upon perusal of the docket, I realised that investigation was already done by members of Crime Intelligence.
One person who was quite prevalent in the statements was COLONEL MOUKANGWE. There was also another person by the name of KHOSA - I don't remember the initial or the rank. 15 20

After perusal of the docket, I also realised that a number of statements which were obtained, were obtained from members of Crime Intelligence, as well as witnesses who are 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

ZIMBABWEAN Nationals. One of those witnesses, or two of those witnesses I think were also victims. I gathered a team - but I need to be honest, because I never actively used this team. I requested them to assist there and there, where probably I had a number of people to obtain statements from, but the majority of statements were obtained by me. I was informed that I needed to contact COLONEL MOUKANGWE, by the then Acting Executive Director, KOEKIE MBEKI, who indicated that it would be prudent for me to carry out this investigation with the assistance ...

MR JULY: What was KOEKIE's position at that time?

MR KHUBA: She was an Acting Executive Director after FRANCOIS BEUKMAN resigned. She indicated that I had to join hands with COLONEL MOUKANGWE, but the instruction was when you join hands with COLONEL MOUKANGWE, MOUKANGWE had to remain a dark figure, he must not be seen. The reason for that was not explained much, but I gathered from him, when I met with him, that was when he started to tell me the reason. My first meeting with him was at EMPEROR's PALACE. When I met him, he

SJ LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

explained how he conducted the investigation:
that he had to take statements at night, go to the office, type them at night and go back to the witnesses to get them to sign the statements. So that part was explained to me 5 precisely. He also gave me the names of two advocates. One is ADVOCATE MOSENG, the other is ADVOCATE BILLY MOELETSI. I was also provided with these advocates' contact numbers
- their cell numbers. I did contact them, but 10 at that time I had not yet started with the actual investigation. I was also given the contact numbers of the girlfriend of one of the victims who was allegedly killed in ZIMBABWE. I took the details. I was briefed 15 on the entire evidence available, as well as the information that MOUKANGWE knew at that time.
What I did after that, I started to look for witnesses. I contacted the girlfriend of one 20 of the victims, and it was very difficult to get hold of that person. Lastly, my guys got hold of her at a particular shopping mall, which I think is CHINA MALL in SOWETO. Then they did an interview, but they did not take 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

a statement on the basis that there was nothing materially different from what was taken.

Apart from that, I then started to map out the way in which I was going to oppose the case. 5

I did that alone. COLONEL MOUKANGWE was very, very supportive. I would inform him of what I was going to do, I would inform him of what I was thinking, and I need to indicate that I have never investigated a hard case like the Rendition case. There was no cooperation from anyone. 10

I then contacted HOME AFFAIRS, because my point of departure was I needed to know from HOME AFFAIRS who are these people who are missing. Are there any documents which are proclaimed to be authentic documents used to deport these people? It took me almost three months to secure an appointment to interview witnesses on HOME AFFAIRS' side. I spoke to, 15 20

I think, the Chief Director, MATTHEWS, and I was liaising with MATTHEWS through somebody called MR NDLOVU, who works in the office of MR MATTHEWS at HOME AFFAIRS. MR NDLOVU kept on giving me promises to say he will be able 25

SJ 65

S July/IPID
27.03.15

to cooperate. One time I was really fed up. I had to write a letter, telling them that I was going to approach the DG, HOME AFFAIRS, that they were not cooperating. That was when I received a call from MR NDLOVU, saying that I could now meet with MR MATTHEWS. MATTHEWS said to me he was ready to cooperate, I could go and interview members of HOME AFFAIRS at the centre in SOWETO, as well as their head office.

I started by interviewing the head office staff. Then the following day I went to HOME AFFAIRS in SOWETO. On both occasions I was accompanied by COLONEL MOUKANGWE. We interviewed, we obtained statements, but the part we were clarifying during that process was the procedure. We tried to mirror what happened against the procedure that they explained to us. Then after that I decided to start investigation on the side of DPCI.

At the time I received a call from COLONEL MALULEKE, who said to me that I was going to the wrong people, I must come to him directly and he will tell me what happened. So I told him: According to me, you are a suspect, and

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

I don't deal with - a suspect for me ...

MR JULY: That's COWBOY?

MR KHUBA: Yes, COWBOY. I still remember creating a joke with him. I said to him: A suspect to me is not a starter, it's a dessert, so I will deal 5 with you later. We were laughing about it, and he said: Okay, when you are ready, come to me. But he kept on calling me, to say:
Come and meet me, I'm going to explain, I'm the one who did everything. But I was trying 10 to avoid a situation where I would go to him, he admits everything and then closes the case.
I wanted to know what really happened.
After that I went to DPCI. At the DPCI the first thing was to request a meeting with 15 GENERAL DRAMAT. I asked for a meeting, I went there with COLONEL MOUKANGWE. For us he was not a suspect at that time, we just approached him as the General responsible for DPCI. We spoke to him. I think there was one question 20 that MR MOUKANGWE asked - I can't remember, but he was asking something in relation to whether the ZIMBABWEAN Police were ever in his office or ever came to visit him. Something like that. He stopped a bit - he did not 25 answer straight away, he waited and then he said: No, I don't remember meeting with the ZIMBABWEAN Police. Okay, that was fine. When we met, we indicated to him that we wanted some information, because we heard that he did 5 some disciplinary. I'm going to cut and go to the core.

MR JULY: No, no, I would appreciate that you say as much as you can.

(DISCUSSIONS REGARDING LUNCH ARRANGEMENTS) 10

MR KHUBA: Then we requested certain documents. He said to me he can provide those documents if the request is made in writing. I still remember it took me less than thirty minutes to send an email to him, because I was using 3G. After 15 we left, we went to a certain place - a restaurant. I sent an email with the request, to say we wanted - and of the things I listed,
I included documents relating to the internal investigation, including the statements and 20 all those types of things. I also requested the terms of reference of TOMS, which was formed to deal with issues like ATM bombings, and all those types of things.

After I sent the request, I was told that I 25 would have to deal with COLONEL BASI. Then I made an arrangement. I spoke with BASI over the phone, but the documents took some time. It might have taken nearly a month to get the stuff. I kept on calling, and I was told that I would have to deal with BRIGADIER KHADRA(?). I phoned BRIGADIER KHADRA, and BRIGADIER KHADRA referred me back to COLONEL BASI. Finally I got the documents. When I got those documents, I sat down and perused them. I read each and every statement of the internal investigation, even though it was not an original. I never took anything away. I put the file completely the way it was inside my docket. What I realised, when I was reading the statements of everyone, I realised that they were saying the investigation was conducted properly and everything was in order. There was one name of a person working at the border gate by the name of MADILONGA. This person had a statement which was signed, but it was not commissioned. With all other statements I realised that there was some level of corroboration when it came to the story. He could not corroborate other people in material facts, because his role was separate. But he indicated that everything was done according to the letter, and there was nothing wrong about his role. But when I looked at it, there was something I was not 5 happy about when I cast my ...

MR JULY: This is MADILONGA?

MR KHUBA: MADILONGA, yes. So I took the statement, I went home and I gave him a call. I kind of indicated as if I was joking to him, and I 10 said: Baba, I have your statement, I'm on the investigation team on Rendition, and I'm going to be coming with a warrant of arrest because you are lying. It was just as if it was normal talk. I said: I have a challenge with 15 your statement, and I kind of really showed where I have challenges. Then he said to me:
Come, my brother, we'll tell you what happened.

The following day I drove there straight away 20 and met with him. That was when he explained to me what happened, from A to Z. After obtaining his statement, because the way I investigate cases, once I get a statement I put it down, analyse it and I check trends 25 that can be followed in terms of the information provided by the witness. So I identified a number of things and then started to look back. I went to HOME AFFAIRS - because he gave me a specific date. He said: 5

I still remember, the ZIMBABWEAN Police left the day before the ZIMBABWEAN Nationals were transported across the border. In terms of the DPCI record it gave me an indication that they were transported out on the 8th, and when 10
I checked the records of the Police Station at ORLANDO, they indicated that MALULEKE booked them on the 8th. I realised the day before would be the 7th. He told me that on that particular day they left between 5:00 and 15 6:00. So I stretched the mark, and I requested records of people who crossed the border within the space of four hours. They drew the record for me, and even that record, I'm telling you, incubated for a long time 20 before I could get it. When I got it, I went back to MADILONGA and said: Check the names here, which names are quite familiar. Then he showed the name: this one NGCUBE, this one, this one, this one, this one, I think are the 25 guys who crossed. I said: Because you could not remember when they came in, I requested HOME AFFAIRS to give me the record that could show me the day when these people came into the country. That record was confirmed. So 5

I realised that they came around the 4th. When I got that record of when these people came in, and they came on this particular day, I went to DPCI. I went to DPCI and started at the security pound, looking for registers of 10 the old time(?). There I hit a snag, I couldn't get anything, because I wanted to see whether they were (indistinct). But I decided to interview one of the people who was working there, or was working for TOMS. It was 15
COLONEL NEETHLING. Then he gave me the information, to say the person who was supervising MALULEKE was LEONIE VERSTER. I spoke to LEONIE VERSTER, and said: Can I come and have an interview with you? When we 20 started, she kind of really indicated: Who are you investigating? I said: We are investigating MALULEKE. She was quick to say: MALULEKE is like this and like that, he never respects - he was not even reporting to me, he 25 would speak to the bosses directly or speak to SIBIYA directly, he is a person who does not respect the chain of command. What I did from there - she told me: If you check the success reports, I went there and I spoke to a person by the name of COLONEL MABUYELA, to say: Can you give me the file of success reports? That is when I uncovered the success reports directed to GENERAL DRAMAT, GENERAL LEBEYA, GENERAL HLATSHWAYO ...

MR JULY: What is the success report?

MR KHUBA: The success report is a report that will tell you what operation was done in a successful way, so that the people who carried out that operation can be appreciated, or can use the record for their own performance evaluation. That is a success report. Now, I studied that success report in detail. There were almost three that I got. If I remember well, one was talking about or indicated the deportation or the arrest of witness NDEYA and others in relation to the murder of ZIMBABWEAN Police in ZIMBABWE.

Point number 1, which seems to be a universal point in the number of the success reports,

SJ LS

S July/IPID

said the ZIMBABWEAN police came and met with GENERAL DRAMAT on the 5th, and requested assistance. Then the other point says MALULEKE was appointed. When I looked at that I started to have an issue, to say: Let me 5 investigate this issue further. The lady by the name of LEONIE had already also indicated
- because I said: I want to get the laptop of MALULEKE and the phones. She indicated that she would contact them and find out where the 10 laptop was. I realised, when she gave me the feedback, she said the laptop - she gave me the number, because the person she was talking to from SCM at the DPCI indicated that the laptop's serial number was this, but it was 15 about to be destroyed. For me it was something urgent and I could not even apply for a search warrant, because I did not know the location. Because that laptop was surrendered to the State, I had to request it 20 from MABUYELA. MABUYELA tasked somebody by the name of WARRANT OFFICER DANIE, and that person gave me that laptop. I took the laptop and maintained the chain of evidence from that part, and then handed it over to a forensic 25 company called PRECISION FORENSICS. I could not use SAPS, because when I checked the experts of SAPS they were all housed in the DPCI. So for me I realised that I could not give DPCI a request to investigate themselves, I had to go outside. 5

Then they extracted things from the laptop. I found that the same success reports were generated from that laptop. I checked the trail of those success reports, in terms of how they were despatched. I would presume they were generated by MALULEKE because that laptop was MALULEKE's. After they were generated, they were emailed to a lady, a Warrant Officer by the name of MAPYATLA. WARRANT OFFICER MAPYATLA received the stuff, but we could not take her computer to see where it was taken to. But also in the laptop we discovered photos of the operation. We discovered emails sent to the Police Officers in ZIMBABWE, asking them how they travelled. The date and everything of the email coincided with the date of the operation, to show that the ZIMBABWEAN Police were there, because if you send an email on the 6th, when people have 25

I gathered all this information, and I was updating COLONEL MOUKANGWE on a regular basis. Sometimes I would meet, sometimes I would fax the documents so that he could see. At that 5 moment I started to build up a report, and I need to indicate why I had to draft the report, because as a person who had been an investigator for some time, I realised that if you do your report, probably after the 10 completion of the investigation you are not going to include all the facts. You need to do it in a progressive way, so that when you get stuff you update, you update and you update. That's why, if you check my report, 15 some statements you will find take the entire page. Because I wanted the person who would take the decision to have an understanding of what it is that is in that statement. I was doing that on a regular basis when I got to 20 the statements.

After I got that information, I regularly shared it with the two advocates. And I want to tell you, they were puzzled, because they never thought the case would take that twist. 25

SJ LS

So I continued to investigate and I continued to investigate. I was not really getting any cooperation or assistance for such matter, from the Department, because I think the Executive Director, Acting, also resigned, and there was no Executive Director. I had to see how to finish. At one time - and I still have that email - I received an email to say: You are coming to PRETORIA, you will pay with your own money, and you will sleep in a hotel using your own money. I even indicated to the person - to my Executive Director: If you are saying that, it's fine, as long as you give me my chance I will pay for it, and I will continue to do this case. Then after that part of the success reports, one of the success reports was indicating members of the TRT were involved in the operation of arresting DUBE and MR NYONI. I decided: Let me check. At that time I did not know where these people were ...

MR JULY:

You said TRT?

MR KHUBA:

TRT members from JOHANNESBURG Central.

Because it indicated the list of names, of people who helped, to say: We were assisted by these people, thank you very much for assisting us. That success report I think was also aimed at being seen by their commanders, so that they could give them an incentive or something.

5

Now, after that I decided to go and interview them. That is where my team played a major role, because I was dealing with almost ten to fifteen people. I sat down with my team, I briefed them, and I said: When you go there, I want you to cover this part, this part and this part, I don't want you just to take a statement, so you need to ask these questions. Whatever follow up questions you ask is up to you, but cover this ground for me. We went there and did an investigation. They said: That happened, we were congratulated, we went there and transported these people. So I heard that part. There were three people who were also mentioned from the CRIME INTELLIGENCE CENTRE. I went to meet with them - I requested permission from COLONEL NTENTE(?), and immediately I arrived there, after I was given permission, I saw the pictures I had extracted from the computer.

They were on the walls - the picture of them standing with the ZIMBABWEAN Police, hugging them, or something like that. I started the interview. The lead guy on the operation - because when GORDON DUBE was arrested, DPCI 5 tasked CRIME INTELLIGENCE to go and search for these people. They went and searched for them. They tasked their informers, and their informers managed to get these people. I realised that one of the informers had the 10 same surname as the victim. It seems they used the relatives to get these people. I interviewed them. The lead guy was the one who gave me a problem. The lead guy is also from the same ethnic group as MALULEKE - I 15 knew then that I was going to climb a mountain. Every time I was interviewing him, and I think the interview took almost four hours, when the interview started to heat up he said he was suffering from a migraine, he 20 had a headache. I decided: No, I'm going to leave you, I will come tomorrow. When I was leaving, he said: No, sit down. We ended up completing his statement, but the statement did not shed light like other people's 25 statements.

After I dealt with him, I went to MOKASINA(?), who said: No, we did the operation, and after we dealt with the operation we went to DPCI's office and GENERAL DRAMAT came with MACKINTOSH 5 POLELA from House No. 1 to House No. 3. So the set up, when I went there to check, I found was exactly like that. There is House
No. 1, there is House No. 3, and House No. 1 is where DRAMAT was housed. The other thing 10 that he alleged in his statement was to say that GENERAL DRAMAT came and congratulated them, to say: Job well done, but please don't tell anyone.

There was another lady by the name of MRS 15
MAGOBO, who was also part of the operation.
When I asked her, she said: Yes, I heard that GENERAL DRAMAT came, but I was out, I had already gone to the shop. When I came back, people just told me: You missed it, the 20 General was addressing us. Another one by the name of MOGWENYA said: No, the General came and addressed us, and said: Congratulations for good work, but he did not mention that he said: Don't tell anyone. Now MOKASINA's 25

S July/IPID

statement was a little bit detailed. I wanted to know, because if a person goes into that detail, I said: How do you know GENERAL DRAMAT? He said: We were together during UMKHONTO WE SIZWE - but in SOUTH AFRICA they 5 were together. He even described him, to say that GENERAL DRAMAT was wearing a red tie.
And the day I interviewed him, he was wearing a red tie. I don't know whether he changes it or doesn't change it, but he said he was 10 wearing a red tie. I wanted to get the point that he knows GENERAL DRAMAT.
After that, when I had taken all the statements, I even went to the houses of the TRT members. Because even though I extracted 15 things from the computer, I had to get - because they said they had these copies of their photos at their houses. I had to go and collect those so that I could compare whether there was any material difference between 20 these two things, and I found they were the same by finding it inside the docket.
After I had done that part, in terms of the taking of the statements, it was time for me to obtain a warning statement. I met with 25

ADVOCATE MOSENG. We decided to say we are going to draft questions, because after we approached him, he said: No, he can answer - but he needed that in writing. We decided to draft questions for him. In fact, before that he agreed to meet with us, without question. But there was a leak in the SUNDAY TIMES that there was this case, and there is MADILONGA saying one, two and three. As an investigator I was worried, and I then phoned ADVOCATE MOSENG, I then phoned my partner and I then phoned MR SESOKO. MR SESOKO was not my supervisor or my superior, he was just acting in the post, and during the investigation KOEKIE MBEKI gave me a clear instruction to say: Don't involve MR SESOKO in anything. She said: Deal with this thing on your own, and you don't involve MR SESOKO. I requested MR SESOKO: Let's go. He said to me: KHUBA, you already told me that the boss says I must not go, so I can't go. I said: Okay, it's fine. We drafted the questions for GENERAL DRAMAT, and that was after a leak, when he decided he just wanted the questions in writing. I don't know, but I think he was disappointed that the information was leaked.

SJ LS

S July/IPID

I requested my former Executive Director, KOEKIE MBEKI, to say: I'm requesting that my entire team be subjected to a polygraph test, because I was not happy about it. I even 5 requested that if it was not done, I requested to be recused from the investigation, that I didn't want to deal with it. She called me into her office and she said: If you do not continue with the investigation I'm going to 10 charge you for insubordination, you need to do it. Then she said: We cannot request a private company - because I indicated that the people who did the forensic investigation of the laptop were ready to do the polygraph 15 tests for free. Then she said: No, you involve me, and I will handle that. But then she did not. I continued with the investigation, but I decided that I was not going to keep the original docket with me. I 20 took the docket to ADVOCATE MOSENG and I took a file which was not completely updated. It had some statements, but I requested COLONEL MOUKANGWE to have his own file, so that if it was stolen or something happened, then we 25 would have backup.

After we had sent the warning statement, I received a lot of correspondence from the lawyers of GENERAL DRAMAT, who were dealing with me directly. Firstly, they requested me not to arrest him, and also they sent something which - they even said to me that the questions were very wide or vague, or something. They responded, and the first response which I received was basically his political profile. So there was nothing relating to the questions on the investigation. I had to indicate to them: No, no, I want to get a response to the questions. They responded to the questions, and when I looked at the questions - there were some where he responded to the questions but with others he was saying this issue was classified and it was not something he could talk about. I said: Okay, that's fine. Because I wanted a situation where he could say something, even if it was to say: I don't want to say anything. It was sufficient for me. I filed his statement. I do not remember, but it seems as if the statement -

SS CS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

and I'm not actually quite sure, but I will go and check the records - was sent shortly after I sent the docket to MOSENG. I'm not really sure of that, but I would need to verify my facts. 5

During that time I also interviewed the main suspect, which is LIEUTENANT COLONEL MALULEKE. By that time he was a Lieutenant Colonel. The investigation I conducted around him was simply the issue of his promotion, firstly, to say that after the Rendition he became a Lieutenant Colonel. I requested the file of his appointment, because some people said he did not have STD 10, and that position needed a STD 10. So I requested the file, and all the correspondence was sent to BRIGADIER VERMAAK. 10 15

MR JULY: So before Lieutenant Colonel he was what?

MR KHUBA: He was a Captain. The first part I was worried about was his promotion, to say was he not promoted on the basis of that. Now, I did an investigation on that, and they said they did not have the file, things were not in order. I have all the correspondence, which I put in the file - in the docket - to show 20 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

that I communicated with VERMAAK about certain issues, but I could not get assistance. I also got the AVL's. I did the 205's in terms of the cellphone records of DRAMAT, of SIBIYA, of MALULEKE and all those types of things, because their internal investigation had only the cellphone records of SIBIYA, NEETHLING and MALULEKE. Those cellphone records covered a very short space of time.

MR JULY: Who conducted their interviews? 10

MR KHUBA: It was WARRANT OFFICER MATLAMA. I also interviewed him, and obtained his statements. I had a problem with the way the internal investigation was conducted, but there was nothing I could do, because internal investigation is an internal investigation. It seems as if this person was clear, and that I deduced from the info note to the Minister in response to the question of COPE about Rendition, because GENERAL DRAMAT sent a report explaining what happened, to say that these people were really deported, but they were deported as illegal immigrants. They were firstly suspected of ATM bombing. So I also investigated that part of it, that's why

SJ LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

I wanted the mandate of TOMS. My challenge was that if you arrest people, suspecting them of ATM bombing, and after that you clear them and find that they were not involved, what would make you drive over 400 kilometres to BEIT BRIDGE to drop off a person, whereas there is a holding facility of HOME AFFAIRS, where you could drop these people. That was a challenge for me. So I investigated that, and I even checked the mandate of TOMS. I even checked the resources, I even checked the amount which was injected there, even though I could not come to a particular amount that I could really qualify. But in terms of claims I could check how much they spent. My problem was that they spent a lot just to take a person to BEIT BRIDGE, and I had a challenge with that.

In terms of that investigation of TOMS and what they did, and the vehicles they used, it came out exactly that these vehicles were at a particular area. You would see that they were doing an operation. If the witnesses were saying that: Around 8 o'clock they came and arrested us at DIEPSLOOT, you would locate

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

those cars around DIEPSLOOT. So I took the AVL's, which are the records of TRACKER in terms of the movement of cars, and we developed a way to check where these vehicles were from Google Map. We corresponded that 5 with the telephone records of these people.
The reason why I had to connect it to the telephone records is because DPCI did not give me the record of who was driving these vehicles. They said those log books are not 10 there, so now I could not marry a car to a driver.

MR JULY:

But you could locate it?

MR KHUBA:

Yes, I could marry a car to a cellphone record. That's what I did, because the part 15 of the car and an individual in terms of the log book could not be done. So I have the record that said particular cars were there, and I also have the telephone records that shows particular investigators or members of 20 DPCI were there. That part was done, and MALULEKE was there, MAKOE was there, LEBURU was there - they normally use his name as LEBURU, but it is CONSTABLE RADEBE. I was able to connect all those people. 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

MR JULY: And NKOSI.

MR KHUBA: Yes, Yes. After the part where I connected them, because the first part of the issue of where these guys were detained, I did not have that information. Most especially for JOHN 5 NYONI as well as GORDON DUBE. I did not have that information, so what I did, I sent my investigators to all the police stations in GAUTENG. We drew up a web, working from the centre, going outside. We could not work from 10 outside coming in, because if you are in PRETORIA, you may detain a person at PRETORIA CENTRAL, at NOORD Police Station before you could go to GARANKUWA. We tried to work our way out. I think we had done about four, five 15 or seven police stations and we arrived at SILVERTON and found the names of people who were deported by the name of JOHN NYONI and DUBE. But when we went and drew the docket, we found that these were not the correct 20 people. Something came to me to say: Can it be a coincidence where you have people with the same name, around the same dates, detained around SILVERTON? I took the docket involving these people, and what I found was very funny. 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

I found that this docket was a fraud docket, and this fraud docket - these people, it's a JOHN NYONI who exists, it's not the JOHN NYONI who had been deported. This DUBE gave a statement to say: We were called to say let's 5 go to a particular place, I met another person called JOHN NYONI, and we were going to get some jewellery and the police came and arrested me. From that part it seems as if it was worked out and planned to create a decoy. 10
What I did, I said okay - because when we realised that these were not the correct people, I sent them to go and start to look.
Then they found NYONI at NOORD Police Station.
But what was funny, this NYONI was booked in 15 for fraud - the same case which was a decoy at SILVERTON. When he was booked out, he was booked out in the name of "extradition". The booking in was fraud, the booking out was extradition. All these things took place 20 around the 26th, 27th and 28th, when these people were arrested and deported.
So that fraud case I investigated - the decoy fraud. It led me to BENONI, and I also got a cheque which was stolen there. I looked for 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

these people, but they were running away, they did not want to talk to me, because they were afraid, so they disappeared. I found that that case was finally withdrawn, it never continued. I kept it - and it's part and 5 parcel of defeating, but the person who investigated the case was at BOSTERVAL(?), next to NELSPRUIT. I don't know the name, but I sent my investigator there. We interviewed her, we took her statement, but she said she 10 can't remember. Now it will be up to the prosecutor to decide, but we could not really get much on that.
Again, on the issue of DUBE, DUBE was facing five charges. When he was arrested by these 15 people of the CRIME INTELLIGENCE CENTRE, he was taken to WIERDABRUG. They found him with a firearm - the same firearm allegedly used in killing a ZIMBABWEAN policeman in ZIMBABWE.
Because they arrested him in DIEPSLOOT, they 20 had to register a case in DIEPSLOOT, but they transferred him to WIERDABRUG. When he was transferred to WIERDABRUG, WIERDABRUG had almost four cases they were investigating against him, including murder. The murder one 25

- I read that docket, and that docket was very strong. What happened, was when they took him there, because he was shot during the arrest, and he was shot by a guy by the name of MOGWENYA. They took him that side, and he was attending court. It seems as if the wound, where the bullet hit the flesh - because I think it was on the hip or on the bum, or somewhere there, so he went for treatment at the hospital, and he was going for a check up I think for the cleaning of the wound. Then they booked him at prison, because he was supposed to appear. But on the 28th MALULEKE requested the investigating officer of the WIERDABRUG cases to go and book out DUBE and take him to DPCI, which the investigator at WIERDABRUG did. We went and got the record from PRETORIA CENTRAL PRISON. It shows that he was booked out by MERWE something, I think it is. I can't remember the name of the investigator, but he was booked out. When he was booked out, he was never returned. So I had to go to the investigator and say: Where did you take this person? He said: I took him to SILVERTON. He took him on the 28th,

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

and on the 28th the register of NOORD Police Station shows that they booked out NYONI - the real NYONI now - to BEIT BRIDGE for extradition. It makes sense to me that that day they transported two people. I went and requested copies of all the dockets involving DUBE at WIERDABRUG Station. That is where I found a lot of incriminating evidence against MALULEKE, because MALULEKE was saying - because they wanted to close their docket. In the system you can't close the docket unless it's been disposed of in a rightful way, which means closed as undetected, either convicted, acquitted or the suspect has died, or something. There are a number of ways in which you can close the docket, but none of these happened. So what he did, he wrote a letter to them, and said: Please be informed that I took this person to ZIMBABWE and he was sentenced to life imprisonment. All these statements were in all these dockets, so he was really implicating himself. What I did then, was to say: Let me make copies of all these dockets. Fortunately I was a step ahead. In everything I was a step ahead.

still remember my investigators were ended up saying: Khuba, we won't give you the 5 information now, we'll give you the information in the morning, because when we give it to you late, then you send us when we are supposed to rest. What happened, is I requested them to go and make copies. They 10 made copies of each and every docket against DUBE. Then when I went to go and meet with the advocate, the advocate said: We are also supposed to get the originals. The following day when I went, all the originals were stolen 15 at WIERDABRUG. I could not get anything. But that was not a problem because I had already the originals. Even the issue of the books -

I never made a copy at the Police Station of 20 person who was doing the cellphone records. The person who was doing the cellphone records could not come to us in time with a report. He sent a draft report, which was handwritten somewhere, and I wanted the original report. 5

That report could not tell us much. We wanted information that would help us know whether SIBIYA was in DIEPSLOOT on the dates and times which the witnesses were alluding to.
ADVOCATE MOSENG said to me - and that was 10 after I had done the report - the report with which COLONEL MOUKANGWE was also in agreement, this is the report, signed. But in this report the outstanding investigation, which was not yet done - and this is an 15 investigation where, according to ADVOCATE MOSENG he said: We can't wait, because this case has been dragging. Because I was trying 205's, I was trying to invoke the Criminal Procedure Act to get - it was very, very 20 difficult. By that time I did not even have the statement of COLONEL VERSTER, because when COLONEL VERSTER learnt that DRAMAT was taken as a suspect at that time, she decided not to cooperate. She decided not to cooperate, and 25 even now I have not yet got her statement. I sent out questions which relate to not only MALULEKE, because by that time I had these success reports, so I had to add GENERAL DRAMAT, to say: You signed these success 5 reports, and what was the method of delivery, since GENERAL LEBEYA, who was almost on the same level as DRAMAT, acknowledged that he received the report, which talks about ZIMBABWEAN Nationals, and the same people who 10

GENERAL DRAMAT said were deported as illegal immigrants. But the report says they were wanted in connection with - so I put those questions to her, and she never came back to me. After I stored her number, she appeared 15 on WhatsApp, so I sent her a number of WhatsApp. I even said to her: If you feel you are a suspect, can I come and take your warning statement and warn you accordingly?
She just said: my son has been involved in an 20 accident, I can't talk to you, I'm going through a hard time now. But her resistance started before the accident - two months before the accident, and I kept on. I think I spent another month thinking that probably 25

this person had been discharged from hospital
- the same resistance. Lately, when I was requested by ADVOCATE BALOYI to say: We still need to get this signed success report, can't she give us a statement, I went back and 5 contacted her, and she did not pick up the call.

Then I requested - in fact I sent a message and she said she was in a meeting. I made a call, and she did not answer. Then I went to 10 McBRIDE and said: Mr McBride, I have this problem, can you talk to her? I don't know whether I gave him the number - no, I didn't give him the number. He just said: What is the name? I gave him the name, and he said he 15 would contact. Even today I haven't yet received anything from them. But he made a call in my presence; he was talking to somebody. He said: My investigator is struggling, he wants this person, but this 20 person is not showing up, what is the problem?
They talked and talked, but I do not know the response that that person gave. Even now I haven't yet received any statement or cooperation from that person, and that person 25 is no longer working for SAPS, they are working for PROTICON(?).

The report was done without - if I remember well, the statement of DRAMAT was not included in the report, but I'm not sure whether I had already received it or not received it. The statement of SIBIYA was not there, even though in the questions we sent to him I was assisted by MOSENG. ADVOCATE MOSENG knew very well that that information was still outstanding. I had to send the report, because I received a request from MOSENG that I needed to send the docket. I sent the docket and I sent the report, but I'm not sure whether that report was sent via email or if it was sent as being part and parcel of the docket. That I cannot remember. I requested IT to download all the emails so that I could check whether I sent it, but since yesterday I have been hitting a wall.

There was a request which was made on the analysis of MADILONGA's statement, and I want to say why I requested the analysis. It was done around September - I think McBRIDE started last year, in 2014. In September 2013

SJ LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

I sent a statement analysis to an expert. I want to say why I sent the statement analysis. The operation for the arrest of these ZIMBABWEAN Nationals took place in three phases, but MADILONGA said he assisted in the first phase. That was when he made a call to GENERAL DRAMAT, and GENERAL DRAMAT said: Let these people in, they are coming to see me. He confirmed with his superior, and the superior gave a statement and also confirmed what he was saying. This statement of MADILONGA I had to take for a statement analysis, because my understanding is that if you help me positively today, and I'm looking for the same help, there is a possibility that I can come back to you again. Because he said he helped them to cross the border, and he told me to say the police - because he was a senior that side. But I do not know if he did not help them because he was no longer working there, because after that he was transferred. But that part I'm going to check clearly. I think I checked it, but I'm not quite sure, I'm going to clarify it again. I had the challenge that he did not help them in the

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

second and the third phases, he helped them in the first phase.

I took his statement for analysis by the expert, and said: Can you check this statement, because I need to go and obtain a second statement from him? I want a watertight case, so do a statement analysis. They did a statement analysis, and they said: There is something that is problematic with the statement. I said: Why? They said some of the things it seems in a way he will be telling the truth, but in another way he is trying to protect himself. The truth will be put in such a way that as long as I'm not pushing the blame. So it's marked with red lines, waddah-waddah, I know these type of things. I said: Okay, it's fine. I went back to him. When I went back to him, I clarified: Why did these people not come back to you and request assistance in the second instance? He said he did not know but he only helped them once. But his statement is corroborated by 205's - you know the material or technical evidence, that this thing happened. You know, it's corroborated. I

SJ LS

S July/IPID

said: Have you ever spoken to DRAMAT at any time except for that day? He said: No, I don't speak with seniors, that's why even at that time I had to phone my seniors first.
For me I had to do that part. If you check 5 the docket, it has two statements of one person. I clarified that part. Then the report was done, and the report was sent to MOSENG together with the docket.
But I was still waiting. I was still waiting 10 for the cellphone records analysis, if I'm not mistaken, and I was still waiting for the statement from SIBIYA, the statement of DRAMAT was not part of the report, the statement of the Secretary of Police was not part of the 15 report, and the other statement I cannot remember, but it was quite a substantial number of statements. The report ended at page 35, if I'm not mistaken, and the nice part is when I do a report, normally when I do 20 major amendments to a report I do not save that report at all, I save them differently.
So if I do like this rendition, it is Rendition 1, and Rendition 2 - the same report. Because when I do major updates I 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

save them separately so that I can cover myself to say: The old report looks like this, the one that I updated looks like this. And the computer tells me exactly when last I updated it, and when you compare the two you can see what updates there were. So the report was sent. Let's come to the crucial part. 5

MR JULY: Why don't we ...

MR KHUBA: ... eat? I think you would want energy. 10

THE INTERVIEW ADJOURNS FOR LUNCH

THE INTERVIEW RESUMES

MR JULY: We are back now.

MR KHUBA: Before we closed, I indicated that I was coming to the important part. 15

MR JULY: Yes.

MR KHUBA: The important part was when all this new evidence had been gathered I then sent an email, and the email is dated 28 February 2014. In that email I requested ADVOCATE MOSENG, to say: There is statement that has been brought by SIBIYA, and I would want to attach it. In other words, I wanted to attach the evidence that I had, and everything, because he now had the original docket. Then 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

in his response he said to me: The docket is no longer with me, the docket is in GAUTENG, try to make an effort to get the docket or to go and attach the evidence that you have. I said: Okay, it's fine. By that time I had already started with the process of updating, because when I get stuff I update. I was updating the report in terms of the new stuff that had arrived. 5

I think on 3 March McBRIDE started, if I'm not mistaken. I just heard that, but the fact that he was the successful I knew long before that, but I think it was around the end of February when the DA made some noise that: This person is not suitable. 10 15

MR JULY: Yes, I remember. He started late.

MR KHUBA: I was not sure that he was going to come, because the way was so rife, I never thought it would go through Parliament. But I later heard that he was starting with us, and on the 3rd I think he came and started with us. What happened, is I did not see him when he started, because I went back to LIMPOPO. I received a call - and I cannot remember when - from MR SESOKO, to say that the Executive 20 25

Director would want to see or get an update on all the high-profile cases.

MR JULY: Maybe before you proceed, all that you wanted to do with this new information was to make it part of the report? 5

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: It was not like that information would have influenced you to change the report?

MR KHUBA: To tell you that straight, by that time I had not yet - you see, there is a difference 10 between updating new evidence in terms of saying what its impact is, and also the issue of ...

MR JULY: ... of saying how does it get you to a conclusion. 15

MR KHUBA: Yes, for me I was typing stuff in. I had not yet started with the issue of saying: What is the value of this, what is not the value of this, how does it impact and how does it not impact. I want to say that it was material to 20 the investigation, but I had not yet started with it. Because I got a request to say the ED wanted to get an update on the case, what I did, if I'm not mistaken, I emailed the report to MR SESOKO to give the report to 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

ROBERT McBRIDE, for his attention, so that when I met with him he would be well aware of the facts of the case. That report I gave him was not a signed report, but it was a copy - it might be the old one that I sent to the DPP. I can't remember which one, but it was a report about the Rendition. Of course it had an update in terms of ...

5

MR JULY: But it was not the one you handed over to MOSENG?

10

MR KHUBA: Mmm?

MR JULY: I'm saying when you say it was not the signed one, the one that you handed over to MOSENG was signed?

MR KHUBA: It was signed. I signed that one. It was not the signed one, it was a soft copy, and that's why I had to email it. But I cannot really say how many statements were updated, because by that time I had not yet finalised them, because I had the challenge that I spent most of the time without being in my office, and my office was not meeting the strategic objectives. Even though I was running up and down with the issue of investigations, I was still expected to meet the strategic targets

25

SJ LS

S July/IPID

as per the strategic plan. So when I went back I concentrated a lot on doing office work, checking cases, and making progress.

I sent that report. After I sent that report

I got a call to say that the ED would want to meet with me. Then after that I went to PRETORIA. I can't remember the date, and I need to verify the date with my diary or log book. I went to PRETORIA and met with the ED.

When I met with the ED there was no-one else, it was me and him. That was my first meeting with him. The first day I met with him, because I met him again for a second time, but the first day what I did was to explain to him exactly what I explained to him in terms of the processes from the beginning to the end:

how I received this case, how I investigated this case, and what happened, until the conclusion. There was nothing about anything except for me to brief him. After I briefed him, he said: Okay, we are going to meet again. I left his office and went through to MR SESOKO. At that time MR SESOKO was at home, somewhere in KEMPTON PARK, because we were supposed to have an investigator's meeting - what do they call it - a meeting between the Secretariat and IPID around BOKSBURG. What do you call this, is it called BIRCHWOOD hotel.

- MR JULY: Oh, yes, on the EAST RAND? 5
- MR KHUBA: Yes, on the EAST RAND.
- MR JULY: I know about that.
- MR KHUBA: I was staying at CITI LODGE, just before the airport, when you come from PRETORIA. I was staying around that side. I firstly went to MR SESOKO and I briefed him. I said: Mr SESOKO, I had a meeting with the boss, and the boss wanted me to brief him about the case. After I indicated to MR SESOKO what happened, I went back to the hotel and the following day we had to meet. I think it was a continuation of the briefing, because MR SESOKO did not call me. At that time I did not even have his number. I received a call from MR SESOKO to say that we are going to meeting again. 10 15 20
- After leaving the hotel I went straight to PRETORIA to meet with McBRIDE, as well as the...
- MR JULY: This is now the following day?
- MR KHUBA: I think it's the following day. I met with 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
27.03.15

McBRIDE and I met with SESOKO. There was a third person, and I think that person would be very critical to interview. There was a third person, a white guy, who took over from me when I was doing the investigation of CATO 5 MANOR, because after I was like threatened, I was told the police as well as SSA came and did security and what-what, and when they checked the numbers and everything they said:
Your life is in danger, leave now. So they 10 brought him in. Then that person, when we met
- we were meeting with him because he had to give a briefing on CATO MANOR. I had to continue with the briefing on this one of Rendition, because the previous day's briefing 15 I'm telling was me just flowing with what happened. Now, on the second day if I'm not mistaken he started with MR GLEN ANGUS of MPUMALANGA. He gave a briefing in terms of what happened at CATO MANOR. His briefing did 20 not really take very long, but it was also detailed. He gave an indication of: This is the stage, this is what happened, waddah-waddah. Of course there were some questions that were asked, but after he briefed then it 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

came back to me.

We started to look into - I think he asked questions in terms of the investigation itself. I think one of his main concerns was basically to say: Are you people not supposed 5 to be independent on the issue of robbing MOUKANGWE, to say are you not supposed to be independent, so there is this person of Crime Intelligence. But I also indicated: You know, I am just telling you this, because I 10 feel that you are head of the department now, and many people do not know about MR MOUKANGWE because he is a person who was operating from - he was not supposed to be known. I think to answer that one, that's why he did not sign 15 the report, even though he had an input in the report. But for me that was a person who was supposed to stay in a wallet. So I involved him, but it was not some person who was really supposed to be known as such. I explained to 20 him what happened, even though we are supposed to be independent. But I got an instruction. I got an instruction from the former Acting Executive Director that I needed to cooperate and work with him. From that part I briefed 25

SJLS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

him on the new evidence, to say: We got this new evidence, and this is the evidence, without explaining further to say what its impact was on the case, even though MR SESOKO and him were sometimes asking: What is the 5 value of this evidence, I indicated it. For example, when we talked about SIBIYA, I said:
With SIBIYA there is corroboration that points to the fact that he knew about this, he was involved. Somebody said he also assaulted. 10
But I told them that the new evidence was really kind of bringing a spin off to the first evidence, on the basis that we cannot really connect him in terms of him being there. Because the tower shows him being in 15 PRETORIA at the exact time when the witness says he was in DIEPSLOOT.
I also got another number for MAJOR GENERAL
SIBIYA, which I got through the underground.
I checked the number and all the numbers did 20 not show that they were there - that they were at DIEPSLOOT. But I had a discussion, because whenever I have a challenge like this I tend to talk to people, to say: Is it possible that a person can be there, and can use a 25

SSLS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

phone and leave it with someone? That possibility you can't rule out, more especially when you deal with the police. And this brings up the part that when I was consulting with ADVOCATE BALOYI - because I consulted, because he said to me he would want to prosecute SIBIYA, even though at first he said he did not want to prosecute DRAMAT, he just wanted to prosecute - he said: I've checked this document, I think I want to prosecute. So he had a challenge to say: These records, where you are saying SIBIYA was not there, when I check the expert who did this report it does not say much. I indicated to him that even the cellphone record indicated the tower, and this tower is right at SUNNYSIDE, it's right in PRETORIA, whereas in DIEPSLOOT the towers are 1, 2 and 3. Because I had the 205 of these other people and it shows the towers. Those towers are not related to the towers that coordinate the course of SIBIYA. When I took the two, my challenge was, was it possible that SIBIYA could have left the phone with somebody and generated some calls, and if he knew that the

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

operation was illegal, there was a possibility. But my question was: How possible is it that I can win this case, most especially if you present this. The defence attorney is going to tear you apart, to say: 5
How can you make a point out of assumptions? I had a challenge with that. So I indicated, to say: My biggest problem is that this part of the evidence here is really a challenge. 10

MR JULY: But isn't his presence there corroborated by a number of witnesses?

MR KHUBA: Yes, it's corroborated by a number of witnesses. That's why I want to tell you, more especially when you deal with reports, 15 because SESOKO is more of a legal person than myself. I'm an investigator, and I know the law relating to investigations. He had been a prosecutor for a long time, so he was able to raise questions about certain things, to 20 say: What about this, what about that, what about that? We had a discussion, but most of the discussion did not take place in the presence of the ED. But the ED raised a very crucial question, to say: Where was crime 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

committed. I think he asked that, he said:
Where was crime committed? Who are these people who are involved. He said he is not a legal person, but he just wanted to know where a crime was committed. So even though we did 5 not answer this question there, when we went to check the report, because we had to come up with a final one, based on the new evidence.
Either way I had to include the new evidence.
There were a number of questions he asked, but 10
I cannot remember the detail of this and that, and that. What I remember is he said: When was the crime committed, was it committed when these people were searched for, when these people were arrested - there were 15 a lot of issues that we debated regarding that issues, because we had to check where crime was ...

MR JULY: Is the crime not that here the crime starts - you can have a number of activities ... 20

MR KHUBA: ... that complete the crime?

MR JULY: ... that complete the crime. Assault would be an activity which is committed on those people who were assaulted, but when something happens with my knowledge, I know that there are 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

police orders and operations taking place, and I am informed because of my position. Whether I am physically there or not, it doesn't matter.

MR KHUBA:

I think to tell you, Mr July, I understand 5 that precisely, that when you are operating at that level I would not really expect that MR JULY would go and physically do something, you would probably send your foot soldiers to do that. The warning statement that I took from 10 GENERAL SIBIYA was somehow a little bit contradictory to his first statement to Parliament. Because I have a piece of that statement. In that statement he acted as if he did not know, but I went further to say - 15 because in the questions, the questions to GENERAL SIBIYA were well framed, because I decided to be spot on. I think if I'm not mistaken the first question was where I said:
The ZIMBABWEAN Police came on the 4th and had 20
a meeting with GENERAL DRAMAT on the 5th.
Your cell phone coordinates show that on the 5th you were in PRETORIA with GENERAL DRAMAT, what were you doing. I asked that. The response was: It's my head office, I go there 25

SJL

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

to do whatever work. The second question was:
Did you meet with the ZIMBABWEAN Police in relation to witnesses NDEYA, DUBE and so on?
Then he said no. He managed to answer some of the questions, but when I checked the 5 statement that was submitted to Parliament, that statement was providing information to say: I do not know anything. Those names you mentioned I don't know. I confronted - because when I took it, and I'm talking 10 about the layman assessment, the layman assessment was to say he sent SMSs to DRAMAT and LEBEYA, and these SMSs were in a very categorical form. He would send maybe four, two and two. Wherever you see DRAMAT you see 15
LEBEYA, DRAMAT you see LEBEYA, DRAMAT you see LEBEYA.

MR JULY: The only thing in that instance is that DRAMAT did not respond, according to the report ...

MR KHUBA: He never responded to SMSs that were sent by 20 MALULEKE, he never responded to SMSs which were sent by SIBIYA. Most especially because what I did was to take the operation and put a milestone to it. Because the witness would say: At around 8 o'clock we were being locked 25

SS LS

S July/IP1D
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

up at ORLANDO. So I take from 7:30 to 8:30 as a milestone and go and view the telephone records to see what the activities were of these people. Around that time I found that DRAMAT received a message from MALULEKE. 5

MR JULY: So if there would have been any contradiction, it would have been a contradiction between the tower information and the statement by the witnesses, saying that they saw him. 10

MR KHUBA: Mmm.

MR JULY: Right? It would be the physical presence when the tower points to him being in PRETORIA, but his knowledge of the operation is corroborated by the SMSs which were not responded to by DRAMAT. 15

MR KHUBA: Yes. Let me touch on that part, because everything was super in terms of this coordination, to say there were messages. I went further, to go to LEBEYA, and I said: 20
General Lebeya, can you give me a statement? Firstly, you wrote on the success report and you acknowledged - just to acknowledge the report. Now, how did you receive the report? He answered in his statement, and he said he 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

received the success report. So in his statement he did not only attach that success report, he also attached other success reports to show the success report used to come to him. That was the first part. When you look at the cellphone record where SIBIYA sends this, LEBEYA said to me that SIBIYA had an automated ... 5

MR JULY: Yes, I heard that part.

MR KHUBA: He had an automated email/SMS dispatch. 10

MR JULY: In actual fact it was as per regulations(?).

MR KHUBA: Now, for me that part - and I've got it in my warning statement, where I said: I can be a junior and send a message, but if you and her are my seniors and I send an SMS to both of you, it may not really be about joking things, it means I am reporting something. So now I had a problem with those things, and I said: You sent SMSs to LEBEYA and LEBEYA agreed to say you sent progress on a case, so tell me the operation other than the ZIMBABWEAN Nationals which you people were working on o this particular day at this particular time. That is when he said: They might have informed me, but I'm not involved 15 20 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

in issues of operation. I have that in his statement. So he is not saying that he knows exactly - he's not divorcing himself from the same stuff.

MR JULY: He does not want to expressly deny it, in the event that you come up with concrete evidence. 5

MR KHUBA: Yes, so that part I managed to clarify. But my biggest challenge was the issue of the (?), and when we were discussion it especially with MR SESOKO, I said: How then do we deal with a person who they said was there, who says he was not there? And the other statement of witnesses was saying that they saw a figure in a car, and when they ask MAKOE, MAKOE said it was GENERAL SIBIYA. So there you have hearsay evidence which cannot be admissible until MAKOE qualifies it. Now MAKOE is a suspect who never wanted to cooperate with me. 10 15

From that premise we decided that the issue of SIBIYA was going to be a challenge. But I want to say to you that what you are raising is very genuine, to say: But you would not expect this person to operate on that level. I think at any given time if a person comes with very compelling evidence, it's something 20 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

that can persuade you, but if you are discussing like I was discussing with SESOKO, for me, with his prosecutorial background I said no, I think - and I really believed him to say: Hey, this person was not there. Do you see now? It gave me a sigh of relief when I heard that this analysis had to go back, because ADVOCATE BALOYI said he would get a new expert to look at the evidence and explain. Because there were also some call divers - I don't know if they were diverted, or whatever, but the expert we used could not unlock that part. It just indicated the person was not there - these towers are in PRETORIA, and waddah-waddah.

We went and worked on the report. That report went to and fro ...

MR JULY: Who is "we"?

MR KHUBA: Me and MR SESOKO. We worked on that report. There was no time, to tell you an honest fact, where the ED touched or typed. He made input on the report, he never typed. I'm the one who typed. Even SESOKO, because he's very slow. I'm very fast because of my experience in doing this. I was seated on a chair at his

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

desk, working on the report when we were doing all these types of alignments, based on the new evidence to say this and this. But it was not only the new evidence, and I think I really need to be clear on that, because it 5 was also the evaluation of evidence. Many times, when I do investigation, I like it when a neutral person comes and looks into the case and advises, because sometimes you are overshadowed by facts, most especially with 10 some breakthroughs, if you find a breakthrough you would want it to be like a trophy on every recommendation that you make. Whereas you can find that those breakthroughs only affect one person. So I wanted MR SESOKO also to say: 15 Mr SESOKO, you need to re-advise with your prosecutorial background. Then we took the first draft to the Executive Director and he read it. I think that day I went home. I went home, and he read the report. We might 20 have corrected it ...

MR JULY: Now that's the first draft of the amended original?

MR KHUBA: Yes. So this first draft was going to and fro. We sent it to the ED to say: This is 25

85 65

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

the draft, check if you are happy with whatever we have done. But I also need to be very clear on this thing. McBRIDE never said to us: You need to clear this person or not clear them. I think he would have been 5 committing a serious mistake, because by then we were not really - he would just make input on certain things. I still remember the other thing, that when we discussed with MR SESOKO the recommendation on the three ... 10

MR JULY: How was he making those inputs? Let's say you give him the draft, he takes the draft, he goes and reads it - was he making notes?

MR KHUBA: Yes, he was making notes. Sometimes he used to make notes, and the majority of those were 15 spelling - he used to check little spelling mistakes, the spelling and how things are presented. But most especially on the spelling, he was very strict on that. When we were doing this report, there was also an 20 issue about the assault. I remember I still discussed this assault with MR SESOKO. I said to him: Look, Mr SESOKO, this issue of assault, really can we look into it and check whether we can advance this assault as a 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

recommendation? The challenge there was, if you look at the issue of the assault, there is corroboration that there was assault. But you have two groups: You have CRIME INTELLIGENCE and then you have members of TOMS. Members of TOMS were saying: We saw MALULEKE and this person assaulting the victims. Then you will have the victims saying: I was assaulted by a guy called MALULEKE and by a guy called - so you have that strong corroboration. Our biggest challenge was that we went to other TOMS members who gave material evidence regarding the Rendition. I still remember one guy's name, which is SELEPE, from TOMS. After I cornered him and said: I have this car, and it went there, he decided to say: I'm the one who helped MALULEKE to transport the people to BEIT BRIDGE. I had to find out whether there was assault. He said: No, I didn't see any assault. Other people were saying they did not see any assault. Now, we are looking at this issue of assault, and one of the guys they arrested, who alleged they were assaulted, was not taken to BEIT BRIDGE, they released him before they could take others via

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

- it's not NABOOMSPRUIT. What is that place next to PRETORIA, where they were changing cars. So this person was released, and when he was released I could not get the medical record. Because for others I understood they 5 could not really go to hospital because the one was released. This one was released immediately, so I could not get a medical record to see if he was assaulted. But assault is not always assault GBH, you can 10 have assault common. That part we had a challenge with. But also we had the challenge that if you charge one, these other members of CRIME INTELLIGENCE who are witnesses against members of TOMS, to say that they assaulted 15 them, you still have to charge with omission, most especially if you check the decision in the case of State v Witnesses, because they were duty bound to act, and they did not.

MR JULY: And they were committing an unlawful act. 20

MR KHUBA: Yes, so now you have two groups, where materially they are suspects, but they are also witnesses again - all this type of thing.
That was the challenged, and when we told the ED about that, he said: But a crime has been 25

SS 4

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

committed, why can't you just charge them. I think on this one let's wait for DPP, and DPP will probably give us direction to say what it is that needs to be done. Because the challenge was that with these people you can't deal with one and leave the other, you need to deal with them both. 5

Our understanding was, we realised that even though there was no medical record, there was still common assault happening. On the issue of theft of money we had a challenge where other people did not see it. When we interviewed I was very strict to find out, because I wanted to prove the elements of that crime, and I realised they were not really coming forward to say: Really, money was stolen. So we did not recommend any theft charges. 10 15

When we were done, I think when the corrections were done, it finally went to MR SESOKO. 20

MR JULY: Before the finalisation of that, you don't have documentation that shows the exchange and the notes from McBRIDE?

MR KHUBA: I'm telling you I would have had 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

documentation, because when these things were changed, they were brought back to us - not to me, because SESOKO would have been the one. I regarded SESOKO as more of a senior because of his experience, even though we were the same rank. On most of the things I would phone him and request advice. I still remember when the last document was signed, or the last report, most of the documents were destroyed. The reason why they were destroyed, was because there was that leak that had happened in the past. I still remember the ED said: When we sign this thing, let's put it in the safe, because we do not want to be blamed tomorrow to say we are the one who leaked the report. But after that I never participated in the issue of taking the docket. After I put my signature on that report ...

MR JULY: The second report? 20

MR KHUBA: Yes. I gave them everything, and I do not know how they delivered it to the NDPP, because we went and fetched the docket - and that's the part that I omitted - we went and fetched the docket, because the docket was

55 25

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

already in JOBURG. When we fetched the docket, I went with MR ANGUS and I said to MR ANGUS: Will you accompany me, I'm going there? We went there and found ADVOCATE VAN ZYL at the DPP, JOHANNESBURG. When we found ADVOCATE VAN ZYL, we indicated that we have no evidence and we would want to take the docket. Then he looked at the report - not my report, the report of MOSENG, because from my report MOSENG had already recommended. Because when you send to the other DPP, you also summarise, as the person who is guiding the investigation. So he gave I think two or three pages. Then we discussed it with ADVOCATE VAN ZYL to say: This docket will come back to you. We took the docket. ADVOCATE VAN ZYL, after some weeks - because if you check, the report was sound around April? The second report was signed around April.

MR JULY: Yes, around March.
MR KHUBA: The date of signature?
MR JULY: Oh, the date of signature. On my one the signature is April. Everybody else signed in March. I'm not sure, there is no date.

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

SESOKO signed on the 18th.

MR KHUBA:

It might be the same date that I signed, because when I signed it I left it in the office of SESOKO, and I gave everything.

Because when I collected that docket from 5
ADVOCATE VAN ZYL, I indicated that we would bring back the docket. Then, when we were done with everything, I requested to take back the docket. MR McBRIDE said: No, we will need to take this document back again to the 10
DPP. So I did not know what happened or what was done. I do not know whether the report was initialled on each and every page. It was not initialled?

MR JULY:

No. 15

MR KHUBA:

So I do not know whether in that report something was added or was taken away. I wouldn't be able to know.

MR JULY:

So this report, according to you, is the one which says at the end: 20

"Based on the available evidence the Independent Police Investigative Directorate recommends that no charges should be brought against Lieutenant General Dramat and Major General Sibiya." 25

S5 L5-

S July/IPID
27.03.15

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: "It was clearly established that there is no "prima facie" case against them, however, with regard to Colonel Maluleke there is a (?) case."

5

This is the report?

MR KHUBA: That is the report, yes. In terms of the recommendation I'm quite sure, because I signed that page. But the other pages I can only presume are in the same way as I left them.

10

MR JULY: We will go through this report, and I will show you where the problems and discrepancies are. Now let's start with where it ends, and take your one that you signed alone, the one that you signed alone also starts with the same wording:

15

"Based on the available evidence, the Independent Police Investigative Directorate recommends that Lieutenant Dramat and Major Sibiya, Lieutenant Maluleke, Constable Radebe, Captain S Nkosi and Warrant Officer Makoe be charged criminally for kidnapping, defeating the ends of justice and assault and theft ..."

Right, let's go through it. Now, the one that you signed, which is the second one, leaves out CONSTABLE RADEBE - nothing is said about him; it leaves out CAPTAIN S NKOSI and it leaves out WARRANT OFFICER MAKOE. What is the reason for that? 5

MR KHUBA: The reason, as I have explained, is when we analysed the evidence review, based on the new evidence that I had - and that was mostly relevant to SIBIYA, when we talk about the cellphone records - when we talk about MAKOE as well as NKOSI and LEBEYA and MALULEKE on the issue of assault as well as theft, I omitted it there, because when I discussed it with MR SESOKO, we looked at the way ... 10 15

MR JULY: How you were going to prove that?

MR KHUBA: Yes, how we were going to prove that, most especially when you deal with a case of the scale of beyond a reasonable doubt. It becomes very difficult. But because we understood that a recommendation is just a window into an investigation, we had no problem in sending that, to say: If the DPP have a different view, they can overturn it, 20 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

and we're fine. I never had a challenge with that.

MR JULY: Let's go to DRAMAT. My understanding is that where you said DRAMAT should be charged with defeating the ends justice, assault and theft, 5 let's say he is not found guilty - he is not going to be found guilty on all or some of those charges, but your recommendation was based on his knowledge of the operation, that these things don't just happen. For instance, 10 people were being taken from here illegally, so he knew about that. Right?

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: Now we're saying because of that - because remember, there has never been evidence that 15 DRAMAT was ever found to be involved in operations.

MR KHUBA: Yes, you're right.

MR JULY: So we reached that conclusion knowing that that information that linked DRAMAT to 20 operations was not there.

MR KHUBA: Mmm.

MR JULY: Now you have SIBIYA. You try to compare SIBIYA and DRAMAT to say: We did find information which we considered to be 25

SJL

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

contradictory in terms of SIBIYA's location, but who is aware of the operation, in the same way that DRAMAT is aware. What then makes us change our minds, because at the point when we were drafting this report, we knew that DRAMAT was never involved in the actual kidnapping, was never involved in the actual assault, defeating the ends of justice - the operation he was involved in. But we said what we said because of his position as head of the operation. 5 10

MR KHUBA: Yes, that's true. That's true.

MR JULY: How is it different from SIBIYA?

MR KHUBA: After you have explained, there is no difference on the basis that that person is operating only strategically. That's what I need to tell you. You would probably not expect even him, because I think the other part that made me - when I look at that, is the issue of his absence. Because when I was investigating a case in BOKSBURG there was an allegation that he physically went there and kicked people. So for me I took him as people who are in a high position would want to be physically involved. When I looked into the 15 20 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

records and realised that this person was not there, my question was how do I even sustain the question of assault when they allege that he assaulted someone? But probably the issue of kidnapping, because he was not supposed to be physically there, makes sense. But when we review that and look to the higher - you know, we normally put a higher scale when we deal with issues of recommendation to the DPP. I said: But if you look at the evidence against SIBIYA, these people have already shot themselves in the foot, to say on this particular time he was there, he was wearing this - and he was not there. Do you get what I'm saying? Most especially when I got the information that when I investigated him on the issue of the meeting, I placed him at SILVERTON where the meeting took place.

MR JULY: You see, his physical presence would have been relevant on assault and theft.

MR KHUBA: Mmm.

MR JULY: Let me show you also what seems to be problematic and where certain things were changed and the manner in which they were changed. Do we have an extra copy of this?

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

MR JULY: Yes, please make copies of this.

So I hear you when you say at the end you can testify about the actual conclusion, but what you can't testify about is whether the content and things were removed. We are only going to be able to talk about things that were removed or were not removed if we go through the document. 5

MR KHUBA: But also, you need to understand that I have that report in my system. I emailed it to MR SESOKO, the same one. What I did not do, was to check whether it's the same, together with the one that I amended. But I really hope that it's the same. I'm not saying something wrong was done, no, but to the best of my ability, from what I can remember, I will be able to give you answers why there is a difference between the two. 10 15

MR KHUBA: Yes, I agree.

MR JULY: Then on the same page, on the original one, 10 paragraph 53, which is the second page of the second report.

MR KHUBA: Paragraph 53 or 5.3?

MR JULY: It's paragraph 5.3, sorry.

MR KHUBA: I see that. 15

MR JULY: Emails by CAPTAIN MALULEKE. On the original

If you look at that paragraph all that is out except that he sent emails to ZIMBABWEAN

MR KHUBA: Let me check.

"He sent emails circulating more than 10 twenty photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation. He sent emails to Zimbabwean travelled back home, and that he is still 15 tracing the main suspects."

I have that, yes.

MR JULY: Then if you go to the next one, paragraph ...

MS BADAL: Is it 5.5?

MR JULY: Yes, 5.5. If you look at 5.5 ... 20

MR KHUBA: 5.5?

MR JULY: 5.5 is the cellphone record of MAJOR GENERAL

The same automated SMSs were sent to Major General Lebeya (at that number). 10
These SMSs were sent at various milestones of the operations."

But if you look at the report on page 23 ...

MR KHUBA: This one is not in terms of the analysis?

MR JULY: This one. 15

MR KHUBA: No, no, that's fine.

MR JULY: If you look at this one, at the same paragraph 5.5, page 23, this would be the changes. Do you see how it is typed there?

MR KHUBA: There it is in the blocks. 20

MR JULY: It's in the blocks, yes, and when it comes to the cellphone records of GENERAL SIBIYA, they are not there. That is left out.

there, and then the cellphone record of DRAMAT. But it doesn't say anything about the cellphone records.

MR KHUBA:

You see when you say the cellphone records of DRAMAT are not part of this, I still remember when I was doing these blocks, I was trying to kind of really give the evidence in a more concise way, so that I could make the information more readable. But the issue of DRAMAT's number is not there, because I said: 5 10

"CELLPHONE RECORD OF LIEUTENANT GENERAL DRAMAT

The entire cellphone record of Lieutenant General Dramat does not show any interaction with the Zimbabwean counterparts. I get that part.

MR JULY: Even the MALULEKE one, if you go to that same paragraph 5.5, if you go to the original ...

MR KHUBA: Of 5.5? 5

MR JULY: Yes. The original 5.5, if you turn to page 24 and read what is said about MALULEKE, and read what is said here, it says:

“The interaction between Major General Sibiya and Captain Maluleke was also found in a form of received and outgoing calls. Captain Maluleke also communicated with General Dramat in terms of outgoing SMSs at a very important milestone of the operation. However, General Dramat never responded to the SMSs which he received from Captain Maluleke. He also called a Zimbabwean number twice ...” 10 15

That thing is not here under MALULEKE. 20

"He is a police officer who was posted at the border during the operation. He 15 assisted Captain Maluleke to cross the border with the suspects. He contacted Lieutenant General Dramat when he welcomed the Zimbabwean police the first time." 20

MR KHUBA: Are you talking about MADILONGA or NEETHLING?

The new paragraph 5.5 here does not talk to this.

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: So I'm saying even if we were to accept your version as being correct, that when you received this evidence about the location of SIBIYA, but everything that we have done so far has nothing to do with MAJOR GENERAL SIBIYA, and in addition to that his location, in order to prove the charges that you brought against him - except for theft and assault - you don't need his physical presence. 10 15

I need to indicate that that issue regarding the call, if you check it is there, in terms of when you go deeper into the analysis, to say that even though GENERAL DRAMAT might have received the call, we do not know what the discussion was all about. Okay? 5

MR JULY:

Okay, let's go through it. It says the ZIMBABWEAN Police into the country, and it says they were coming to - you see, what you were doing here, you were analysing the statements made by people. They are there. Then you seem to be accepting those documents, hence you came to the conclusion that there is a link. Right? But in this you leave out - that has been left out, as if the meeting has never happened, as if MADILONGA has never said what was said. Of course when you want to come to a conclusion, that you can do, but you needed to analyse it in this way that you did. But now, because the conclusion is different, that analysis is no longer as if you now are not agreeing with the fact that there was a meeting on 5 November, as if MADILONGA never made that statement. Do you get what I'm saying? 25

SS LS

S July/IPID

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR KHUBA:

Yes, there I'm just really going to explain on that part, because when we discussed the evidence and reviewed the evidence, we tried to weigh it, in terms of saying: If there is this evidence, what is the possibility in terms of this side and this side? Whereas in the first report it was a clear-cut case to say: If this person called and there were no previous calls that were made to this person, and there were no calls made afterwards to this person, it shows that the call was basically about the ZIMBABWEANS, and there are people who confirm that, which means the ZIMBABWEANS met with DRAMAT. That was the first report.

Now, using the same evidence, the second report is saying - and probably it put it in a way that it is kind of really more suggestive rather than straightforward and to the point, because we were saying even though COLONEL MADILONGA called GENERAL DRAMAT and they confirmed - all these people confirmed already he received a call - we do not have confirmation of what they talked about or what they discussed.

SS LS 25

S July/1P1D

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR JULY: You see, the problem is unless you have evidence which says: I have never received a call from MADILONGA - and MADILONGA having said: I similarly didn't phoned, there was a need for me to make this call - in the absence of any information which seeks to suggest that the content of the call was disputed, or the call itself was disputed, there is no reason why that information was left out here. 5

MR KHUBA: Also, what I would not agree, most especially on the analysis, is the issue that the information was not left out. It might be the way it was presented. For example, if I then acknowledge in the analysis, in the new report, that DRAMAT received the call, but I do not know what the call was all about, it really puts it in a way as if I cannot really decide whether DRAMAT is involved or not involved. 10 15

MR JULY: You see, the problem with that submission is that you make the call, and whatever was said in the call - it doesn't matter how long it took for them to talk, but there was a meeting on 5 November. So one would then link the two and say: Then there is no way that DRAMAT 20 25

S3 65

S July/IPID

INNOCENT KHUBA

could not have known about the presence of the ZIMBABWEANS.

MR KHUBA: Yes, that's true.

MR JULY: That he can't say. Then, taking it to it's logical conclusion, in the absence of any other information which contradicts that call, the call was about the same thing. But I'm saying when you made this - this one seeks to stay completely away from DRAMAT, this report. 5

MR KHUBA: Probably the way it is presented seems to be taking responsibility away from DRAMAT. 10

MR JULY: Yes, and this one puts it very clearly. Let me tell you, we may not agree with what was said here in the first one - you may not agree with it - but it put things into perspective. Here is the call, here is the person meeting with these people, here is the person congratulating the officers, and how can you say you don't know? 15

MR KHUBA: I agree with you, yes. 20

MR JULY: And the resources are being given to carry out the operations. How do you then say you don't know? But when you read this one, it is ...

MR KHUBA: It neutralises everything.

MR JULY: Yes, yes. 25

SSLS

S July/IPID

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR KHUBA:

Advocate, I think the biggest challenge is when you debate the evidence, most especially as I indicated previously, when you have dealt with an investigation yourself, and you get these inputs in terms of the case needing to be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, you need to look into this evidence and explore the possibility of it. This possibility should not be based on presumption, it needs to be based on evidence. But one important issue was to say - I think we debated a lot, myself and SESOKO about it, to say: Is the knowledge sufficient? We debated it. Previously I held a different view. But we debated it again: Is the knowledge sufficient? We came to a point, to say: But the fact that I know or the fact that I know about something - because we explored the part that says the DPCI was allowed to assist other countries. They've been assisting. I even drew another case involving ANGOLA. The responsibility of the investigator is to be able to comply with the legislative imperative. It means that if I go out there and get records of a cellphone, you being my boss would expect that I apply for a

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

205 to get the things. Then I apply for a 205, I go and serve it, and when I say the case is solved, you expect that I walk the thin line of the Criminal Procedure Act in order to attain whatever I have attained. 5

We asked ourselves to say, more especially in line with the question of where the crime was committed - I wanted to know if these people, more especially those who were assisting MALULEKE, would have known. 10

MR JULY: Let me tell you, you would have used the same report and come to this conclusion still. You would have used the same report and come to this conclusion. But once there are ...

MR KHUBA: ... some things that are not there ... 15

MR JULY: ... things that have been removed.

MR KHUBA: I think there I need to explain why things have been removed, if they have been removed.
Because I agree with you that the contents of the first report and the second report - there 20 are things that are missing. At first, when you gave your explanation, I never had a problem. But I'm looking through the statement, in my statement, to say: How could this statement be removed, because it does not 25

SS 65

8 July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

even have the name of DRAMAT? Do you get what I'm saying? The point of the matter is that when we dealt with the report there were only three hands that the reports when through. It was me, it was SESOKO and it was McBRIDE. 5 Only three. The other person, ANGUS, only became part of the meeting where these things were discussed in detail. But when it comes to the issue of working on the report, it was myself and it was MR SESOKO. But most of the 10 time it was me, because MR SESOKO is very slow in typing. I transferred the report to his computer, because I use a very small laptop, and sometimes when you have big fingers, you hit two letters when you want to hit one. So 15
I ended up working on his computer. When it was done I sent it through. But the things that you are showing me, how this evidence was taken out, most especially the ones that really implicate DRAMAT, I'm concerned. 20
Because even in the reports in the newspapers they say some of the evidence was taken out. I just said: These people are lying. I did not even bother, I just said: These people are lying. But my concern, when I'm looking 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

at this, is what really happened? I really have a problem.

But I also have a challenge that some of the evidence - and this is part of my statement,

I do not think, in my own opinion, that if the idea on the agenda was to clear DRAMAT through trying to take stuff out, why do you take that one, because it has nothing to do with DRAMAT.

So I do not know, because that report we did very quickly. We did it very quickly. If you check I think we signed it around the 18th.

We did it very quickly, so I do not know how some of the information went missing. But I want to tell you it's my concern to say not only the information that implicates DRAMAT, but the information that is silent about DRAMAT. If I have to give you an answer on what really happened and what the reason was, I would be starting to learn to lie.

But in terms of your analysis, the analysis took a very, very different form. If you look at the analysis, it seems as if it was rewritten. It does not even conform with the old analysis.

MR JULY:

And it seeks to suggest that what was a

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

factual thing is no longer a fact.

MR KHUBA:

Mmm.

MR JULY:

It's left out. Do you get what I'm saying?

MR KHUBA:

Yes.

MR JULY:

And what would have been considered in coming to that conclusion, is left out in order to come to this different conclusion.

5

MR KHUBA:

You know, I really respect your opinion on that, but as a person who worked on the report, myself as KHUBA never intentionally or deliberately removed part of the report. No.
One very important thing, sometimes I do not really regard myself as an intelligent person, but I think operating through commonsense it would tell me what is the use in removing something in the report but leave it in the docket? Do you see now?

10

15

MR JULY:

Yes.

MR KHUBA:

Because it's not the report that informs the investigation, it's the investigation that informs the report. So the fact that things were not aligned properly - and probably things were done hastily, I do not know, but the issue is that on the report we had inputs from ROBERT McBRIDE, and those inputs we dealt 20

25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

with, most especially the spelling part. In terms of the evidential part I cannot really remember and cannot say. If the other person comes - because when we dealt with this report, there was MR ANGUS. He may shed some light on that. But what I still remember, there was no time, and I'm still repeating it, because I really do not - if there is one thing that can put me in trouble, and I was telling my wife about it, the one thing that can put me in trouble about this thing is when I lie about it. Because I didn't do anything wrong, but once I lie about it then there is something wrong with it. 5 10

The issue is there was not even a single time where McBRIDE said to me: Change the report to suit DRAMAT. He might have made inputs, he might have queried how things were done. Sometimes the issue - most especially the issue of having a CRIME INTELLIGENCE member, he had a concern about it to say: Are you people not independent? We indicated to him that we are independent. He said: How did you involve a CRIME INTELLIGENCE member in the investigation? But I cleared that, and I told 15 20 25 him. I said: The reason why I involved him is because I got instruction, and I worked with him. This guy was never - I would have signed this report with him, but I realised that this report may end up in the wrong hands or the right hands, but they will know that I was working with MOSENG(?), so I wanted him to remain a secret colleague in terms of his part in the investigation.

Sjls

S July/IPID

5

MR JULY: Let us go through these. You see, for instance, just in the way of showing how in the second report there was an avoidance of stating the factual statements, if you look at page 29 of the original report ...

10

MR KHUBA: Of the original report?

15

MR JULY: Yes. It says:

"The operations carried out by TOMS to arrest Zimbabwean Foreign Nationals (it's under ANALYSIS) in Diepsloot in connection with the murder of a Zimbabwean police Colonel was led by Captain M L Maluleke, also known as Cowboy.

20

According to a letter retrieved from Captain Maluleke's laptop there was a meeting in August 2010 held between Zimbabwe ..."

25

To that one you may deliberately not make reference.

MR KHUBA: So it doesn't appear in the analysis? 5

MR JULY: Yes.

MR KHUBA: Okay. It's not in the findings?

MR JULY: It says in the findings - there is only one meeting that is being referred to. It talks about the success report. The only meeting to 10 which reference is made here is on:

"The success report that claimed that Lieutenant General Dramat had a meeting with the Zimbabwean police lacks detail about the meeting itself." 15

But it says here:

"In August 2010 held a meeting with the Zimbabwean authorities (indistinct) wherein General Sibiya was appointed as a coordinator regarding cooperation 20 between the two countries.

The obligation to assist is (indistinct) should have emanated from the agreement of the same meeting, as cited in the success report. The letter dated 25

SS LS

S July/IPID

INNOCENT KHUBA

2010/07/29 addressed to Commissioner Shibande by Lieutenant Dramat requesting a meeting of 5/08/2010 to discuss operational matters, but limited to fugitives of serious crime, like cash-in- 5 transit and (?)."

There is enough evidence that showed that GENERAL DRAMAT not only knew about the operation that led to the Rendition, but sanctioned it in the following ways. He let 10 the ZIMBABWEANS come into the country for the purposes of meeting with him.

MR KHUBA: I still remember when I was raising that issue
- you know, most of the things when you are raising them - it kicks. When we were 15 talking, I still remember when we were debating this issue with him, we said he allowed these people to enter the country. He said no, he didn't allow (indistinct). Do you get what I'm ... 20

MR JULY: But what we do know in these particular circumstances, is under normal circumstances it is HOME AFFAIRS who would allow it. But in this particular instance we have evidence which says MATHEBULA phoned his boss, who 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

said: I know nothing of this, phone DRAMAT. He then called DRAMAT and DRAMAT said: Let them in. There is no evidence, even from DRAMAT, which says: I did not talk to the ZIMBABWEAN Police, I never said to this guy he must allow these people to come in. On what basis now do we leave that information out? 5

MR KHUBA: Okay, did you check DRAMAT's statement, the warning statement?

MR JULY: No, you see, the warning statement - that's a bad memory. It's not ... 10

MR KHUBA: It's not factual?

MR JULY: No, I'm saying it's a bad memory.

MR KHUBA: COLONEL DRAMAT:
"He will state that he is the Deputy National Commissioner of the South African Police Services. He unequivocally points out that at no stage during his correct role as the National Head of the DPCI did he personally authorise the unlawful and intentional depriving of a person's liberty, or movement, and/or his custodians of control on any basis whatsoever." 15 20

MR JULY: On which page is that? 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR KHUBA: It's page 25.

"He will further say that he never authorised anyone or sanctioned the kidnapping of any Zimbabwean Nationals. He knows of no action that he took or authorised which was aimed at defeating the administration of justice."

5

MR JULY: And this is not responding to the issue of a call being made, because there are particular allegations, specific allegations that are being made.

10

MR KHUBA: But if you look at the issue of the call, in terms of the warning statement - because he requested questions in writing, it was never contested with him. Because when we discussed the questions with ADVOCATE MOSENG, he was of the idea: Let us not be specific with him, because once you become specific you are restricted. I don't know whether you have those questions.

15

MR JULY: No, no, let me tell you why - I don't have the questions, but I'm saying now you are the author ...

MR KHUBA: ... of the report?

MR JULY: ... of the report. What do you make of the 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

statement that you relied on to come to this conclusion, when a person says the following, that:

"He will state he is the Deputy National Commissioner and he unequivocally points out that at no stage during his correct role as the National Head of the DPCI did he ever personally authorise ..."

That is a different issue. He may have had the meetings, he may not have authorised, but that doesn't mean those meetings did not take place.

MR KHUBA:

What I want to put across is that we have two issues here. We have the issue that DRAMAT addressed, to say: Authorise the operation - and he did not authorise the operation. You have the second issue, which you said is whether he knew about the operation. That's a very critical point. If you look at the first one, whether he authorised it, of course we could not prove that he did or did not authorise it, but we can prove that he knew about it.

MR JULY:

Yes.

MR KHUBA:

When we did the evaluation of evidence, we

SJLS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

dwelt on what we could prove, whether he knew. We debated the issue, whether knowing is sufficient. That's where we arrived at a point to say: MALULEKE had been deporting people. Wasn't it that DRAMAT was expecting him to have followed the procedure? Do you get what I'm saying? 5

MR JULY: You see, once you have the knowledge - this is what SESOKO would have said. Once you have the knowledge, and you also hinted at this - once you say something happened in front of you, as the police, which is unlawful, with other policemen beating a person in front of you, the failure to act in itself is an action. Right? 10 15

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: In this case, when DRAMAT becomes aware of this, it is beyond question whether ...

MR KHUBA: ... whether the other one followed procedure or not? 20

MR JULY: Yes, because he knew about it.

MR KHUBA: Okay.

MR JULY: He knew about the presence of the ZIMBABWEANS here, he knew about the deportation of these people, and if the evidence stands, he then 25

Sj Ls

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

congratulated them. So if he congratulated them, as a person in his position, he should have said what then happened. But that question you don't ask and answer yourself, you put that question, you assume he ought to have known that the procedure was not followed. 5

MR KHUBA: So you are saying the point should be that he ought to have known that the procedure was not followed? 10

MR JULY: Yes. Because he knows that police don't act. That's a process of HOME AFFAIRS. The deportation of people is not a police competence.

MR KHUBA: Yes, and if you look at the documents, according to a guy from HOME AFFAIRS, he said somebody came with these documents and said: Do you know these documents? And he said it was MALULEKE. So my suspicion was it was the same MALULEKE who did that, he wanted to go and verify. My point was to say every step of the way - in fact, let me not say my point, let me say what we discussed when we were evaluating this case, was to come to a point to say: If MALULEKE did all these things, 25

55 65

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

going to these people and all these types of things, does it mean that DRAMAT knew about it? That was one of my questions. And if I had probably applied the approach that you are using now, I could have arrived at a different position, which was my previous position. Do you get what I'm saying? Because for me - we discussed with MOSENG and others to say: But this person operating at that high level - but the discussion was not quite extensive, like I had when I had it with SESOKO, because he had this prosecutorial background, to say: With these things the defence is going to tear you apart. Like this issue, and this issue. Because when you do a report you also expect that probably the NDPP may give a copy to the defence. Actually we started to look into this evidence, trying to maintain - not a balance, but to say where does the scale tip heavily, and also looking at things where we could say: This is tangible, this is what we can use. I think the point that I did not really embrace much is the point that you are making, that with DRAMAT one is supposed to say that if he knew about it, that is

15

20

25

sufficient.

MR JULY: Yes. Another question I have, is isn't the role of DPCI to find a person criminally liable and that's it? If there is no criminal element there is no infringement of any - you can't find a person to have misconducted himself in terms of the Police Code, it has to be criminal. 5

MR KHUBA: No, you can. What happens is that if you check - we normally use one regulation of SAPS, and it is called 20(z). 20(z) says the person has committed a statutory or common law crime, and that is what that person can be subjected to. There are other provisions of that regulation which would indicate that the person has caused what? Something to do with the administration of what, what, what. 10 15

MR JULY: That is what I was going to say, to say for instance now SIBIYA is being subjected to a disciplinary hearing. I'm not sure whether that also comes out of this report. I'm asking that question, to say: Is it criminal or nothing? 20

MR KHUBA: No, it's not criminal, there are a lot of things you can use. 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR JULY: You can simply be charged as an employee of the Police, and be subjected to a disciplinary?

MR KHUBA: You can. It's not only criminal, we do both. In fact, our Act is very clear. It says you 5 can do criminal and you can do departmental. Most of the time when the criminal is strong, then we recommend that the person be charged departmentally for contravention of Regulation 20(z). That regulation talks about the person 10 having committed a statutory offence or common law offence. If it's a situation where you do not recommend a person to be charged criminally, you cannot use Regulation 20(z), because that issue of 15 crime falls away. But when we did this, after we had done the analysis and everything, there was a departmental recommendation which was sent. I cannot remember it well, because I dealt with the criminal one. Whether I signed 20 that or did not sign, I cannot remember, but I think probably I signed. That one said that we recommended only MALULEKE to be charged. We said MALULEKE must be charged in terms of Regulation 20(z). 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR JULY: Criminally?

MR KHUBA: Yes. But these other ones like NKOSI, because we did not recommend them to be charged for assault, we could not go and say: Charge them departmentally for 20(z). I think that was 5 the rationale behind the issue of saying why the decision was that way.

Also, can I raise another point here?

MR JULY: Yes.

MR KHUBA: There was a memo - an info note, sorry, which 10 was sent to MTHETHWA. That info note is very straight to the point, but we do not know whether you have it or not. Because that info note was written the same day, I think. It says what happened. It indicated what the 15 boss has done, a review, and what, what. And that one places the role on our boss in terms of what he has done. I do not know whether you have that info note. It was around the 18th or the 20th, but somewhere around March. 20
If you have, then it's fine. If you do not have it, I can try to find that information and give it to you somehow.

MR JULY: No. That info note talks about what?

MR KHUBA: The info note says that he came, he reviewed, 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
27.03.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

he requested cases, and it talks to - so I do not know whether the Minister handed it over.
But that info note - because I think when I was speaking with SESOKO about the case, I said there was an info note. He said: No, 5 there is no info note. I said: I remember there was an info note. When we got that info note, we realised that info note was sent. So when I was in DURBAN I wanted to come with it, because he has it in his computer, but he 10 said: No, no, I don't think they will need it. I think he will be able to give it to me after this, and I will find a way in which I will give it to you. Because I want to assist the investigation. 15

MR JULY: Yes, we need the info note.

MR KHUBA: Okay.

MR JULY: So in a nutshell your changing of the report was influenced by the discussions that you had, and inputs - the discussions which are 20 purely of a legal nature with SESOKO, and the inputs that you - let me put it this way.

1 is the new evidence;

2 was the debate on the possibility of the charges sticking - this was a legal 25 debate which involved who, you and ...?

- MR KHUBA: And MR SESOKO. I think the boss had inputs in terms of the - I do not know what he wrote on the paper.
- MR JULY: But did he have inputs in the report? 5
- MR KHUBA: Some of them are cosmetic.
- MR JULY: Yes, some are cosmetic.
- MR KHUBA: But I cannot remember in terms of his view of the evidence.
- MR JULY: And whatever he has recommended or has put forward you cannot find because ... 10
- MR KHUBA: ... we destroyed.
- MR JULY: ... those documents were destroyed.
- MR KHUBA: They were destroyed. I do not know whether I can strike luck and get something, but I still remember we said: Everything has been leaked now and we destroyed them. But I think I need to be able to put it in a way that will satisfy him, to say the new report was influence by the new evidence, that's point number 1, and the review of the existing evidence. Those are the two major things. 15 20
- MR JULY: Of the existing evidence?
- MR KHUBA: Yes.
- MR JULY: What you will appreciate from our side, is we 25 will say was the so-called new evidence new and so materially different as to make you and your team change the report?

MR KHUBA: I wouldn't really have a problem with how you view the process which was taken, and also the product that came out of it. 5

MR JULY: That's fine.

MR KHUBA: The other thing I want to know, is what is it that you would want me to provide in terms of other documentary - I'm going to give you the info note. 10

MR JULY: Let's say so far it is the info note, but we may have to call you again.

MR KHUBA: If you call me - I do not really have a problem, whenever you want me, I'm going to talk. I'm going to talk. So I'm quite fine with that. Whether you call me tomorrow, I will come. 15

MR KHUBA: This year, yes.

MR JULY: And you submitted your report on 22 January.

MR KHUBA: Yes. 10

MR JULY: So if you visited the NPA it would have been around February then?

MR KHUBA: Yes, it would have been around there.

MR JULY: And at that time you all went there with one intention, to get the warrant of arrest. 15

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: We're not going to talk about the new information. We have talked about the new information and we have our views about this new information, but at one stage you guys 20 applied for the same information, before McBRIDE came into the picture.

MR KHUBA: Okay.

MR JULY: Section 205 - the cellphone information and dates. 25

- MR KHUBA: Mmm.
- MR JULY: According to MOUKANGWE there was nothing that was required - even what you say is new. You knew about that information, firstly, that SIBIYA - at the time you had information that the cellphones that you tracked were not at the scene of the crime. 5
- MR KHUBA: Yes.
- MR JULY: That information you always knew about, even when the report was finalised and was given. That information you knew about? 10
- MR KHUBA: Yes.
- MR JULY: Even the advocates at the NPA raised that issue: Listen, this information you may have a problem with, and that you could go and do one or two things regarding that information. 15
- MR KHUBA: Alright.
- MR JULY: So according to him there was nothing new that came out. 20
- MR KHUBA: Let me expand. There was a telephone record we got in terms of Section 205. That telephone record was like raw data. It had not yet been integrated to an extent where it could guide us to say where (?). I need to be 25 very clear, because I was one of the people who was very insistent on saying: This person must be put as a suspect - what is his name?

MR JULY: SIBIYA. 5

MR KHUBA: SIBIYA. And also DRAMAT must be put as a suspect. There was a time when the advocate dealing with the case was quite hesitant about the issue, to say: Why is SIBIYA being put in the report? But he insisted by saying that we 10 needed to get an expert to assist us. I indicated to him that I had already engaged the expert, but that was not coming forth. I indicated to him that I would suggest to my boss, MBEKI, to say: Can we issue a new order 15 to a new person to deal with the information? The point that makes a difference is that when I discussed it with SESOKO - when we discussed these things - he was also of the view that we can't put this person (?). The issue that you 20 raised last time, that was my point of view to say SIBIYA was heading a unit. The unit came out of that, and in that operation he communicated with his seniors about this operation, because I wanted to go to him with 25 a warning statement, to say: Sibiya, if you were not communicating about the mission, what were you talking about? And he never came clear. I have his response. When we went and discussed it - that is when we discussed it 5 with MR SESOKO, after the deliberation with McBRIDE. I want to put this very clearly, to say, if MR McBRIDE then had an agenda for the changing of the report, he might have used SESOKO, because SESOKO had evaluated. We 10 argued. MR SESOKO said: No, no, you can't put words like that. We deliberated about it. We deliberated because that was my position. One question - and I don't know whether you asked it previously - if McBRIDE did not join 15 with the (?), would it have been changed. My view, without even being convinced by SESOKO, I wouldn't have changed it. Because my understanding is that when we deal with such people they are very senior, and to get a 20 little thing where you can point fingers at them is not - because it means you won't get anything.

MR JULY:

So at the time when you met with SESOKO, who was going through the report - he says, and 25

let me be upfront with you: Khuba never told me that he even sat with the report. We know that is not true. We said to him that that can't be right, and that will go to the honesty - that KHUBA was not honest with you, 5 because KHUBA came to you and asked for your advice on how to submit the report. He submits the report, and you guys go there and want a warrant off the report that you never signed. The question that I want to ask is 10 this. When McBRIDE asked you for a report, you gave him the report that you had already submitted to the NPA?

MR KHUBA: Let me tell you that the report which I had given to him, which I emailed - I don't know 15 whether he read it or did not read it - is the report that I sent the NPA. I had already updated it, but I don't think I updated the recommendation, it was just to add those statements that had just arrived. Because 20 there were things that I received after the report had already been sent.

MR JULY: But those things did not influence your recommendation - they did not influence the changing of the recommendation?

25

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR KHUBA: Let me be honest with you, when I dealt with the report, when I got these new statements, I never went back and looked at the recommendations, I just updated the statements. Because if you check my report, 5 it's categorised. I would do statements of this or of this, but the actual interpretation and the changing of everything happened when McBRIDE had already arrived.

MR JULY: Here's the thing. You remember we showed you 10 a number of pages where the information was deleted?

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: And when we showed SESOKO he said he 15 doesn't know anything, you were the one who was working with that information, and he doesn't know anything about the changes. You said on record you did not delete that information.

MR KHUBA: Yes. 20

MR JULY: And you know there is a reason why you would not have deleted the information. For instance, what was said by the people - for you to change it, you would have a reason, and you would put that reason in your report. So 25

SJ
LS

S July/IPID

that information was removed. But if it was not you and it was not SESOKO, we have not yet been able to talk to MR McBRIDE, although we wrote him an email to come and talk to us, who then would have deleted that information? 5

MR KHUBA:

That is a very difficult question. But I need to say as the investigating officer I was over-trusting with the report. Because when SESOKO asked for the report, I never withheld the report, I emailed it to him. When we were working on the report I used his computer. Whether he showed McBRIDE - but I remember McBRIDE, if there is one person who read that report extensively it was McBRIDE. He read it extensively. Then the progress which I was doing on the report itself, I was only adding stuff. He was sitting next to me. I was adding things, I was doing things, but whether that part was cut out by him or by me, I will not say, but I don't remember removing it. 10 15 20

MR JULY:

Deleting?

MR KHUBA:

No, no, no, I do not remember thinking to say: I'm deleting this part. Because I had nothing 25

SJ
LS

S July/IPID

INNOCENT KHUBA

to benefit by it. In fact it's something that would have made me feel bad, to have the investigation and make me have sleepless nights, and yet not all things are going into that. But the way we worked on that report, I emailed it to MR SESOKO. I do not know how MR SESOKO dispatched it to him.

MR JULY:

Tell me then, the day of the signing, when you signed, were you in the same room when you signed the report? Did you sign the report when you were somewhere else, or were you in the same office?

MR KHUBA:

I need to be honest, and I just want to lay a background for you, so that you can understand. When we were dealing with this report, it went back and forth. There were a number of issues we queried, and I was tired. I was tired. Finally there was this report, and it was still on MR SESOKO's computer, because I was not linked to the printer. I was not linked. He was the only one who was linked. So it might have taken not even - it never took three days in succession, it might be around a week or two. Sometimes I would drive, come there, deal with this report and

SJ 65

S July/IPID
13.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

go back. At the time when we signed, I signed something that was printed off MR SESOKO's computer. Whether it was not the right one, I don't know, because I never went back into this, reading and analysing, but I just 5 believed that it was the same report.

MR JULY:

I think from my side I don't have any further questions. I think those were the questions that we wanted to find out, to confirm that indeed you asked SESOKO about the process of 10 submitting the report to the NPA, and the two of you visiting the NPA before McBRIDE, and it was based on the report that you submitted.

Another thing that we just need to confirm, 15 and maybe I will ask the question from my side. We spoke to MR ANGUS, who said with a report, when you submit a number of updates, it is not called a report. You are adding to the existing report. But once you make the 20 recommendations, any report which has recommendations is a final report. And if later on you may find one or two bits of additional information, you will add that there, but that report remains the final 25 report once it has the recommendations.

I want to tell you that a report that has a recommendation can be regarded as a final report on the basis that there is nothing else you need to do. You need to understand the procedure which I outlined previously, to say when you compile a report with recommendations it has to be assessed by the senior person, who signs it. I was in the predicament where firstly the Acting Head - SESOKO was a senior, but he was still at the same rank as I was. He was acting in that position, but I was also acting, so there was not much difference. We were all Acting Chief Directors anyway. The challenge was that when I completed that report I contacted head office, to say: This report needs to be signed, and there is no-one to sign. SESOKO was already told that he must not really cooperate well with me in that investigation. MBEKI was still an Acting Head, but waiting for SASSA(?). So you have a person who has taken employment with a department. When I spoke with the PAs in her office, they told me: This lady is on study leave(?) and she's only dealing with important matters. MOSING was pressuring me, to say: This matter has been going on for a long time, you need to sign. I said: I will definitely sign, I'm going to sign. So I signed it.

SJ LS

S July/IPID

MR JULY: You were signing the report ... 5

MR KHUBA: ... even though there were things that were outstanding. But I signed a report with recommendations.

MR JULY: In other words, what ANGUS says, is that what you believed to be the factual situation at the time when you signed the report, even if it changes later on, that report remains the final report. If things have to change you will then have to deal with it, and how do you deal with those issues that have cropped up? 10 15

MR KHUBA: What you are talking about I don't think is an issue of only departmental procedure. It's an issue of commonsense, that once you have made a recommendation you have done your investigation. If new evidence surfaces to rebut that, then you are able to advance: Now I have this and that and that. But you need to understand that when I was requested to submit the report, which I had already updated 20 25

SJ
LS

S July/IPID
13.04.15

- because I was very ...

MR JULY: When you were submitting, you were adding?

MR KHUBA: I was adding stuff. But I even sent some of the stuff to MOSING. I said: I have the response of (?), and I sent it to him. That's 5 when he said to me: No, no, Khuba, I am not dealing with this, I have already sent it to GAUTENG. All along I was thinking he was the one who was dealing with this investigation, and he would probably prosecute it. 10

Then the issue of us doing the other report, even if I had updated that report, I could have probably (indistinct), but whether the recommendation would have changed I do not know. My understanding, from my view, when I 15 sat with SESOKO I started to see it in another light, and I was very firm with my view. But SESOKO with his prosecutorial background said:

Mr Khuba, you can't take it this way. You need to know that when McBRIDE arrived and 20

read the report, we did a new report, he had an option to say: Guys, let's leave the prosecutors (indistinct). He had an option.

And he also exercised the other option to say:

You will go and work on this report to reflect 25

SS 65

S July/IPID

the content. That's why when this document was sent I was never part of it.

MR JULY:

You see, the problem is it is one thing to change the recommendation, but it's another thing to delete information to justify the changing of the recommendation. And if there is no basis or justification for the deletion of information then the conclusion and the report itself raises questions. Do you get what I'm saying?

MR KHUBA:

I understand that. The other thing that you also need to understand is that I think the manner in which we handled the report was quite problematic. When you showed me the part that was deleted, I was worried that they deleted the part that deals with DRAMAT - I think the two. The other one does not deal with DRAMAT. I saw the other one, and it does not deal with him. I was worried. The other reason is that when I came here last time I never prepared. Even now I haven't prepared. I know this investigation, because I did it. I told you that clearly these reports are still there, because that is my understanding. You know what I did, after I dealt with the report - in fact I emailed the report to SESOKO and we worked on it. I went home.

Another day I came again. That's why it took very long. If you check from the 3rd, when McBRIDE started, to the date when it was 5 submitted, it took very long. I had this challenge, and I think this is where I need to be honest with you, because when we had our discussions in the room, he also raised the issue of Crime Intelligence. There was an 10 issue where he was not happy with Crime Intelligence. I never had the number of my boss - I think I told you last time that it might have taken three months or seven months.
I was always figuring that probably he was mad 15 about me cooperating with Crime Intelligence, and that is why he raised the issue of independence and all these types of things.
It was an issue I was really concerned about.
Whatever happened through the process, I might 20 have been busy, but I was not even supposed to be cautious because I was dealing with people where we are working with things objectively.
But when you started to show me that some of the things were missing, for me that was ... 25

SJS

S July/IPID
13.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR JULY: And you never suspected anything, he never told you about the information that was deleted?

MR KHUBA: No.

MR JULY: You signed the report on the basis that 5
it is the same report and you were adding to that?

MR KHUBA: Yes. I signed knowing that it was the same report, because I had dealt with that report for the past eighteen months to the date I 10 signed the report. Because of that, I was so used to it. You know you are dealing with a new person. I had dealt with so many other Executive Directors, and here I was dealing with Executive Directors with a traceable 15 political background. That was my biggest challenge. It's not to say that it really influenced it, it did not, but the point of the matter is I was less (?) in the way I dealt with the issue. MR SESOKO and I read 20 through the report, we did that, and he said sign. There was a date when I went there - if it was not the date that we signed only, it might be a date when we did little things and then the report was signed. But my conscience 25 is clear, I never ...

MR JULY: ... deleted?

MR KHUBA: No, I never. That's why even when you called me today, I said I will tell you what I know.

MR JULY: Okay, that's fine.

MR TOM: There is just one thing, Mr July. Mr Khuba, this question relates to - remember the statements that you obtained from various witnesses in relation to the incidents of 5 10 November 2010 and 22 and 23 November 2010 in relation to GENERAL SIBIYA's involvement in the arrests of MR PRITCHARD CHUMA? There is a statement there from PETROS CHAUKE in which PETROS says he saw GENERAL SIBIYA. I just 15 didn't bring the big file which has his statement under oath, where he says he saw GENERAL SIBIYA, who, according to him, is the head of the TOMS, and he saw GENERAL SIBIYA in the second operation. Now, this cellphone 20 evidence that places GENERAL SIBIYA in SUNNYSIDE in PRETORIA, for instance, I want to understand the weight that was attached to this statement from PETROS CHAUKE. I'm aware you have statements or affidavits, rather, 25

55 LS

S July/IPID
13.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

from one DESMOND CAMPBELL, who says: I didn't see, but I heard they were saying he was in the car. And I think there is another person who says the same thing: I didn't see him, but I heard Warrant Officer Makoe calling his name. I understand that information to say perhaps you need to go a bit further to establish whether or not you can rely on that information, to say: I didn't see him, I heard his name being called. I want to understand how you guys treated this statement from PETROS CHAUKE, who says that he saw him. 5 10

MR KHUBA: For me, that statement was quite a solid statement, and I think it was the basis for me to say at the initial stage I would want GENERAL SIBIYA to be charged criminally. The other challenge was that the issue of the cellphone records - and that is what I started to discuss with some of the police officers - I started to realise that when these guys know that they are involved in illegal activities, they will come and give you a phone, and say: You are my brother, I'm going out at this time, this time and this time, make a call. 15 20 25

SSLS

S July/IPID
13.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

When calls come, answer them. For example, if you receive a call of your brother, maybe it's (indistinct), you try to create a discussion that will last maybe a minute with that person, to say: No, this person is not here, do you have a message, what is your name, may I take your details? You prolong that, whereas the person will be busy with illegal activities somewhere, but the phone will show the activities within the radius of that particular tower, which is not near the scene of the crime. So that always happens. When I was discussing it with MR SESOKO, the argument was: But do you have proof? Do you get what I'm saying?

MR TOM: I get exactly what you are saying.

MR KHUBA: For me, as an investigator, I was pursuing it, and thinking these guys are supposed to have known these things. But the argument was: You do not have proof.

MR TOM: You do not have proof, apart from this statement from PETROS CHAUKE.

MR KHUBA: Yes. Also, when you are arguing with a person who has a prosecutorial background it makes things very difficult.

LS
SS

S July/IPID
13.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR TOM: Absolutely. I would also have that difficulty if I were to debate a subject with a person who has prosecutorial experience who poses these questions, on the understanding that I myself am not a criminal lawyer. So he asked for something in addition to this mere statement? 5

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR TOM: Because I have seen, Mr Khuba, in the analysis of the Section 205 process in what I will term the second report, for instance when it comes to the analysis of the cellphone evidence it just says: 10

"The reason for this was to test the version of witnesses who are alleged to have seen General Sibiya at the crime scene." 15

Now it doesn't specify which crime scene, because from my understanding - and correct me if I'm wrong - there are two instances, the one of 5 November 2010, and the one of the 22nd and 23rd. It's just a question that has been hovering in my mind, to say: Does this cellphone evidence which happened to place GENERAL SIBIYA in SUNNYSIDE relate to all 20 25

SSGS

S July/IPID

INNOCENT KHUBA

activities, for instance being the 5th and the 23rd?

MR KHUBA:

I think there you have a point, because in fact SIBIYA has been dealing with a lot of criminal activities in terms of investigation, so he knows this. They were very aware - even the police who were involved knew what they were doing was wrong, so they might have pre-planned in terms of how they approached this thing.

MR JULY:

The last thing from my side, because it is not for us to determine the merits or demerits of your findings, it's to find out about the existence of the two reports, as to which is the report, I can tell you now that our preliminary view is that there is only one report, which is the first report.

MR KHUBA:

Yes.

MR JULY:

The other report is just something we don't know why - because you see, you can't have a second report which is so identical to the first report, and the only thing that is different is that certain information has been left out. Because SESOKO wanted to give the impression that this report was something that

SJS

S July/IPID
13.04.15

now needed to be started afresh, the wording had to be new. He went through the pages, and if you look at how the first page starts the wording is the same. In the second page the wording is the same - everything. So for him 5 to say he had no knowledge about the report is really - I don't know, MR SESOKO must decide if he intends to mislead this investigation. If that is his intension then he has a problem, because in our recommendation we will 10 indeed indicate his attempt to mislead us. The issue about how he goes to a meeting with the NPA on the basis of the report that was submitted, and then he claims that he didn't know anything about the report ... 15

MR KHUBA: On that, I still remember the meeting. MR MOUKANGWE was also there. Also, what I'm really worried about insofar as this matter is concerned, is I'm really - okay, there are things that I'm going to mention off record. 20

MR JULY: Okay. We can switch off now.

INTERNAL MEMORANDUM

TO: MR M.S.O. NXABANA
NATIONAL DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS

AND TO: ADV. N JIBA
DEPUTY NATIONAL DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS

FROM: ADV. A MOSING
HEAD: SPECIAL PROJECTS DIVISION

SUBJECT: PROJECT X CASE – RENDITION

DATE: 12 NOVEMBER 2013

OFFICE OF THE NATIONAL DIRECTOR
2013-11-12
NATIONAL PROSECUTOR GENERAL

Dear Mr Nxasana and Adv Jiba

1. PURPOSE

The purpose of the memorandum is to provide a detailed report on the progress of the investigations conducted by the IPID as requested by Adv. Jiba. The matter has been recently reported in the media and I believe that the NDPP has been furnished with an unsworn statement by General Dramat concerning the matter. It is necessary to provide the background and detail of this investigation in order to enable you to make informed decisions thereon.

2. BACKGROUND

I attached hereto our previous memoranda to Adv Jiba wherein the background of the matter appears marked Annexure "A" and "B". In addition and in light of the allegations of a "smear campaign" made by General Dramat in the aforementioned statement and the speculation and comments in the media following a leakage of the information in the docket to the media, I would like to point out that the Civilian Secretariat in the Office of the Minister of Police had initially conducted its investigation into the allegations of Rendition of Zimbabwean nationals following an exposition in the Sunday Times during 2011. Various questions were also posed in Parliament at the time. The SAPS, and in particular the DPCI, had responded to the media expose and parliamentary questions and gave a certain explanation, which the Civilian Secretariat found unsatisfactory. A thorough Criminal investigation was called for by the Minister's office. The Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development, the Honourable Jeff Radebe is also on record, when he, among other occasions, addressed the conference of Senior Managers of the NPA during 2012, calling for these allegations to be investigated and thereby reflecting the Government's concern with the allegations.

The Special Projects Division was requested to provide the necessary guidance to the investigating team, whose investigations are not yet complete as at the writing of this memorandum, but have nevertheless provided a clearer picture of what may have transpired during these operations conducted by the DPCI. Adv B Moeletsi and writer were responsible for providing the guidance to the investigators.

3. SUMMARY OF FUTHER EVIDENCE

Significant progress was made by the investigating team since July 2013. In summary the following evidence was obtained:

- Statements on various members who participated during the first arrests in November 2010. Of significance is that these confirmed for the first time that the operation was carried out in connection with the murder and robbery case that took place in Zimbabwe and also the presence of Zimbabwean police officials during the operation and not, as previously reported by the DPCI, that they were merely investigating serious violence crime suspects, who, because they could not be linked to specific crimes, ended up being deported because they were illegal in the country.

- Statements obtained from members involved during the events of January 2011 when a further two people were arrested on 12 January 2011 and again on 28 January 2011, respectively and both handed over to the Zimbabwean police on 28 January 2011. These, for the first time, included statements of members of Crime Intelligence Gathering (CIG) of the Pretoria office, who seem to have been used to assist during these latter operations in January 2011. Evidence shows that these CIG members were carrying out their normal duties of tracing most wanted suspects around the Wierda Brug policing area, of which a person by the name of Gordon Dube was at the top of the list. This person happened to be one of the outstanding people that were sought by the Zimbabwe police regarding the incident. These CIG members were approached by Col. Maluleke (Matuleke), who was leading this initiative to trace and arrest those involved in the Zimbabwe incident, since the suspect Dube was also sought by Maluleke. Through use of sources the CIG members managed to trace Dube in Diepsloot and he was arrested on Wierda Brug cases, including for murder and robbery. He was shot during the incident and an unlicensed fire arm was seized during the arrest. Other suspects were also arrested with Dube. All suspects were taken to Wierda Brug Police station and charged. They made their appearance in the Atteridgeville court on these charges and the case was remanded to 28 January 2011. They were naturally kept in custody. It transpires that Dube did not attend the first appearance as he was receiving treatment for the gunshot injury, but he was nevertheless required to attend the next court appearance.
- Due to the successes made by the CIG members in arresting Dube, they were requested by Maluleke to also trace Nyoni, who was the last person on his list. Through making use of the same source the CIG members managed to trace Nyoni to an address in Diepsloot. Maluleke was informed and arrangements were made to arrest him, using this time the TR7 unit of Johannesburg, which had been based in and around Diepsloot due to xenophobic violence at the time. This person was arrested on 26 January 2011 and transported directly to the offices of the DPCI head office in Silverton, Pretoria by some of the members of the TRT unit. Upon arrival, all the members were allegedly addressed by General Dramat and thanked for their efforts. Photographs were taken of the group. Two members of the Zimbabwean police were present throughout this operation driving a white BMW with Zimbabwe registration numbers and are visible on photos taken at DPCI head office. A braai was organised in honour of all members who participated in the operation. Nyoni was taken to the Moot police station and detained there. The entries in the record books of the police station reflect that he was detained for fraud. The records also show that he was booked out on 28 January 2011 by Maluleke to be transported to Beit Bridge border post. The reference to Fraud allegations is significant, as another docket was traced which was a fraud docket registered at Silverton police station with the suspects being Johnson Nyoni and Gordon Dube, similar names to the people handed over by the DPCI to Zimbabwe Police. It looks like it was intended to confuse. This is being probed further through interviews of the investigating officer and the suspects of this Silverton docket, which was mysteriously never taken to court.

On the day that Dube was due to appear in court in Atteridgeville (28/11/2011) he was booked out of prison by the investigating officer from Wierda Brug, one Leon Meyer, but instead of court, he was handed over to Maluleke on the latter's insistence, stating that the suspect Dube is to be transported and handed to the Zimbabwe police to be dealt with there. He further informed the investigation officer that he will make arrangements with the prosecutor to withdraw the case. Further details as to what happened with the SA case in Atteridgeville are still being followed up. The evidence further shows that both Dube and Nyoni were transported together to the border and handed over to the Zimbabwe police. Maluleke made an affidavit at the time in which he stated that the suspect Gordon Dube was handed over to the Zimbabwean Government through "Immigration Related Matters" and that he was sentenced to life imprisonment by the Zimbabwean Government and will never be back in South Africa. This affidavit is presumably intended to close the cases against Dube in South Africa.

H7 SJLS

- The firearm seized during the arrest of Dube was identified as the firearm that was robbed from the Zimbabwe Police Colonel killed during the robbery incident in Bulawayo. It had been sent to Ballistics in South Africa in the normal course, but was later fetched from Ballistics on instructions of Maluleke and handed over by Maluleke to the Zimbabwe police on the day of Nyoni's arrest. The handing over is also captured on photographs.
- The CIG members were commended by a letter from the DPCI directed to among others the Head: Crime Intelligence, Lt. Gen Toka. Furthermore A letter from the Zimbabwean Police Provincial CID directed to The Commander Criminal Investigations Unit, SAPS dated 14 March 2011 commending the four members of the CIG for the assistance in the tracing and arrest of Dube and Nyoni. This furthermore was referred to the Office of the then Provincial Commissioner, Gauteng, Gen. Petros, who gave out letters of commendation to each of the four members involved.
- Documentary evidence recovered from the laptop used by Maluleke at the time and which had been formatted and decommissioned, further provided evidence and insight into what transpired during these operations. These show that the Zimbabwe police visited the DPCI and had a meeting with General Dramat on 5 November 2010. Following on the meeting Maluleke was tasked to carry out the operation to trace the people said to have been involved in the incident in Zimbabwe as he is shown to have done (Interestingly Maluleke was promoted to his current rank after these events as he was a Captain at the time of the operations). This visit is corroborated by the evidence of the member who worked at the border and related the story of the Zimbabwe police entering the country to see Dramat, whereupon he had called Dramat to confirm. Proof of such a call to Dramat's official cell phone can be found from the telephone records of the witness's office and on Dramat's cell phone records. The meeting with Dramat is also corroborated by an affidavit of the then SAPS spokesperson, Moinosh Polele, that he was introduced to Zimbabwean police members, who were having a meeting with Dramat by Dramat himself. He also did enquiries subsequent to the events reported in the Sunday Times during 2011.

H7

SS

4. OUTSTANDING INVESTIGATIONS

As can be seen from the above there are still some investigations outstanding. These include among others the reports of the analysis of the call phone records are still outstanding. So is the report on the analysis of the vehicle tracking information of the members involved during the operations. It should be stated as well that there may be much evidence available, to which the investigating team is unable to obtain, due to non-cooperation.

Makuleke has been approached for a warning statement, but requested that written question be directed to him. This was done, but he has not yet responded. Other members warning statements are outstanding, including members from TOMS Gauteng who have not yet submitted any statement of any kind.

General Dramat also was approached for his warning statement and requested that he first consult with his legal representative. He was afforded the opportunity, but however submitted an unworn statement in which he accused the investigation of an ulterior motive. He indicated that he will only respond if he is supplied with a "list of questions and a "proper and transparent summary of the merit and demerits" against him. He alleges that the case is a "smear campaign" against him for cases that the DPCI is involved in and requests that the "NDPP himself and/or a duly delegated senior advocate who has not been involved in any of the matters which my unit has or is dealing with and, which have been rather controversial in recent times, be involved in decision- making process as to whether there is merit in pursuing a prosecution against me". He furthermore wants somebody who has "no vested interest in the outcome of the decision against him" to decide the matter. Although it is not clear to me which matters he is referring to, it can safely be assumed that it is a reference to among others the Mdluli matter. There may be others. The statement of Dramat is marked Annexure "C".

A further incident involving a Zimbabwe national, Moyo, who was charged in South Africa for various bank robberies was allegedly also the subject of a Rendition, this time from Zimbabwe to South Africa. This apparently happened during May 2011, after Moyo had escaped from SA to Zimbabwe. The very same Makuleks was pivotal in securing his return. This is also still under investigation.

Another unrelated incident of cooperation involving the above-mentioned CIG members are noted in the letter of commendation from Zimbabwe. It is not yet clear what assistance was rendered during this incident.

5. DISCUSSION AND RECOMMENDATION

In summary, the facts of this investigation show that a robbery incident took place in Zimbabwe, which led the Zimbabwe police to approach the DPCI to assist in capturing these suspects, who were allegedly in SA around Diepsloot and Soweto and handing over to them. It is not clear in terms of what authority the DPCI carried out the instructions as they have refused to explain their actions. In terms of the SARPCO agreement, to which South Africa and Zimbabwe have acceded to, law enforcement authorities of both countries are obliged to assist one another in criminal investigations. However this agreement does not provide for the circumventing of legal extradition or Mutual Legal assistance process provided for in law. Although there is no Extradition treaty between the two countries concerned, there are many cases recorded since 2010 to date where the countries have cooperated in the arrest and extraditing of suspects between the said countries through a legal court process. To use deportation as an alternative to following the legal process does not make the acts lawful.

The first operation (during 5-6 November 2010), four people were arrested. Two were release (although also illegal foreigners just as the other two) and the two were taken to the border and handed over to the Zimbabwe Police. Deportation documents were forged to make it look like a deportation, even though there was a moratorium against deporting Zimbabwe nationals at the time. Allegations of assault and theft of cell phones and cash are also levelled against the members involved, in addition to the unlawful arrest and detention and handing over (which amounts to kidnapping).

The second incident occurred on 22 November 2010 when Prichard Tshuma was arrested and detained at Alexandra police station and taken to the border the following day to be handed over. No attempts to make it look like a deportation can yet be traced. It is also not certain whether the person is alive or not.

The third incident refers to the arrest of Dube and Nyoni who were both handed over to Zimbabwe police on 28 January 2011, thereby concluding all suspects sought in connection with the robbery incident in Zimbabwe. In total therefore seven people were arrested and five handed over to Zimbabwe Police contrary to a lawful process. In addition to the already mentioned charges, charges of defeating the ends of justice can be brought fro Dube's removal from the court roll and the firearm exhibit being handed to Zimbabwean Police.

Whether the evidence contained in the case docket to date is sufficient to secure a conviction is something that will have to be decided after a careful and independent assesment of the totality of the evidence. One thing is very clear though and that is that the explanation provided by the DPCI when the matter first surfaced is far from the truth as revealed through this investigation.

I trust that you will find the above in order.

Kind regards,

MR JULY: Somewhere in February?

MR MOSING: Yes, yes. But I can tell you what I recall 20 clearly offhand about the matter and then we can fill in gaps from memory.

MR JULY: I can let you know that we are on record now. Today is 14 March 2015.

MR MOSING: Okay, thanks, Mr July. I think maybe from my 25 side, before we really get into the details, of course I have been told that I am now cleared to speak with you.

MR JULY: Oh, yes, yes, I got an email.

MR MOSING: Of course coming here now and thinking in terms of what is going to be required, I just needed to understand what exactly I am 5 authorised to be able to speak about. But really, I haven't seen the request - the email that went to the NPA. All I got was: Yes, you can; you're allowed to go and talk. DR MAITE just said yesterday that I'm allowed to 10 consult with WERKSMANS about the letter, but I'm not too sure exactly what you will require from me eventually. I thought that if I could see the request that you drafted to the NPA, which led to them agreeing for 15 me to come here, just in case there is anything that might - I don't want to be in trouble, or anything like that, because of course I'm discussing matters which are sub judice now within the NPA. In other words, 20 this matter is sub judice within the NPA still. And whatever I'm saying, you must understand ...

MR JULY: Our role is very limited, but I appreciate your concerns. We don't know what is really 25 sub judice at the NPA. Our mandate is to discover and unravel a number of things, but the main issue is that there is a report that was submitted. Then there is a second report. We need to establish the status of the two reports, that's all - only that. It's about the report, but I think it's better that you see the letter from the Minister which was written to us, and also the letter from the Minister of Police to the Minister of Justice, asking the NDPP to release anybody who may be of assistance in our investigation.

MR MOSING: The release part, I am available, because I will participate, it's understood. But I'm not too sure what further issue ...

MR JULY: I'm not sure what is happening at the NPA regarding this report or these reports, but our issue is about the two reports - one given on 22 January and one which is dated 18 March.

MR MOSING: Okay. I think that I will be able to explain, but I think probably I will start from the beginning, in order to get to the report. That must be in context in terms of our understanding of the reports, the old report, if that is the case. Is that ...

SS 65

MR JULY: That's fine, I'm with you.

MR MOSING: I just want to see, because I have a report which I need to find in my files. I actually 5 thought I didn't have it, but it's actually two copies. I drafted them in pencil at the time, because they were not, let's say, the official version.

MR JULY: I think maybe also for your benefit it is 10 important that you read this mandate, so that you understand.

MR MOSING: I don't know whether you are aware, but from my involvement in the matter I think - and I must also make sure of the dates - but I would 15 say we got involved in the matter at a relatively early stage when the investigations basically started. I must mention that my position at the NPA at the time was that I was heading a unit which is called the Special 20 Projects Division, which is basically an office of the NDPP. As such I reported to ADVOCATE JIVA, who was the Acting NDPP at the time. So I attended a meeting where we were then instructed to assist with this 25

776

5

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

investigation. I think MR MOUKANGWE was involved at that stage. I'm not sure what his rank is in the SOUTH AFRICAN POLICE SERVICE. There had already been some statements obtained from - I'm not sure whether it's 5 three or four - ZIMBABWEAN Nationals, who, let's say, had survived this ordeal, and who at the time were in witness protection. There were also statements I think from four Crime Intelligence members, who, it appears, were 10 part of the so-called TOMS unit of GAUTENG. They were seconded to be part of that unit, and they also made statements pertaining to the first alleged kidnapping of four 15 ZIMBABWEAN Nationals.

I'm trying to think what other evidence there was, but I think at that stage that was basically the evidence at the time. Although the evidence indicated or mentioned certain names of senior police officials from Ops in 20 particular, the evidence wasn't really very conclusive. We obviously advised the investigation that there would have to be a lot more investigation done to get to a stage where one could make concrete decisions from 25

SS 65

6

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

a prosecution point of view. At some stage, also, I think IPID got involved early on as well, because to our minds they were the relevant body as well. They informed us that they were also tasked at the time by the Minister to investigate the matter. I think we were also shown an investigation that was done by the Civilian Secretariat for Police regarding these allegations and the report that they gave after having received the reports. I think there were about three or four reports from the HAWKS and the Police which dealt with the allegations. Part of the reports were actually answers to Parliamentary questions. From that report of the Civilian Secretariat I think one could see that they pointed out a number of inconsistencies and unsatisfactory aspects which they advised the Minister to have investigated.

I must say, it was difficult to make a general observation. I think, given the nature of the case, and the suspects involved, it was generally difficult to get people to cooperate. There were a lot of police members involved in TOMS, and it was only these Crime

SJ LS

S July/IPID

Intelligence guys who had made statements. But I think in the light of the allegation then that there was a fight between Crime Intelligence units and the HAWKS, and maybe there was some sort of personal vendetta or 5 some sort of thing, we had to view the evidence with caution. That's why we insisted that the police must investigate the matter and try to get other people who were involved in these things. I think it was generally
10 difficult. I must say MR KHUBA from IPID was involved in investigating right from the start, with MOUKANGWE, but then he would report or discuss developments in the investigation with myself and BILLY MOELETSI.
15 I think we met on several occasions, but I cannot say exactly how many times. I think we also saw the report that the HAWKS' Integrity Unit had conducted into the allegations of the involvement of their members, which basically 20 exonerated them. I think the breakthrough in the investigation really started when MR KHUBA obtained a statement from a certain MADILONGA. I'm not sure what his rank is now, but he was the head of the Border ...

MR JULY: He's dead.

MR MOSING: Yes, apparently he's dead. I was shocked. I actually advised him: You know what, this is a key witness, you must put him in witness protection. But I thought with him deceased it weakened the case. That was generally my view at the time. I think I'll get to it when I come to the point when we stopped with this investigation. He excitedly even phoned me in the night or over the weekend to say he's got this statement. I think he even emailed the statement to me. When I read it, it was really like a light that was switched on in the investigation. It was detailed - a very good statement, and one which one could view credibly, although I think it contradicted an earlier statement he had made to the HAWKS' investigations. But at least he explained why he had made that earlier statement.

From that statement I think the investigation really came to a point where everything was reasonably clear, as to what really transpired. I don't know - I don't want to deal with every step of the investigations, up

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

to the point where it became - although one can, but I wouldn't want to leave out gaps.
I don't have the docket, and of course I don't remember every statement, but I think we ended up understanding - because initially the 5 allegations were that there were four ZIMBABWEAN Nationals. I think that's how the police reported it. There were four ZIMBABWEAN Nationals who were deported under a HOME AFFAIRS process. I think at the start 10 he got statements from HOME AFFAIRS people which actually showed that these documents were not authentic. They were even submitted to a document dispute expert, who gave a report as well that ... 15

MR JULY: The documents that were used to deport them?

MR MOSING: To deport them, yes. There were, shall I say, a lot of gaps with regard to that deportation.
Firstly, there was a moratorium against 20 deportation. He even got from HOME AFFAIRS a complete list of all the people who had been deported during that period of the moratorium, and none of these people were on that list.
According to HOME AFFAIRS' evidence, the 25

SS LS

781

10

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

persons were only deported during that period if they had committed a crime or were involved in criminal activities. Other than that there was a complete moratorium. Also, copies of those deportation documents were not available 5 at HOME AFFAIRS, so the only copies were the ones that the HAWKS had. I think the issue also with the apparent falsification of those documents was that the same stamp appeared to have been used. The documents were really 10 identical, to the extent that they didn't appear to be very authentic. Also, the fact why the HAWKS had to deport these people instead of them being taken to LINDELA, and so on. Because on that same night they were 15 detained in SOWETO, there were other illegal immigrants, and those were taken to LINDELA.
These four were taken a separate route. What transpired from the earlier statements of the ZIMBABWEAN Nationals was that two of these 20 guys actually never crossed the border, they were dumped somewhere next to the freeway - that's according to their statements. It transpires that only two were actually taken over the border. That was also contrary to 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

the reports and contrary to what was contained in the reports from the HAWKS in answer to the Parliamentary questions. So there already it was clear that things were not as they appeared to have been. 5

When MADILONGA gave his statement, as I said, things started falling into place. The investigating officer then managed to uncover, let us say, the other kidnappings and deportations. Let me just have a look, 10 because I actually wrote a memo to my bosses, explaining the matter in detail. I said:

“Significant progress was made by the investigating team since July 2013. In summary the following evidence was then 15 obtained.”

That's when I think additional statements - of course we had the SAP13's, the police stations where these people were kept. There was a SELEKE or SELEPE IO, who did not give us a 20 statement, but we insisted that they must try and get a statement from him. Then one captain from TOMS gave a statement. He was the first one to confirm that there were policemen from ZIMBABWE present during that 25

SJ GS

first operation. Because initially, as I said, the allegation was only made by the CIG guys. For some reason I treated that with caution. I wasn't too sure whether it was a made-up story. But then NIEUWOUDT, I think is 5 his surname, confirmed that yes, that was with the first operation. I think it was 5
November. On 23 November is when they realised that SHEPARD TSHUMA in a follow-up operation was kept at ALEXANDRA Police 10 Station. From the records there he was taken out by a certain SELEPE or SELEKE - SELEPE, I think it was. Eventually SELEPE also made a statement to say he was requested to transport this guy. I think he is also from TOMS. He 15 confirmed that he transported TSHUMA - it's not SHEPARD TSHUMA, I think it's another TSHUMA. PRITCHARD CHUMA, because there are two CHUMAS. It's PRITCHARD CHUMA, and he transported him to the border with MALULEKE, 20 so MALULEKE was following in another vehicle. At the border he handed him over to MALULEKE, and MALULEKE took him into the office there, and then he turned back. So at least we could account for PRITCHARD as well. Then the other 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

two incidents happened, and in the investigation I'm really satisfied that we had all the statements, to show that: Here are the other two - which was GORDON DUBE as well as JOHNSON NYONI. Because I think DUBE and JOHN NYONI were arrested later, around January, after that incident. The people who were involved in those arrests - it shows that Crime Intelligence gathering investigators from PRETORIA were involved in those arrests. With DUBE I have actually set it out in this memo, and I can give you a copy of this, because that really explains what my understanding was at the time of the investigation - how it unfolded. DUBE was supposed to appear in court at ATTRIDGEVILLE on serious offences of robbery and house breaking, because he was a wanted criminal. The Crime Intelligence guys came from PRETORIA - that's what they normally do, they go to the police station in the area and look for the suspects, to help trace them through their sources. So MALULEKE understood that they were looking for DUBE, and he actually asked them, to say: Trace this person for us, which

14

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

they did in DIEPSLOOT, and they arrested him. We got a statement from the investigating officer who was MEYER, of those documents, who said MALULEKE demanded that he hand over DUBE, the accused, to MALULEKE, to be taken to ZIMBABWE, where he was to face charges of armed robbery and murder. The investigating officer did that, contrary to the fact that this case was on the roll in ATTRIDGEVILLE. I don't think we could trace the charge sheet, or if we did trace it - no, we did have the charge sheet, but we didn't have the explanation from the prosecutor. Apparently the prosecutor had resigned as well - in the ATTRIDGEVILLE case - because we wanted to get an understanding of why he allowed an accused who was facing court not to be brought to court, and whether there was a warrant issued, and all that. But it seems from the computer of MALULEKE there was a statement MALULEKE made, which I think MEYER also confirmed, which may have been handed to court to show that DUBE was taken to ZIMBABWE for deportation purposes and he had been sentenced to life imprisonment and was never coming back

15

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

to SOUTH AFRICA. That seems to have been the explanation to close our diary.

The firearm as well - when DUBE was arrested they found a firearm which allegedly was a firearm robbed from this Colonel in ZIMBABWE, 5 and although it was handed in to Ballistics, the two police guys were instructed by MALULEKE to go and fetch that firearm and bring it to PRETORIA to MALULEKE, which they did. That firearm - and there are photographs 10 you can see, which were taken on the premises of PROMED Building, where GENERAL DRAMAT is based, you can see is still in the forensic bag. They deliberately took a photo of it as being the firearm, as if it was being handed 15 to the ZIMBABWEAN Police to return with it. So we managed to trace that DUBE was arrested, and he, together with JOHNSON NYONI - I just want to see the dates here, because on the 12th - there were documents, sort of progress 20 reports of MALULEKE that we saw, but he didn't explain, and it didn't make sense from the initial story. However, when we got this information and he had explained the various incidents, you can say, on 5 November they 25

SJ
LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

arrested four people and deported two. On 23 November they arrested PETER CHUMA and deported him as well, presumably, because he was taken to the border. The two further incidents were then these guys DUBE and 5 JOHNSON NYONI. NYONI was arrested as well, using these Crime Intelligence gathering officers from PRETORIA, because they had a source in DIEPSLOOT. I think he is the one who alerted them to DUBE as well as NYONI. 10
They then arrested him as well. But he was arrested and apparently taken directly to PROMED BUILDING, and that's when allegedly, as some of the witnesses stated, GENERAL DRAMAT came and congratulated them whilst he was in 15 the vehicle in custody. There were photographs of him being there. After that the members say a braai was made to thank them for their participation. This was a TRT unit, sorry, not the TOMS - in other words the 20 support unit that helped arrest them, the TACTICAL RESPONSE TEAM.
After that, NYONI was kept at the MOOT Police Station. We managed to get the records there that showed SAB14, or whatever, and showed 25

SJ LS

S July/IFID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

that he was detained, and was allegedly detained for fraud. Then the next day he was taken out by MALULEKE himself. The record says he was taken to BEIT BRIDGE to be deported. 28 January I think corresponds with 5 MADILONGA's testimony that people were taken to the border. That really accounted for all five, because seemingly there were five people sought by the ZIMBABWEAN Police. It looks as if they did an excellent job in arresting all 10 five of them, and all five of them you can say were taken out (indistinct). The only thing still remaining were the corroborating documents in the computer of MALULEKE, which showed that there was a letter from the 15 ZIMBABWEAN High Police Office, written to our SOUTH AFRICAN counterpart, where they thanked them for these arrests of DUBE and NYONI, and also some other operations. I'm not sure which ones, but they happened at the same 20
time.

There was just one more thing, there was a suspect, MOYO, who was facing charges in PRETORIA for bank robbery. He is a ZIMBABWEAN National as well. He had escaped several 25

SJ
CS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

times, and the one time he had escaped - because from that computer of MALULEKE I think there was some evidence which showed they may have been involved in getting MOYO, almost like the reciprocal action on the part of the 5 ZIMBABWEAN Police to reciprocate for what happened with these five. That happened around May of 2011. We pursued that investigation and statements and KHUBA even went to see MOYO in prison. MOYO's story is 10 yes, he was shot by the ZIMBABWEAN Police after he had escaped from SOUTH AFRICA, he was brought back to SOUTH AFRICA, and at the border he was seemingly handed over to the SOUTH AFRICAN POLICE - the HAWKS - and taken 15 to a hospital in MUSINA, where he was again brought to court in SOUTH AFRICA. I thought that also corroborated the basic allegations that the SOUTH AFRICAN POLICE helped. On the evidence regarding who of the police was 20 involved, I think that it was where KHUBA spoke with DRAMAT several times, trying to get their statements - their warning statements.
He had taken a warning statement from MALULEKE, but he was trying not to be 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

cooperative, really. From MADILONGA's statement he mentioned that when this contingent of ZIMBABWEAN Police came there, they had a cellphone number, which they said was DRAMAT's and they should phone DRAMAT to confirm. It seems it turned out that that number was his official cellphone, and he was called. We also have a record of his cellphone to show the call was received from that number. So there was just a slight thing about the dates. I think he misjudged the dates in terms of when the ZIMBABWEAN Police came, but it was a minor thing. In fact what he said really corroborated it.

What we did, because the only thing that was really doubtful was the involvement of SIBIYA. The four initial Crime Intelligence officers did allude to the fact that he was present - not all four of them, but they had actually made two or three statements each.

MR JULY: Now, when you're talking about "present", do you mean present at the crime scene, where they were assaulting, and all those kinds of things?

MR MOSING: Yes, at the very first - on 5 November. To me

SJ
LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

the evidence wasn't really conclusive, but one guy said MALULEKE did all the talking during the briefing. Because they first briefed all the members at the place where they met. I think it was some supermarket just outside of 5 DIEPSLOOT where they all gathered, and seemingly MALULEKE was doing the briefing, and then the two ZIMBABWEAN Police guys were present. The story was that they were from PRETORIA, and they were actually ZIMBABWEAN 10 Police guys. They were now going to look for suspects. They said GENERAL SIBIYA was present, but he was sitting in the car, and he let MALULEKE do all the talking. Then when they moved into DIEPSLOOT the other members 15 managed to arrest these four guys. Then there were discussions as to what must happen to them, and where must they be taken. Some of the ZIMBABWEAN witnesses said the General in the car said they must go to SOWETO Police 20 Station. You see, all that evidence of course was not conclusive, to say who the General was, and for me, what was really not satisfactory was that these Crime Intelligence members ought to know SIBIYA. They knew him 25

SJ 45

S July/IPLD
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

because they worked with him as part of the TOMS. That evidence wasn't conclusive at that stage.

With the cellphone location we tried to see, because that would have proved conclusively 5 whether he was present or not at the scenes, especially at the first scene. Unfortunately I think the one cellphone that was alleged to be his, if I understood it correctly, showed that he may not have been there, he was 10 somewhere else in PRETORIA, or whatever. I think it was the cellphones as well as the vehicle tracking, because there was tracking on those vehicles. That is why you have that evidence from some expert company that mapped 15 the movements of the vehicles. Those other vehicles definitely show that they were around that vicinity, and from there they moved to SOWETO. But again, that evidence wasn't conclusive to say that SIBIYA was there beyond 20 a reasonable doubt.

That's basically the investigation. Then KHUBA prepared his report, because we agreed we had uncovered what may have been the true version of what happened with 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

all these events. That version was clearly very different from the official version that had been given by the HAWKS in the beginning. We were satisfied that definitely there were offences committed, and again we could define who the members were who were involved. 5

It is true that when KHUBA was requested to draft a report, because it was our understanding that the ICD previously - and now IPID - when they do an investigation they would compile a report, with a clear recommendation as to who must be charged or not, and they then submit it with the docket. He did compile the first report, which is dated 22 October 2013. I have a copy of it here. He submitted it to us and then ... 10 15

MR JULY: Can we have copies of that report?

MR MOSING: I think you can have a copy of that. Yes, I will make a copy of it. When he submitted this report to us, we basically sent it back to him to say it was not sufficient, because for the persons who must make a decision - the evidence in the report must be summarised 20 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

properly. In fact, summarise all this evidence and mark it accordingly, to say: A1 says this, A2 that, A3 that. There were some inaccuracies in terms of that. But you will see I made pencil notes. So he went back and of course he did that. Then I think around 22 January 2014 was when the report was brought in this fashion, of which I have copies. There was one last thing that KHUBA needed to get before we could say we were closing the investigation from our perspective. Remember now, we were merely asked to assist the investigation. It was made clear to the investigators that the decision to prosecute is not ours, it's not myself and BILLY, it is going to be the DPP.

MR JULY: All they do even then, is they recommend.

MR MOSING: Yes, they recommend. But I'm saying our role in the matter we made clear to them, that this report is not given to me so that I can make a decision, we would submit it to the relevant DPP office, who would take it, and we were merely guiding that investigation and assisting them. As I said, we had continuous

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

discussions with the investigating team, so at no stage did he disagree really as to what was happening. I think there was a lot of pressure as well to terminate the investigation, to move over to arrest. We 5 basically had to say: Make your investigation complete first, make sure you've got all the evidence, which at least indicates a prima facie case so that a prosecutor can take it forward and at least is assured of getting a 10 conviction. But really there wasn't any pressure from anybody to say: Arrest this person and arrest that person, in a sense.
But I'm saying of course this matter happened some time ago already, and there was some 15 delay in really getting to the nitty-gritty, to the truth of the whole event, until we started making progress. It was just to make sure: Finish your investigation so that there is nothing extra to go and get. So by the 20 time he then wrote the final report, which we then had agreed in terms of who would be charged, and so on - as I said, where we had agreed, and we mentioned names as well, as was mentioned in this report dated 22 January 25

SS 65

S July/IPID

2014. Based on this report, which we understood to be the final report, with the investigation being final as far as we were concerned, the matter was now ready to be submitted to a prosecutor to make a decision on whether to prosecute anyone or not. BILLY MOELETSI and myself drafted a memorandum to the Deputy National Director of Public Prosecutions, ADVOCATE JIVA, attaching - let me just get that report, first of all.

MR JULY: Let's take a break while you are looking.

THE INTERVIEW ADJOURNS

THE INTERVIEW RESUMES

MR JULY: You prepared a memorandum to the Deputy National Director of Public Prosecutions, and I think you were looking for it.

MR MOSING: Thank you, Mr July. The memo I was looking for is actually from myself as Head, Special Projects to ADVOCATE JIVA, the Deputy National Director of Public Prosecutions. I think at that stage MR NXASANA of the NDPP was already appointed in October 2013, because the report is dated 13 February 2014. It's also addressed to CHAUKE, the DPP of SOUTH GAUTENG, because it was my understanding that the

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

matter should be referred to the DPP, who would then decide on the prosecution. As I indicated, I was not to decide the prosecution, but merely to assist and guide the investigations. 5

If I can just read a few introductory things in this report, it says:

"The purpose of the report was to provide a summary of the facts and evidence in the matter for the Director of Public Prosecutions, South Gauteng to be able to make an informed decision regarding the prosecution of the matter." 10

Then paragraph 2 is "BACKGROUND", and it says:

"The investigation has now been finalised, and a report from the IPID has been submitted for purposes of considering the merits of the case. The case docket, comprising two lever-arch files, together with other files containing the cellular phone data and evidence obtained from a computer belonging to the DPCI, is also enclosed." 15 20

Then the third paragraph is a summary of the 25

SI 65

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

facts of the investigation. So I don't know whether I can call it standard practice to provide this to the NDPP or my supervisor, really, with our report on the assistance we gave regarding the matter. As you can see, as far as we were concerned the investigation was complete, to the extent that the matter could now be referred to the DPP for a decision. It's just a pity that I did not refer to the date of the report of IPID which accompanied the docket. 5 10

MR JULY: But the date of your memo is ...?

MR MOSING: My date is 13 February 2014. It then precedes...

MR JULY: ... March? 15

MR MOSING: Yes. Not to go through the whole summary of the evidence ...

MR JULY: You will also make a copy of that?

MR MOSING: I will make a copy of this, yes. We did an analysis of the evidence, as far as we were concerned, and then the challenges that we anticipated. The last paragraph really deals with the recommendations which we, as the team guiding the investigations, were making to the DPP. It reads: 20 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

"The recommendation by the IPID, that the DPCI carried out an illegal deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals is supported and is borne out by the evidence contained in the docket. Those directly implicated in the actions are the Head of the DPCI, Lieutenant-General Dramat, Lieutenant-Colonel Maluleke, Warrant Office Makoe, Constable Radebe and Captain Nkosi. The recommendation in respect of Major-General Sibiya is not supported for the reasons mentioned above. 5 10

In addition to the charges mentioned in the IPID report, we would also recommend a charge of fraud, alternatively forgery and uttering in respect of the Home Affairs document that was submitted to the Civilian Secretariat and others." 15

In summary our recommendations tallied with the recommendations that were contained in the report from IPID which was dated 22 January 2014. To refer to those recommendations, that reads: 20

"Based on the available evidence, the 25

SI LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

Independent Police Investigative Directorate recommends that Lieutenant-General Dramat, Major-General Sibiya,
Lieutenant-Colonel Maluleke, Constable
Radebe, Captain S E Nkosi and Warrant Officer Makoe be charged criminally for kidnapping, defeating the ends of justice, assault and theft (only applicable to Captain Maluleke, Warrant Officer Makoe, Radebe and Nkosi)."

That is the assault and theft charges. So in essence we were in agreement with this recommendation. It is in line with what we had seen from the investigation up to that stage. I then handed this memorandum, together with the dockets - and I think I even handed it personally to ADVOCATE CHAUKE, who at that stage was at the head office, in the presence of ADVOCATE JIVA, who was the head of Prosecution Services at the time. This included the report from IPID, dated 22
January 2014.

That was as far as our involvement went in the matter. To our mind the matter was with the NDPP SOUTH GAUTENG, who was going to make a

Ss 6

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

decision whether to prosecute or not to prosecute. Some time during 2014 - and I don't have the exact dates - I was called by ADVOCATE ZEISS VAN ZYL from the DPP SOUTH
GAUTENG office, who was enquiring about this 5 particular docket. He mentioned that some police people came and fetched the dockets from him under circumstances which for him were very suspicious. He felt they were going to bring the dockets back, they hadn't 10 returned the dockets, and he was getting worried and suspicious about it. He thought the dockets were back with us, being at head office. I said to him: No, that can't be the case because the dockets are now with the DPP, 15 for the DPP to decide the matter. He also phoned ADVOCATE MOELETSI to the same effect - I think he phoned MOELETSI before he phoned me. When he heard we hadn't received the dockets, he was worried. As I said, he became 20 very concerned. We then suggested as well that perhaps the dockets were returned to the NDPP, MR NXASANA, who was now the new head of the NPA, without our knowledge, and they could enquire about it from him. So I think they 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

wrote a memo enquiring about it, setting out the circumstances of the matter, and enquiring about the dockets. I have seen that memo in the file, in an email. It was in the custody of the NDPP, MR NXASANA. This was in the last 5 few days of December 2014 - last year - and this was after the media reporting that GENERAL DRAMAT had been suspended, and so on, with regard to this matter. MR NXASANA of the NDPP called me in and asked me about the 10 matter, and then mentioned that the docket was with him. He showed me a box with certain lever-arch files which appeared to be the docket in the matter, and he showed me the IPID report. I saw it was dated some time in 15 March - I think it was 18 March 2014. He showed me the recommendation, and I was shocked to see that the recommendation was completely different to the recommendation that we had seen when the matter was referred 20 to the DPP SOUTH GAUTENG for prosecution or for decision. I think the latter report basically said that GENERAL DRAMAT and GENERAL SIBIYA were exonerated - that's the word that was used. I then briefly paged through the 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

body of the report to see whether certain evidence was still there, still discussed in that report, particularly the statement of MADILONGA, because that was the one that I think pertinently implicated GENERAL DRAMAT as such. I did see that a summary of his evidence was still in that report. I then mentioned to the NDPP that to my mind this recommendation was not the recommendation we... 5 10

MR JULY: It was not consistent with the statement?

MR MOSING: ... it was not consistent with the evidence that was in the report - that was still part of the report.

MR JULY: Tell me, Mr Mosing, because you were in your capacity as the NPA, you were just assisting. 15

MR MOSING: Yes.

MR JULY: The decision to prosecute was not yours, but you were assisting. Were you consulted when the second report or the so-called second report was produced? 20

MR MOSING: No, not at all. That's why I said I was so surprised in December 2014 to see that the recommendation in the report now said these two were exonerated. As you can see from my 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

memo, initially I felt that the evidence was not conclusive with regard to SIBIYA, but with GENERAL DRAMAT we ourselves had recommended as well that there was evidence that implicated him.

MR JULY: And the part which was not conclusive was his location?

MR MOSING: Yes. It was a question that look, that could have been supplemented by further evidence from members who were there, who had not yet made statements at the time, as well as ID parades perhaps, because it was mentioned by the ZIMBABWE Police, but it was also dark and maybe they couldn't identify him properly. But I felt that the other police members, who were part of that operation, or even other evidence could come out that showed that. Because with cellphone things - with cellphones people know how to bypass things. If you are a policeman of that calibre, you will know what evidence - I think the investigators had mentioned that he may have used other cellphones, which they didn't have, and which would perhaps have placed him in that location. It's also unlikely, it's

20

25

SJ
CS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

improbable that he wouldn't have been there, because he was actually the person designated to work in cooperation with the ZIMBABWEAN Police with regard to this cross-border cooperation.

5

MR JULY: His own statement says that. He says he was asked for personnel, and he had to provide that personnel.

MR MOSING: Yes.

MR JULY: The question then is how does that personnel carry out its duties without instructions from him?

10

MR MOSING: Yes, and TOMS in GAUTENG were reporting to him basically, I think. That's also the statement of the members from Crime Intelligence. Because their evidence, which they gave right at the beginning, and which is now corroborated by the rest of the investigation, suddenly gains a little bit more credibility.

15

Because now you can actually see, if they say he was present, then he would have been present. You start now giving a bit more belief to what they were saying, because they are not just uncorroborated statements from people that are said to be in cahoots, or 20

55
LS

8 July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

maybe have some motive. But now that the whole case was done, I think if you look at the evidence, I was not excluding the fact that the DPP could decide that SIBIYA was properly implicated, or that other evidence could do that. It's just that at that stage when we did our memo, or our report basically, the evidence was not conclusive as far as he was concerned. But we definitely felt there was a strong case to be made out regarding the rest. 5 10

Can I just maybe say that that report of March also did not even mention the other members like MALULEKE, MAKOE - I think it maybe mentioned MALULEKE, but MAKOE ... 15

MR JULY: It doesn't mention what should happen to others.

MR MOSING: And for me throughout that case it had always been clear - in fact we had gone so far as to give the IO draft charge sheets as far as the kidnapping and assault. We had pinpointed exactly the theft of the cellphones and the monies. We had prepared those charge sheets for the investigating officer. It was always that these people should be charged for those 20 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

smaller offences as well. For them to be excluded completely in the report just showed me that the report is not very consistent with the evidence.

MR JULY: I was going to say the meeting - and we don't know when the meeting took place between KHUBA, MAKOE and SESOKO, a meeting with you. MAKOE confirms the meeting, KHUBA confirms the meeting and the only person who is not sure about the meeting is SESOKO. 5 10

MR MOSING: I think the only time that I met MR SESOKO was once, when he was part of this thing. That could be the meeting that is being referred to. I remember it was also at a venue which was not the usual venue where they used to meet. Due to the nature of the case, we were also not meeting in the office places because of the need to keep the matter confidential. That was the only time SESOKO came, and it was here at the PETROPORT. What exactly was discussed was really nothing out of the ordinary from what had already been discussed, and I think that was not after the reports were done, it was still well within the matter being investigated. Unfortunately I did not - 15 20 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

I can try and find out when, more or less, from my records, to be exact. Perhaps I will be able to pinpoint the exact date. But it wasn't as if it was a matter where it was being referred to the NDPP already or that the investigations were done at that stage. 5

I think the purpose of MR KHUBA bringing MR SESOKO as well, was because SESOKO was a senior person within IPID. I think he's the Chief Director, or something like that. Obviously at that stage we were getting a little bit worried as the team, because these allegations were serious, they involved high-profile people, and the question was whether IPID reported these things as well to the principals, or whatever, so that at least there was proper reporting about that. I think that's what MR SESOKO's role would have been, because KHUBA was merely the investigator, and we were just assisting him. 10 15 20

MR JULY:

In your experience does the investigating officer, who is appointed by IPID and who signs the report, have to sign the report with other people, or does he sign the report alone? 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

MR MOSING:

For us, when we received this report of 22 January, it was signed by MR KHUBA. It was an official report and it was a final report.
There was no doubt that it was still subject to somebody in higher office - because it was 5 done on a proper letterhead. As I indicated, there were previous drafts which we helped him to correct, so that he could give us a complete product. There was no indication that this report was still subject to being 10 corrected, or signed, or authorised, or approved by somebody else. I think it was basically the report from IPID about the matter. That is why I did not expect - and if it was going to be changed, I would have 15 thought that they would at least have discussed it with us to say: This evidence has changed, we've got new evidence which shows something else. But nothing was discussed. To my mind, given what ADVOCATE 20 VAN ZYL wrote in his memo, he said basically that he received the dockets, as we had handed them over, they were with him for a couple of weeks, or something like that, he never looked at them at the time, and they were then 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

retrieved by IPID. So nothing new was added to that investigation. Even up to today I'm not sure what was added which then led to the report being changed, which then exonerated these people. If there is that evidence one can at least say yes, maybe they got some other evidence that ...

5

MR JULY: But again, does it change the report, or do you add to the report and that will influence the decision?

10

MR MOSING: You would normally make a supplementary report to say: This was the decision at that stage, now we've conducted a further investigation, and this further investigation then changes the initial recommendation. But to me it doesn't look like there was. I didn't see that.

15

I must also just mention that during November GENERAL DRAMAT actually wrote through his attorneys' representation to the NDPP, which then happened to come to me as well. As a consequence of that I had to draft a memo to the NDPP, basically explaining the case and what was going on with the matter. From that as well, the involvement, in particular of 20

25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

GENERAL DRAMAT, because he was the one who was now making this representation which we had to address as to whether or not he was implicated in the matter - we said that they were responsible. As I said, when I saw it that 5 day, they say now that he is exonerated, and I was really surprised because the evidence we had managed to obtain, despite the difficulties, was reasonably strong, to the extent that a person taking a prosecuting 10 decision would have managed to say: Definitely. To my mind now, I know the matter since January this year was referred to the DPP in PRETORIA by the NDPP. I understand there was a recommendation to charge GENERAL 15 DRAMAT. Again, there doesn't seem to have been - it was still on the same evidence that we had. I think the only thing that was different was also a recommendation of a charge of murder. Between MOELETSI and myself 20 we had disagreed, and I also felt that there was a case to be made out for murder, but he felt otherwise. The murder being especially of the first guy who was killed in ZIMBABWE, and even others who would have been killed as 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

a result of this kidnapping and handing over. Because there was evidence to the effect that MALULEKE actually bragged to the other members that the first one who was taken up was killed by the police, and that's how they dispense justice there, therefore if you continue on that argument, it means that he knew exactly what was going to happen. And if that thing happens then you are actually guilty of murder. It seems like it was borne out by our colleagues. 5 10

MR JULY: While we have this, can we ask to make copies of those documents?

MR MOSING: From the lady of the Secretariat pertaining to the report of their investigation - that statement was actually obtained. 15

MR JULY: What is her name?

MR MOSING: I'll tell you now.

MR JULY: I think it's QHOBOSHEANE.

MR MOSING: QHOBOSHEANE, yes. You'll see the date of her statement. It was very late. It was roundabout this time - here it is, JENNIFER IRISH-QUOBOSHEANE. It was the only thing KHUBA had to get before he basically finalised this thing. It's dated 17 February. The 20 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

report I said was dated 13 February. So that was the only thing he wanted to add to the docket before he could finally submit the docket for a decision. I think that's why I perhaps wrote "draft" on this report. I want 5 to see if he added ...

MR JULY: What was the conclusion of QUOBOSHEANE, the recommendation?

MR MOSING: It's the same. In fact she didn't make any recommendation - I think. 10

MR JULY: It then makes sense that the October one was still a draft, hence there was no recommendation.

MR MOSING: Yes. That one was a draft, and because we didn't want this decision to be only ours. 15
They're the investigators, they are bound to indicate what the conclusion is of their investigation. I think that was one of the reasons why I said you must go and write your report in the usual format, and then he's the 20 guy who makes a recommendation on prosecution. If they say there is no case, then at least there is a recommendation. The prosecutor will be guided also by what the attitude is of the investigator. It's probably contained 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

there, it's not just put under headings ...

MR JULY: Like the one which was ...

MR MOSING: Yes.

MR JULY: Also it was a final in October, but the only reason why it had to (?), is the manner in 5 which it was drafted?

MR MOSING: Yes, it was the cosmetics. You see, if you look at this one - the final one in January - after he had changed it, it read better. I think what he didn't do, it wasn't really 10 structured. We said: Discuss your evidence that you rely on.

MR JULY: And then he changed that one to blocks when it came to - he made blocks in order to get rid of certain information. 15

MR MOSING: You see, that part I haven't seen. Where is the new report? I didn't even get a copy of that report.

MR JULY: If you look at this ...

MR MOSING: Oh, is this now the report? You see what is 20 also interesting, I looked at the dates, and I thought, no, no, those dates can't be.

MR JULY: Let's start at page 9. If you look at page 9, that is where the problem starts.

MR MOSING: And the rest is all the same? 25

SS 65

S July/IPID
17.04.15

MR JULY: Yes. Then on page 9, on the report of 22 January, if you look at page 9 as well - look at the paragraph that starts in the middle with:

"He will state that ..."

5

It's the fourth paragraph. It's in the middle.

MR MOSING: You know why? Remember I said this one is a draft.

MS BADAL: Oh, is this yours?

MR MOSING: Yes.

10

MR JULY: Oh, let me show you this one.

MR MOSING: There would have been some changes. Can I just look to see what it says at the front? That's why I wrote "draft", because he needed to do something else before we could say yes. It will be identical, but there was something...

15

MR JULY: It will be the pages that will be different. But the problem with this here is page 9.

"He will state that he told Superintendent Ncube that he has to verify with his seniors ..."

20

MS BADAL: This is 18 March.

MR JULY: On 18 March, where it is supposed to start with "He will state", after the paragraph ends

25

55 65

S July/IPID
17.04.15

with "suspects". After that it's supposed to read:

"He will state that ..."

MR MOSING: Yes, yes.

MR JULY: It's not there. 5

MR MOSING: It's not there.

MR JULY: He starts here.

MR MOSING: He left out that entire part?

MR JULY: Yes.

MR MOSING: What does it state. (Reading to himself.) No 10 but this is ridiculous, because this is exactly the basis of MADILONGA's evidence, where he said they had a cellphone, he phoned, he had called RADZILANI. RADZILANI made a statement - I think he made a statement as 15 well, which corroborated that guy, because he didn't want to phone DRAMAT himself. He was a junior officer, so he phoned his immediate boss, and I think he said his immediate boss told him: You can phone Dramat, and he then 20 phoned.

"... but she requested that he should call Brigadier Makushu, who was a Provincial Head Protection and Security Services. He then called him on his 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

cellphone and explained to him that there are police from Zimbabwe who are intending to have a meeting with General Dramat. Brigadier Makushu told him that he was not aware of the visit but if the people are saying that they are going to meet the General, he should call General Dramat directly. He phoned General Dramat on his cellphone and he responded by saying that he is aware of the Zimbabwean Police and he must let them come." 5 10

MR JULY: That doesn't say this.

MR MOSING: No, that is clear tampering. What does KHUBA say, because KHUBA ... 15

MR JULY: It was taken out.

MR MOSING: But he knows that it was supposed to be in?

MR JULY: He knows that it was supposed to be there.

MR MOSING: Clearly that is what we also understood.

MR JULY: Then if you go to page 21, this paragraph: 20
"DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE ACQUIRED FROM DPCI OFFICES ..."
This is what it says.

MR MOSING: That is 5.2.

MR JULY: It starts with "Success report". What then 25

SSLS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

happens, you see this looks like it reads the same, but here it changes when it comes to another success report.

"The report bears reference number 26/02/1 and again to the Deputy National Commissioner DPCI. The person to whom enquiries must be directed is Captain Maluleke ... Paragraph '1' of the report states that the Zimbabwean Police visited the office of the Divisional National Commissioner regarding Zimbabwean Nationals who were hiding in South Africa. The report further stated the arrest of Dumisani Witness Vundla @ Ndeya and Shepard Chuma."

But here, on that one, there is not that paragraph. So this is the part that is not there.

MR MOSING: Both of them?

MR JULY: Both of them.

MR MOSING: But they removed this one?

MR JULY: Yes. In 5.2. You see if you start here:

"The report bears reference number 14/02/01 ... General Dramat held a meeting with Zimbabwean police ..."

"The report also covers the arrest of Gordon Dube ..."

Instead of having ...

MR MOSING: I think it's this part here:

10

"The report also covers the arrest of Gordon Dube ..."

But it doesn't talk about this other part.

MR JULY: Yes, they delete all of this part.

MR MOSING: If you look at that success report, and you look at how they are reporting here and how they are reporting there, you will see which one is more credible and which one is more complete. That will be a simple exercise, to show this one is (talking together).

 This one says also sent email to the ZIMBABWEAN Police, so in the first one he is saying - I mean, really, it's no wonder they said he is chopping and changing on this thing. 10
 MR JULY: Yes, and there is no GENERAL DRAMAT mentioned there. I think 5.5 on the next page, just before "CELL PHONE RECORD OF LIEUTENANT NEETHLING", it says:
 "Captain Maluleke also communicated with 15
 General Dramat in terms of outgoing SMSs..."
 MR MOSING: "... at a very important milestone of the operation."
 MR JULY: "He also called a Zimbabwean number ..." 20
 And if you go and check on ...
 MR MOSING: Did they change this now?
 MR JULY: They changed it.
 MR MOSING: "EVIDENCE IN TERMS OF SECTION 205."
 MR JULY: Yes, do you see? Then they changed it and 25 they put it in blocks.

MR MOSING:

They put it in blocks and changed the whole thing. But you see what they are saying - I don't know, but they are saying basically this was a progress report. Before that it's a 5 draft, it's a progress report. If you're now writing further - let's say it's a draft, but the fact of the matter remains that you have this draft, and then you have the other report. Clearly this other report - first of 10 all it doesn't deal as comprehensively with the evidence as this one does. It's less questionable (talking together).

MR JULY:

There is no explanation. Why did they leave out the information about the meeting of 5 15
November? That meeting DRAMAT does not dispute.

MR MOSING:

That was key. That's why I said MADILONGA's statement really corroborates the story. It was just on the dates that he wasn't sure. I 20 think he made a mistake about the exact date, but if you look at the records, the movement in and out, and the cellphone records in terms of what date he phoned, that fits in perfectly. And McINTOSH POLELA, who was a 25

55 65

S July/IPID
17.04.15

spokesperson, confirmed that he was called into a meeting where these people were, although he didn't really understand what the story was about - although he's trying to cover up a little bit. But I think he fully 5 knew what the story was. The strange thing is that even with this thing, because he was the spokesperson and he had to address the media on this thing, he didn't disclose it then, to say: There was this meeting. He should have 10 actually (?). So if you push him into a corner he probably will have to explain himself, because he phoned the media - remember that's when they came up with this story that there was a deportation, and all 15 that. In the light of the meeting he would have known that this was not a deportation.

MR JULY: So if it was there in the public, why do you delete it from the report, unless you want to come to a conclusion that is consistent with 20 what you are saying?

MR MOSING: But it was never in the public then. I think they never revealed, even to the Secretariat on three or four occasions, in the light of Parliamentary questions, in the light of the 25

SJLS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

Civilian Secretariat, while the Minister was asking for explanations, they never ever revealed that there were ZIMBABWEAN Police who came here, and then there was a request and there was a meeting that took place, and as a result of that they did X, Y and Z. They never said that. I think they hid the fact that there was a ZIMBABWEAN delegation that came. And this was what MADILONGA actually revealed. They tried to cover it up by making a statement that (?) made initially in their investigation, to cover up the statement, where he basically said something to suit the story of the deportation. But that meeting was key. It informed the MALULEKE case, he also eventually - although he's not saying so now - that's where he got his (?). In fact from his progress report you can see that he's the one who said the meeting took place when the ZIMBABWEANS came, and then he was tasked to go and do this thing. That is why every time he is reporting back. So how do you change it now in your report, and you delete all reference to that meeting, or even reference to them coming into the country?

55 55

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

Because that whole report isn't consistent with the evidence.

MR JULY: It is.

MR MOSING: If you look at this one and you look at that one, you will see this one is more in line with the evidence than the later one is. That should also be conclusive that this report is... 5

MR JULY: That's fine.

MR MOSING: Sandile, sorry, just on that report, so that there is no confusion, both of these are dated 22 January, but I think because there have been some changes maybe we must compare these two. As I indicated, I wrote "draft", and I think I wrote draft because he still had to do one or two things. Although the date is still the same, this was already like the end. You can see this thing is almost like a final thing. There was just maybe one thing or another that he had to add. 10 15 20

MR JULY: This one is the one that he signed.

MR MOSING: Yes, this one he also signed. But, as I say, because there were maybe one or two things, I just want to check where exactly it was. Because you can see it starts there already, 25 where there is a bit of difference there. They will be identical, except maybe there was something that he - this was CHUMA, this was SIBANDA and NYENDA and NELSON CHAUKE ...

MR JULY: No, but this one could be the way that it came out when he printed the grid. 5

MR MOSING: Because this is now my copy, and we haven't really ...

MR JULY: Let's go to paragraph 4.3.

MR MOSING: 4.3 is: 10

"STATEMENTS OF HOME AFFAIRS OFFICIALS:
QABA, NDWANDWE, JACKSON, SKOSANA, LODEWICKUS ..."

Then you have:

"STATEMENTS OF SAPS:
MADILONGA ..." 15

Maybe MADILONGA's statement - these two are the same. I doubt there will be anything changed in this one.

MR JULY: No, this one is the same, you see. 20

MR MOSING: I know there must have been just some small thing that he did, which then accounts for the fact that the documents are not exactly the same.

MR JULY: But it will just be a question of the timing. 25

After that it was this.

MR MOSING: Yes, because like I say this one is just my draft. It was almost complete to the final one, so I think he may have just - perhaps it could be that MOSEANE(?), the addition of her. 5
Because he had to deal with the evidence. If you can see where he says anything about her - because I think the rest will ...

MR JULY: This is what you submitted to the NDPP?

MR MOSING: Yes. Like I say, what actually happened, was 10
I thought I hadn't kept copies, because I didn't make any.

MR JULY: You see, the difference between this one and this one, even if they differ in terms of the format, the conclusion is the same. 15

MR MOSING: Yes, and the statements are the same.

MR JULY: Then they come with another report, where the people who were also involved in the investigation are not even advised: We are now changing this report. Because even 20
MOUKANGWE was not advised.

MR MOSING: Yes, I don't think he would have ...

MR JULY: And they didn't even tell KHUBA - if you look, this was taken out, and I don't know why.

MR MOSING: KHUBA was also surprised.

MR JULY: "On the 28th he was called by his former executive director, who gave him the following documents, saying they were received by the Secretariat of Police: Report on illegal rendition." 5

MR MOSING: You see that was the issue, because that report of the secretariat he wanted to put into the evidence as part of the docket. That was the whole domain thing. So we asked him where he got it, and that's when he explained 10 he got it from that lady who was in charge, MBEKI, I think it was.

MR JULY: Yes.

MR MOSING: He got it from her, because he wanted that really to be a part of the docket, because it 15 shows the whole matter. But is it now deleted from this one?

MR JULY: Yes.

MR MOSING: That's KHUBA's statement? Yes, here is his statement. No, he can't take that out, and it 20 was our advice that we must get that report in, because we took account of it. We read it and we knew what in there. Because it's an official version they gave, and now the investigation shows a different version. So 25 in terms of fraud, you would want to say: You guys, who had a full opportunity to explain this case, said it was this. Now it's this. It would have shown that they had lied. So as far as I'm concerned we had lied to Parliament 5 and to the Minister then, in the beginning, because in other words they cover up the real story. The investigation is supposed to have covered what really happened, and that's why I wanted that report from the Secretariat to 10 be part of the docket. KHUBA wouldn't have left it out, because it was part of his evidence. Is it here where it is taken out?

MR JULY: The paragraph starts with: "On the 13th ..."

MR MOSING: This is his statement. 15

MR JULY: That's an analysis, that one. His statement will be ...

MR MOSING: But what does it say in the analysis?

MR JULY: No, no, they don't have a heading saying "ANALYSIS". 20

MR JULY: No.

MR MOSING: This report is completely ...

MR MOSING: It should be around page 24 or 25. I think that could have been the story, that his statement was not there, and I think we wanted him to give his side of it.

MR JULY: It says: "STATEMENTS OF SENIOR MEMBERS". 5

MR MOSING: Yes, "STATEMENTS OF SENIOR MEMBERS OF SAPS",

MR JULY: Then there is "STATEMENT OF HOW DIEPSLOOT" - this part is there.

MR MOSING: Yes.

MR JULY: INNOCENT KHUBA. So what makes a difference is 10 his statement, because after that his statement takes a lot of ...

MR MOSING: Here is an analysis of the evidence. So these few pages are the same, from what I do have.

MR JULY: Yes. 15

MR MOSING: And I know his statement is supposed to be in that thing, in the one we gave. Now I remember. That's why on this copy that I have, I wrote "draft", because it lacked his statement. Once he did that - and like I 20 said, in not making a copy I didn't anticipate something like this happening. Because we thought in good faith KHUBA would stand by that investigation and wouldn't be made to change it. In other words the original report 25

SSLS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

ANTHONY MOSING

that he signed - although he had signed this one and I wrote "draft" on it - we said: This one is incomplete and you need to summarise your statement. I think maybe if you look at the docket, when was his statement 5 commissioned? It was commissioned more or less at the same time, because it was the last thing he also did. Because he said although he had a draft of what he had done, we said:
Do an investigating officer's statement, so to 10 speak, explaining, because in this case he really needed to explain how this case unfolded, because it would help anyone reading the docket to understand what was going on.
They could be easily confused, because there 15 is a version here which we have to disprove.
Now I remember. I think that's why we didn't even have this. You see, he didn't even change the date, he kept the date. It took him a day or two basically to finalise that. 20
I was a bit worried as to that one.

MR TOM: That one, as to the one you submitted to the

MR MOSING: Yes. You see what happened - and I'm not too sure how you got a copy of that thing. 25

- MR TOM: In the media.
- MR JULY: No, no, no.
- MR MOSING: That one was official.
- MR JULY: It was given to us from the Minister's documents. 5
- MR MOSING: What I want to say is KHUBA actually told me that report - because it had to go to the Minister. Once the report was done, when they gave us, as the NPA, the report, they gave it to the Minister's office as well. That's what we understood. That's why they took our copy. 10
Unfortunately we didn't make copies. Even ZEISS VAN ZYL didn't make a copy. They took everything. That's why they wanted to take everything. They took everything, but now 15 fortunately, even if I don't have a copy, I've got a recent draft, and you can see it's dated. We've got that draft that they started with, and you've got the docket. If you now look at the new statement or report they have, 20 that report doesn't measure up to the evidence.
- MR JULY: Yes.
- MR MOSING: Unless they tampered with the evidence, because I think for you to change your 25 recommendation like that, you would have had to tamper with the evidence.

MR JULY: That's what they gave, you see. Even the tampering is not consistent with their finding, because what they were doing was just to take out the reference to DRAMAT. 5

MR MOSING: Yes. But even if they tampered with the report, they wouldn't tamper with the evidence, because it's there.

MR JULY: You're right, they tampered with the report. 10

MR MOSING: So it means that if they want to insist that that is their correct report, once you review the evidence you will see that that report cannot be - why is there no reference? MADILONGA's statement, for instance, is still there. 15

MR JULY: Yes.

MR MOSING: They haven't changed it. They can't deface it. So it's still there, and it still shows that he phoned, and all that they took up. 20

30 March 2015

15

MR JULY: Today is 30 March 2015. In this room we have SANDILE TOM, an Associate from WERKSMANS, and KERRY BADAL, also an Associate from Werksmans. We are interviewing COLONEL MOUKANGWE about the report relating to the illegal rendition of the ZIMBABWEAN citizens. 20

Colonel Moukangwe, there are two reports in front of you.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes.

MR JULY: There is a report dated 22 January 2014, and 25 there is a report dated 18 March 2014. Do you

SS 27

SJuly/IPID

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

see those two reports?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, I see them.

MR JULY: Maybe, before we go to the details of these reports, can you explain what your role was in the drafting of the report and which one did you draft, or which report were you involved in? 5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: The report of 18 March I was not part of. I don't know anything about it. The one of 22 January I know, and the reason I know about this is I am the initial investigator of this case docket. When it was transferred to IPID, I worked with the IO, MR KHUBA, in the investigation of this matter. When we drafted the report we would sit together and discuss what was outstanding and what we should be doing on the way forward. We drafted this, and the only outstanding thing at that time, if my memory serves me correctly, is that GENERAL DRAMAT's and GENERAL SIBIYA's witness statements were not obtained. 10 15 20

MR JULY: Why were they not obtained?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: When we went to GENERAL DRAMAT's office, he said he wants to involve his attorney and he will only give a statement after discussing 25

25

SJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

this with his attorney. Then GENERAL SIBIYA requested that he should be sent questions. MALULEKE refused, and he said he will speak in court, he won't give anything. That was the outstanding stuff as far as I was concerned. 5
I don't know whether there was any further investigation then in my absence, which led to the drafting of the other report in the new year, in 2014 - the one for 18 March. I don't know what it was that led to the drafting of 10 the new one, I'd be lying, but I know of this other one. And this is not the first one we drafted. Initially I drafted the report itself, not on IPID letterheads, but on SAPS letterheads. This one was not the only one we 15 drafted, because before this one there was one we drafted of 20 December. If I remember well, we drafted one on 20 December, and according to me this was the final one.

MR JULY: This was the final report? 20

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: That I know about. It was the final one.

MR JULY: You say you were involved in the actual drafting?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes.

MR JULY: Meaning that you ...

25

SSLS

SJJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: I had input in what was drafted.

MR JULY: But at the end of this report it is signed by
MR KHUBA.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, MR KHUBA is the official investigating officer of the case docket, because it was now 5
no longer an SAPS matter, it was IPID's issue.
But because of the volume of the work we had already done, they felt it was necessary for me to assist in that issue. That is why I was involved. 10

MR JULY: You went through the report.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes.

MR JULY: You went through this report, and were you consulted by MR KHUBA when this report, which is dated 18 March 2014, was submitted or signed 15
by MR KHUBA?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: I spoke to MR KHUBA when we last drafted the one for January. He only phoned me last week, on Friday, saying that when I'm in PHOLOKWANE, going to church, I must just give 20 him a call and see him. I'm sure it's nearly a year that I didn't speak to him, so I was not consulted, and I don't know anything about it.

MR JULY: So if there is anything which was 25

SS
LS

SJuly/IPID

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

removed from this report, to come up with this report of 18 March, and there is information that has been removed, and which was contained in the original report, you don't know about that?

5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: I will never know about that.

MR JULY: I want us to go through this report. For instance, on page 21 of the report dated 22 January 2014 - maybe before we go to this report, are you certain that when this report was signed by MR KHUBA, it was submitted to the NPA as the final report?

10

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: I won't be able to say it was submitted, but we went to the National Director of Public Prosecutions, because we were given two advocates to work with us on this issue. I was there with MR KHUBA and MR SESOKO. MR SESOKO is a legal person, he was a former prosecutor in BENONI. We went there, and when we were there the report was already drafted. That is what I can say with certainty, because when we were there the prosecutors who were dealing with us on this issue, knew about it, and had a copy of the report.

15

20

MR JULY: So when the report was submitted to them, was 25

SS
LS

SJJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

it submitted as a temporary report, was it incomplete, or was it a final report?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: It was a final, because we wanted warrants there, really, that's why we took our legal person, MR SESOKO. We were worried about why it seemed they were dragging their feet in giving us warrants of arrest for these people, because the people never wanted to cooperate. 5

MR JULY: When we spoke to MR KHUBA last week, on Thursday, being 26 March, he indicated to us that what necessitated the drafting of the new report was the evidence that came after this report was finalised - and with this I am referring to the report of 22 January 2014. But what we have not yet established is when this new information came into existence. 10 15

Let me tell you what he says was the new evidence. He says there was contradiction during the statements of the witnesses, in particular of those who were assaulted. They claim that GENERAL SIBIYA was at the scene when they were arrested and when they were assaulted. According to MR KHUBA new evidence 20 25

SS
LS

SJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

was then established that in terms of the cellphone records, when they were compared with what the tower - the tower being what cellphone company is being used, whether it's MTN or VODACOM, but the tower indicated that GENERAL 5 SIBIYA's phones, which according to MR KHUBA were the two phones he was using: the first phone was the phone which he said was an official phone, and the second phone he said was the phone he found clandestinely, which 10 GENERAL SIBIYA was using. GENERAL SIBIYA did not know that he was using that cellphone.
Based on the evidence that locates GENERAL SIBIYA in SUNNYSIDE, he then decided to change the report, because SIBIYA was not at the 15 scene.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: In that one maybe he forgot something, because we knew before that GENERAL SIBIYA's cellphone shows he was in PRETORIA, but the people who were operating with him said he is not using 20 one cellphone. So it might happen that the official cellphones were at home, and maybe he used the other one, which is just recorded here on the statement. That is according to what they said. But we knew about the information 25

SS
LS

SJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

before, because we questioned them: How can you say SIBIYA was involved, the cellphone shows that ...

MR JULY: And how did you know about this information that SIBIYA's cellphones were in 5 SUNNYSIDE?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Because of the detailed billing that we did. We did a detailed billing on the two cellphone numbers that we were given, to show where the cellphones were at that time. They showed that 10 he was in PRETORIA at the time they mentioned in their statements.

MR JULY: So you're saying that the information that the cellphones were located in SUNNYSIDE can't be new information? 15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, unless they are new cellphones. If they are the two original ones, it's not new evidence, because they knew about it. They knew when we went to meet them, the advocates at the NDPP, we knew about that. We had copies 20 of the detailed billing when we were there. We had a big file of the cellphone billings when we were there.

MR JULY: He also says in the new report you will notice 25 that there are warning statements from the

LS
SS

SJJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

implicated parties, which is GENERAL DRAMAT, GENERAL SIBIYA, and in the report that you signed there are no warning statements from these two.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: In the report in which I was involved I never 5 saw them, but in the report in which I was involved there were no warning statements of GENERAL SIBIYA, GENERAL DRAMAT or COLONEL MALULEKE. As I said before, they didn't want to give a statement. GENERAL SIBIYA wanted 10 questions to be sent to him, GENERAL DRAMAT said he was still going to speak to his lawyer, and COLONEL MALULEKE refused. And they didn't speak directly with me, he's the one who spoke to me, but I was with him when he spoke 15 to them. So the issue of how they now decided to bring statements - maybe it was just after I was a far distance from the investigation.

MR JULY: Do you remember if you asked for those 20 statements from them before you finalised the report ...

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, we did.

MR JULY: ... which is dated 22 January?

MR JULY: Were you at any stage given the warning statements by MR KHUBA - that there are warnings statements that we could not obtain, and now, as a result of those warning statements I am changing the report that we submitted to the NPA? 10

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, I was not part and parcel of the changing, and I was not consulted or involved in the new drafting of the last one, the purported final report. 15

Can you see that in the original?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes.

MR JULY: "While he was on the front passenger seat heading to the border gate, he told him that the Zimbabwean police who he assisted some weeks back were looking for suspects in connection with the death of police chief in Zimbabwe, and now they have found them. He told him that he was sent by his big bosses to assist in deporting them because the country does not have an extradition agreement with Zimbabwe. He said that since the Zimbabwean Police entered the country they had been busy trying to trace the suspects." 10 15 20

Do you see that paragraph?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: "While they were driving he realised that starts at "While they were driving ..." 5

MR JULY: It's supposed to be:
"While they were driving he realised that

The paragraph that begins with:
"While he was on the front passenger seat" 10
That has been removed.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, it's not there.

"While they were driving he realised that

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, I can see that.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, I was never told.

If you look at page 21, and you look at page 20 of the other report, paragraph 5.2, in the one which is dated January 2014 paragraph 5.2 5 reads:

"Success report dated 04/02/2011:

The report was addressed to General

The report bears reference 14/02/01 and was signed by Colonel Leonie Verster.
Paragraph 'A1' of the report states that 20 on 05/11/2010 General Dramat held a

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

MR JULY: That part is not there.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, it's not.

MR JULY: It's not there. All you have is that "The report also covers ..." - you have the last sentence in that. 5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: "The report also covers the arrest of Gordon Dube and appreciation of TRT members and members of Crime Intelligence."

MR JULY: Yes, but the part which says: 10
"The report bears reference ... Paragraph 'A1' states that on 5/11/2010 General Dramat held a meeting with Zimbabwean Police ..."

That has been removed. 15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, it's out.

MR JULY: Yes.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: It's out of that one.

MR JULY: If you go to paragraph 5.3, on the same page of the January report, right at the end, where it 20 says "EMAILS BY CAPTAIN MALULEKE", it reads:
"EMAILS BY CAPTAIN MALULEKE:
He sent emails circulating more than 20
photos of both the suspects arrested and 25
the members involved in the operation.

LS
SS

SJJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

The emails were sent to the PA of General Dramat, Phumla, Zimbabwean Police and members of Crime Intelligence. He also sent emails to Zimbabwean Police trying to find out how they travelled back home and that he is still tracing the remaining suspects." 5

But if you read what is written on page 21 of the 18 March report, it reads:

"EMAILS BY CAPTAIN MALULEKE: 10
He sent emails circulating more than 20 photos of both the suspects arrested and the members involved in the operation."

There is no reference to:

"Emails were sent to the PA of General Dramat." 15

Do you see that?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, it's not there.

MR JULY: Then if you go to page 23 of the report, 5.5, there you have the cellphone record of MAJOR GENERAL SIBIYA, and this is what it says about these cellphone records, and that's the number of MAJOR GENERAL SIBIYA. 20

"Upon perusal of the cellphone records, it was discovered that Major General 25

SJuly/IPID

Sibiya communicated with officers who were involved in the operation, eg Captain Maluleke, and sent more than 20 SMSs to Major General Dramat. However, Major General Dramat never responded to the SMSs. The same automated SMSs were sent to Lieutenant General Lebeya at ... These SMSs were sent at various milestones of the operation, as deduced from witnesses' statements and documentary proof." 5 10

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Then on that point you can see that when I say we already had the detailed billing of the cellphones when we wrote the report - there it comes. It's not something that only came when this one was written. 15

MR JULY: Yes.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: By the time he wrote this, we already had the detailed billing, that's why we included that evidence in terms of Section 205 of the Criminal Procedure Act. It was there. That's why I said if it's another thing - maybe it's new cellphones or new issues, I don't know. But the cellphones that we had at that time, they are here. 20 25

SJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

MR JULY: Hence in this report you are also not stating whether MAJOR GENERAL SIBIYA was present, but you are saying he was communicating?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes.

MR JULY: You are not saying you still have to discover whether MAJOR GENERAL SIBIYA was at the scene or not? 5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, no. No, we never said that. So you can see the 205 was already there. The results were already received, because we couldn't include this in this report if we were still waiting for it to come as other evidence. That's why I said if there is a new thing, I will never know, because I was not present with that one. 10 15

MR JULY: Educate me about this 205 application. If you look at the report of 18 March, you suddenly see the blocks now. It's no longer written in this format - you see how it's written here?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, I see that. 20

MR JULY: But now it's in blocks. Then it says:

"REASON FOR 205 APPLICATION."

What is this 205 application? LS

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: To get information on the cellphone, we have to apply Section 205 of the Criminal Procedure 25

SS

SJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

Act, so that the court must authorise us to do that.

MR JULY: But you already had?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, we had already.

MR JULY: You already had, because for you to be able to 5 come to this conclusion, you already had the 205.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, we had the 205. We already had it.

MR JULY: When it is put like this, as the reason for the 10 205 application, it's put as if it's a new thing that ought to have been done, and which was not done in the previous ...

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, we did it previously, otherwise we wouldn't have paragraph 5.5 in the report which is said 15 to be the first report.

MR JULY: Let's look at that 205. It says:

"To test the version of the witnesses who are alleged to have seen Major General Sibiya at the crime scene."

Now, this is testing something different. What 20 we are saying here is that he was in constant communication, so he knew - he had knowledge of what was happening. But what they are saying here, in this report, was to verify whether the evidence the witnesses gave that SIBIYA was at 25

LS
SS

SJuly/IPID

the scene of the crime, was true or not.

Then it says:

"FINDINGS:

Major General Sibiya was never at the crime scene or planning area as alleged by members of Crime Intelligence." 5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: It's difficult to say that, because now we don't know, but those people are people who were physically there. We don't know. For them, the credibility of this must be tested in 10 court, if it must be tested. It can't be tested by us, it must be tested in court in cross-examination if they really believe he was with him. For example, I don't even know SIBIYA, I have never met him in my life, 15 so how can I say he was there if I don't know him?

MR JULY: Didn't you know - the point that we are trying to establish is, did you know at this point that you heard that evidence about SIBIYA, but 20 according to the record SIBIYA was not at the scene. Didn't you know when you were drafting this report?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: We knew. We knew about this, and even the 25 prosecutors were doubtful about the evidence,

LS

SS

SJJuly/IPID

but how can we now say SIBIYA was involved while it shows he was at his home? Don't you think it's right that we leave SIBIYA, we don't charge him, but we charge DRAMAT and leave SIBIYA? That is the advice we got from the prosecutors, so we had the information. 5

MR JULY: Therefore, is this information new information, according to you?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, it's not new information. This is not new, we had it here, and that's why we wrote about it in the report that is dated 18 January. 10

MR JULY: Let's go to the reasons again on DRAMAT.
"To verify whether he had interaction with the Zimbabwean Authority regarding the arrest of Zimbabwean Nationals. To clarify as alleged by the witnesses whether he received Zimbabwean police in relation to the murder case of a senior officer in Zimbabwe." 15

Then it says: 20

"The entire cellphone record of Lieutenant General Dramat does show any interaction with the Zimbabwean counterparts. However the fact that Zimbabwean police might have entered the 25 country is confirmed by photographs, but there is no evidence that they were with General Dramat. The photos show them with members of the TRT, Captain Maluleke and members of Crime Intelligence." 5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: But there is nowhere where we said DRAMAT took photos with the ZIMBABWEAN Police.

MR JULY: Exactly.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: We never said he took photos with them. We said they were there, and according to the witness statement that we got, one of the members of Crime Intelligence was there when they were congratulated by the General, accompanied by his spokesperson, McINTOSH. When they say he took photos with them, if he did we don't know where they are, but the photos that we saw were the suspects and the ZIM Police who were there with the team that arrested them. But we didn't say GENERAL DRAMAT was also in the photos. 10 15 20

MR JULY: But you also discovered - and it's not stated in this new report - that there were several SMSs that were sent by both MALULEKE and SIBIYA to DRAMAT, but he never responded to those SMSs. 25

SS

SJuly/IPID
30.03.15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, he never responded. That's why I said we did ...

MR JULY: So you already had this report?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, we already had it.

MR JULY: So there is nothing new to you? 5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, it's not new to me.

MR JULY: You will notice that the cellphone records of MADILONGA in the new report, which you will find on page 24, where it says:

"To test his version in which he alleged 10 that he received a call from Captain Maluleke on 8/11/2010 regarding the deportation of Zimbabwean Nationals."

But here on page 24 of the January report it states in the affirmative: 15

"He assisted Captain Maluleke to cross the border with the suspects. He contracted Lieutenant General Dramat when he welcomed the Zimbabwean Police the first time." 20

So that is not here.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes. I see it is confirmed here that:

"The interaction confirms the relation of Madilonga ..."

MR JULY: No, no, here it is confirming MALULEKE. 25

LS

COLONEL MOUKANGWE

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Only on MALULEKE?

MR JULY: Only on MALULEKE. If you look at that paragraph, it only makes reference to MALULEKE.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: To MALULEKE, yes. 5

"He contracted General Dramat ..."

That is not there.

MR JULY: Mmm.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes, that one, where he contacted GENERAL DRAMAT, is not there. 10

MR JULY: And the same with the telephone calls of MALULEKE. If you go to page 23, it's the same thing with MALULEKE. If you read what you discovered from the cellphone of MALULEKE, it's that: 15

"Captain Maluleke also communicated with General Dramat in terms of outgoing SMSs at a very important milestone of the operation. However, Dramat never responded to the SMSs which he received 20 from Captain Maluleke. He also called a Zimbabwe number twice ..."

But if you look in this one about MALULEKE:

"To test the version of the witnesses who 25 alleged that Captain Maluleke led the operation."

It's a different issue.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Mmm.

MR JULY: How do you use the phone to determine whether he led the operation? 5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: You can't.

MR JULY: The leading requires a person to be there?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: To be there physically. You can't use a cellphone, because if I forgot it in my car, it would show that I'm leading people, whereas I'm 10 sitting here. Because the towers will still show the movement on the cellphone. The movement of the instrument as it is, shows that he was moving there. It doesn't mean it's linked to the body of a person. 15

MR JULY: Exactly.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: The instrument is only there. If the cellphone shows that I'm in DURBAN, meanwhile I'm here, which one is the correct one, the one in DURBAN or this one? Because you can attest that I was 20 here with you. But the other one is an assumption which needs substantiation or statements by an individual.

MR JULY: We just wanted to demonstrate the report 25 which you drafted with MR KHUBA, and the information contained in that report - part of it was removed, and you say you were not consulted?

LS

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, I wasn't.

MR JULY: And you say after the report was prepared, you met with the NPA, in particular ADVOCATE MOSENG ... 5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: MOSENG, yes, and MOELETSI.

MR JULY: ... and MOELETSI.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes. 10

MR JULY: And the reason for the meeting was to get the warrants?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes.

MR JULY: Those were the warrants of arrest?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes. 15

MR JULY: And according to you this report was the final report?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes.

MR JULY: The one of 22 January 2014?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: Yes. 20

MR JULY: It was not subject to further investigation?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: No, there was nothing we could do, because VERSTER was refusing, was dodging us, and the Generals were not giving us their whole statement, so there was nothing else we could 25

LS
S5

sJuly/IPID

do.

MR JULY: What is the practice if people don't want to give you information? Does it mean that the report that you finalise, which excludes that information, is rendered incomplete or is an interim report? 5

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: It's complete, because it's what we have. We complete a report on what we have. We cannot anticipate what the person is going to say in future. Whether he's going to come or not, we can never know. 10

MR JULY: But what was critical for us was to find out the information in the so-called new information. You are saying you already had that information. The issue of the physical location of SIBIYA was already known to you at the time? 15

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: That was known. Unless they've got other statements that I don't know about, but that was known. Because we had 205 records at that time. They were not outstanding, we had them by the time we drafted this. That's why we had issues on cellphone reports, that's why we had issues where SMSs were not answered by GENERAL DRAMAT. We couldn't get that information 25 without using Section 205.

MR JULY: There is something MR KHUBA referred to, which was when they received the cellphones they had to take them to experts.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: For analysis. 5

MR JULY: For analysis, yes.

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: After the discussion with the prosecutors, they made a suggestion whether we should do the mappings. Cellphone mapping is where an analysis will show us that this was done at this, and make some points in a chart form. That's what we were requested to do. 10

MR JULY: But that was for the purposes of leading evidence?

COLONEL MOUKANGWE: For the purpose of leading evidence, it was not for the purpose of the report. It was for the purpose of leading evidence, and it would be easier for the prosecutors to pinpoint and show on a chart. 15

MR JULY: Okay. That's the end of this interview. If we need you, we will call you again. 20

I'm with SANDILE TOM, an Associate from WERKSMANS, KERRY BADAL, an Associate from WERKSMANS, and KWAZI BUTHELEZI, a Candidate Attorney from WERKSMANS.

Mr Mzinyathi, we have given you the background, and told you what MR CHAUKE told us about the 25

S5

S July/IPID
17.04.15

GEORGE BALOYI
SIBONGILE MZINYATHI

docket, when he received it, and it was taken away from them by KHUBA and a certain MR ANGUS from IPID. The docket was returned to the NDPP office, and according to CHAUKE when they enquired about the docket, they were told that the docket was never intended to be returned to his office. Then it was advised by the NDPP to close his file, therefore he was not going to deal with the matter anymore. 5

In December, when he was called by the NDPP about the same docket, he refused to accept the docket back because he had already decided to close his file, as per the advice of the NDPP. On 1 April this year, he found in his office a box, which was closed - sealed - to be opened by him only. Inside that box were arch-lever files, including a letter addressed to him dated 13 March 2015. In a nutshell what it said was that the DPP of NORTHERN GAUTENG, which is ADV MZINYATHI, has made a recommendation that DRAMAT and the others should be prosecuted. But in the letter he is requesting the DPP of GAUTENG, which is MR CHAUKE, to make a decision, after consulting with him as to whether prosecution should take 10 15 20 25

Mr Mzinyathi, you are supposed to tell us about your involvement in the matter. 5

MR MZINYATHI: Thank you. The week before 13 January - and I don't remember the exact date, but I was still on leave - I got a call from the NDPP who enquired from me about my knowledge of the Renditions case. I told him that I know 10 nothing at all. Before then I had not been involved in any way with this matter. He then told me he was going to forward the matter to me, because he had received it from ADV CHAUKE, and he told me the reason why he intended to 15 give it to me, was because it transpired to him that DIEPSLOOT, which is the area in which some of the incidents occurred, falls under my area of jurisdiction.

MR JULY: I will keep on interrupting you. I just want 20 you to confirm that he said he received it from ADV CHAUKE?

MR MZINYATHI: Yes.

MR JULY: Which is not correct, because the document was 25 taken from MR VAN ZYL. As I indicated to you when we started recording, it was taken to him by MR VAN ZYL by two people, which is KHUBA and ANGUS, and it never went back to CHAUKE.

MR MZINYATHI: In other words is your question that he got it from CHAUKE personally? 5

MR JULY: No, my question is did he get it from CHAUKE personally or from the office of CHAUKE.

MR MZINYATHI: Look, from my recollection I think he actually sent it from CHAUKE, but from my point of view I really don't know whether anything much turns on that. 10

MR BALOYI: It might have had a very long turn, but eventually what it means is it ended up on his table.

MR JULY: I will tell you that it is critical for our purposes, and I will tell you why. We need to know exactly what happened to the docket. That's one thing. Everything turns on that, as to who gave him the docket. Because our understanding is that the docket came from IPID back to his office. 15 20

MR MZINYATHI: Oh, I see. Then I follow what you are saying. Well, the information that he got it from CHAUKE - as I said a couple of minutes ago, because DIEPSLOOT is my jurisdiction, he said 25

I must have a look at this matter. I told him that in the NDPP I was on leave, but I was going back to work on Tuesday, the 13th. Indeed on the 13th I was here, and the docket came in a sealed box, with a covering letter. 5

I think the docket constitutes five or six lever-arch files - the docket itself - with several fives of annexures and exhibits. What I then did, and even before talking to ADV MARAIS, was to read that docket myself, and I 10 made comprehensive notes, which are these, off the original of the docket. I think I took about a week to read this docket, because I was reading it amongst the many other things that I had to do. Then I called one of the most 15 senior deputies, ADV BALOYI, and said: George, I allocate this matter to you, go through this docket, and when you are done let's discuss it. I must mention that from time to time, as he was reading, ADV BALOYI would give me some 20 verbal updates. I still remember, for instance, if he had made a call to the investigating officers, he would tell me, because I kept on enquiring from him: What is 25 the progress in the matter?

In one of the files that was delivered with the docket to me on the 13th, I must confirm that I saw the report. I think this was the last report - the red one - the one

MR TOM: It's the one dated 18 March 2014? 5

MR MZINYATHI: Yes. It was part of the docket, it was an annexure. Then I was careful to finish reading that docket before reading the report. When I read the report, for me it was very, very useful, because in a very detailed way the report goes a long way to summarising the statements. Every statement in the docket is summarised in that report. I must say that helped me to cross-reference with my notes about whether I had captured a certain statement correctly. I do observe that the report concludes by making its own recommendations about who should be charged and who should not be charged. 10 15

While all of this was happening, I was not aware that there was anything called a first report. In fact it came to our attention, George, much later - I think after about a month - that there was a first report. That happened over the news, or something like that, 20 25 and we were all surprised there was a first report. I then went to visit the NDPP on a date which I don't remember for a matter unrelated to this matter.

MR JULY: That was more or less when? Was it before ... 5

MR MZINYATHI: No, before. This was definitely before our recommendation. He then told me: By the way, there is a first report here, have you seen it? I said: No, I was not aware that there was a first report. He then made me a copy, and this 10 is the copy that my colleague, GEORGE, just showed you now, the one with scribbling on the cover. I did not read that report in any amount of detail, but on a cursory observation my point of view was that the summary of the 15 statements was basically the same. Of course, as it has now become well reported, its recommendations differ from the second report. I gave it to GEORGE. In fact at that time the docket had already been with GEORGE for some 20 time. I had finished reading the document myself.

MR JULY: Did he tell you whether he was in possession of that report when he gave you the docket? 55

MR MZINYATHI: I did not ask. As I was reading this document, 25

I was formulating conclusions or views in my mind, but I kept those to myself because I was waiting for GEORGE to come to his conclusion. Eventually then GEORGE came here - I think let me point out that as he was reading it, GEORGE from time to time would say: The DPP - I think this is were the case is going, in terms of his own reading. He eventually came up with recommended charges. GEORGE is going to talk about that at length. 5 10

MR JULY: Did you share the new report with GEORGE?

MR MZINYATHI: Yes. As soon as I received it - I didn't keep it for a long time. As I say, from my point of view I didn't even read it in any amount of detail, but just paged through it. It basically looks like the same report in terms of how it summarises the statements. The only difference is towards the end, with the recommendations. 15

Then GEORGE, after reading the report and having discussed the matter with me from time to time - I still remember on certain occasions in relation to one charge, for instance, we would debate whether this was a conspiracy, was it common purpose - all those things, because 20 25

we are prosecutors, and we were looking at it from that point of view, until we came to the charges we thought should be brought.

Now, why a recommendation and not a decision?

It's not as if this is something that we did not sort of think carefully about. You are aware, Mr July, that this is a DPP office, and we make decisions every day to prosecute. Under normal circumstances - and I'm sure this is what GEORGE is also going to confirm - we would simply have decided this matter. But the reason why is as things now stand DIEPSLOOT does not fall under my jurisdiction. 5 10

MR BALOYI: That's from 1 December 2014.

MR JULY: In actual fact what he says in the letter to CHAUKE, is that now that the matter falls under the jurisdiction, then you can decide the matter. There is a contradiction there, in the sense that CHAUKE was seized with the matter, even when it was not under his jurisdiction. So you can't then say you are taking the matter to CHAUKE in spite of a recommendation, simply because it now falls under his jurisdiction. You can't use jurisdiction as a reason. 15 20 25

MR MZINYATHI: You see that's a matter for you to determine. 25

LS
SS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

GEORGE BALOYI
SIBONGILE MZINYATHI

In terms of the Criminal Procedure Act - and I'm sure we are all aware of it - I can only decided for another DPP if jurisdiction has been transferred. There is a specific section in the Criminal Procedure Act where the NDPP 5 transfers jurisdiction to another DPP.

MR JULY: Yes, yes.

MR MZINYATHI: In such a situation I become seized with the matter as if I am the DPP of first instance, and then I can decide. We were constrained in 10 this matter - and we were careful, Mr July, because inasmuch as DIEPSLOOT was under my jurisdiction where offences were committed, at the time we were making a decision I didn't have jurisdiction over DIEPSLOOT. 15

MR JULY: But do you know why that jurisdiction was not transferred, if we take your argument to its conclusion, which is that there can be a transfer of jurisdiction, even after the first, logically the NDPP had the power to say: I am 20 transferring this to you.

MR MZINYATHI: Yes.

MR JULY: And that didn't happen?

MR MZINYATHI: No, it didn't.

MR BALOYI: Actually at some point we were contemplating 25

LS
SJ

S July/IPID

GEORGE BALOYI

returning the docket to the NDPP to say: It doesn't fall within our jurisdictional area. It had the MUSINA leg, and obviously the matter had a chequered history, and we felt let's just make a recommendation at least. 5

MR MZINYATHI: So I think I have clarified or I have attempted to clarify why we chose the recommendation. You know, if you have a look at that recommendation even the style in which it is prepared, it is prepared in the style in which we normally make decisions. It's just that instead of saying the DPP decides, we say: It is recommended. 10

MR JULY: But in any event you were recommending a decision. It's not like you didn't make a decision. 15

MR MZINYATHI: No, we did.

MR JULY: You made the decision of recommending to them, meaning that: We are not imposing ourselves, you can still decide, but your decision that you recommended was that. 20

MR MZINYATHI: Yes.

MR JULY: So the issue of recommendation becomes too difficult. 25

MR MZINYATHI: Yes. After having done that - and this is also 25

another issue that I think is being questioned in some quarters, certainly if one takes what one reads in the newspapers to heart, because there is also apparently a school of thought that says: Why did I even return the docket to 5 the NDPP? The same answer I'm giving you is going to hold, because if it was a decision we would have taken the docket to the police with the decision. But because it's a recommendation it goes back to where the docket 10 came from, so that it can either be taken to the police, or he can then say to us: I have read your recommendations and you can maybe decide on the matter. It is at that point where, if we had been called upon to decide, we 15 would have raised the issue of jurisdiction.
Isn't that so, George?

MR BALOYI:

Yes.

MR MZINYATHI:

At that time we would have requested: Please transfer your decision, but then the matter 20 went there on 13 March. Can I pause for now?

MR JULY:

So that was in March, when you made your recommendation?

MR MZINYATHI:

The recommendation was made a few days before 25 that. 13 March is the date of the memo that MR MZINYATHI: Have you spoken to him already?

MR JULY: Who?

MR MZINYATHI: The NDPP?

MR JULY: No, not yet. We've got the memo that he sent to (?).

MR JULY: "YOUR LETTER DATED 24 MARCH:

- what happened after the 13th is that I got a call. I am reminded of this by the heading of this letter. I got a call from a guy who I think is the Staff Officer of GENERAL NDLALEZI(?), a certain COLONEL KWAI(?). 10
COLONEL KWAI said to me: Can you please confirm your email address for me, because I want to send a letter to you from the head of the HAWKS, and I'm not sure of the email address. In fact he actually told me that he 15 had been attempting to send emails, and they kept on bouncing back, so he thought he was not getting my email correct. I then said to him: Okay, give me your email address, I will forward a blank email to you, which you will 20 use to respond to. I then received a letter from MR NDLALEZI, enquiring about what had happened in this matter. MR NDLALEZI's letter is here?

MR MZINYATHI: This letter is actually a very, very interesting letter, and I think just for 5 purposes of completeness it will become clear. This letter says:

"NATIONAL DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS: ATTENTION S MZINYATHI."

MR BALOYI: Here it is. 10

MR MZINYATHI: Thanks. It's a letter from the HAWKS of 18 March. NDPP, ATTENTION S MZINYATHI.

MR JULY: This is 18 March?

MR MZINYATHI: 18 March, and this is a letter I received immediately after I had confirmed my email 15 address from COLONEL KWAI. I then forwarded this letter of the HAWKS to the NDPP in a letter dated March, and this letter is actually very, very simple, it's three lines.

"Dear NDPP 20
Please find attached hereto a letter dated 18 March from the head of the DPCI, the contents of which are self-explanatory."

This letter requests me to do things. I then 25 say in my letter of 19 March:

"In response to the request contained in the aforementioned letter, I confirm that this office made a recommendation in this matter, which was forwarded to you 5 together with the docket on 13 March for consideration and feedback."

I sent this to the NDPP via email and hard copy. Then after enquiring, the NDPP wrote to us - George? 10

MR BALOYI: Yes.

MR MZINYATHI: They wrote to us, questioning why I had forwarded this letter - this response to MR NDLALEZI as well. Because what I did was to write to the NDPP and copied MR NDLALEZI, who 15 is the author of the request.

MR JULY: The letter you are referring to now is dated what?

MR MZINYATHI: The letter I received is dated 18 March.

MR JULY: No, the one that you sent to MR NDLALEZI? 20

MR MZINYATHI: Yes, exactly.

MR JULY: Now he wants to know after the 19th, when you do that, why you CC'd NDLALEZI?

MR MZINYATHI: NDLALEZI. 5

MR JULY: But what is wrong with that, because it's a letter addressed to you, and now you are saying: Listen, Mr Ndlalezi, I think this should be directed to somebody else.

MR MZINYATHI: Yes. 10

MR JULY: And you are therefore advising him: This is where you should go.

MR MZINYATHI: Exactly. In fact that is precisely how I had approached it. I didn't want to waste time writing many letters to the NDPP, and then 15 another letter to NDLALEZI to say: I have forwarded this thing. One email or one memo, in my view - and I think it's a view that makes sense as I sit here.

MR BALOYI: But these are the internal workings of the NPA. 20 I suppose they do not form part of your investigation.

MR JULY: You see, we are where we are now because of the internal workings of all these institutions, 25 IPID, the NDPP. Actually the whole issue is

LS
SS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

GEORGE BALOYI

centred around the workings, because it is through the workings that these things happened in the way which has lead to this investigation now. The relevance of certain things - and whether they are relevant we will make that 5 judgment call, as to what is the relevance of the letter from NDLALEZI to MR MZINYATHI, and Mr Mzinyathi, if it does not add any value to our conclusion we will leave out anything that has no relevance. But what we 10 need to appreciate is the fact that this whole thing is centred around how the NDPP handled the matter; how the docket moved from one place to another place, and what the reason was for the movement of the docket. Do you get 15 what I'm saying.

I understand what you are saying there, but we are not here to deal with the general administration. Here we are being specific.

MR MZINYATHI: You see, the reason why I made reference to all 20 these things is because of this letter. This letter creates a nexus to these communications.
I could not simply have kept quiet after you had showed me this letter.

MR JULY: I think what needs to be clear to all of us 25

LS
SS

S July/IPID

GEORGE BALOYI
SIBONGILE MZINYATHI

here is that we are not here to investigate the administrative operations of the NPA. This is a specific assignment: What happened after the report, and the coming of the second report, and the docket. For instance, what we do know 5 is that MR MZINYATHI was given a report - a report which was dated March, where the docket that was with MR CHAUKE did not have a report dated 18 March, it only had the report of 22 10 January, because it was handed to him in February. Do you get what I'm saying?

MR MZINYATHI: Mmm.

MR JULY: So it is through that administrative process that we will be able to come to a conclusion as to why things happened in the way in which they 15 happened.

MR MZINYATHI: I think that concludes - of course, I responded to the question to say: Look, I copied Mr Ndlalezi because the letter was actually addressed to me, and I was not under any doubt 20 that I was the intended recipient, because the person had called me and said: Confirm your email address.

MR JULY: So you came to a conclusion, and you sent a 25 recommendation, but your recommendation is stated in the letter of 1 April, which letter I have seen, where the NDPP writes a letter to CHAUKE saying you have recommended prosecution of several people. Again, who is NPS? The NATIONAL PROSECUTION SERVICE, what is 5

that?

MR MZINYATHI: NPS is a business unit at VGM, at head office, which is responsible for prosecutions in the divisions. Let me put it this way. There are four business units in the NPA. You've got the 10 Asset Forfeiture Unit, you've got NSSD - National Specialist Services Division, or something like that, you've then got the NPS, which is the National Prosecution Service, and then the fourth one? 15

MR BALOYI: Corporate Services.

MR MZINYATHI: You've got the four deputies: NPS, Asset Forfeiture, NSSD and then there is the LAD, the Legal Affairs Division. Now, the NPS is the business unit which is responsible for the 20 DPPs. All the DPPs report to the head of the NPS.

MR BALOYI: And as the name says, it's responsible for prosecutions. LS

from asset forfeiture and other issues.

MR JULY: This letter is dated 27 March. Anyway, that's fine.

MR MZINYATHI: I think now we can give over to GEORGE, because, as I say, GEORGE spent a lot of time 5 working with this document.

MR JULY: You see with GEORGE - the other thing is if we speak to GEORGE now we are talking about the merits of his findings. You made mention of the fact that you may have the two 10 reports, and they looked the same. Have you ever looked at the report later on - the other report which was given to you later by the NDPP? Have you ever looked at it to do the comparison? 15

MR BALOYI: The first report, yes. I remember when we were conferring here, and that was more or less at the stage, as the DPP mentioned. I think we conferred on two occasions. The first time around - and then we went away and just refined 20 the charges in light of our discussions and our final deliberations. I think that's when the NDPP said he received a parcel the previous Friday. I think you met on a Monday, and you 25 mentioned that you received a parcel - I think

55

S July/IPID
17.04.15

GEORGE BALOYI

you were not here that Friday, and I think you mentioned that it was delivered to your PA. As we were deliberating, I think you then opened that parcel and it turned out to be that first report, if my memory serves me well. 5

MR MZINYATHI: As I say, I didn't think it was important to have detailed tracking of these events at the time. But one thing is for sure, that when we got the first report we had almost reached a stage where our mind was clear about this 10 thing. In fact GEORGE told me that he didn't even read the report.

MR JULY: We will just demonstrate to you the differences between the two reports.

MR MZINYATHI: Okay, please. 15

MR JULY: We have been asked as well whether there is a prima facie case, which means that we must decide, based on the information which is in the docket - the information that is before the two sets of people - is there a prima facie 20 case to be made against those people. Whether we will be confirming what you have said, or whether we'll be saying there is no prima facie case, that will come later, but we have a view. 45
Already we have our own view about what should 25 have happened.

Adv Baloyi, you then looked at the documents - the docket itself.

MR BALOYI:

Yes. I got the docket from the DPP I think around 22 January or thereabouts. I have been 5 looking for the note that the DPP made, and I can't find it, but he made a note to say:
George, please read the docket and let's discuss it when you have finished. I would say it was around 22 January or thereabouts. I sat 10 slogging through the docket, and it took me a while because in between I do other work. But from time to time, as the DPP mentioned, I would get an impression about the case, we would discuss it, and so it went. I must say, 15 from the beginning, when I received the docket, as the DPP mentioned it had this email report - the second report. But I never had a look at the report, and I mentioned to the DPP that I might be taking a radical view - there is so 20 much made about the first and the second report, but I don't look at reports. That's not evidence. When I read the docket I'm looking for admissible evidence. These reports 25 are not evidence and they are not going to be

LS
SS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

GEORGE BALOVI

tendered in court. You can't tell the court:
Based on this report, I have decided this. And that's why I decided that I wanted to look at the matter with an unencumbered mind, and that's precisely what I did.

5

For our purposes reports help only just to have a record at our offices, in case someone phones after we have made our decision. You can quickly go to the file, and say - it's a summary basically, and it helps us in that way.

10

Firstly, as I said, the reason why I didn't look at it, I wanted to look at it with a clear mind. Secondly, I didn't know what the person who compiled the report was looking at. His summary of the evidence might be defective, and 15 certain issues I would want to look at he might have overlooked. For instances, these reports were authored in January and March last year, and we're looking at the docket almost a year thereafter. Obviously a lot of water would have gone under the bridge in the meantime. So it's sort of updated. But I moved from the premise that I was going to look at the matter with a clear mind, and I read the docket from the front cover to the last page, without 25

20

SS

S July/IPID

SIBONGILE MZINYATHI

looking at the report. Actually to this date I have hardly looked at the report. The only time, when we were deliberating with the DPP before we made our final recommendations, when he mentioned that he received the first report, I said: Out of interest let me see what the final recommendation was. That was after we had already decided on our recommendations. I just said: Out of interest let's see what the recommendation was. I just say coincidentally the recommendation sort of dovetailed, even if not in precise terms, but to a great extent there is a confluence between our recommendation and the report.

I read through the docket, and at some point I felt I had broken the back of the evidence. That was around 23 February. I took much longer. I think the DPP spent about a week or so on the docket, but I took much longer. Mostly I was reading the docket after hours and at home, because during the day it's very busy. I deal with representations, so during the day you get members of the public coming to your office. So the only time to read the docket was after hours and on weekends. On 23 February I called the IO to say I had been looking at the cold facts, and I just needed someone who had lived with this document for a while to give me first-hand information.

5

MR JULY: Who is this IO?

MR BALOYI: I just said I wanted to see if we were on the same page, and whether my understanding of the evidence was on par with his.

MR JULY: Who is the IO?

10

MR BALOYI: It was KHUBA. I called him and said: There are a few statements that I want you to have a look at. That related mainly to the progress reports. There are progress reports in the docket, and I could see that LIEUTENANT GENERAL DRAMAT was copied on those progress reports. I wanted the people who authored those progress reports to make statements, mainly just to see if those progress reports came to the attention of LIEUTENANT GENERAL DRAMAT. We agreed to meet on 3 March. Indeed he came on 3 March, and he was accompanied by one MR VICEROY MAOKA, who is a former prosecutor. Apparently he is in their litigation section.

15

Maybe before I get to that, during the 25

SS

S July/IPID

telephone conversation on 23 February, KHUBA mentioned that they had asked for an opinion from senior counsel, BARRY ROUX. I said: Oh, that's interesting. There were certain issues that were uppermost in my mind, and I said: What was BARRY ROUX's view on this and that? He told me what BARRY ROUX's views were.

MR JULY:

Did he say when he asked for that?

MR BALOYI:

I think he did, and it must have been around January or so, but I can't say that with any amount of certainty. But he did mention that they went to seek opinion of senior counsel. He came on the 3rd, as I mentioned, with MR VICEROY MAOKA. We sat in my office, and I said: Please take me through the docket. What bothered me, was I would have liked to consult with the eye witnesses, the guys from ZIMBABWE, just to sort of assess their credibility and the credibility of their evidence. The only person who could do that was KHUBA, because he took their statements and talked to them. So I wanted to gauge the reliability of their evidence, and also what his impressions were as far as certain evidence is concerned.

You see, the big problem in this case is that one of the important witnesses, COLONEL MADILONGA, has passed on. I debated certain issues with him, just to find out, should we decide on a prosecution, if there is a way that we can get other reliable evidence. I wanted to hear from the horse's mouth how we could close this big gap that has been left by MADILONGA. We went through the docket. The other issue I wanted him to give me clarity on is the version of former Acting Police Commissioner, NTLANTLA MKHWANAZI. He called DRAMAT at some point, and DRAMAT made an admission to him, that yes, he is aware that his guys took some people through the BEIT BRIDGE border post to ZIMBABWE. I wanted more on the circumstances surrounding that admission that DRAMAT made to MKHWANAZI. Actually I asked him to bring his LIEUTENANT COLONEL - I cannot remember his precise rank, but I said to him: Please see if you cannot get GENERAL MKHWANAZI here; let me just get from the horse's mouth what the discussions were with DRAMAT. But he told me that he couldn't get that right. So we went through the docket, and I think I did ask him as to the first report, because at that point we only had the second report. He promised that he would send it, but I never received it. I never received it. After that I made my own notes and met with the DPP. We had our first round of discussions, I told him what my feeling was about the matter, based solely on the hard facts. We debated certain issues, I went away, looked at those issues and presented him with the final recommendations. That's how we came up with these recommendations. Along with our recommendations we sent the NDPP a brief memo motivating why we think a prosecution should be instituted. On 13 March we sent the docket with our recommendations and the memo.

MR MZINYATHI: George, should we not talk about the letter that also (?), because that's very important.

MR BALOYI: Oh yes. On 10 March I was at a conference at EMPEROR's. I think I saw about four or so missed calls on my phone from the IO. That was on 10 March. It was clear to me that he was desperately trying to get hold of me. When I went through my emails in between the conference - I think at lunch, or when we were that I sent him a message to say: I'm in a conference, as soon as I get an opportunity, I will call you. Which I did, just after 16h00, 5 but he didn't pick up. I think I tried him twice or thrice. When I got home, as I was going through the emails, I saw his email, and he was referring to our discussions on 3 March.

But what surprised me, obviously I put certain 10 scenarios to him, to say: What if Scenario A eventuates? Let's say we decide to prosecute X, this is the evidence we have against him, if we decide to prosecute Y, this is the evidence we have against him, and what is your comment? 15
On 10 March he sent me a very strange email, saying he understood the different scenarios I was putting to him to mean that that was the decision. I'm just looking for that email that he sent. 20
I then knocked off an email to him, and said:
Look, you misunderstood me when I was debating the various scenarios. Those were not cast in stone, those were possibilities. We then 25 received a letter - hence I said I don't really

MR JULY: Before that, that email that was sent by KHUBA was questioning the manner - he thought that you had already made up your mind. 5

MR BALOYI: Yes, he referred firstly to the telephone conversation that we had on 23 February. Because as I mentioned, he indicated to me that they obtained an opinion from senior counsel, and I was more interested in knowing what senior counsel said, especially around the fact that MADILONGA had since perished, and how could we fill that lacuna in the evidence. He told me what BARRY ROUX's views were, and on other matters as well. 10 15

Then in this email of 10 March he referred to the telephone conversation we had on 23 February. He said: This is what you said, and he then referred to the discussions we had here in my office on 3 March. He said: This is what you said. He seemed to indicate that I had changed my decision. When I was debating the various scenarios with you, it doesn't mean a firm decision had been taken. All I wanted was for you to tell me what your views are, and what evidence there is to sustain that particular scenario. We then 5 received this letter on 31 March from the NDPP. It appears that these two gentlemen went to the NDPP to complain. Amongst other things they said - I told them there were certain issues that were outstanding, which needed to be 10 investigated: the question of the cellphone records. When we discussed with the NDPP, already he mentioned the death certificates. In my discussion with them we mentioned the possibility of getting a statement from the 15 prosecutor who withdrew the charges in ATTRIDGEVILLE - as to on what basis he withdrew the charges, and was there any Interpol warrant at that stage? So I said: Look, this thing has become urgent, it's in the news, and for 20 the purposes of making a prosecutorial decision now we need to have these outstanding issues completed before we make a prosecutorial decision. and I'll give them to you.

They went to the NDPP, and he said I promised to send them a list of outstanding issues, and I haven't fulfilled my promise. In the email that he sent me on 10 March, he also mentioned 5 that I promised him a list of outstanding issues. I said: I will give it to you as soon as I get a chance to put pen to paper. They went to the NDPP and complained that they hadn't received a minute with the list of 10 investigations. They made sworn statements - both of them - basically saying that I seem to have taken a certain line with the first telephonic conversation on 23 February, and that in the consultation on 3 March I seem to 15 have deviated from that. He also made all sorts of ...

MR MZINYATHI: He went as far as saying that on 23 March (sic) GEORGE went out and came back with a changed view, saying that this is the view of the DPP, 20 which is something that I frowned upon.

MR BALOYI: They say I told them I wanted to consult with the DPP, which is wrong. I went to the bathroom. We started consulting at 09h00, and at about lunchtime I said: Gentlemen, I just 25 need a comfort break. I went to the bathroom, and when I came back I bumped into the DPP and said: The IPID guys are here, I'm consulting with them.

MR JULY: Would there be anything wrong if the DPP had a view? 5

MR BALOYI: Well, I don't think it would be wrong, but what they are saying here is completely incorrect, because they say here I went out, and when I came back I said that DRAMAT must be charged, and that we will have to bite the bullet, something like that. 10

MR JULY: You see, this KHUBA guy is - we discussed it, and I find it very strange that KHUBA would think that an opinion expressed by anybody else about the charging of DRAMAT would have been influenced by things other than what was before him. Because from what was before him at the time, on 22 January, he came to that conclusion: that DRAMAT must be charged. Right? He then says to us he engaged SESOKO. SESOKO is... 15 20

MR TOM: ... the National Head of IPID.

MR JULY: ... the National Head of IPID. He was acting at the time. He engaged SESOKO, SESOKO is a 25 former prosecutor, according to KHUBA, who has legal knowledge, and who influenced him otherwise. He influenced him otherwise, and again the issue is around the cellphone. This new information, we are told, is about 5 cellphones. But what we do know, and what he doesn't know that we know - although we told him that we know - is that this so-called new information was there. It was there even before the influence he claimed 10 happened.

- MR BALOYI: Actually, MOSING, as I mentioned ...
- MR JULY: Yes, he makes reference to the cellphones.
- MR BALOYI: That was in February last year already.
- MR JULY: Yes. 15
- MR BALOYI: He made reference to it.
- MR JULY: So that information about cellphones was there. He then says, as we were talking: You know, now that you are saying it - and that is me now talking to him - I think SESOKO influenced me 20 incorrectly; he was wrong. Knowing what I know now, I would stick with my decision that I took.
- MR BALOYI: The initial decision? LS
- MR JULY: The initial decision. That's what he said. 25

But when we said: Let's go through the record, your own report, where is this new information?
This new information is pieces of two or three statements, a sworn statement from SIBIYA, which does not say anything, from DRAMAT, which 5
does not say anything ...

MR BALOYI: Yes, it's more about his struggle credentials.

MR JULY: And the fact that he did not give any illegal authorisation. He is not disputing the calls that MADILONGA referred to, he does not dispute 10 the photos that were sent to his PA, he does not dispute the meeting that took place congratulating those guys, and he does not dispute having received the success report.

MR BALOYI: Actually now that you mention it, Mr July, I 15 think during our conversation, when he mentioned that the spoke to BARRY ROUX, he said BARRY ROUX amongst others said: Please go back to DRAMAT and let him comment on all these issues, especially that congratulatory meeting, 20 and the meeting with LIEUTENANT COLONEL MKHWANAZI.

MR JULY: But it's very strange that you now would be required to have more information to come to a 25 conclusion, when other people, including him,

LS
SS

S July/IPID

based on the information they had before them, came to a conclusion - whatever conclusion. Why is it not possible for another person to come to some sort of conclusion on the same information that is before him?

5

MR BALOYI:

Yes.

MR JULY:

Why do you need additional information for you to come to a conclusion? Here are the two reports. Let's assume that they both stand, they both have conclusions based on the information that was before you. Remember these things were concluded in February and March so everything that they saw is before you. Why would you then need this outstanding information for you to come to a decision of some sort?

10

MR BALOYI:

Anyway, I made it clear to them that for a prosecutorial decision we could acquire the outstanding information at a later stage. But I felt that those matters could not stand in the way of us taking a decision. We then say those were loose ends that needed to be tied up before we go to trial.

20

MR JULY:

In any event we are meeting with this guy at 12h00. I think we are finished. We are happy with the response we are getting, but just for completeness' sake, so that you know the report - I'm not saying it's going to make any difference, instead it confirms that there is certain information that was removed to justify a different conclusion. The report looks the same, you're right, word-for-word up to page 9. If you go to page 9 ...

MR BALOYI: Of which report? 5

MR JULY: Page 9 of the 18 March report. 10

MR BALOYI: The second one?

MR JULY: Yes. It will be page ...

MR BALOYI: Actually, we had a look with the DPP.

MR JULY: If you look, there is ALFRED NDOBE on page 5. No, I'm on the wrong page, sorry. 15

Page 9.

MR BALOYI: Of the second report?

MR JULY: The second report. If you look at page 9 of the first report and page 9 of the second report, you will see where a paragraph on page 9 of the first report starts with: "He will state", and it's after the paragraph ending with "suspects". 20

MR BALOYI: "General Dramat to assist them in tracing the suspects." 25

MR JULY:

Yes. After that it's supposed to say:

"He will state that he told Superintendent Ncube that he has to verify with his seniors about the arrangement."

5

That paragraph has been removed in the second report. If you go to the second report, where it talks about "in tracing the suspects", after that:

"For the period of two weeks ..."

10

That "For the period of two weeks" on page 9 of the first report is there.

MR BALOYI:

So they omitted this.

MR JULY:

They omitted this because it makes reference to DRAMAT and about the meeting. They have removed that and about having a meeting with the ZIMBABWEANS.

15

MR BALOYI:

"He then called him on his cellphone and explained to him that there are police from Zimbabwe who are intending to have a meeting with General Dramat. Brigadier Makushu told him that he was not aware of the visit ..."

20

It's the senior of MADILONGA. He consulted two of his seniors, I think.

MR MZINYATHI: But what I'm seeing is the statement of MADILONGA.

MR JULY: Yes, it's his statement. You change a person's statement and you don't say why. You can come up with a summary, but if your summary - if the 5 new report, the so-called second report of 18 March is a new report, you will draft the statement. You can write it differently, but here there is a deletion of information. Then you can go to another page ... 10

MR BALOYI: MADILONGA is no more.

MR JULY: You know why it is important for our purposes?
Our purpose is to demonstrate ...

MR BALOYI: Yes, the change.

MR JULY: ... that for you to come to a different 15 conclusion, using the same report, the inconsistency of the evidence and the conclusion - so for you to come to a different conclusion, you need not to have certain evidence or information included in your 20 report. Otherwise you can't have the same report and come to a different conclusion.

MR BALOYI: I'm with you.

MR JULY: Do you get what I'm saying?

MR BALOYI: Yes.

MR JULY: So if you go to page 21 of ...

MR TOM: Page 21 of the first report, and page 20 of the second report, paragraph 5.2.

MR JULY: Yes, 5.2. If you read 5.2, the first paragraph of the success report ends with "AND OTHERS", 5 which is written in capitals. Below that it says:

"The report bears reference 14/02/01 and was signed by Col Leonie Verster. Paragraph 'A1' ..."

10

And then it says:

"General Dramat had a meeting ..."

That is out. If you go to the new report it's not there, it has been deleted.

MR MZINYATHI: And you can see everything that has gone out 15 has got his ...

MR JULY: Yes. So if you look at paragraph 5.3:

"EMAILS BY CAPTAIN MALULEKE."

In the other report it has been left out. No, no, it's there. 20

MR BALOYI: "He sent emails ..."

MR JULY: Yes. Then if you read the one of 22 January, the original one, it says:

"The emails were sent to the PA of General Dramat, Phumla ..."

SS LS 25

S July/IPID
17.04.15

GEORGE BALOYI

But you won't find it there. It's not there.

MR BALOYI: "He sent emails to Zimbabwean Police trying to find out how they travelled back home."

MR JULY: Yes, but the reference to PHUMLA, the PA, is not there. 5

MR BALOYI: It has been deleted.

MR MZINYATHI: This thing has been sanitised.

MR TOM: And then page 22.

MR JULY: "LETTER TO STAKEHOLDERS DATED 20/08/2012: 10
The letter was generated the same day, indicating that in August 2010 General Sibiya and General Dramat went to Zimbabwe to discuss matters of cooperation on cross-border crimes. 15
General Sibiya was appointed ..."

But on page 22 of this it is not there.

MR BALOYI: "LETTER TO STAKEHOLDERS" - let me just see. I think the whole paragraph has been omitted.

MR JULY: It's gone. It's not there. 20

MR BALOYI: You see SIBIYA in the second report has been omitted altogether.

MR JULY: Then you look at the documentary evidence on the first one, and how they dealt with it. Now, to avoid details, they then put 25

SS LS

S July/IFID
17.04.15

GEORGE BALOYI
SIBONGILE MZINYATHI

this thing in blocks. It's not the same, .if you look at it. Do you see at paragraph 5.5 on page 23...

MR MZINYATHI: Of the second report?

MR JULY: Yes, of the second report. If you look at page 5 23 of the first report, the information is not quoting details. They talk for example about:

"REASON FOR 205 APPLICATION

To test the version of the witnesses who are alleged to have seen Major General Sibiya at the crime scene." 10

Then it says:

"Major General Sibiya was never at the crime scenes or planning area as alleged..." 15

But that is not the evidence about SIBIYA. SIBIYA's evidence is stated in the - there are witnesses, there are guys from TOMS ...

MR BALOYI: ... who saw him in a black BMW.

MR JULY: There are guys from TOMS who know SIBIYA. 20

MR BALOYI: Actually you recall that the operation was on two occasions, and on both occasions there are witnesses who say - there are some contradictions, especially with TOMS. Some say no, he was there on the first day, some say 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
17.04.15

GEORGE BALOYI
SIBONGILE MZINYATHI

they are not sure. But the eye witnesses are clear that he came out of his BMW, and they asked him, I think, where to detain them, or something to that effect.

MR MZINYATHI: Yes. 5

MR BALOYI: I mean the evidence is clear there. Then on the second operation his name is also mentioned. We felt even if the cellphone records place him elsewhere, we have real evidence. At a later stage, during trial, we will get a cellphone analyst who will probably give an explanation. I mean, it could be that someone else had his cellphone. That is explainable. 10

MR JULY: But the thing is this, how do you go around the evidence - even in SIBIYA's own evidence he says he was tasked by the national office to provide personnel for this operation. He does not deny the operation. He was tasked by the national office to provide personnel, and he provided the personnel, therefore he knew about the operation. The physical presence we will have to deal with - whether he was involved in the assault or not. But on the other ones of kidnapping and all those things, all that we 15 20 25 need is knowledge, and to provide conditions for that to happen.

SS LS.

MR BALOYI: I mean, he's the head of HAWKS. How can it be said he didn't know about it?

MR JULY: He knew, because there were also SMSs that were not returned by DRAMAT. So if the knowledge was there, and DRAMAT knew, whether DRAMAT was or was not responding to SMSs is neither here nor there. The difficulty arises about his physical presence next to the scene where the crimes of theft and assault happened. That's it. The other ones of kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice - there is no way that he did not know about it.

MR BALOYI: Yes. 15

MR JULY: So there are a number of those cases where the information has been cut.

MR BALOYI: I think that's where we also brought in conspiracy.

MR JULY: So that is where we are. 20

This SOP repeals all the previous SOPs and shall be read and implemented in conjunction with the Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with the SAPS and MPS, Firearm Control SOP, Registers and the Case Flow Chart.

1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this Standard Operating Procedure is to establish policy and methods by which cases should be received, registered, processed and disposed of, while being cognizant of the provisions of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa Act, 1996; the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act 1 of 2011; the South African Police Service Act 68 of 1995, as amended; the Criminal Procedure Act 51 of 1977, as amended, the Regulations promulgated under both the South African Police Service Act and the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act and other relevant legislation.

2. POLICY

It is the policy of the IPID to:

- 2.1. Ensure that investigative assignments to IPID staff are made in a clear and unambiguous manner;
- 2.2. Ensure quality investigations and that investigations are conducted with integrity without fear or favour;
- 2.3. Require investigative staff to provide regular reports regarding investigations to supervisors;
- 2.4. Ensure that supervisors actively manage the investigative activities of their subordinates;
- 2.5. Ensure that investigations are carried out in a coherent and standard method within the IPID;
- 2.6. To comply with the turnaround time agreed to in respect of the investigation of different classes of cases; and
- 2.7. Ensure compliance with established accountability mechanisms.

LS
SJ

INDEPENDENT POLICE INVESTIGATIVE DIRECTORATE

Interview with:

5

GLEN ANGUS

PRESENT: GLEN ANGUS - IPID 10
MR SANDILE JULY - Director, Werksmans

31 March 2015

MR JULY: Good morning. Today is 31 March 2015. Mr Angus, what is your position in ... 15

MR ANGUS: I am the Director of Investigations for IPID in the MPUMALANGA office.

MR JULY: Mr Angus, the reason why I have called you, as I told you off the record, is because during our interview with MR KHUBA he indicated that you were present in a meeting, and we don't know the date of the meeting, where they were discussing - not the content of the report, but you were present when the report was talked about. We don't know the 25 details of that discussion. It was you, MR SESOKO, MR McBRIDE and MR KHUBA. So we have requested to consult with you because your name was mentioned. You will then tell us what transpired in that meeting and where it took place. 5

MR ANGUS:

Okay. My name is GLEN ANGUS. On 5 March 2014, in the late afternoon/evening, I was boarding a flight from NELSPRUIT to JOHANNESBURG. There was a call on my phone 10 from a number I didn't know. I didn't answer the call because I was busy boarding at the time. I switched off my phone, and when I got off the plane in JOBURG there was a WhatsApp message on my phone. The message said: "I'm 15 Mr McBride". Because he had just started at that department, I hadn't met him, didn't know him, or anything like that, and I had never seen before. It was MR McBRIDE. He understood I was coming to PRETORIA for a 20 meeting. There was a Civilian Secretariat for Police meeting that was going to be taking place at BIRCHWOOD, next to the airport in JOHANNESBURG, and I was on my way for that meeting the next day, the 6th. He understood 25

GLEN ANGUS

I was on my way to JOBURG for a meeting, but he wanted to see me at his office at 8:00 in the morning. So I immediately called the number, because I thought it was just good manners to inform him now that yes, okay, and maybe to find out what the reason was for the meeting at the end of the day. 5

I gave him a call, then he just introduced himself on the phone, and said to me: We will discuss it tomorrow morning, but it's something sensitive, you need to be at my office at about 8:00 but I might be a few minutes late. The next morning, on the 6th, I went to our National Office. I was there at about 8:00 - just before 8:00. I'm not quite sure of the time he arrived, but we met - he's got a small boardroom there. We met, and it was just him and I who first met. Basically he again introduced himself, and gave background. Then he said to me he has had a look at my background. I was a little bit surprised, because I mean I had never met him before, and I don't know him. 10 15 20

He had obviously been reading my CV, or looking in my file, or whatever. Maybe it was because 25

SS

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

I was also the lead investigator in that CATO MANOR case in DURBAN, so he obviously knows my background there as well, what I did there and how I was involved. So I didn't think too much of it, but I was also a little bit suspicious. 5
If a new person is telling you that he knows everything about you, then you get suspicious about things. It's just the investigative mind working.

He didn't go into any details of what case it 10 was, or anything like that, he just said to me that there was a sensitive case ongoing, and that he would like to have my input, to have a look at the case and see if everything has been done correctly in the case, have all the steps 15 been covered, so that there are no gaps left, or whatever, in the investigation.

As I said, he didn't go into the content of the investigation. I asked him who was dealing with the case, and then he mentioned to me MR 20 KHUBA. I can't recall him mentioning any other names, but obviously MR KHUBA. MR SESOKO would obviously also then be involved, because he was Head of Investigations, National. When he said 25
MR KHUBA, then we all knew, because it was

LS
SJ

SJuly/IPID

GLEN ANGUS

general knowledge in the Department that KHUBA was busy doing this Rendition investigation thing. But what it entailed, who was being investigated, and whatever, I am honest with you I really had no idea. I didn't have a clue 5 what it was, because I had my own issues to deal with with CATO MANOR, and those things.
So the issue for me was I wasn't even in the slightest interested in what other people were doing, because I had my own work to do, and I 10 was the Acting Provincial Head for MPUMALANGA at the time as well. I had a lot of work on my table, and I wasn't really interested in other people's stuff.
That's basically what he and I discussed in 15 about ten minutes, if that. Five minutes of introductions, and then a few minutes talking about it. Then he called MR KHUBA and MR SESOKO into the meeting. As I mentioned now,
I wasn't really interested or really taking 20 notes. I didn't even make notes, to be honest, and my notes look anything like that. I was just sitting there. He was speaking to SESOKO and KHUBA, and I was basically just a third 25 party in the meeting. He was talking about

LS SF

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

things. He had a file on the table in front of him, but what was in the file, or whatever it was, I wouldn't have a clue. He didn't open it and show me any documents, or anything like that. I never saw any documentation or 5 anything. He was discussing with them how far they are, what is going on, are there reports? As far as I can recall - and I'm being honest about this, I cannot recall exactly - I think KHUBA indicated to him that 10 there is a report, and he has provided it to SESOKO, or he is in the process of providing it to SESOKO, or something like that - along that line.
Then he indicated to them that he wanted me to 15 run with them, just to check that everything was in order. I sensed a slight bit of - you know, in terms of that sort of body language:
What now? Immediately that suspicion.
Unfortunately - and it's not even relevant here 20
- I'm sort of known in the Department as being one of those who is not interested in everyone's issues, and those things. For me it's just that we do the job, we get on with 25
the work, and if you overstep the boundaries,

45

55

SJuly/IPFD
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

we'll tramp on your toes and get on with it. That's me. I'm not one of those who wants to play games, and this, that and the next thing.

MR JULY: And it would have come as a surprise that you had to second guess the work that had been done. 5

MR ANGUS: Exactly. I think that is what the feeling was there. Although at that stage we were all at the same rank, I'm still their junior in terms of them being longer in those ranks than me. So it was them sort of looking at me to say - and they know my attitude as well. They sort of looked at me to sort of say: Okay, but why? I think they perhaps thought I maybe had something with McBRIDE, or whatever, but I don't know McBRIDE. The issue for me was that I was also feeling a little bit uncomfortable about the set up, but at the time, if your new HOD is saying to you: This is what I want you to be doing, I'm saying: Okay, fine, I'm hearing what you're saying, and I'm sort of oh, okay, whatever. After that they were talking, and McBRIDE was asking them questions. As I say, I cannot even remember the details, and

LS

SJ

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

I'm very honest about that.

Then we went up to SESOKO's office, but it was very uncomfortable because they were not really speaking to me either, and I felt very much like the outsider. When we got to the office, they were saying that they don't understand. I said: Look, guys, with all respect ... 5

MR JULY: You went to SESOKO's office?

MR ANGUS: Yes, me, SESOKO and KHUBA. Now they were saying to me that they don't understand. I said: Look, I don't understand either. The boss called me, I had to be here this morning at 8:00, I'm here, he told me I must go with you guys now and have a look at what is going on. I told them straight, and said: I'm uncomfortable about this, and I really don't want to get involved in this. I don't know what it's about, I don't know, but why must I be second-guessing your work, is there something that is wrong, or whatever? They were saying no, and this and that, they were still busy with the investigation, they've still got to do this, there was something about the plotting that needed to be done, the 10 15 20 25

LS
SS

SJuly/IPID

Analyst Notebook, and all of that type of stuff.

Now, I know Analyst Notebook, and I know how those things work, and everything. I said: Okay, it's fine. They said the next morning KHUBA was going to go to the service providers, and he was going to go and collect the information of the plotting of the cellphone numbers, and all of that stuff. I said: No, that's fine, let me go with you, because what else am I supposed to be doing now? 5 10

The next morning - by chance we found out that we were staying at the same hotel near the airport, a TOWNLODGE or CITILODGE because the conference was in that direction. So I didn't speak to them for the rest of the day, I left head office and went to the hotel and carried on. The next morning, just after breakfast, I met KHUBA outside, and I went with him in his car. We went to a place somewhere in JOBURG - I don't even know where it was. On the way there in actual fact we didn't even talk about the case, that I can recall. He spoke about how Analyst Notebook works, and this and that. I didn't want to cut him short, 15 20 25

LS
SJ

SJJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

because I thought he was just trying to ease the tension maybe. So I just left it, as much as I know how it works and what it's all about.

We got to the venue, we went and waited for the chap. The chap who was dealing with the stuff came out, we went into their boardroom, and he had it on a projector screen, or whatever. Then there was something on the table. He was talking about it, I was standing looking - you know, I wasn't really particularly interested in that, I'm being really honest with you.

MR JULY: This is the cellphone analysis?

MR ANGUS: Yes, just saying that this cellphone number was here, you can check it was here at this time, and it was there, on the backdrop of a map, and everything else, plotting it to different areas. Obviously from that there is a lot of investigation that needs to be done, because now you need to go and confirm all of these things.

At that stage the issue for me was, yes, McBRIDE wanted me to see if these people had done everything correctly, or are they doing the things correctly, if I understood him

25

SJ

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

correctly. I mean, I don't want to speculate. Now I was looking at this, and thinking to myself: But these people have still got a lot of work that needs to be done, if it was at this stage, because from Analyst Notebook 5 it's one of your beginning stages of doing your plotting, and everything. There is still a lot of work that needs to be done after that.

My view then was: What am I going to be doing 10 now, I've got a thousand other things to be doing, and I don't think I should be carrying on and getting involved here.

After that we left, and I asked him to drop me 15 at the hotel, where my car was - in actual fact the rental car. I went to the hotel, he dropped me, I picked up the car and I went straight to the venue at BIRCHWOOD. When I got to BIRCHWOOD it was just after 11:00. I went in there, and the people were on a tea break, 20 and I was just chatting to a couple of chaps there. Then I waited and McBRIDE arrived a while later. I'm not sure exactly what time he arrived, but it was just after 11:00 or 25 roundabout there. He arrived, there were some

LS
SJ

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

other people with him, and KHUBA and SESOKO arrived together. I don't know where they met, because I left KHUBA at the hotel.

Then I went and spoke to MR McBRIDE alone. I said to him: Sir, with all respect, you've requested me to look at this stuff, but as far as I'm concerned there is a lot of work that these people still need to do if they've only got the Analyst Notebook now. What other investigation they have done, I don't know, because I haven't looked at the stuff and I don't know what there is, but my view is at this stage let's not have me get involved with them here; let me not be reviewing what they have done or be looking at what they have done, rather let them finish what they need to be doing. Once the investigation is finished, if you feel it needs to be reviewed again, then rather set up a team - and I can be part of that team - of two or three guys, and then together we can look at this whole process and see if everything is kosher, everything is right, the procedures and prescripts, and we'll give you our inputs for you to decide how to take it forward. Whether you agree or disagree is up to you as the HOD. He said he appreciated what I was saying, it was fine, not a problem, and that was it. I said: Thank you very much, and I left, got in the car and went to the airport. On the way to the airport he sent me a WhatsApp about an incident that was happening in CAPE TOWN, where two policemen were allegedly assaulting a chap in the street. Because he said in the WhatsApp he was trying to get hold of SESOKO, but he can't, could I send this attachment to SESOKO. I sent it to SESOKO, and I replied back to him: It's done. After that I never ever spoke to him again for a very long time, unless I was at head office and it was: Hello, how are you? That's it.

In terms of the Rendition thing, that was my involvement. That's it. I don't know - I have never seen reports, I don't know who is what, or whatever, I can only say what I have seen on the news and this and that, and that's it.

MR JULY: Tell me now, from your experience with the reports - and I'm asking ...

MR ANGUS: I don't have a problem giving you an opinion,

45

SS

SJuly/IP10
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

but it's an opinion in terms of work experience.

MR JULY: Yes, in terms of your work experience if you have a report, and the report goes to the NPA, at what stage do you take it to NPA? Do you take a draft report to the NPA or do you take a report on the basis of which you say: There is a prima facie case here for you to prosecute, and anything else - if you need more evidence, investigation can still be done? 5 10

MR ANGUS: No. I guessed you would be asking this question. Basically, if we're busy with a case, maybe a high-profile case, as this was, you might have members of the NPA on the prosecution team. I am going to talk from experience and how I've been doing it, and I'm not sure exactly how they did it with this case. 15

MR JULY: They did, they had an NPA team of two advocates, MOSENG and MOELETSI. 20

MR ANGUS: Okay, MOSENG is very experienced, so I'm sure he would have guided them correctly. Why I'm saying that, the way that I work with my CATO MANOR investigation, is that I have a team of seven advocates in the NDPP's office who are 25

SS

SJJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

involved at the prosecution team. MOSENG was there in the beginning, but then he was just more advising in terms of the POCA Act. But how we worked then, we would take our dockets, go and work on the investigation, and we would 5 then meet and they would be briefed from my side as to where we are, what we're doing and everything else. We would sit with them for a couple of days and go through the dockets and everything else. If they required any sort of 10 a preliminary report, then we would give them a preliminary report. But it's a preliminary report, there are no recommendations on that.

MR JULY: On the preliminary report?

MR ANGUS: On the preliminary report we didn't make any 15 recommendations. Now, my view would be that if it's a draft report or a preliminary report, you would not be making recommendations.

MR JULY: It makes sense.

MR ANGUS: Because at that stage it's just sort of a 20 progress report. You're saying: This is where we are, this is what we have currently. You could perhaps say: This evidence is leading in this direction, but you wouldn't go to the 25 point of really saying that you're recommending

LS
SS

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

1, 2 and 3 against a person. At that stage of your preliminary report - and at any stage of the investigation on high profile - the advocates or whoever from the NPA might ask you: Can you give us an update report, which is basically another preliminary report? Then you would draft a report, following on from your previous one, as to the advancement you've made, and then provide that. But, as I say, again I'm not sure how they were dealing with it and what their briefs were between them and their advocates. 5

But from our side we never ever made recommendations to that effect. The only time we dealt with recommendations was when we reached a point where we realised: Here is what we've got, if we go further, we're going to mess up. Let's rather stop here with what we've got, this is what we've got, and we can prosecute on what we've got, and there is sufficient evidence. Then we make our recommendations. 15

MR JULY:

Tell me, if you then make that recommendation, and it turns out later that there is a piece of information or pieces of information that you 25

SJ

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

did not include in the report where you made the recommendations, how do you deal with that? Does it make that a preliminary report, or does it ...

MR ANGUS:

No, it does not make it - I haven't had that 5 type of situation, but I have had a situation where you have done a final report, or what I call a final report - a DPP Report - and then the DPP might request you to go and look at something additional. Then when you have that 10 brief back from the DPP to say: You need to look at additional stuff in terms of this, then you would go and do that. When you come back, you can take that report and can add that in, but then you indicate it's Report No. 2 of this 15 one of that, so that at the end of the day they are seeing this one is your first report, this one is your second report, which is a follow on of that, but the two reports are basically together. You're not going to take the first 20 report and say it's now a draft, because it's not a draft. It was your report at that stage, and if there are additions that must be added, you add those additions to it, and then ... 25

MR JULY:

... you make reference to it?

LS
SS

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

- MR ANGUS: You make reference to it, yes. That is how we have dealt with those type of situations, but I have never had a situation where it's a draft and then I have put in a second ...
- MR JULY: I think it confirms what we know. I'm not sure 5 if you know a COLONEL MOUKANGWE, who said exactly that, to say they met with the NPA and gave them a report, which was a final report. And exactly what you are saying, certain issues were raised about the cellphones, because there 10 was this evidence that this SIBIYA guy assaulted some of the people who were arrested. The question was: How did he assault these people if the cellphone says he was in PRETORIA? 15
- MR ANGUS: Which makes sense, yes.
- MR JULY: That led them to say: No, no, go and look at this.
- MR ANGUS: Was his cellphone with someone else, did he have his cellphone with him for 24 hours, and 20 can that be confirmed and proved?
- MR JULY: Yes.
- MR ANGUS: Obviously that would be following up on information the DPP would be requiring, for 25 them to assess the report. Then you would

LS

SS

SJJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

obviously give feedback on that as well. Whether you do it in an additional report, or whether you're going to do it in an update of that same report or whatever - but yes, it depends on what your brief was with the DPP at that time. 5

MR JULY: That's fine. I was satisfied with what you told me over the phone, when we discussed it, but like I said when a person comes here and says I would like you to talk - we don't want to be accused of: We told them to go and speak to so-and-so and they decided not to. 10

MR ANGUS: You're a hundred percent correct in that. I mean, I've been doing investigations for many, many years. You're a hundred percent correct, and I do the same with my investigators as well. If a name is in the statement somewhere, you will interview that person, whether the person adds value or not. Then you make a note in the diary to say: This person is not adding value, and this is basically what they said. So you're a hundred percent correct, and I don't have an issue with that, because that's exactly what I said as well, after I had spoken to you. And I'm going to be honest, I phoned 25

LS
SS

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

my Legal Services, and said: Guys, this is what I've been told. No, they are going to come back. I spoke to my boss in the office as well, and said to her: Look, this is the situation, I am going to JOBURG to go and meet with these people, because at the end of the day I do not want a situation arising where they are reporting to the Minister, and they turn around and tell the Minister: No, Mr Angus does not want to cooperate. 5 10

Unfortunately I'm not one of these people - I've said it, and it's on record as well - I'm not someone who plays games. I'm serious about my job, and I'm not going to be pulled into other people's issues, or whatever. I'm not saying there are agendas, or whatever, but I'm not involved and I don't want to get involved in other people's things. For me it's you give me my job, I take the job, I've got the mandate and I go and do my work. I'm not interested in little side shows, because side shows don't take you anywhere, they just distract you along the way. 15 20

So the issue for me was that I needed to come here and get the facts on the table about what 25

LS
SJ

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

my involvement was. Otherwise it's going to be hanging in the air the whole time: Your name is mentioned, what did you do and where did you fit in?

- MR JULY: Can I just confirm the dates? 5
- MR ANGUS: It was the 5th when I got the call.
- MR JULY: On the 5th?
- MR ANGUS: The 5th. It was in the evening, but I'm not sure of the exact time. As I say, I've changed phones since then and the message is gone now. 10
- MR JULY: This would have been 5 March?
- MR ANGUS: 5 March 2014. It was in the evening. I'm trying to think what time my flight was. My flight was roundabout 5:00 or 5:30 and I think we were a little bit delayed. But you can say 15 roundabout 6:00 or so.
- MR JULY: And then you met with him on the 6th?
- MR ANGUS: I met with him on the 6th. I was at his office at about 8:00, and I'm not sure if he arrived at roundabout 9:00 or so, because I remember 20 his PA still saying he was running late. I'm not quite sure of the exact time, but then the rest of the day, after I had left - because it wasn't long. I think if we were in his office 25 for about fifteen minutes when KHUBA and SESOKO

LS

Sj

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

arrived it was long. If I was in MR SESOKO's office for more than ten or fifteen minutes it would have been long. After that I had things that I was doing at head office, and then I left. So I'm not sure of the exact timing and time spans to that, but I know on the 7th, when I flew back, I went to the airport and got an earlier flight. Because I wasn't going to go into the conference three-quarters of the way through, I was going to be wasting my time, and I had my deputy there anyway, so he could just come and brief me. Then I decided I would catch an earlier flight, and I went back to the airport. It was at about 12:00 or so that I was at the airport and I got an earlier flight, and went back. 5 10
15

In a nutshell that's exactly what my involvement was. That's why I said to you on the phone as well that I'm surprised that people are saying they heard you, or whatever. I'm surprised. I'm really, really lost. But if it helps you in some way ... 20

MR JULY:

No, no, it does. Whether it adds value, it is important that you were called, and we will note exactly that, that there is nothing much 25

SJ

SJuly/IPID
31.03.15

GLEN ANGUS

except that you were called, you have never seen the reports, you just saw the file, but you don't know the content of the reports.

MR ANGUS:

Even the file that McBRIDE had on his table was not a thick file, it was just a thin little 5 file. So what was in there, I really would not know. I don't want to speculate. The issue for me is rather just to speak to the facts. What he wanted me to do, how - I really don't know, I never asked, and I just felt I had to 10 get out of this thing. I had other things I was dealing with, that I felt were my priority, and I really didn't have time to be caught up in something else that was going to distract me. I mean, this CATO MANOR is keeping me busy 15 24/7 and I really don't have time to ...

MR JULY:

Are you still busy with that?

MR ANGUS:

Yes, the people were in court yesterday. We've got 23 June as our next date. But you see, you mustn't believe what is in the media. 20

Interview with:

INNOCENT KHUBA

PRESENT: MR INNOCENT KHUBA - IPID
 MR SANDILE JULY - Director, Werksmans 10
 MS KERRY BADAL - Associate, Werksmans
 MR KWAZI BUTHELEZI - Candidate Attorney

23 April 2015

MR JULY: Today is 23 April, and in this matter it is 15 me, SANDILE JULY, KERRY BADAL, KWAZI BUTHELEZI and MR KHUBA. We have called MR KHUBA to deal with the contradictions between his statement and what we heard from McBRIDE. MR SESOKO appears on both reports as a signatory to the 20 reports. Maybe, Mr Khuba, we must start with this, and here is the issue. MR McBRIDE said one of the reasons why he had to sign - ordinarily he doesn't sign the report, and it makes sense that he does not sign, and the act 25 makes no provision for him to sign. He says one of the reasons why he signed is because it

SS 65

S July/IPID

INNOCENT KHUBA

involved two provinces, so he had to sign the report. Was that what you understood was the reason why he signed?

MR KHUBA: That reason was never raised with me. My understanding was that he signed because he was the current head of the department. Even though there was nothing previously that a person would sign, he said he wanted to sign. 5

MR JULY: But why did MR SESOKO sign? 10

MR KHUBA: MR SESOKO signed because he was appointed head of investigation, he was the Acting Head of Investigation. The rendition was about the investigation. As the Acting Head of Investigation - and I do not know, but probably the fact that he participated in the issue of the second report, that might be the one. 15

MR JULY: So he participated in the report, and would McBRIDE have signed that report had he not participated in the report? 20

MR KHUBA: If McBRIDE could have found that report done, it would be very difficult - I think he signed because he knows what was in the report. 25

MR JULY: Can you explain the issue around the docket?
On 7 March, you and MR ANGUS - and maybe before we deal with 7 March, MR McBRIDE started when, on the 3rd?

MR KHUBA: Yes, I think it was on the 3rd. 5

MR JULY: 3 March. Then who gave you a call to say that MR McBRIDE wanted the report?

MR KHUBA: It was MR SESOKO.

MR JULY: MR SESOKO?

MR KHUBA: Yes. 10

MR JULY: You emailed the report to MR SESOKO?

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: You don't know whether MR SESOKO gave it to McBRIDE or not?

MR KHUBA: No, I do not know. 15

MR JULY: But you met with McBRIDE the day after you emailed the report?

MR KHUBA: That's correct.

MR JULY: Which was the 5th?

MR KHUBA: Yes. 20

MR JULY: When you met with him on the 5th, what did you discuss?

MR KHUBA: We discussed the report. He wanted to know - he wanted me to outline the process of investigation from the beginning to the end, 25 and I explained to him. He had concerns. At various stages of my investigation, which I explained to him, he asked questions, and I will tell you where. When I indicated to him that I investigated the case with the assistance of Crime Intelligence, then he asked: Why were you involving Crime Intelligence, because IPID is independent? I indicated to him that I was given instructions by the then Acting Executive Director. He wanted to know exactly how the instruction was given, and I explained to him that the then Acting Executive Director said she thinks that because this investigation was dealt with by Crime Intelligence, and they brought this case, I must rope in one of the investigators. She specifically mentioned him by name, saying that is COLONEL MOUKANGWE.

MR JULY: When you were discussing this with him, did you get the sense that this person didn't know anything about the report, or were you discussing a report that a person had read or had knowledge of?

MR KHUBA: I could pick up that he had knowledge of it.

MR JULY: So after the 5th there was another day, which was the 6th.

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: You had another meeting on the 6th? 5

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: That meeting on the 6th was the meeting where it was you, SESOKO, ANGUS and McBRIDE in one room?

MR KHUBA: Yes. 10

MR JULY: You don't know about the meeting between ANGUS and MR McBRIDE, because ANGUS said he had a meeting with MR McBRIDE shortly before that meeting?

MR KHUBA: It seems, if I remember well, I found ANGUS there inside, sitting. We went there and sat, and that is where we continued. 15

MR JULY: What was discussed in that meeting?

MR KHUBA: What was discussed was the issue of - we started carrying on from what I said previously. 20

MR JULY: Which was the previous day?

MR KHUBA: Yes, and I felt as if MR McBRIDE wanted other people to know, to be briefed. Most especially on the issue of Crime Intelligence, 25

S July/IPTD

he wanted me to walk on that path and emphasise, and basically issues like those ones he raised. I cannot remember whose evidence was discussed, but I remember very well on the 205 of LEBEYA, to say: How are you connecting this person? Now, I indicated to him that I was connecting LEBEYA not because he was a suspect. For me, if I find records of cellphones, and you have called this person regularly, I need to go to that cellphone and do a 205 to check whether you are friends, or was there something that was happening, especially around that time. He was not quite fine with that, but I explained to him, to say: These are the issues.

MR JULY: But it then means that he had had sight of the report when he was asking those questions.

MR KHUBA: That's why I say he might have, because even the previous day he had something in front of him, and I did not really look at it. Because you know, our boardroom table, if you sit there and somebody is there - I never knew what he was looking at.

MR JULY: On 7 March, which was a Friday, you and ANGUS went to JOHANNESBURG.

MR KHUBA:

Yes.

MR JULY:

To the office of the DPP, SOUTH GAUTENG.

MR KHUBA:

Yes.

MR JULY:

What was your reason for going there?

5

MR KHUBA:

It was because when we discussed on the 6th, he asked where the docket was.

MR JULY:

Who asked?

MR KHUBA:

It was McBRIDE. I told him that on the docket I couldn't get information, because I had already sent an email on the 28th. The docket was with the DPP, GAUTENG, and I was given the name of the person, and they said it was ADVOCATE VAN ZYL. I indicated to him that I was looking for the docket from the previous advocate who was dealing with the case, ADVOCATE MOSING. Then he indicated: If you still have that evidence, you still have to go and collect the docket.

10

The question was where? Because the following day there was a very important summit which I was supposed to attend near BOKSBURG. But we said no, we were not going to attend. We were given an opportunity to say: Don't attend, go straight. On the issue of ANGUS - I don't remember whether we discussed with him that he must accompany me, because after that we went to SESOKO's office, where the deliberation continued. I cannot say that we had another meeting, it was just a deliberation about what was discussed. 5

MR JULY: ANGUS seemed to remember that, that after McBRIDE's meeting you went to SESOKO's office.

MR KHUBA: Yes, and we discussed it, but it was not another meeting. We just sat there discussing what had happened. I still remember very well ANGUS said to me: There is something that is wrong. What is wrong? I said: When we were talking, the boss could not look me in the eyes. I don't know, maybe it's not really a (?), because he would ask questions when he was just looking there. After that I said: Angus, I don't interpret things, it's fine, that is that, but tomorrow do you want to accompany me? He said yes. We didn't agree on the issue at the time, he said I want to leave at 04h00 or 05h00 because we wanted to beat the traffic. Fortunately we were staying in the same hotel. Early in the morning at 10 15 20 25

04h00 or 05h00 in fact we used his hired vehicle, and I left my car. We drove straight to VAN ZYL. We arrived there, we found ADVOCATE VAN ZYL to be a very friendly guy, we talked to him, and were laughing.

5

MR JULY:

ANGUS says he didn't even know that the gentleman was VAN ZYL, he went for his own CATO MANOR matter, and he was walking down the stairs to check the actual floor you were on, he saw you with this gentleman, you had documents with you which he didn't even know was a docket, but he was signing that those bundles of documents were handed over to you. He was a witness to the handing over.

10

MR KHUBA:

Okay, so let me tell you this. I'm not really going to say that I'm going to assess whether what he says is true or is not true, but I am forced to say this. I know exactly, when we went there, he went specifically with me regarding the same issue on Rendition. There was no CATO MANOR in the picture. We never went to any office. Even if you check the register for that day, there was no other advocate consulted by MR ANGUS except for VAN ZYL. We had the name of VAN ZYL. Now, in fact there was this thing - you know, when a new boss comes in, MR ANGUS was also bragging about the issue that: The boss spoke with me for over forty-five minutes. It was like an issue of disclosure.

15

5

MR JULY: Do you remember what he said?

MR KHUBA: Somewhere and somehow, because he wanted to go with me, I still remember my deputy, who is very close to ANGUS because they are on the same level, and I said: I'm going with - 10 because I was briefing him, he's very close to my deputy. I was briefing him: I'm going with ANGUS. Oh, I know, that's fine, he's just going to check on what is going to happen; maybe the boss sent him to check (?). 15
I said: No, I don't have a problem, there's nothing wrong. I did not want to go with him, but I felt he had been placed there to be able...

MR JULY: Did he tell you about his discussion with the 20 previous matter?

MR KHUBA: No, he did not.

MR JULY: He told us that the reason why he was called was because he was tasked to check whether you 25 guys - and you in particular - had done the right thing.

LS
SS

MR KHUBA: In fact, I realised that from the onset, because even though there was a little discussion about CATO MANOR when I was there in the meeting of the 6th, the main issue was the Rendition. The way he was going on, saying how he performed a better investigation than what I had done on Rendition - you see, I never wanted to comment on it. I kept quiet, and I said I was going to leave it like that. When we were there, my deputy said: Hey, that person was working for this other unit in the SAPS - I don't know what it's called, it's not Crime Intelligence, but they normally gather information.

MS BADAL: CIG?

MR KHUBA: Yes, I think CIG. They gather information.

MS BADAL: CRIME INTELLIGENCE GATHERING.

MR KHUBA: He indicated to me: You need to watch out. He used a word in Pedi - Hey, my boss, that (Sepedi) to indicate that he is going to listen to what you are saying and is going to report to the boss. Check what you're saying, he's my friend, I know. I went there. In fact, as a Christian, I decided when I was driving with him I was praying in the car. I was praying, I was praying, I was praying, and we arrived there. Even when we arrived at the office of VAN ZYL, I decided that I was not going to talk much, he will talk. I was 5 happy, because as a white person I felt that this person would be able to have a connection with him. He explained the purpose, and I was just sitting there.

LS

MR JULY: Did he say what the purpose was? 10

MR KHUBA: He said: Look we want the docket back. Then he indicated - I think they raised the issue of new evidence that needs to be attached.

MR JULY: He raised the issue of new evidence? 15

MR KHUBA: Yes, he raised the issue of new evidence.

MR JULY: According to you was there any new evidence that needed to be attached?

MR KHUBA: You know, I think that is subject to interpretation. To tell you we needed the 20 docket to be collected is another issue. What I did, after we had collected the docket - I even talked to McBRIDE and said: Listen, McBRIDE - no, in fact, the worst situation was 25 that I couldn't talk to McBRIDE. I still

Sj

S July/IPID
23.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

remember now, I spoke to SESOKO, and said:
Why can't I attach all these things and return
the docket?

MR JULY: What were you attaching, those statements?

MR KHUBA: Yes, those statements and whatever was not 5 there, attaching them. At that time I had not yet made copies, and I decided to make copies of another duplicate report, because he said to me: Whatever you have I want in my office
- this is McBRIDE. Copies - even copies of 10 the docket. So I said: Okay, that's fine.
I went and I gave him a copy, but my interpretation was that it was done mainly for security reasons. But as an investigator I did not have a single thing, except I had the 15 external hard drive. That external hard drive only had the expert report, so it was not part of the documents and I just kept it. Then when we collected the docket - the fact that he signed the docket as true - who was 20 carrying? I was the carrying boy that day.
I was carrying the docket all the time, and whatever, but I think he assisted me with other files. We went back to the car and 25 drove, and while we were driving, I reminded him that the guy from the telephone records gave me something, but he still had something that he had not given me. He gave me the report between the docket being sent to MOSING and the docket being collected from JOBURG. 5

SJ

S July/1PID

But he said it was not complete, he still had something that he wanted to iron out, so let's pass by. We went there, and then he gave me the record, including the disk that I gave you of the cellphone records. He gave me 10 everything, and then we packed it, and we went straight to McBRIDE. I think he wanted the one report. We went and briefed him, while we were having this ...

MR JULY: So you went to ... 15

MR KHUBA: Yes. When we briefed him, I never opened my mouth. It was ANGUS who was talking.

MR JULY: That now we have the docket?

MR KHUBA: Now we have the record, and this is it. It was fine. After that ... 20

MR JULY: Did you give him the docket there, or did you take it to the office?

MR KHUBA: No, I took the docket to the office. In fact, after we got all the files, we removed them from the hired vehicle and put them into my 25

SJ

S July/IPID
23.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

vehicle. Because we first arrived at the hotel - they gave us the record, and after that we drove together, but in different cars, to the venue. We arrived at the venue, we found him and then we briefed him. After we briefed him - and he was the one who was doing the briefing, which was quite okay, and I never said much - from there, that was when we started with that process that I told you about. 5 10

MR JULY: After, now the record is in the office, you take it to McBRIDE's office?

MR KHUBA: The docket?

MR JULY: Yes.

MR KHUBA: No, the docket firstly went to SESOKO. When we were at SESOKO's office, we started to do the updates, and we opened the docket and did this and that, and that, and there were continuous - most of the meetings, in terms of the report, were not done when I was there. 15 20

MR JULY: When you looked at those warning statements, in your view did they warrant the change of the report that was given on 22 January? 25

MR KHUBA: Probably the question should be: If you alone 25

SS

S July/IPID
23.04.15

were to review that, would you have changed it, the answer is simply no. But because you have people who are giving you inputs to say: This, that and that. And when a person with a prosecutorial background says: Can you 5 prove that, as an investigator you start thinking that you can be a seasoned investigator, but when you come to how you weigh evidence ...

MR JULY: But, Mr Khuba, didn't you guys discuss the 10 fact that: We are now discussing a report which has been submitted to the NPA as the final report, and the reason why it went to the DPP in GAUTENG was for him to determine whether to charge or not to charge - did you 15 at one point discuss that?

MR KHUBA: No, that was never part of that. But you see, my understanding of it is that some of the answers would never emanate at the time when things happened, but long after that, because 20 you start to understand your boss better. Because when I started to deal with him on certain matters, I said: Wow. I think there was something that I said off the record, to say: If you ask me whether he was suitable 25

SJ LS

S July/IPID
23.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

for the organisation, I would have my view. I cannot say now, but I would have my view. But the truth of the matter is to some of these things you cannot really have an answer when things are happening. For me, let alone 5 the issue of rank, to have the confidence that could have pierced through the layer of political appointee to say: You can go wherever you want, but this is what I stick with, it wouldn't have been possible. And I 10 was happy, because when you sign a report the last signature is an approval, it's not a recommendation, it's an approval. So the last person at the bottom of pile, that's why it's (?) , is the one who takes everything. You 15 know, I was happy that he was signing this report. I had to sign because I had to sign, and I think I need to put that into context. I had to sign because I had to sign, but I was happy that he was signing the report. Whether 20 it was the norm is a different ball game, but I was happy that he signed.

MR JULY:

Were you happy that he signed because of the changes in your conclusion? Is it because you were not happy with the conclusions that you 25

LS

S July/IPID
23.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

reached?

MR KHUBA:

To tell you various facts, whether I was happy or not happy, for me is a different thing, and I want to come to that point so that I can clarify it for you, because when you find a situation where a particular decision is taken by the person of authority, the issue of your feelings disappears. Do you know what I'm saying? Because for me, when I do an investigation I do not have vested interests. However, I would want my efforts to be put to good use, but simply because McBRIDE signed and owned to whatever, I was happy to say: Now I'm fine. But that was not being happy about the context, I was happy that he was taking responsibility for the report. I cannot express my view about whether I was happy or not happy about the content.

MR JULY:

You seem to be suggesting that by the time that you were finalising the report you got a sense that a decision had already been made as to how the report should look.

MR KHUBA:

Yes, that one I'm going to correct, on the basis that if it was a once-off, but this report was commuting, so it was like a work-in-progress. You have this, you do this, you go back and you go back. I was only happy when I heard that the boss is actually happy. The reason why I was happy was because I was not going to sit behind the computer. 5

SS LS

S July/IPID

MR JULY:

Let me tell you the difficulty that we sit with, and you can help us with that difficulty. In the absence of help from you we are left with no option but to say you have three people who are dealing with the report. If there is no-one who owns or who is able to say: The information in the report was deleted - and make no mistake, I accept it's possible that you didn't know that it was deleted - but when out of the three people who dealt with the report none of them know about the content or information that was deleted, it's a problem. It's all of them. 10 15 20

MR KHUBA:

And when you asked that day, the only question that caught me off guard, out of all your questions in my first interview, was the one about that, because I knew nothing about it. To tell you honestly, it was a surprise. I 25

SJ ls

S July/IPID
23.04.15

would understand why it probably happened that way. There might be different explanations. I never worked on that report on my laptop, I emailed it to MR SESOKO.

MR JULY: And when you created it, you printed also from 5
SESOKO's computer?

MR KHUBA: Yes, we were working on that. It seems that 10 what was done after the final product, which the boss was happy about - and that is when SESOKO emailed to me a copy for my record purposes ...

MR JULY: And then he said: The boss is happy with this 15 one?

MR KHUBA: With this one. If I remember, and I cannot 20 say with certainty, the day we signed, he phoned and said: Now when are you going to come so that we can sign the report? Whether we did sign on that, I cannot remember, but I think specifically when I was called was that we should sign the report. Then I said: I'm 25 going to be in PRETORIA, because I was still doing some work around PRETORIA. It was printed and I think he said: You can read through it and check whether you are happy. Even the most thorough person, when you have gone through that, you can tell me what is it that you are going to be scrutinising, because the word is that your boss is happy about it, and it is someone higher than any mistake you can find in the report. For me it was all 5 about the issue that the boss was happy about it. I could not detect whether something was taken out, I could not detect whether there was an addition which was not part of what I typed in, I could not detect anything. There 10 was nothing I could detect.

S July/IPID
23.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

MR JULY: McBRIDE signs on the 9th. You guys signed on 18 March, he signs it on the 9th, and he said he signed the report that was already signed by you. Were you there when he was given the 15 report?

MR KHUBA: I was not there when he signed.

MR JULY: Now, on 13 February MOSING gave CHAUKE the docket, and attached to that docket was also the report. 20

MR KHUBA: Mmm.

MR JULY: For him to decide on the merits of whether to charge or not to charge.

MR KHUBA: Mmm.

MR JULY: CHAUKE reads the document and he gives it to 25

VAN ZYL.

MR KHUBA:

Yes.

MR JULY:

Before VAN ZYL could even read the documents, you and ANGUS come and collect them, and the report dated 22 January was part of that docket? 5

MR KHUBA:

Yes.

MR JULY:

So the question is what did you do with that report which was attached to the docket?

MR KHUBA:

To tell you that as fact, I cannot remember. 10
I know that when we send dockets the report is part of "B". That docket, Section B was a separate lever arch file, because it had a lot of things talking about the Extradition Act, and what, what. It was a thick thing, but it had that part. 15
When we did a review, the concentration on a (?), which is a separate lever arch file. That file had another sub-lever arch file, which I think is seven or eight. Whether they removed that part or kept 20 that part, I do not know. But my commonsense is that they would have removed it, because they wouldn't send it with it.

MR JULY:

So who took the docket to the NDPP then? LS

MR KHUBA:

My role ended when I signed that report, in 25

SJ

S July/IPID
23.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

the absence of McBRIDE but in the presence of SESOKO. When they took that docket - in fact when it was handed in, I was told that I must not keep anything, and it was indicated precisely that nothing will be in SESOKO's 5 office, but in McBRIDE's office. In fact, when the Minister started this issue of referencing or requesting the copies of the docket ...

MR JULY: Yes, somewhere in August. 10

MR KHUBA: ... MATHENJWA called me, and MATHENJWA went with me, and we were very close when we were doing CATO MANOR. MATHENJWA called me, but because of all this, suddenly the issue of Rendition and the boss, I decided that I 15 needed to inform him. Probably I may be diplomatic in how I tell him. MATHENJWA would call me and say: Khuba, tell me what happened? You know, he was suspicious, but when MATHENJWA called me: I'm in the hospital 20 now, but I wanted that opportunity to start to think, that whatever I say can come back to me. I was going to tell MATHENJWA there was no more friendship now, it's formal. I'm 25 telling him in terms of the procedure that was

SS

S July/IPID
23.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

followed. I said: No, Mathenjwa, you can speak with the boss, don't speak with me.
Then he said: Okay, I'm going to request through the Minister. I went to McBRIDE and said: I received a call from Mathenjwa, one 5 of the reference group, I think he will send you the letter that is going to come through also from the Minister, because he would want to get in detail the facts of the case, so if I'm explaining to him, it will not really make 10 sense. That was when McBRIDE wrote a letter to the Minister: One of the members of the reference group called Mr Khuba and even said to Mr Khuba that he will tell you to write a letter to me. That is when I started to say: 15 Hey, no, now I'm dead. When a point came, because I once spoke to the Minister, and when I spoke to the Minister when the Minister wanted to know: Are you sure you are cooperating, I spoke with the Minister, but 20 SESOKO and McBRIDE did not know that I had spoken to the Minister. I said to SESOKO:
The Minister's PA called me. Of course she called me, she did call me, but I wanted to 25 leave the Minister out of it. I never mentioned anything. I said: If he finds out later, it's fine, but I'm not going to tell him, because tomorrow he is writing to the Minister: You speak with my people behind my back. You see, those type of things. So all of these things I started to think. 5

SS

MR JULY: VAN ZYL says - well, we didn't speak to VAN ZYL, but there is a document we were given by CHAUKE. Somewhere around 18 June he called you about the docket, and you told him: No, the docket has been given to the NDPP. He called MOSING, and MOSING said: No, I don't have the docket. Then he called you again, and then you confirmed: No, no, no, the docket is with the NDPP, and there was no intention of returning it to you in any event. 10 15

MR KHUBA: Of ...?

MR JULY: In any event there was no intention of returning it to you.

MR KHUBA: The docket? 20

MR JULY: The docket. So the docket was then kept by the NDPP. But the problem with that, is that docket was allocated by the NDPP to CHAUKE.

MR KHUBA: Yes.

MR JULY: But you won't know how this docket ended up 25

SS LS

S July/IPID
23.04.15

INNOCENT KHUBA

with the NDPP, because you say it was sent there by McBRIDE?

MR KHUBA:

Yes. I think on that part, in fact when VAN ZYL called me, I even tried to revert back to MR SESOKO, because even at that time me and my boss were not sure. Even if you can check my telephone records, I don't think I have called McBRIDE more than four times since he started. Now, when I was called by VAN ZYL, I indicated to him - because I was told that he was taking it, and I was excluded from that club. I'm telling you that they had numerous meetings with the NDPP - numerous meetings. I do not know how they met, but I was never part of even a single meeting.

5

15

MR JULY:

That's fine. Like we said, you are at the centre of this thing, and that's the only reason ...

MR KHUBA:

But today it's more fruitful.

Office note

IN RE: SO-CALLED RENDITION MATTER (PROJECT X)-DIEPSLOOT CAS 390/07/2012

DPP JHB REF: 9/2/4/1 (2014/236)

1. BACKGROUND -TIMELINE

- a. Received internal memorandum from the Head Special Projects Division, Office of the NDPP dated 14 February 2014. The exact date of receipt is unclear as no official stamp or date had been affixed to this effect.
- b. According to office note by adv Van Zyl SC this must have been late in February 2014.
- c. Before any decision could be taken by this office messrs Khuba and Angus from IP/D collected all the dockets from Van Zyl SC on 7 March 2014 and signed for receipt thereof.
- d. On 18 June 2014 Van Zyl SC phoned mr Khuba who told him that his head mr McBride had instructed him that the dockets must be returned to the NDPP and it was duly done
- e. On 23 June 2014 Van Zyl SC once again spoke to mr Khuba who informed him that it was never his intention to return the dockets to him.
- f. On 27 June 2014 adv Mosing of the Special Projects Division of the Office of the NDPP told Adv Van Zyl SC that the dockets were never returned to him.
- g. These series of events were then brought to the attention of the NDPP by letter dated 3 July 2014.
- h. On 20 August 2014 the NDPP officially responded to the letter by the DPP Adv Chauke, by apologizing for the late response and indicating that he, the NDPP, is in the process of considering the matter and that Adv Chauke may close his file.
- i. On 31 March 2015 the NDPP wrote another letter to the DPP informing him that he had subsequently referred the matter to the DPP North Gauteng who recommended that the accused including Dramat and Sibiba be prosecuted for inter alia kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice. The letter of the DPP Pretoria is dated 6 March 2015.
- j. This letter of the NDPP inter alia states that the matter is now returned to Johannesburg because the matter now resorts under the jurisdiction of the DPP Johannesburg since 1 December 2014 as from that date Diepsloot falls under Johannesburg North (Ranburg) in terms of Government Notice No 861 of 31 October 2014. The NDPP also indicated that further investigation should be conducted in the matter.
- k. On 1 April 2015 the Head: National Prosecution Services (NPS) send a letter to the DPP Johannesburg to conduct specific further investigation.
- l. On 10 April 2015 Adv Chauke requested me to advise him on certain aspects after I have looked at the documentation in this matter.

2. It is clear that this matter is being regarded as a "hot potato" and therefore the case is being sent from pillar to post.

NI. AA
SJ 65

- a. There are certain legal issues that need to be address before we even go to the facts of the matter.

4. DISCUSSION OF MATTER

a. JURISDICTION

- i. It is trite law that jurisdiction cannot be conferred retrospectively.
- ii. When these crimes were committed during 2011 all these crimes resorted under the jurisdiction of the DPP North Gauteng. Even the court appearances were done at Atteridgeville falling under the DPP Pta's area of jurisdiction.
- iii. The demarcation altered the position as from 1 December 2014. It does not alter the jurisdictional position prior to 1 December 2014, which to my mind remains with the DPP Pretoria. This fact cannot now conferred jurisdiction on the DPP Jhb for all crimes committed prior to 1 December 2014 especially where decisions were previously take by the DPP Pta or prosecutors resorting under him.
- iv. Furthermore the majority of crimes were committed under the jurisdiction of Pretoria and not Johannesburg. It furthermore seems that crucial phone calls implicating Dramat, were also made between Beit Bridge and Pretoria, falling within the jurisdiction of Pretoria.
- v. We must also clearly distinguish between Court jurisdiction and Prosecutor jurisdiction. The best way to explain this is by way of example. The Regional Court jurisdiction is in accordance with the boundaries of the provincial province, Gauteng. This means for instance that it will be within the jurisdiction of the court being the Regional Division of Gauteng (meaning the whole province). On the other hand the prosecutors' jurisdiction has been divided with reference to the seats of the two High Courts in this province of Gauteng. The fact that the DPP of Pta is appointed in the provincial division of the High Court, does not give him more or concurrent jurisdiction over the cases falling within the jurisdiction of the DPP of Jhb being the Local Division. These areas are two distinct areas and the DPP Pta cannot overrule decision taken by the DPP of Jhb merely because he is appointed at the Provincial Division of the High Court in Pta. If that would have been the case, it would never have been necessary for the DPP Pta to request permission to centralize matters from Jhb within his area of jurisdiction. Therefore it means that a specific court might have jurisdiction to do the trial based on the principal of concurrent jurisdiction but that the prosecution's jurisdiction must also be established through with reference to the specific area of jurisdiction. There is no such thing as "concurrent jurisdiction" with reference to the jurisdiction of a DPP. In the old days there were indeed instances where two cities would have concurrent jurisdiction. However at that stage only one DPP or Attorney-General was appointed for the whole area and the smaller area was being controlled by a Deputy who fell under the control and supervision of the AG of DPP. That is a totally different

N1
SJ LS

985

RJM-0881

789 scenario than the current one. It is therefore my opinion that the DPP Pta has no concurrent jurisdiction on any matters falling under the DPP Jhb and that the DPP Jhb is totally independent from any interference by his Pretorian colleague.

b. FUNCTUS OFFICIO

- i. I am also of the view that a prosecutor can very seldom resort to a claim of being functus officio. Prosecutors are frequently taking decisions and by virtue of this they can alter their decision at any stage, especially in view of new evidence coming to their attention or representations being lodged. This happens on a daily basis at all prosecutor's offices and is nothing strange.
- ii. The fact that a file has been closed therefore does not bar the DPP or prosecutor to revisit the decision initially taken. This can be done and in fact is being done frequently at this office.

c. POWERS OF NDPP

- i. It must be established whether the NDPP has any inherent powers to prosecute or not. Are the powers of the NDPP curtailed to reviewing decision taken by his subordinates, the DPPs or does he possess inherent power to prosecute.
- ii. In order to answer this we must look at the relevant legislation empowering the NDPP.
- iii. The Constitution dictates in sec 179(1)(a) that the NDPP heads the national prosecuting authority. Sec 179(2) states that the national prosecuting authority has the power to institute criminal proceedings on behalf of the state ect.
- iv. Sec 179(5)(c) gives him the power to intervene in a prosecution and subsection (d) the power to review any decision of a DPP after consulting the relevant DPP.
- v. The NPA act, no 32 of 1998 echoes these provisions. Sec 20 states that the power to institute and conduct prosecutions vests in the prosecuting authority and all subordinate officials shall exercise these powers under the control and direction of the NDPP.
- vi. Sec 22 of the NPA Act specifically deals with the powers of the NDPP.
- vii. He heads the national prosecuting authority
- viii. Have authority over ALL the powers conferred or imposed by the Constitution or any other Act.
- ix. It is therefore clear that the NDPP has inherent and original powers to prosecute.
- x. Sec 22(2)(c) of the NPA act gives the NDPP the power to review a decision to prosecute or not after consultation with the relevant DPP and after taking representations of the accused, the complainant and ANY other person or 11

M¹
55 65

986

RJM-0882

RJP

- xi. The question now is whether the NDPP may consult other DPPs and not only the relevant DPP, when reviewing the decision? In principle there can be no objection for the NDPP in order to take a decision, to ask other DPPs for a recommendation provided that the relevant DPP is also consulted as required. In terms of the sec 22(3) he may even direct that an offence be decided and prosecuted within the jurisdiction of another DPP.
- xii. Sec 22(4)(a)(i) and (ii) gives the NDPP wide powers to ask for reports and submissions from a DPP.
- xiii. It therefore seems that the NDPP is entitled to request a report from this office in order to assist him in taking a final decision in this matter.
- xiv. In para 3 of his letter to Adv Chauke dated 31/03/2015, he request the DPP to urgently advise him on his decision. Although the phrase is a bit ambiguous it is capable of a construction that the DPP make a recommendation to the NDPP in the same vein as the DPP of North Gauteng has done. This matter is one of those matters where the NDPP has to exercise his inherent and original powers and where he should take the final decision.

5. RECOMMENDATION

- a. I therefore am of the view that this office cannot pass the bug back to the NDPP on the score of jurisdiction or even that the DPP Pta has taken a decision because it is clear that Pretoria only made a recommendation to the NDPP.
- b. However before any decision is taken the required further investigating must be conducted as instructed by the NDPP as well as the subsequent letter from the Head of the NPS.
- c. The way forward is to draft a letter to the new investigating officer, apparently now someone at the DPCI, to investigate further in line with the queries issued by the NDPP and the NPS. How any subordinate I/O from DPCI can investigate a case against the National and Provincial Heads of the DPCI, is beyond comprehension.

MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: Whether am I here as a suspect in a criminal investigation, or a disciplinary investigation, because when I went through the terms of reference, the Minister says you must investigate whether there was a misconduct or crime committed. So I need to establish what is my status.

MR TOM: Yes, your status. Mr Sesoko, you are not a suspect in criminal proceedings or proceedings to be conducted, to be either conducted by the Minister or IPID for that matter. This investigation is to understand as to what, why do we have these two reports which have conflicting information in a way or which have recommendations that are different.

MR SESOKO: Okay.

MR TOM: You know, so our mandate is to establish those facts you know... (intervenes)

MR SESOKO: All right.

MR TOM: As to why do we have the two different investigation reports.

MR SESOKO: Okay.

MR SESOKO: Ja.

MR TOM: You know, so can you tell us about your involvement in the drafting you know, for instance in the drafting of the report, in the creation of the two reports?

MR SESOKO: Okay. First of all it is important to indicate to you that I know nothing about the two reports.

10 MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: I only know one report.

MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: My involvement in this matter was first when it was received, because this person Mukhangwe from the police came with a docket to my office indicating that he was referred to my office at the behest for the then Minister, that he must hand over the investigation to IPID. At the time I was the acting head of investigations national, so I cannot make that call. That is the call for the executive director and at that time it was Ms Mbeki, she was acting as the executive director.

20

MR TOM: Is that Koekie Mbeki?

MR SESOKO: Koekie Mbeki.

MR TOM: Okay.

MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: So you know, then Ms Mbeki must then make a call in that respect.

MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: And then Ms Mbeki then came back to me to say no, we will investigate this, she has decided that we will do the 10 Investigations.

MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: At that time or the year or so earlier when, before Ms Mbeki's time when Mr Beukman was still there... (Intervenes)

MR TOM: Who is he? What is his name?

MR SESOKO: He was the then executive director before he was removed and Ms Mbeki came to act. So the request came then from the Secretary of Police to say we must investigate the rendition case, then Mr Beukman requested me to appoint a team that will investigate and then I appointed Mr Khuba.

20 MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: To lead the team that will investigate. That was about a year earlier.

MR TOM: A year earlier?

MR SESOKO: Ja, and then a year and then after I appointed we had a meeting with the Secretary and Mr Beukman and the Secretary said

MR TOM: Hang on.

MR SESOKO: And no documents were given to us or anything of that nature.

MR TOM: At that stage?

10 MR SESOKO: At that stage.

MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: So fast forward a year or so later, that is when Mr Mokangwe from Crime Intelligence comes to my office and say he has got this instruction that this must be investigated by us and that instruction comes from the Minister when he approached then Ms Mbeki to say here is the docket, here is the instruction and then Ms Mbeki then after, a few days after she came back and she said no, it is fine, we can investigate it and I had informed him that this request came earlier, but and I had appointed Mr Khuba to 10 MR TOM: Yes.

MR SESOKO: And then the only time I got involved then was when Mr McBride was appointed. When Mr McBride was appointed, he asked for all high profile cases.

MR TOM: And when was that?

MR SESOKO: And asked all people who were involved in the investigation of high profile cases, to brief him on these cases.

MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: And the high profile case at the time was the Marikana investigation. It was the Cator Manor investigation, it was 20 the Riah Phiyega investigation which I was conducting, I was investigating or sent out an investigation and it was this rendition matter where Mr Khuba was involved.

MS BADAL: Or you provided him a copy?

MR SESOKO: Printed it out and provided it to him, ja.

10 MS BADAL: Okay.

MR SESOKO: But that is how it happened. But the briefing happened between him and the same way the briefing on the Riah Phiyega matter happened between me and Mr McBride, and so too the others also briefed him in the same way. And then I think after the briefing, that is when Mr McBride then said we can work together to finalise the report, because my understanding was that Mr Khuba had indicated that there is information, further evidence that he had received that he was still putting onto the report. So we then have to work together.

20 But also the fact that in terms of our own internal processes, when a report is done you, it is done by the investigator and then the supervisor must also do quality control and then recommend... (Intervenes)

MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: So the report was done by Mr Khuba.

MR TOM: Okay.

MR SESOKO: In fact at some point he even e-mailed the report to me and then went on my desktop as he was you know; putting all the further evidence that he had and also doing the analysis. So my role basically was to guide him, so for instance we would go through the report and then he would indicate this is how he has analysed this, how he would analyse and then I would ask him questions, why that, why that, why that, why do you put that?

You know, what would be the strength of that evidence, what would be witness of that evidence? That is the kind of process that we went through, even in the analysis that would be the kind of process that we went through until such time that the report was concluded.

MS BADAL: Okay. Mr July, just to bring you up to speed, we just asked Mr Sesoko to explain his involvement in the reports. I think initially he says that he has no knowledge of the first report, but he was involved in a supervising capacity in the second report.

20 MR SESOKO: It is the final report on that (inaudible), yes.

MS BADAL: All right, final report.

MR JULY: Okay.

about a report and because you were sort of senior in terms of your acting position and therefore you had from time to time to talk to and how you also knew about that first report... You see that first report why even when you were doing the second, the so-called second report... (intervenes)

MR SESOKO: The final report.

MR JULY: Is based on that original report.

MR SESOKO: Uhm.

MR JULY: All right, that is what it is based on. So it will be very 10 difficult to say you did not know about that report, because it is that report that Mr Khuba said you interrogated with him and he was different to you because you are a legal person, you have been a prosecutor for years. He is not a lawyer, you asked him questions about this evidence may not stand. I will give you one example, that this surveillance will not stand, it was the issue of the location of General Sibiya at the time of the crime, whether where was Sibiya at that time.

So you would then say as a lawyer how do you then charge Sibiya for assault if there is evidence which is the cellphone evidence 20 which says Sibiya was in Sunnyside when the scene of crime is Diepsloot, as an example. So you were sort of a legal person who would interrogate that to say this evidence cannot stand.

So it was based on that report and the question of I hear you talking about the final report, when you question, when we, there are two people who were critical in actual fact in this report, it is Mr

Khuba and Colonel Mokangwe.

MR SESOKO: Ja.

MR JULY: Colonel Mokangwe and which is something bad Mr Khuba did not mention, was that at the time when they went to NPA, they went to NPA to get the warrant. At no stage was that report when it was given to NPA, called an interim report. We then called yesterday Mr Angus. Mr Angus then says whether it is an opinion or what, but it is a practice, you can never have a so-called interim report which has got recommendation. What you do when you go to NPA, you will 10 have a report which may lead to be updated but it does not change the status.

That report status is that it is a report. If new evidence comes up, it is either you add to that report and you will make reference to that report, but what happened in this particular one, there is a report which was submitted in January. Subsequent to the report been submitted there was a meeting with NPA asking for a warrant. Yes, NPA raised issues about the assault in the Sibiyi, right, and then they would be asked to go and look for more information on that ground. We are still going to speak to Mr 20 Moegsien. The Minister has given permission to do that, the Minister of Justice.

MR SESOKO: Ja.

MR JULY: The understanding is very clear from Mokhangwe, that when they went there, they went to get a warrant. They wanted to find out why is the (inaudible) right not coming up and Moegsien said no, go and get this and this and this. And that report, if it was intended to be interim, it would have been written interim report and even Mr Khuba, Mr Khuba never mentioned this as an interim report. His understanding is that the report was submitted, then there was new evidence according to Mr Khuba.

MR SESOKO: Uhm.

MR JULY: That is what he says. He is not saying we submitted a report which is an interim report which was going to be changed. He said we submitted a report and based on the new evidence, we had 10 to look at that report and then looking at that report, now we have got this information. We did not have the warning statement from Sibiya, we did not have warning statement from Dramat, we did not have...

Well there is an issue about whether the section 205, this informs because Mokhangwe said it is not true that the cellphones did not have that information. They were in possession of that information, they knew exactly what was the problem about the location of Mr Sibiya and scene, so it cannot be said that the cellphones was new information which necessitated the change of the report.

20 MR SESOKO: You will appreciate that all what you are saying to me is what you are informed by Mr Khuba.

MR JULY: So, so, so... (Intervenes)

MR SESOKO: And then the issues that were mostly that we dealt with was especially on the analysis of the evidence, because he had already done everything, so I would question that and that to see do we have a strength here or not, you know why do you reason in this way there and not, you know.

MR JULY: Yes.

10 MR SESOKO: Maybe you need to add that there in terms of your analysis and so forth.

MR JULY: Mr Khuba submits a report to NPA.

MR SESOKO: Yes.

MR JULY: All right, he asks you questions before he submits the report but he does not give it to you?

MR SESOKO: No.

MR JULY: You do not see this report?

MR SESOKO: No, I remember I was not supposed to get involved.

MR JULY: Yes. He asked whatever questions that he was asking

MR SESOKO: Uhm.

There is somewhere where he mentioned the e-mail of a document, but what we do not show, we are not sure about which we are still going to talk to Mr Khuba, is what he e-mailed to you, the report that he signed or is the report that sought to be discussed, because... MR JULY: No, no, that is what I am referring to.

MR SESOKO: Uhm-uhm.

MR JULY: That is what I am referring to. I am referring to that report.

MR SESOKO: Yes.

MR JULY: You remember the report you are discussing, Khuba has submitted the report. That you say, was never given to you but the content of what was discussed, even if the copy that you had was not the signed one, it had already been submitted. We can show you that is the same report, because it is the report which was submitted on 22 January. When you look at the front, how it starts and how the content is, it is everything except that information which has been taken away.

It is the same report, it is not a new report. So if Khuba came before you with a report which was not signed, I am telling you now that there was a report there that was submitted when he was asking you about that information that he was asking you, asking for advice, he then submitted that report. So now it is that report that he brings before you, so now what I am saying is this, he then says he signed the report, the one that you signed as well. That is what I am talking about, the one that has been signed by McBride as well.

I will remember what he said about that information, he said as far as he is concerned, what changed was the analysis, not the statement. His analysis based on the advice that he was then receiving and the questions that were asked by Mr McBride and your input as a legal person, then he had to change his analysis. MR SESOKO: You say I must open page 21?

MR JULY: Yes, page 21.

MR SESOKO: Okay.

MR JULY: Then if you open page 20 of the second report, we started there with Mr Khuba. We said if you look at that document Mr Khuba, in particular 5.2 now where it says the report bears reference 140201 and was signed by Colonel Leonie Verster, paragraph (a)(1) of the report states that:

10 "On 5 November 2011, General Dramat held a meeting with the Zimbabwean police at DPCI offices about the nationals who shot and killed one of their senior officers."

We said, do you know that that information has been removed on paragraph 5.2? He says no, I do not know and I do not know why it was removed because in this analysis at the end, there is a talk about the meeting, but there is a lack of information about what exactly was discussed in that meeting, but the meeting in the content in this, is being removed and he indicated he does not know who removed that information. You need to accept that Mr Sesoko, that what was been corrected, even if you did not have signed off this original report, it is this report that you were working on.

MR SESOKO: I do not dispute if it could have been that report. All what I am saying is that Mr Khuba, he is the one who sent the report to my computer so that I can work on it, he is the one who was doing 20 the typing on the report. I never engaged in any typing or anything. He was sitting on my desk doing all the changes as we were talking and then after we were satisfied that the report is what it should be, then he printed out the report and then he signed the report, I also signed the report and then we put the report into the route sheet that went to the office of the AD.

MR SESOKO: So I, like I said, I can only say what I know and remember, this was not the first investigation we did on... I also appointed him on investigation regarding Sibiya that came from parliament, because there were people who were concerned that there was nothing happening with that investigation and reported it to parliament. And I appointed a team from North West to investigate to that.

10 MR JULY: Yes, yes, he did mention that.

MR SESOKO: And then Sibiya complained that those, that team was biased. I removed that team and appointed Khuba. At that time, the provincial office in Gauteng, the then provincial head Ms Siphoka Semalehle, had done a report to the prosecuting authority where he exonerated, she exonerated Sibiya of any wrongdoing.

Mr Khuba who did the investigation came with new information, and then he did a report, he did a report that says Sibiya must be charged for those assaults and that is the second report that went to the prosecuting authority based on that evidence, you know.

20 So for me as long as there is new evidence, we cannot hide that evidence from the prosecuting authority.

So in a provincial setup it would be the investigator, the supervisor and the provincial head. If it is a case of national importance, it would be the investigator, it would be the head of investigation national, it would be the executive director.

 to make it easier for the prosecuting authority. This report does not give direction to the prosecuting authority it is simply for them to have a quick sense of what is happening in the case so that when they go to the actual dockets, then they have a sense. So that is the purpose 20 of this report, so in terms of summarising the statement and so forth, unless when I go through a statement, the summary of that statement, I think something is amiss, then I will question the

IN THE HIGH COURT OF SOUTH AFRICA GAUTENG PROVINCIAL DIVISION, PRETORIA

CASE NO:

In the matter between:

THE INDEPENDENT POLICE INVESTIGATIVE DIRECTORATE

First Applicant

ROBERT MCBRIDE

Second Applicant

and

MINISTER OF POLICE

First Respondent

MINISTER FOR PUBLIC SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION

Second Respondent

FOUNDING AFFIDAVIT

I, the undersigned

ROBERT MCBRIDE

do hereby make oath and state as follows:

- I am an adult male and the Executive Director of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate ("IPID" or "the Directorate"), situated at 114 Madiba Street, Pretoria.

COMMISSION OF INQUIRY INTO STATES CAPTURE

R. MP
Y.S.

- 2 I am the Second Applicant in this matter and am duly authorised to represent the First Applicant in my official capacity as its Executive Director.
- 3 The facts set out in this affidavit are within my personal knowledge unless otherwise stated or apparent from the context. Where I make legal submissions, I do so on the advice of my legal representatives.

THE NATURE OF THIS APPLICATION AND URGENCY

- 4 This is a two-part application arising from my threatened suspension as Executive Director of IPID by the Minister of Police ("the Minister"). For the reasons set out herein, this suspension would be unlawful and unconstitutional, and would fundamentally undermine the independence of IPID.

Part A and urgency

- 5 In Part A, the applicants seek urgent interim relief, interdicting the First Respondent (the Minister of Police) from suspending me from the position of Executive Director of the First Applicant, IPID, pending the outcome of Part B of this application.
- 6 Part A is brought on an urgent basis. I only received notice of the Minister's intention to place me on precautionary suspension on Wednesday, 11 March 2015. I was given until the close of business on Thursday, 12 March 2015 to respond. As a matter of caution I have made representations to the Minister in this regard. However, in view of the facts that follow, it is clear that the Minister has prejudged the issue and that there is no realistic possibility of my representations being successful before him. It is thus inevitable that, absent the interdict sought in these proceedings the Minister will imminently take a decision to suspend me.

7 This application has accordingly been set down for 10:00 am on Friday 13 March 2015. I appreciate that this affords the respondents very limited time to answer this application. Should the respondents require further time to answer this application, I am prepared to accord them such further time. However, this is conditional on the Minister undertaking not to suspend me pending the outcome of Part A of this application.

8 The urgent prevention of any further steps being taken to suspend me unlawfully is necessary not only to protect my rights, but also to preserve the independence and effective functioning of IPID and to prevent further unlawful Ministerial interference without delay. IPID is an indispensable, constitutionally required investigative body, which is mandated to investigate police misconduct and offences. Its investigations extend to the highest offices in South Africa. It must be given substantial protections to carry out its mandate without political interference.

9 The Executive Director is at the very heart of IPID's ability to function effectively to fulfil its constitutional mandate, and is critical to ensuring the proper conduct of investigations by IPID. Under section 7 of the IPID Act (read together with sections 22(1), 24(1), 28(1)(g) and (h)), the Executive Director manages and directs IPID; controls the Directorate's funds and expenditure; appoints the staff; controls and directs the investigation and management of cases; is responsible for referring criminal matters to the National Prosecuting Authority or other responsible authority; and provides strategic leadership to the Directorate.

10 Should it be effected, my suspension as the Executive Director of IPID would likely have immediate deleterious consequences for the effective functioning of IPID. This is especially so in the current political climate and given the extent of Ministerial interference in the independent institutions in the criminal justice sector. The suspension of the Executive Director would, in all likelihood, be followed by the Minister's appointment of a new acting Executive Director, who could fundamentally undermine the effective functioning of the institution and impede high profile investigations. This is demonstrated by the events that have followed the suspension of the Head of the Directorate for Priority Crime Investigation (the DPCI or the Hawks), Lieutenant-General Dramat and the appointment of Major-General Ntsemeza as the Acting National Head of the DPCI. These events are detailed in the founding affidavit filed by the Helen Suzman Foundation in the Constitutional Court on 25 January 2015, which is attached as annexure RM5 to this application. I refer in particular to paragraphs to 35 to 49 thereof.

Part B

11 In Part B, the applicants seek the review and setting aside of the Minister's decision to initiate a process to suspend me as Executive Director of IPID. The applicants challenge this decision as unlawful and unconstitutional on the grounds that –

11.1 The Minister does not have the power to suspend the Executive Director of IPID, as this would contravene the independence of IPID enshrined under section 206(6) of the Constitution. Alternatively, even if the Minister has the power to suspend the Executive Director, the Minister has exercised this power unlawfully by creating a reasonable perception that IPID's independence is under threat;

11.2 The Minister's decision is vitiated by ulterior purpose or improper motive and bad faith; and

11.3 The Minister's decision is irrational and unreasonable.

12 In Part B, the applicants also seek an order declaring the following provisions to be unconstitutional and unlawful to the extent that they purport to authorise the Minister to suspend or remove the Executive Director of IPID, in contravention of s 206(6) of the Constitution:

SS LS

12.3 paragraph 2.7(2) of chapter 7 and paragraph 18 of chapter 8 of the Senior Management Service Handbook, 2003.

13 The review under Part B is brought on the basis of the principle of legality and the Promotion of Administrative Justice Act 3 of 2000 ("PAJA").

14 This affidavit is filed in support of the relief sought in Part A and Part B of the notice of motion. However, in view of the extreme urgency within which this application has been drafted and launched, I reserve the right to file supplementary founding affidavits should the need arise.

THE PARTIES

15 The First Applicant is THE INDEPENDENT POLICE INVESTIGATIVE DIRECTORATE (IPID). IPID is an independent institution, required and protected under s 206(6) of the Constitution. It is constitutionally mandated to investigate any alleged misconduct of, or offence committed by, a member of the South African National Police Services ("the SAPS"). IPID is established under s 3 of the Independent Police

Investigative Directorate Act, No. 1 of 2011, which came into operation on 1 April 2012.¹

16 I am the Second Applicant and the EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF IPID, appointed in terms of s 6 of the IPID Act. I have held this position since March 2014. The responsibilities of the Executive Director of IPID are set out inter alia in s 7 of the IPID Act. These entail the strategic and financial management of the Directorate, appointments and oversight of staff, and the control and direction of investigations conducted by the Directorate's investigators.

17 The First Respondent is the MINISTER OF POLICE, cited in his official capacity. The First Respondent's office is located at Wachthuis, Pretoria, and these papers will be served at the Minister's office and on the State Attorney at SALU Building, 316 Thabo Sehume Street, Pretoria. The First Respondent is the official whose intended actions and powers in respect of IPID are the subject of this application.

18 The Second Respondent is the MINISTER FOR PUBLIC SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION, cited in his official capacity as the member of the National Executive responsible for the administration of the Public Service Act, 1994 and the delegated laws promulgated thereunder, including the Senior Management Service Handbook, 2003 ("SMS Handbook"). No relief is sought against the Second Respondent. The Second Respondent is cited only for such interest as he may have in the constitutional challenge to the Public Service Act and the SMS Handbook under Part B of this application. The Second Respondent's office is located at 13th Floor, 120 Plain Street, Cape Town, or 116 Prosa Street, Pretoria, and these papers will be served on the State Attorney at SALU Building, 316 Thabo Sehume Street, Pretoria.

THE FACTUAL BACKGROUND

19 On Wednesday, 11 March 2015, I was informed in a notice that the Minister of Police intended to place me on precautionary suspension. I attach the suspension notice as annexure RM1. The suspension notice did not specify the legal basis for the proposed suspension, but made various allegations of "serious misconduct" on my part as Head of IPID. I address these allegations of misconduct below, all of which are firmly denied.

20 The suspension notice advised me that any written representations as to why I should not be placed on suspension were to reach the Minister's office by no later than close of business on Thursday, 12 March 2015. As a matter of caution, earlier this afternoon, my attorneys delivered written representations to the Minister in reply to the notice. I attach a copy thereof as annexure RM2. However, in view of the facts contained in this affidavit, it is clear that the Minister has prejudged the issue and that there is no realistic possibility of my representations being successful before him. It is thus inevitable that, absent the interdict sought in these proceedings the Minister will imminently take a decision to suspend me.

21 Accordingly and given the urgency of the matter, I was advised by my legal representatives to launch the present application.

22 The Minister's allegations of misconduct on my part (detailed in the suspension notice) concern my role as Executive Director of IPID in the referral of the IPID Investigation Report into the illegal rendition of Zimbabwean nationals.

23 The Investigation Report, dated 18 March 2014, was signed off by me on 9 April 2014.

24 The Investigation Report is of a highly political and sensitive nature. It addresses the alleged involvement of the Head of the Directorate for Priority Crime Investigation ("DPCI", otherwise known as "the Hawks"), Lieutenant-General Dramat, as well as Major-General Sibya of the DPCI, in the unlawful rendition.

24.1 The preliminary draft of the report (of 22 January 2014) suggested that Dramat and Sibya were involved in the unlawful rendition, and recommended that they be criminally charged with kidnapping and defeating the ends of justice.

24.2 The provisional findings and recommendations were found to be unsustainable on the evidence and were, accordingly, not included in the final Investigation Report (of 18 March 2014).

24.3 I attach copies of these reports as annexures RM3 and RM4.

25 By now it is a matter of public record that the Minister (together with other senior members of the SAPS and new acting appointees to the DPCI), has zealously pursued the suspension of both Dramat and Sibya from the DPCI since December 2014. Of serious concern is that these actions followed the DPCI becoming seized (under Dramat's direction) with high profile investigations. I attach, in this regard, as annexures RM5 to RM7,

25.1 A founding affidavit (without annexures) filed by the Helen Suzman Foundation ("HSF") in the Constitutional Court on 25 January 2015, which details the steps taken to suspend Dramat at paragraphs 18 to 29 and Sibya at paragraphs 40 to 42;

25.2 The High Court judgment of Prinsloo J of 22 January 2015, which found inter alia, that the Minister's suspension of Dramat was unlawful and unconstitutional. The judgment details the facts surrounding Dramat's suspension, and includes a summary (at paragraph 11) of Dramat's written representations in response to the Minister's decision to suspend him (dated 24 December 2014). These representations indicate that Dramat perceives his suspension to be a response to the independent discharge by him

MP

SJ

LS

of his duties to investigate certain high profile cases, and an effort by the Minister to obstruct these investigations; and 25.3 A collection of media articles describing the nature of the DPCI's high-profile investigations, initiated under Dramat's leadership.

26 The Minister's accusations that I have acted improperly – inter alia by issuing the Investigative Report that ultimately cleared Dramat and Sibiya of involvement in the unlawful rendition; by informing Dramat and Sibiya's legal representatives accordingly; and by seeking to explain the findings in the Investigative Report to the Parliamentary Portfolio Committee on Police – must be viewed in the context of the Minister's evident agenda to have Dramat and Sibiya removed from the DPCI.

27 The Minister's intention to suspend me is a clear stratagem to undermine or suppress the IPID Investigation Report which does not implicate Dramat and Sibiya, and which undermines the draft and leaked report on which the Minister has relied to justify his suspension of them. This is a blatant abuse of power that fundamentally threatens the independence of IPID.

28 That the Minister is intent on undermining or suppressing the IPID Investigation Report, for no legitimate reason, is further evidenced by:

28.1 The Minister's persistent reliance on the findings and recommendations contained in the preliminary draft of the IPID Investigation Report to publically justify (including before Parliament) and pursue his suspension of Dramat as the Head of the DPCI. Notwithstanding having complete knowledge of the existence of the preliminary report; the investigative process which lead to the final report, as well as the contents of the final report, (including its recommendations), the Minister has insisted on placing reliance solely on the preliminary draft of the report. In this regard, 28.1.1 I attach as annexure R18, a copy of a letter sent by the Minister to the Parliamentary Portfolio Committee on Police dated 29 January 2015, and refer to paragraph 5 thereof.

28.1.2 I also refer to what is stated at paragraph 52 below, where I explain why it is certain that, by this stage, the Minister clearly had knowledge of the final IPID investigation report.

28.2 The Minister's initiation of his own investigation (to be conducted by Werksmans Attorneys) into the unlawful rendition of the Zimbabwean nationals. I attach hereto, as annexure R19, a copy of the Appointment Letter and Terms of Reference for the investigation dated 23 February 2015.

29 Against this background, I turn to address the grounds upon which the Minister's decision to initiate suspension proceedings against me is sought to be reviewed.

SS LS

1039

RJM-0160
18.THE GROUNDS OF REVIEW

30 The Minister's decision to initiate a process to suspend me as Executive Director of IPID is unlawful and unconstitutional on three grounds:

30.1 First, the Minister does not have any lawful power to suspend the Executive Director of IPID – i.e., a power to suspend that does not contravene the independence of IPID enshrined under section 206(6) of the Constitution. Alternatively, even if the Minister has the power to suspend the Executive Director, the Minister has exercised this power unlawfully by creating a reasonable perception that IPID's independence is under threat.

30.2 Second, the Minister's decision is vitiated by an ulterior purpose or improper motive; and 30.3 Third, the Minister's decision is irrational and unreasonable.

31 I address each in turn.

The Minister has no power to suspend the Head of IPID

32 The independence of IPID is expressly required and protected under section 206(6) of the Constitution. This provides:

"(6) On receipt of a complaint lodged by a provincial executive, an independent police complaints body established by national legislation must investigate any alleged misconduct of, or offence committed by, a member of the police service in the province."

WAP

SJ LS

1040

19

33 The IPID Act gave effect to the provisions of section 208(6) of the Constitution, by establishing and assigning functions to an Independent Directorate at a national and provincial level. Under the IPID Act –

33.1 IPID is independently financed from money appropriated by Parliament (s 3(3));

33.2 The independence and impartiality of IPID is expressly protected under s 4 of the IPID Act, which provides that:

"4(1) The Directorate functions independently from the South African Police Service.

(2) Each organ of state must assist the Directorate to maintain its impartiality and to perform its functions effectively."

33.3 The objects of the IPID Act, set out in s 2, further emphasise the importance of the independence of the Directorate. Section 2 provides that the objects of the Act are, inter alia –

"(b) to ensure independent oversight of the South African Police Service and Municipal Police Services;

(d) to provide for independent and impartial investigation of identified criminal offences allegedly committed by members of the South African Police Service and Municipal Police Services;

...

(g) to enhance accountability and transparency by the South African Police Service and Municipal Police Services in accordance with the principles of the Constitution."

33.4 There are important safeguards in the manner in which the Executive Director of IPID is appointed under s 6, and in the provision for reporting to Parliament under s 7(12), which are plainly designed to prevent undue political influence in the office of the Executive Director.

34 The Constitutional Court has found that a fundamental aspect of the institutional independence (or "structural and operational autonomy") of an agency is the security of tenure of its members, and especially its National Head. Security of tenure requires protection against termination of employment or suspension at the discretion and behest of the Executive.

35 In Glenister v President of the Republic of South Africa 2011 (3) SA 347 (CC) ("Glenister II"), Moseneke DCJ and Cameron J (writing for the majority of the Constitutional Court) found that, under the SAPS Act, the DPCI lacked the independence required of an independent anti-corruption unit. The majority noted (at para 213) that the lack of independence of the DPCI "was reflected [...] most signally in the absence of secure tenure protecting the employment of the members of the entity and in the provisions for direct political oversight of the entity's functioning."

36 The majority explained that what is required is "insulation from a degree of management by political actors that threatens imminently to stifle the

55 65

1042

21

Independent functioning and operations of the unit" (at para 216). The importance of the security of tenure in ensuring the independent functioning of the unit was underscored, as the majority noted that –

"... the lack of specially entrenched employment security is not calculated to instill confidence in the members of the DPCI that they can carry out their investigations vigorously and fearlessly. In our view, adequate independence requires special measures entrenching their employment security to enable them to carry out their duties vigorously" (at para 222).

37 In the context of IPID, it is especially important that the Minister of Police does not have a broad power to suspend the Executive Director. Given that IPID's function is to investigate complaints of misconduct by members of the SAPS and to maintain effective oversight over the SAPS, it is essential that IPID remains strictly independent of the SAPS. This must include the Minister of Police, who is politically responsible for the SAPS, and whose executive and political interests are thus bound to the fate of the SAPS.

38 In Helen Suzman Foundation v President of the RSA; Glenister v President of the RSA 2015 (2) SA 1 (CC), the Constitutional Court declared that the power to suspend and remove the National Head of the DPCI from office, vested exclusively in the Minister in terms of section 17DA(1) and (2), must be done away with (see paragraph 110). The Constitutional Court held that an unrestrained power to suspend, without objective and verifiable criteria, undermines the requirement of independence and is not constitutionally permissible (see paragraph 85).

MP

SS LS

1043

22

- 39 The Constitutional Court's findings in Helen Suzman Foundation follows its approach in Van Rooyen v The State 2002 (5) SA 246 (CC), where the Court considered the requirements for the lawful suspension of magistrates. The Court found that the legislative scheme for the suspension of magistrates pending investigation sufficiently guarded against discretionary or arbitrary suspension by the executive, and was constitutional. In reaching this conclusion, the Court emphasised the following aspects of the scheme: (i) the decision to investigate allegations was to be taken by the Magistrates Commission, which enjoys a degree of institutional independence from the executive; and (ii) that "the Commission would have to have reliable evidence before it to warrant such action and it would have to conduct its affairs in a manner consistent with natural justice" (paragraphs 170 to 175).
- 40 The Minister has not indicated the source of the power upon which he purports to rely in giving me notice of the proposed suspension. However, I am advised and aver that there is currently no law which empowers the Minister to suspend the Executive Director of IPID while meeting the requirements of a constitutionally acceptable suspension power, as prescribed by the Constitutional Court in Glenister II, Helen Suzman Foundation and Van Rooyen.
- 41 In the alternative, even if the Minister has a lawful suspension power, the Minister's decision to suspend me, viewed in the context of events preceding this decision, would lead a reasonably informed, reasonable member of the public to conclude that IPID's independence is under threat.

42 In Glenister II, the Constitutional Court confirmed that the question whether an institution is sufficiently independent must also consider the public's confidence in the independence of the institution. It stated at para 207 that:

"This Court has indicated that—the appearance or perception of independence plays an important role in evaluating whether independence in fact exists. This was said in connection with the appointment procedures and security of tenure of magistrates. By applying this criterion we do not mean to impose on Parliament the obligation to create an agency with a measure of independence appropriate to the judiciary. We say merely that public confidence in mechanisms that are designed to secure independence is indispensable. Whether a reasonably informed and reasonable member of the public will have confidence in an entity's autonomy-protecting features is important to determining whether it has the requisite degree of independence. Hence, if Parliament fails to create an institution that appears from the reasonable standpoint of the public to be independent, it has failed to meet one of the objective benchmarks for independence. This is because public confidence that an institution is independent is a component of, or is constitutive of, its independence."

43 It follows, that even if the Minister's suspension power is lawful in the abstract, the manner in which the Minister exercises this power will be unlawful where it gives rise to a reasonable apprehension of an attempt to undermine the independence of IPID. The events preceding the Minister's decision to pursue my suspension would certainly create this reasonable perception of undue political interference.

MP

SS
LS

1045

RJM-0166

24

44 For these reasons, the Minister's initiation of suspension proceedings against me is unconstitutional and unlawful. It is reviewable under the principle of legality and under s 6(2)(f)(i) and 6(2)(l) of PAJA.

The Minister has acted for an ulterior purpose or improper motive and in bad faith

45 As I have explained, the Minister's intention to suspend me is calculated to undermine or suppress the IPID Investigation Report that vindicates Dramat and Sibiya, and upon which the Minister has relied to justify his suspension of them.

46 The Minister's decision is not motivated by any legitimate reason, nor by the reasons given in the suspension notice. Rather, the Minister's decision is motivated by his concern to undermine and suppress the IPID Investigation Report for illegitimate political reasons and in bad faith.

47 The conduct of the Minister is a blatant abuse of power, which is reviewable under the principle of legality and s 6(2)(e) of PAJA.

The Minister's decision is irrational and unreasonable

48 The irrationality and unreasonableness of the Minister's decision is evident from the Minister's spurious allegations of misconduct on my

MP

LS
SS

1046

25

part, which were detailed as justifications in the suspension notice of 10 March 2015.

49 I deal with each allegation in turn, and explain why not a single one of them provides a rational basis for the decision.

50 The first allegation (in paragraph 5 of the Suspension Notice) is that I breached my statutory responsibility to act with independence and impartiality by informing Dramat and Sibya, through their legal representatives, in writing, that they had been cleared by the IPID investigation into the illegal rendition of Zimbabwean Nationals. This allegation is devoid of merit.

50.1 IPID's written communications with the legal representatives for Dramat and Sibya were made in response to requests for information under the Promotion of Access to Information Act, Act 2 of 2000, ("PAIA"), which were received by IPID on behalf of Dramat and Sibya, respectively. I attach copies of the PAIA requests, as well as IPID's communications with the respective legal representatives, in respect thereof, marked Annexures RM10.1 to RM10.6.

50.2 With regard to the communication with Sibya's legal representative, IPID's letter dated 9 January 2015 (Annexure RM10.3), which was dispatched at the direction of the Information Officer and myself, responds to Sibya's PAIA request by denying access to IPID's report on the basis that it could compromise the ongoing investigations and, furthermore confirms that "the IPID did not recommend for the suspension neither did the IPID recommend for the prosecution of Major General Sibya In its report to the NPA, based on the information and the evidence gathered during the investigation conducted by the IPID". The content of this communication is entirely consistent with, inter alia, my statutory responsibility to act with independence and impartially. The response is entirely reasonable and factually correct.

50.3 With regards to Dramat, I confirm that IPID has not complied with Dramat's PAIA request in respect of access to the IPID report and recommendations in respect of Diepsloot CAS390/7/2012. In addition to IPID's communication in respect of Dramat's PAIA request, I had also agreed to meet with his legal representative (on 4 January 2015). At the meeting I confirmed that IPID had submitted its report and recommendations to the National Director of Public Prosecutions ("NDPP") and that a decision was pending, that the NDPP had not made a decision on the matter, and that Dramat was not implicated in any offence by IPID's findings or recommendations.

50.4 My communication and interaction with Dramat's legal representatives are entirely in keeping with my statutory responsibility to act with independence and impartially. It was reasonable of me to provide the aforesaid information to Dramat's

MP

LS
SS

1048

legal representatives. The information provided is factually correct.

51 The Minister's second allegation (at paragraph 6 of the Suspension Notice) is that I acted improperly when I provided the aforesaid information to the legal representatives for Dramat and Sibiya, because I "knew very well that IPID did not clear Lieutenant General Dramat and Major General Sibiya because [I] had in [my] possession the original report by IPID dated 22 January 2014, which recommended that Lieutenant General Dramat and Major General Sibiya be criminal charged with kidnapping and defending the ends of justice". This allegation is completely disingenuous and is revealing of the concerns expressed above in respect of the Minister's motives and bad faith.

51.1 The IPID Investigation Report of 18 March 2014 was signed by myself, Mr Mathews Sesoko (Chief Director: Investigation & Information Management) ("Mr Sesoko") and Mr Innocent Khuba (Provincial Head: ICD Limpopo) ("Mr Khuba") upon conclusion of IPID's investigation. The findings and recommendations therein are based on a thorough scrutiny of all the available evidence.

51.2 I want to make it abundantly clear that the final IPID report was the product of a thorough investigation process which included taking into account all the evidence gathered through the IPID investigation and making reasonable recommendations on the basis thereof.

MP

LS

1049

RJM-0170

28

51.3 The preliminary draft of the IPID Investigation Report of 22 January 2014 – disingenuously referred to by the Minister as the “Original Report” – contained and was based only on the evidence and findings available to Mr Khuba at the time. The preliminary draft of the Investigation Report was exactly that: a preliminary and draft report prepared by Mr Khuba based on the evidence available to him at the time.

51.4 IPID did not conclude its investigation after the preparation of the preliminary report, but persisted in collecting and verifying evidence. It is not unusual for preliminary findings and recommendations arising from an investigation to develop and change, as and when information becomes available, or is either verified or discredited. This is the very nature of an investigation process.

51.5 The preliminary draft of the IPID Investigation Report was also still subject to consideration and review by Sesoko as well as myself. Notably, the preliminary report did not have regard to warning statements subsequently obtained from Dramat and Sibya, or, to evidence which emerged after the date of the Preliminary Report.

51.6 The IPID Investigation was conducted in co-operation with Advocate Anthony Mosing and Advocate Billy Maelatsi, from the offices of the NDPP, both of whom were involved with the IPID investigation into the illegal rendition of Zimbabwean nationals, even before a complaint was lodged with IPID. They remained

AND

LS

1050

involved in the investigation throughout, and were provided with regular preliminary reports by the Investigating Officer, Mr Khuba. Interaction with the NDPP in IPID investigations is not unusual. Even after conclusion of IPID's investigation, the NDPP may request IPID to extend its investigation in relation to certain aspects, or, to investigate new aspects which may have arisen. As a result of such interaction, the NDPP had access to the preliminary report, and was intimately aware of the further investigations that gave rise to IPID's final report.

52 The third allegation (at paragraph 7 of the notice) is that I "failed to disclose to me [the Minister] that there were 2 IPID reports, the conclusions of which were contradicting each other". This allegation is simply incorrect, and is particularly disconcerting as the Minister was fully aware of the existence of and status of both the preliminary draft and the final draft of the IPID investigation Report.

52.1 In the Information Note, dated 10 March 2014, that I submitted to then Minister of Police, E N Mthethwa, I indicated that we were preparing the final report on the matter and reviewing the totality of the available evidence to ensure that recommendations were appropriate and based on proven facts. I further indicated that the file with the final recommendations would be forwarded to the NDPP shortly. A copy of the information note, dated 10 March 2014, is attached as annexure RM11;

52.2 On 24 November 2014, the Minister addressed correspondence to me under the heading "The Zimbabwean Rendition documents". A copy of the letter is attached marked Annexure RM12, and reads: "The Executive Director of IPID is hereby requested to provide the Minister of Police with copies of the dockets in colour, exhibits thereto, ~~progress reports~~ and the final report in this matter" (my emphasis). The Minister was, clearly, aware of the existence of progress reports as well as final reports and requested to be provided with all.

52.3 On 26 November 2014, I complied with the Minister's request by providing him with the case docket that was forwarded to the NDPP, including the final IPID Investigation Report. I was at pains to point out in the information note (attached as RM13) that the investigative conclusions in the report were based on a thorough analysis of all the available evidence, notwithstanding several other "preliminary reports that were prepared".

52.4 At no point did I create the impression to the Minister that the findings and recommendations contained in the preliminary draft of the report were the same as the findings and recommendations contained in the final report.

52.5 Notwithstanding having complete knowledge of the existence of the preliminary report; the investigative process which lead to the final report, as well as the contents of the final report, (including its recommendations), the Minister has insisted on placing reliance solely on the preliminary draft of the report. The Minister (through his spokesperson) confirmed publicly that the decision to suspend Dramat on 22 December 2014 was done "after receiving a report of the IPID". A copy of a media report, dated 24 December 2014 is annexed marked Annexure RM14.

53 The fourth allegation (paragraph 8 of the notice) is that, in the first week of March 2015, I requested the Parliamentary Portfolio Committee on Police ("the PPCP") to convene an urgent meeting to explain to them the existence of the two IPID reports. It is alleged that this request "was designed to undermine [the Minister's] authority and oversight responsibility" and further that it put the Minister's own commissioned investigation "in jeopardy".

53.1 It is correct that I requested to appear before the PPCP. Copies of the requests and the responses that I have received from the Chairperson, are attached hereto as Annexures RM15.

53.2 It is extraordinary that the Minister would adopt the position that reporting on the activities of IPID to Parliament would undermine his authority and oversight responsibility. I would have expected that, in the circumstances, the Minister would welcome my willingness to account to Parliament and to clear up any misconceptions and concerns that exist in relation to IPID's conduct.

LS
SS

1053

RJM-0174

32

53.3 The Minister's position in this regard is, however, in keeping with his obstructive, and frankly disingenuous, conduct in this matter.

53.3.1 The Minister has not taken up my invitation, as contained in the Information Note dated 28 November 2014 (annexure RM13) to brief him on IPID's investigation at any stage. I remain willing to provide the Minister with reports on IPID's activities at any time.

53.3.2 The Minister has never requested me to provide an explanation on what he may have perceived as anomalies between IPID's preliminary and final reports.

53.3.3 The Minister has furthermore not requested me to provide any information on any specific aspect relating to the IPID investigation which may have raised concerns with him.

53.4 I emphasise that I have a responsibility under s 7(12) of the IPID Act to report to both the Minister and to Parliament, and I remain available to do so on any aspect relating to my or IPID's activities. Section 7(12) of the IPID Act provides that "The Executive Director must at any time when requested to do so by the Minister or Parliament, report on the activities of the Directorate to the Minister or Parliament".

53.5 The Minister has, by his failure to interact with me, negated my obligation to report to him on IPID's activities. In the

MP

1054

RJM-0175

33

circumstances it was entirely appropriate and reasonable for me to seek to account to Parliament.

53.6 Further, there is simply no reason to believe that my meeting with Parliament to account on the IPID Investigative Report would in any way jeopardise the Minister's authority or responsibilities, or the conduct of his own investigation into IPID activities.

54 The fifth allegation (paragraph 9 of the notice) is that I interfered with the Minister's commissioned investigation by failing to grant Mr Khuba (Provincial Head of IPID, Limpopo) permission to meet with the investigators from Werkemans Attorneys. While it is true that I refused to grant this permission, I did so because I do not accept that the Minister's commissioned investigation to be lawful.

54.1 The TOR directs the Investigator to ascertain "whether there is prima facie evidence of misconduct and criminal liability by Lieutenant General Drama; Major General Sibya; and any other officers mentioned in the original report". The Minister is essentially directing the Investigator to repeat the IPID investigation which gave rise to its final report. The Werksmans' investigation is therefore undermining the independence and integrity of IPID and, more so, in the light thereof that the NPA has not yet taken a decision on whether or not to prosecute any of the individuals implicated by IPID's final report. This process is ongoing and the Minister is interfering therewith by instructing

MP

LS

1055

RJM-0176

34

Werksmans to conduct an investigation which falls squarely within the ambit of IPID's responsibilities.

54.2 The Minister's initiation of the Werksmans' investigation creates an undeniable impression that a report by IPID which does not, for whatever reason, contain findings that find favour with the Minister, or supports a decision that the Minister has already taken or intends taking, or which conflicts with a position that the Minister has adopted publicly, may give rise to a rehashing of IPID's investigation now only at the direction of the Minister.

54.3 The Werksmans' investigation is accordingly perceived by myself and IPID's officials as a sanction for no legitimate reason and, without doubt, impacts negatively on our ability to perform IPID's functions independently and without fear.

54.4 I point out that The TOR also includes an investigation into the NPA's processes in relation to consideration of IPID's final report. An investigation of ongoing NPA processes falls outside the Minister's powers and is interfering with an ongoing criminal investigation.

55 Furthermore, the Werksmans' investigation has directly interfered with IPID's operations, notably by the investigator directly engaging IPID's officials in the face of my unequivocal refusal of permission for them to do so. In this regard, I attach hereto a copy of IPID's attorneys letter, dated 12 March 2015, addressed to Werksmans, marked Annexure

MP

S5
LS

1056

RJM-0177

RM17, which records the investigator's blatant disregard for IPID's refusal of the investigator's request for permission to interview Mr Khuba, and IPID's request and confirmation that all future communication in relation to the Minister's investigation be channelled through its attorneys' offices.

56 I reiterate that I remain available to report to the Minister on IPID's activities. I am also willing to engage the Minister to agree on appropriate steps to clarify any questions that the Minister may have. However, as Executive Director of IPID, I cannot stand by idly while the Minister, without my consultation or permission, undermines my leadership of IPID and interferes with its operations and investigations.

57 I have sought legal advice in respect of the Worksmans investigation. This is in keeping with my responsibility to ensure and promote IPID's independence and impartiality from interference in its investigations and underpinned by the IPID Act and the Constitution.

58 The public's trust in the criminal justice system is being seriously undermined by the recent spate of suspensions of the heads of departments within the security cluster. Recently, the Minister of Police unlawfully suspended Dramat, the Head of the DPCL, and who is presently on extended leave. I am steadfast in my resolve to protect IPID's integrity and independence from political interference. It is critical to preserve the public's trust in the organs of state entrusted with their security. In the present context, it is important for IPID to be seen not to

A and

S
LS
SS

RJM-0178

36

buckle under political pressure when, in executing its constitutional mandate, it makes findings and recommendations that are not aligned with the political views of the responsible Minister.

59 The Minister's purported justification in the Suspension Notice for appointing Werksmans to conduct the investigation, and overriding my authority as the Executive Director of IPID, is that I would "interfere with the investigation given the fact that you were already conflicted because the second IPID report dated 24 March 2014 was also co-signed by you." This is completely without merit. I am responsible for all the activities of IPID and am not conflicted in reporting on any of IPID's activities (whether I was personally involved therein or whether the activities were conducted under my direction).

60 The sixth allegation (paragraph 10 of the notice) is that, during the week of 15 February 2014, I removed a device from Sibya's office on 15 February 2014 and that "the plausible reason for [this] conduct was to tamper with evidence that might be incriminating to Major General Sibya; [myself] and /or Lieutenant General Drama".

61 As is evidenced in the documentation detailed below, these allegations are entirely spurious and unfounded, and are a "red herring". I have not tampered with any evidentiary material.

61.1 I did not visit the provincial offices of the DPCI on 15 February 2014. I was also not the Executive Director of the IPID at that

MP

LS

1059

RJM-0180

38

strictly in accordance with my statutory powers. I admit that I was aware that both Sibiyá and Mdluli were on suspension, however, this knowledge did not interfere with the execution of my duties as the head of IPID.

61.4 On 13 February 2015, I was called to the Minister's office in Cape Town. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss Data Box 6, and the circumstances in which it came into my possession. After the Minister reprimanded me over what he referred to as "the raid", in front of a third person who, at that stage was unknown to me and who, at my insistence, was subsequently introduced to me as General Ntsemeza. I furnished the Minister with the explanation as set out in the paragraphs above and the Minister accepted same. I also offered to hand over Data Box 6 to General Ntsemeza however, after discussion, it was agreed that it should stay in my possession and that General Ntsemeza and I would liaise with each other in respect thereof if the need arose.

61.5 No basis is provided for the allegation that I tampered with evidence that was potentially incriminating to Sibiyá and / or Dramat and / or me. If there is an implied allegation that my confiscation of data line 6 impacted on IPID's final report, this is naturally dismissed by the fact that the IPID's final report had, at that stage, already been in the possession of the NPA (from the time when it was handed over in April 2014).

MP
SS
LS

1060

39

61.6 Furthermore, there is no logic in the Minister's allegations. It is obviously farfetched to suggest Sibya would request me to remove allegedly incriminating evidence. If Sibya wanted to remove the device before or after his suspension, whether personally or with the assistance of his PA, he had all the time in the world to do so. He obviously did not for the reasons set out above.

62 Finally, I point out that no details of any allegations against me in the media (referred to in paragraph 2 of the Suspension Notice) have been provided and would, in any event, not form a legitimate basis for my suspension.

63 The Minister's decision to initiate suspension proceedings against me is accordingly without any rational or lawful basis whatsoever. It is thus reviewable under the principle of legality and under s 6(2)(f)(ii) and 6(2)(h) of PAJA.

Declaratory relief in respect of certain legislative provisions

64 In Part B of the application, I also seek an order declaring the following provisions to be unconstitutional and unlawful to the extent that they purport to authorise the Minister to suspend or remove the Executive Director of IPID, in contravention of s 206(6) of the Constitution:

MP

SS LS

1061

RJM-0182

46

64.1 section 6(6) of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act, No. 1 of 2011 ("the IPID Act");

64.2 section 17(1) and 17(2) of the Public Service Act, 1994; and

64.3 paragraph 2.7(2) of chapter 7 and paragraph 18 of chapter 8 of the Senior Management Service Handbook, 2009.

65 The unconstitutionality of the Minister's power to suspend me applies with even greater force to the Minister's purported power under these provisions to remove me from office. This is made clear in the abovementioned Constitutional Court judgments matters and will be addressed further in argument.

THE INTERIM RELIEF UNDER PART A

66 I am advised that in order to be granted an interim Interdict, the applicants must demonstrate that:

66.1 They have at least prima facie right to the relief sought in the main application (in this case, the review in Part B);

66.2 The balance of convenience favours the applicants;

66.3 They will suffer irreparable harm if the relief is not granted; and 66.4 They have no alternative remedy other than interim relief.

67 I proceed to deal with each of these requirements in turn.

MP

65

1062

RJM-0183

4)

A prima facie right

68 I have set out above the grounds of review upon which Part B of the notice of motion is based. I ask that those paragraphs be read as if incorporated herein in support of the interim relief.

69 Based on what has been said in respect of the review above, I submit that I have established a strong entitlement (let alone a prima facie right) to the relief sought in Part B of the notice of motion. Indeed this matter involves the clearest of cases for an interim interdict, particularly given the breaches of the Constitution that would result were the interdict not to be granted.

Balance of convenience and irreparable harm

70 The balance of convenience strongly favours granting the interim interdict. Not only will I suffer prejudice if the interim relief is not granted as I will be removed from office for up to 60 days, but there is a real risk that the operations and functioning of IPID will be seriously and irreparably compromised.

71 Should the Minister succeed in his machinations, through my suspension and the suppression of the IPID Investigations Report, this could have very serious repercussions for Dramat and Sibiyi, and ultimately, the independent and effective functioning of the DPCI.

MD

22

LS

1063

RJM-0184

42

Indeed, the independence of both IPID and the DPCI is threatened by the Minister's impugned conduct in this matter.

- 72 On the other hand, the Minister will suffer no prejudice whatsoever should the interim interdict be granted, and the review of the lawfulness of the Minister's decision to initiate a suspension process against me be allowed to take its course.

No alternative remedy

- 73 I respectfully submit that I have no suitable remedy available to me other than an interim interdict. While I have made written representations to the Minister in respect of the proposed suspension, this does not provide me with any security. Given the bad faith conduct of the Minister, I do not have any confidence that my representations will be fairly considered and successful.

- 74 Furthermore, it is not merely me being suspended that would have the deleterious effects set out above. The mere fact that I am required to justify my conduct under threat of suspension and removal by the Minister gives rise to the harm that I have set out in this affidavit. These harms affect not only me, but also the ability of IPID to function effectively as well as the public's faith in IPID as an independent institution. The Minister's threatened conduct constitutes an unconstitutional, political interference in IPID. Protecting the independent functioning of IPID requires a court interdict.

CONCLUSION

75 In the light of what has been set out above, I pray for the relief set out in Part A of the Notice of Motion pending finalisation of Part B of the application.

1. BACKGROUND

- 1.1 The Independent Police Investigative Directorate received a complaint of alleged renditions involving members of the DPCI headed by General Sibiya. The case was reported as result of parliamentary question by Cope Member of Parliament and an article by Sunday Times. The case was referred to the Independent Police Investigative Directorate by Civilian Secretariat for further investigation.

2. SUMMARY OF ALLEGATIONS

The following allegations were made:

- 2.1 It is alleged that between 04/11/2010 and 31/01/2011 Captain M L Maluleke, Warrant Officer Makoe and Constable Radebe, through the direction of General Sibiya, conducted operations in Soweto and Diepsloot to trace Zimbabwean Nationals. The suspects were wanted in connection with the murder of a Zimbabwean police Colonel in Bulawayo. The members were accompanied by Zimbabwean Police. Five Zimbabweans were arrested in Diepsloot and detained at various stations as illegal immigrants and others for fictitious crimes. They were allegedly assaulted by SAPS members and Zimbabwean Police and transported to Bait Bridge where they were handed over to the Zimbabwean Authorities. Four of them were reported murdered in the hands of Zimbabwean Police.
- 2.2 According to the allegation, Major General Sibiya was also part of the operation.

3. CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY MANDATE

- 3.1 Section 206(6) of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa provide that, on receipt of a complaint lodged by a Provincial Executive, an independent Complaints body established by the national legislation must investigate any alleged misconduct or offences allegedly committed by members of SAPS.
- 3.2 Section 28 (a) (h) of the Independent Police Investigative Directorate Act 1 of 2011 provides that the Directorate must investigate any matter referred to as a result of a decision of the Executive Director, or if so requested by the Minister, an MEC or the Secretary as the case maybe, in the prescribed manner

4. AVAILABLE EVIDENCE

4.1 STATEMENTS OBTAINED FROM INDEPENDENT WITNESSES

The following witnesses were interviewed and statements obtained.

Shepard Chuma: He will state that on Friday 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at 6954 John Malatjie Street Diepsloot together with Nelson, Maqhawe and Witness standing when they were approached by two unknown Black males. One of them produced an appointment card and the other produced a firearm and ordered them to lie down. He will further state that one of the Police Officer then took out a paper and started reading names like Mihelisi Sibanda, Godi Dube, Prichard Chuma and John. He asked them whether they know such people but none of such names were known to them. The officer was wearing a cowboy hat and they heard other police officers calling him Cowboy. Few minutes later, Cowboy asked the other Police Officers about where to detain them. While they argued about the place to detain them, the other officer suggested that General Sibiya be consulted to provide direction in the matter. A short while later General Sibiya alighted from a Black BMW. He will state that they were assaulted and when they arrived at Orlando Police Station one of the Officers called "Leburu" took his R300 which was in a wallet in his back pocket. They were detained and on 2010/11/06 at 12h00 the officer called "Cowboy" came and took the finger prints of his co-accused but his fingerprints were not taken. He was informed that his finger prints will be taken at Musina.

LS
SJ

1069

On Monday 2010/11/08 at 12H00 Cowboy came to collect them. They were taken into a marked vehicle of Orlando SAPS driven by the officer in uniform. They followed Cowboy who was driving a white Nissan D/C. They were taken to a certain place called Bronkhorstpruit where they were moved into a Toyota being handcuffed. They were then taken to Musina and they arrived at 17h00. They took one officer at Musina whom Cowboy said he will make matters easy for them to cross the border. He will further state that at the border, Cowboy went to Home Affairs office and few minutes later came back. They were transported in a Nissan D/C and crossed the border with Cowboy using a wrong lane but they were never stopped. When they were on the other side Zimbabwean police came and placed handcuffs on top of other handcuffs and Cowboy came and removed his handcuffs. They were taken to a Zimbabwean police car. He will state that they were interrogated by the Zimbabwean Police Officers about a Zimbabwean police Colonel who was killed. They were placed in separate cells and after 11 days he was released. When he enquired about his friend he was told that he was killed by the Zimbabwean police.

12 Maqhawe Sibanda: He will state that on 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at his residential place in Diepsloot when he was approached by two Black Males who identified themselves as Police Officers. They instructed them to lie down and they cooperated with them. Few minutes later there were many cars of Police Officers in civilian clothes and they started searching them. He will further state that they were assaulted and the police also took R500-00 which was in his pocket. There was another police officer wearing Cowboy hat reading names on the paper and asking them whether they knew the names of such people. He will state further that he saw General Sibiya coming out of a black BMW and gave instruction that they should be taken to Orlando SAPS.

4 Bongani Henry Yende: He will state that he is a member of the South African Police Services attached to Crime Intelligence. During October 2010 he was nominated to be a member of Task Team called Tactical Operations Management Section (TOMS) which was led by General Sibiya. On 2010/11/05 he received a call from W/O Makoe of DPCI in Gauteng who was also part of TOMS informing him that General Sibiya wanted them to meet in order to look for four suspects who are wanted in connection with the murder of police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He then went to Fourways Shopping Center with Constable Desmond Campbell who was also part of TOMS to meet with W/O Makoe. On their arrival at the Shopping Center W/O Makoe also introduced two Zimbabwean police to them. He will further state that he was informed by W/O Makoe that the two officers came through the office of General Dramat. At that time General Sibiya was seated in a navy blue BMW and he could not go and greet him. They went to Diepsloot together with Captain Maluleke (also known as Cowboy), W/O Jawuke and Constable Leburu Radebe to identify the house of the suspects.

1070

Captain Maluleke came back and informed them that he left the two officers observing the movements of the suspects at their residence. On their arrival at the suspect's place of residence, Captain Maluleke searched the suspects and confiscated their passports. There were four men who were lying on the ground and the two Zimbabwean police said that the four men are wanted in connection with murder of a Zimbabwean police Colonel in Bulawayo. The suspects were taken to Orlando and detained as illegal immigrants. On 23/11/2010 he was briefed by W/O Makoe that the two suspects who were arrested were subsequently killed in Zimbabwe. He will further state that the suspect Prichard Chuma was detained in Alexandra Police station. He will further state that Captain Maluleke was reporting directly to General Sibiya and whenever torture of the suspects was to be carried out, he condoned it.

Nelson Ndlovu: He will state that on 05/11/2010 at 20h00 he was at his younger brother's residential place in Diepsloot when he was approached by two Black Males who identified themselves as Police Officers. They ordered them to lie down and then started to assault them. He identified one of the Police Officer by the nickname Leburu. After their arrest the Police Officers argued about where they should detain them and one of them suggested Randburg. General Sibiya gave the instruction that they must be detained at Orlando SAPS. They were then taken to Orlando SAPS but Shepard Chuma and Witness went with the police to show them where John stays.

Petros Jawuke: He will state that during October 2010 he was nominated to be part of a Task Team Called "TOMS" in Gauteng Province and that the team operated under the command of General Sibiya. On 2010/11/05 in the evening he received a call from W/O Makoe that their Commander Gen. Sibiya wanted all TOMS members to meet in Fourways because there was a Colonel who was murdered. He will state that he collected W/O Ndobu and rushed to Fourways where they met with other members.

He will state that W/O Makoe instructed him to join Captain Cowboy Maluleke and Constable Leburu Radebe to identify the suspects address. On their arrival at the identified house they found a car standing outside but there was no one inside the car. He will state that four men came to the vehicle and that they arrested them and detained them at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants but not the Zimbabwe murder case as indicated at the beginning of the tracing process.

He will further state that on 2010/11/23 the second operation was arranged and that he got a call from W/O Makoe that their Commander General Sibiya wanted them to meet at Diepsloot Shoprite. General Sibiya was present in the second operation. They went to Diepsloot where an African Male Pritchard Chuma was found and arrested for murder of the Colonel in Zimbabwe.

Desmond Campbell: He will state that on 2010/11/05 General Sibiya arranged with W/O Makoe to call them for operation at Diepsloot for tracing wanted suspects in a murder case where a Colonel was killed. He received a call from Constable Radebe that they have already arrested the suspects.

LS

1071

He will further state that the suspects were assaulted since he heard screams but did not take part in the assault of the suspects. The suspects were arrested in connection with a murder of the police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He will state that the four suspects were then detained at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants and not on the Zimbabwe Murder case of the Colonel. On 22/11/2010 until the early hours of 23/11/2010 Prichard Chuma was arrested and detained in Alexandra. He never saw General Sibiya being involved in the operation but that there was a person who was always seated in the black tinted BMW and W/O Makoe referred to the person as General Sibiya.

Alfred Ndobe: He will state that during October 2010 he was nominated to be part of Task Team called "TOMS" in Gauteng Province headed by General Sibiya. On 2010/11/05 Gen. Sibiya arranged with W/O Makoe to call them for operation at Diepsloot for tracing wanted suspects in a murder case where a Colonel was killed. He was not aware that the suspects that they were tracing were needed in a Zimbabwe case. He received a call from Constable Radebe that they have already arrested the suspects.

The suspects were assaulted by General Sibiya, Captain Cowboy and W/O Makoe. He will state that the four suspects were then detained at Orlando Police Station as illegal immigrants but not on the Zimbabwe murder case of the murdered Colonel.

112
Andrew Mark Sampson: He will state that he is a White Male self employed as a Project Manager of House Constructions. He knew Maqhawe Sibanda as a sub-contractor on his building sites. He will state that Mr. Sibanda vanished for a week and resurfaced again. He was informed by Mr. Sibanda that his disappearance was as result of his arrest in connection with the alleged murder of a Zimbabwean Colonel. He was taken to Beit Bridge but released along the way and he had to find his way back because he did not have money and his cell phone was confiscated by the police. He will state that he was requested by Mr. Sibanda to call the said police Captain for his cell phone. He called the police Captain and he confirmed that the cell phone will be returned. He does not know whether such phone was finally returned to Mr. Sibanda.

124
Sibongile Mporfu: She will state that she is a neighbor of the deceased Johnson Nyoni. She will state that she witnessed a group of unknown Policemen assaulting the deceased who was lying down on the furrow of running water as it was raining. She will state that the deceased was assaulted by means of being kicked with booted feet. She will state that she cannot recall the exact date but it was during January 2011. She will state that the deceased was also pepper sprayed on his face and that he was having bloodied mucous coming out of his nostrils.

She will state that she was standing at the distance of about 20 meters when she witnessed the incident and that it was still in the morning around 10:00. She will state that she never saw what happened inside the shack. She will state that she learnt that the deceased was indeed murdered after a month from his younger brother. She will state that she may not be able to identify them if she can see them again.

Reasons Mhlawumbe Sibanda: He will state that on November 2010, on the date in which he cannot remember the date he visited his ex-girlfriend Brightness Nka Ncube who was staying with his distant sister Rachel Ncube. He slept over and in the middle of the night he was woken up by the police looking for John the boyfriend of Rachel. He was assaulted by a police whom he cannot identify, since it was in the dark. There was another Police Officer who was flashing a cellphone on their faces trying to identify them. He will further state that John was not there and they were freed when they indicated to the police that none of them was John.

1) Rachel Ncube: She will state that she is the wife of the deceased John Nyoni. It was on 26/11/2011 at 10h00 when she was in her shack with her husband Johnson Nyoni when police arrived and started assaulting him. The police entered the shack and said that they were looking for a firearm which they alleged that her husband used to kill a policeman in Zimbabwe. There were five (5) police vehicles, and her husband was taken away by the police and that was the last time she saw him. In February 2011 she received a call from Bikinis Nyoni, the brother of the deceased that Johnson Nyoni has died.

2) Brightness Nka Ncube: she will state that she is the sister-in-law of the late Johnson Nyoni. On the 5th or 6th of November while she was asleep she was woken up by the police who pretended to be Johnson Nyoni and later changed to indicate that they are in fact Police Officers. She will further state that she was assaulted by the police who were looking for Johnson Nyoni. The police freed them after they realized that Johnson was not amongst them. She learned later that Johnson Nyoni was murdered by the police in Zimbabwe.

3) Madala Bhekisisa Nyoni: He will state that he is the brother of late Johnson Nyoni and on 01 March 2011 he telephonically contacted his brother in law Orbed Ndlovu from Bulawayo in Zimbabwe who informed him that his brother Johnson Nyoni is late and was found at Central Mortuary in Bulawayo. He will further state that he then went to Bulawayo in Zimbabwe and at the mortuary he found the body of his brother. The body of Johnson Nyoni had a bullet wound on the collar (neck) just above the chest and it exited at the back. There was an information note attached to the body stating that Johnson Nyoni was involved in the crossfire at Gwanda in Zimbabwe. He will further state that he attended Johnson Nyoni's funeral which was held at Tsholotsho in Zimbabwe.

4.2 STATEMENTS OF MEMBERS AT ORLANDO POLICE STATION

The following statements were obtained from members of SAPS based at Orlando police station who are witnesses in the case.

152
2017/11/01
Brigadier Mthokozelwa Zangwa: He will state that he is a Station Commander of Orlando Police Station. He became aware of the allegation of deportation of Zimbabwean foreign Nationals in 2012. He will state that as part of his own investigation he perused the registers to check if there were indeed Zimbabwean nationals detained at Orlando Police Station. According to OB 279/11/2010 the said Foreign Nationals were arrested by Captain M L Maluleke. He also discovered that the Foreign Nationals were detained until 08/11/2010. The procedure is that when a person is arrested and is suspected to be illegal Immigrant, Home Affair official is called to verify the status of the person before he or she is taken to Lindela for deportation. He does not know why the procedure was not followed by the police in this case. He will further state that Captain Maluleke confirmed that he indeed took the said Foreign Nationals to Beit Bridge.

65

1130 Thomas Pixane Setagane: He is a member of SAPS stationed at Orlando. On 08/11/2010 Captain Maluleke came to the holding cells with four foreign national namely Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maqhabane Sibanda and Shepard Chuma. The four Foreign Nationals were registered on the OB and cell register. He will state that it was for the first time for him to experience a situation where a member of DPCI arrest and detain a person for being an illegal immigrant.

1131 Padile Abrina Pappo: She will state that she is a Constable and that during the time of incident she was still a trainee. On 2010/11/08 at 05h45 she reported on duty and she was posted at the cells. On the same day she was tasked by W/O Marule to write the Occurrence Book. She made entries as directed and not as she observed because she was a Trainee.

4.3 STATEMENTS OF HOME AFFAIRS OFFICIALS

1132 Nolwandle Qaba: She will state that she is a Director responsible for Deportation. She will further state that the incident that took place in 2010 occurred before she joined the department but upon being informed of the facts of the case by her juniors, she realized that members of the SAPS did not comply with the procedure when they deported the four Zimbabwean Foreign Nationals. She stated that a member of SAPS is not allowed to deport any person without the involvement of Home Affairs. The person suspected to be illegal foreigner must be verified by the Immigration Officer and the High Commissioner or the Embassy must confirm that such person is their citizen.

1133 Peter Ndwandwe: He will state that he is an Assistant Director with the Department of Home affairs in Soweto. He started knowing about the incident involving four Zimbabwean Foreign Nationals in 2012 when he was contacted by Mr. M Matthews who is a Chief Director at their Head Office. He will further state that the four Zimbabwean nationals were not supposed to be deported because from 20/09/2010 to 31/12/2010 there was DZP which is Dispensation for Zimbabwean Project initiated by the Minister to allow all Zimbabweans without legal documents to stay in the country for 90 days in order to apply for legal documents. There is no Zimbabwean who was supposed to be deported on the basis of illegal documents during that period.

He will also further state that in 2012, few days after receiving a call from Mr. M Matthews a Police Officer by the name of Maluleke visited his office and showed him Home Affairs documents with signature and asked him whether he could identify any signature on the documents. He told Mr. Maluleke that the signature does not belong to any of his people. The documents were copies and Mr. Maluleke left in a hurry without showing him the documents in full.

He will further state that no police officer is allowed to deport any person and any person suspected to be an illegal foreigner must be screen by Immigration Officer.

1134 Job Jackson: He will state that he is an Acting Deputy Direct responsible for the day to day running of Lindela Holding facility. In his statement he outlined the process involved in the deportation of a person from Lindela. He will further state that the incident took place before he was transferred to Lindela.

LS
S3

1074

13) Potiswa Skosana: She will state that she is an Immigration Officer Station at Soweto. She will further state that the form Warrant of Detention of Illegal Foreigner (BI-1725) was discontinued in 2008 and that the Notification of Deportation Form must be accompanied by the fingerprints. She will further state that in all cases police call them to screen the illegal foreigners before such persons are taken to Lindela.

A30 Johannes Lodewickus^{Bowley}: He will state that he is a Deputy Director in the Department of Home Affairs at Soweto. He confirmed that the number on the Detention Warrant and Notification of Deportation form provided by the police does not belong to any Home Affairs official in Soweto.

15) Richard Peter Eiberg: He state that he is an Immigration Officer based at Beit Bridge. He will further state that when SAPS bring an illegal foreigner at Port of Entry they must hand in a Body Receipt form and not the Detention Warrant. The Warrant of Detention is not a deportation document and must not be produced or stamped at Port of Entry.

He will dismiss the allegation that the stamp used on the documents claimed to be Home Affairs documents by the police is a deportation stamp.

5) Kobela Margaret Mohlahlo: She will state that she is an Immigration Officer based at Beit Bridge and she had been a custodian of Stamp 20 since 2010. She had been in control of stamp 20 and when she is not in the office the stamp would be locked in the safe. She is the only person in possession of the key. She will state that on the 7th and 8th of November 2010 she was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe. She does not know how stamp 20 appears on the documents which the police claim to be deportation papers because on the day in which the documents were stamped she was off duty and the stamp was locked in the safe.

4.4 STATEMENTS OF MEMBERS OF SAPS IN LIMPOPO

11) Ndanduleni Richard Madlonga: He will state that he is a Police Officer in the South African Police Service holding a rank of Lieutenant Colonel stationed at Thohoyandou SAPS as a Commander of Crime Prevention.

He will further state that the statement is additional to the statement he signed with a member of the Hawks from Pretoria. He wants to clarify certain issues pertaining to his previous statement.

Before he was transferred to Thohoyandou SAPS, he was working at Beit Bridge Police Station as a Commander. His duties included Crime Prevention, liaison with the Immigration Officials and other police officials from other stations.

In 2010, two weeks before the 8th November, there was a convoy of vehicles from Zimbabwe entering into South Africa. As he was suspicious, he approached them. The convoy was approaching the Immigration Offices. When he approached them, one of them introduced himself to him as the leader of the group and he told him that he is Superintendent Ncube from the Homicide Unit in Harare. He then requested him if they could not find a place to sit down and discuss.

Superintendent Ncube told him that he was going to Pretoria to meet General Dramat. He said to him that maybe he knew about the Chief Superintendent who had been murdered. He said that the suspects were in Gauteng and he had organized with General Dramat to assist them in tracing the suspects.

LS
SJ

1075

He will state that he told Superintendent Ncube that he has to verify with his seniors about the arrangements. He was given a number of General Dramat by Superintendent Ncube. He called Colonel Radzilani to verify the information but she requested that he should call Brigadier Makushu who was a Provincial Head Protection and Security Services. He then called him on his cell phone and explained to him that there are police from Zimbabwe who are intending to have a meeting with General Dramat. Brigadier Makushu told him that he was not aware of the visit but if the people are saying that they are going to meet the General, he should call General Dramat directly. He phoned General Dramat on his cell phone and he responded by saying that he is aware of the Zimbabwean police and he must let them come.

For the period of two weeks, he never heard anything from Superintendent Ncube and his group. After two weeks he received a call from Superintendent Ncube who told him that he was in town and he wanted to say goodbye. He went to town and met with them in front of Tops bottle store. They bought liquor and they left to the border. He did not escort them; they went to the border and crossed to Zimbabwe. They did not discuss anything about the operation they had in Gauteng with General Dramat.

The following day after the departure of Zimbabwean police, he received a call from Captain Maluleke who is also known as "Cowboy". It was on 08 November 2010 between 16 and 17:00, when he called and introduced himself as Cowboy and I asked as to who is Cowboy. He said that he is a Captain Maluleke and was with him at Paarl in Cape Town in 2005. When he said that he is Captain Maluleke, he remembered very well who he was. Captain Maluleke asked him where he was, and he said he had already crossed the checkpoint. He was told to stop and wait for him. After thirty minutes he arrived and was driving a Sedan which he thinks is a BMW. He was with a male person who was seated on the front passenger seat. He then entered into the vehicle after the passenger had moved to the back seat.

While he was on the front passenger seat heading to the border gate, he told him that the Zimbabwean police whom he assisted some weeks back were looking for suspects in connection with the death of police chief in Zimbabwe, and now they have found them. He told him that he was sent by his big bosses to assist in deporting them because the country does not have extradition agreement with Zimbabwe. He said that since the Zimbabwe police entered the country there had been busy trying to trace the suspect.

While they were driving he realized that there were other BMW cars which were following them and he knew that it was a convoy. Captain Maluleke told him that suspects are in the vehicle behind them. He said that there are two suspects and the third one is still not yet found. He will further state that he never stopped anywhere at the border and no documents were stamped for the purpose of deportation.

When they arrived at the Zimbabwean side the vehicle stopped and immediately all the vehicles were surrounded by Zimbabwean police. They then pulled the suspects from the back seat of the vehicle behind them. He knew that they were Police Officers because he had been working at the border for a long time and he knew them. He even saw the vehicles that crossed two weeks ago when Superintendent Ncube entered the country.

Thereafter one of the Zimbabwean police came and thanked them and said that they must not use the other gate but use the one they used when they entered.

Captain Maluleke told him that what happened is top secret and people must not know about it.

LS

1076

In 2012 of which he cannot remember the month and date, Captain Maluleke phoned and told him that there is a person from Head Office who will be coming for investigation and that he must cooperate with him.

Later a person came to Thohoyandou and he had a draft statement. He was told that there is a problem with the operation which was once done by the Hawks and they would like his statement to be in a particular format. He told him that the statement is for covering up and the parliament has some issues about the operation. He will further state that he read the statement and realize that it was to close the gaps and not a true reflection of what happened.

13 Brigadier Joseph Makushu: He will state that in 2010 he was the Head of Security and Protection Services responsible for eight Borders of which one of them is Beit Bridge. He will further state that Colonel Madilonga was one of his team members posted at Beit Bridge reporting under Colonel Radzilani. He remembers receiving a call from Colonel Madilonga in 2010 requesting permission to allow Zimbabwean Police who were going to see Major General Dramat. He then instructed him to call General Dramat directly because he did not want to be involved in the operation which he was not previously informed about. He will further state that it was the last time he spoke to Colonel Madilonga about the Zimbabwean Police.

14 Colonel Dovhani Sharon Radzilani: She will state that in 2010 she was the direct supervisor of Colonel Madilonga at the Beit Bridge Port of entry. She will further state that in 2010 Colonel Madilonga informed her about the Zimbabwean Police who were about to enter the country to see Major General Dramat. She cannot remember whether he informed her telephonically or he came to her office. She will further state that she told Colonel Madilonga to speak with Brigadier Makushu about the issue.

4.5 STATEMENTS OF TOMS MEMBERS IN GAUTENG WHO PARTICIPATED IN THE OPERATION.

15 Lt Col Neethling: He stated that he is a member of South African Police Services stationed at the Directorate of Priority Crimes, Provincial Office in Gauteng. In November 2010 of which he cannot remember the exact date, he received a request from Captain Maluleke to assist in arresting a suspect in the Fourways area. He met with Captain Maluleke at Diepsloot who then led him to the spot where the suspect was. Captain Maluleke walked towards him and briefed him, informing him that he is investigating a case of murder of a Zimbabwean police officer.

He did not ask any question because he knew Captain Maluleke to be working for "Cross Border Desk" at the Head Office of the Hawks. He also did not ask question because he knew that Captain Maluleke was representing the Head Office. He considers himself to be less knowledgeable in Cross Border crimes than Captain Maluleke. He discussed the tactical approach of the operation with his team since he considered the operation to be high risk. He positioned himself at the back of the vehicle convoy down a very narrow alley leading to an informal structure. There were three Police Officers whom later he discovered that they were Zimbabwean police. They were dressed in neat trousers, collar shirts and suits jackets.

After 15 minutes his members came out and informed him that they found the intended target and that Captain Maluleke had arrested him. They drove out of the settlement and stopped at the shopping center. Captain Maluleke informed him that they also have to arrest other suspects in Soweto. He was informed the next day that other two suspects were also arrested.

LS
SJ

1077

He also remember receiving a call from Captain Maluleke requesting escort of high risk suspects to Musina since he had to hand them over to Zimbabwean Authorities. He did provide a team to escort the suspects. He believes he must have reported such arrests to Major General Sibiya.

150 Captain Arnold Boonstra: He will state that in November 2010 (a date and time of which he cannot remember) he was requested by Lt Col Neethling to assist in tracing the suspects who were wanted by Captain Maluleke. He went to Diepsloot shopping Centre and waited for the members involved in the operation to come and fetch him. They came in a convoy and he followed. It was at night and he cannot remember the exact time. He approached Lt Col Maluleke known as Cowboy to provide him with the case number or reference number. He gave him a reference number from the file he was holding. He also told him that the suspects were wanted in connection with murder of a Police Colonel in Zimbabwe. He also mentioned that the police Colonel was killed during the Shoprite robbery. He does not remember precisely whether he said Shoprite robbery took place in Zimbabwe or South Africa.

The operation moved to Soweto but he did not see people who were arrested. He did not witness any assault because he was not near the operation. He just heard Lt Col Maluleke saying that he will detain the suspects in Soweto.

f Warrant Officer PJD Selepe: He will state that he is employed by DPCI in Gauteng on a rank of a Warrant Officer. In November 2010 of which he cannot remember the exact date he received a call from his Commander Lt Col Neethling requesting him to assist Captain Maluleke in escorting a suspect. He told him that Captain Maluleke will provide details of the trip.

He then called Captain Maluleke who confirmed that he needed assistance to transport a suspect to Musina. He requested him to use his vehicle because it had a blue light. He was in possession of BMW 330 with registration number TJH588 GP. He cannot remember the details of the trip but he remembers arranging with Captain Maluleke to meet at Alexandra Police Station on 23/11/2010 as recorded in the Occurrence Book to book out the said suspect. Captain Maluleke arrived and was driving a Nissan Hard body Double Cab.

Captain Maluleke told the officer at the Service Centre the name of the suspect and the suspect by the name of Prichard Chuma was brought to him. Captain Maluleke handcuffed the suspect and took him to the BMW. He then drove the vehicle being escorted by Captain Maluleke. He did not know what the suspect was wanted for and that he was just carrying out the request of his commander. He was told by Captain Maluleke that the suspected should be taken to Silverton Police station. He drove the suspect to Silverton where he was booked in the cells. He does not remember whether he booked the suspect himself or Captain Maluleke did it. After booking the suspect Captain Maluleke told him that on 24/11/2010 he must assist in escorting the suspect to Musina.

On 24/11/2010 he went to Silverton DPCI's office as directed telephonically by Captain Maluleke. When he arrived the following day, he discovered that the suspect he transported the previous day was no longer in the cells in Silverton Police Station but with Captain Maluleke. He was then brought to his vehicle and after he sat down, Captain Maluleke placed iron legs on him. They then drove to Musina while Captain Maluleke was providing escort. Captain Maluleke was in the company of a female person not known to him.

On arrival at Musina Captain Maluleke signaled using the head lights that they have to proceed straight to the border. He then proceeded to the border and when they arrived, they found the entry gate having a long queue. He used the exit gate as entrance gate. The police stopped them before they proceeded any further but when he put the blue light of his vehicle on, they gave way. He stopped in front of the police station at Beit Bridge and Captain Maluleke came over to his car, released iron legs from the suspect and headed to the Community Service Centre. He then went back and slept over in Polokwane.

4.6 STATEMENTS OF TRT MEMBERS WHO ASSISTED IN THE ARREST OF JOHNSON NYONI.

AB3
Tshabalala
A61 Avhashoni Desmond Takalani: He is employed by the South African Police Services in Gauteng stationed at Johannesburg Central Police station under the TRT unit. On 2011/01/12 at 11h00 in the morning he was on duty in a full uniform posted at Diepsloot for Crime Prevention purpose. While busy with his duties with other members of TRT unit from Johannesburg Central, they received a request from members of the Hawks (DPCI) TOMS who were at Diepsloot SAPS to provide backup in the arrest of wanted suspect. When they arrived at Diepsloot SAPS, he decided to remain outside while others were briefed inside the station. From the station the vehicles proceeded to the Squatter Camp. Along the way his co-workers informed him that there was a suspect who was being traced at the Squatter Camp.

When they arrived at the place where the suspect was, he remained inside the vehicle because it was raining and he did not have a rain coat. He saw the suspect when they brought him to the vehicle. After members of the Hawks and Crime Intelligence who were unknown to him arrested the suspect, they were requested to escort the suspect to Silverton DPCI offices. They escorted the suspect and at Silverton DPCI offices he saw Captain Maluleke who was wearing a Cowboy hat with two unknown African males who were travelling in a white BMW with Zimbabwean registration numbers. Captain Maluleke further said that they were Zimbabwean police who came to take the suspect, referring to the suspect whom they had just arrested at Diepsloot.

While they were with the suspect, he told them that some weeks back he was in Zimbabwe attending a funeral of some of the people he committed crime with and also knew they were after him. He was telling them when Captain Maluleke and Zimbabwean police were inside the offices.

They were requested to take the suspect to Pretoria Moot SAPS for detention. Before they went to Pretoria Moot SAPS, photos of all members involved in the operation were taken. When they arrived at Pretoria Moot Polices station, Captain Maluleke detained the suspect and they then knocked off.

115

Johannes M. Matl Moatshf: He will state that in January 2011 he was on duty posted at Diepsloot as a result of xenophobic violence prevalent at the time. At 13h00 on that particular day, he received a call via two ways radio from his commander to go Diepsloot police station. When he arrived with his colleagues he found the commander of Diepsloot Police station who introduced them to Captain Maluleke who was with two males persons and a female. The two male persons and a female were introduced as members of Crime Intelligence. Captain Maluleke informed them that there is a person who has committed serious cases in Zimbabwe and he is very dangerous. Captain Maluleke further said that the suspect was with the informer and had to be arrested. He will further state that they went into Diepsloot where the suspect and the informer were pointed out. After the arrest of the suspect they went to a certain shack where members of Crime Intelligence conducted a search but nothing was found. They were told by Captain Maluleke to transport the suspect to DPCI offices in Silverton. At Silverton Captain Maluleke requested them to book the suspect at Moot Police with the instruction that no visitor is allowed for the suspect. He cannot remember the name of the suspect but he remembers taking photos with the officers from Zimbabwe.

A64

Sello John Phaswana: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani in all material aspects.

A63

Tshatoa Jacob Seletela: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani and that of Sello John Phaswana in all material aspects.

A68

Matsobane Silas Mokoatlo: His statement corroborates that of Avhashoni Desmond Takalani and that of Sello John Phaswana as well that of Tshatoa Jacob Seletela:

4.7. STATEMENTS OF CRIME INTELLIGENCE MEMBERS WHO TRACED AND ARRESTED GORDON DUBE AND JOHNSON NYONI.

A69

Plantinah Mokobu: She will state that she is employed by the South African Police Services stationed at Crime Intelligence in Pretoria with a rank of Constable. On 12/01/2011 while in the office they received information from their Contact/Informer and he tipped them about a crime that was going to take place at Diepsloot.

They then proceeded there with a backup of members from Ivory Park Police Station where they effected the arrest of Gordon Dube at Diepsloot.

In January 2011 they received information from CIAC at Wierdeburg regarding the wanted suspect John Nyoni. The person they liaised with at CIAC was Constable Sombhane who also gave them the number of Captain Maluleke. She also spoke to Maluleke over the phone while they were there. They then drove to the Hawks offices to meet with Captain Maluleke who told them that the suspect has murdered a police officer in Zimbabwe.

They then tasked their Contact/Informer to look for the suspect, who did and the suspect was arrested. After the arrest of John Nyoni, they all proceeded to the Hawks offices where they gathered together for a photo shoot. Captain Maluleke exchanged the taking of photos with the Zimbabwean police. The photo of the suspect was also taken and the exhibit which is a firearm was also photographed. After the photo shoot she went to the shop, but when she came back she was told that General Dramat was with Colonel McIntosh and he had just addressed the people in her absence. She felt that she missed out on the speech of General Dramat but her colleagues told her that he was just congratulating them for a job well done.

LS

1080

Superintendent Ncube from Zimbabwe who was wearing black shirt and spectacles told us that he will be sending us letters of congratulation from Zimbabwe. She still recalls that later they were called by Brigadier Britz from Crime Intelligence Provincial office, and he showed them an appreciation letter from Zimbabwean government. He told them that they would be called by Provincial Commissioner Mzwandile Petros to meet with them as a result of their good work. She does not know what happened to John Nyoni thereafter.

168 Emmanuel Dinizulu Mkasibe: His statement corroborates that of Platinah Mokgobu in all material aspects. He will state further that shortly after the photos were taken, he saw General Dramat of the Hawks. General Dramat was with the spokesperson of the Hawks known to him as Colonel McIntosh Polelo. They then gathered together and Captain Maluleke introduced General Dramat and the spokesperson. General Dramat addressed and thanked them for arresting the suspect. General Dramat warned them not tell anyone about the operation we had just done.

After he said that he left and Captain Maluleke told us that he was organizing a celebration braai. While they were busy enjoying themselves, a lady working at the Hawks offices with Captain Maluleke came and joined them. She wanted the meat to take home because there was too much meat. She was requested to download the photos from the camera by Captain Maluleke.

He will state further that he then decided to follow her to the office. When she downloaded the photos he requested her to print the photos for him. She agreed and printed many photos which he took home and still have them even now.

175 Mr M Mngwenya: He will state that he is a member of Crime Intelligence and he was involved in the operation that traced and arrested Godi Dube. He will further state that on 26/01/2011 he was called by his colleagues to attend a braai at Silverton Hawks. When he arrived he participated in photo shoot and they were addressed and congratulated by General Dramat for the arrest of Johnson Nyoni.

176 STATEMENTS OF DIEPSLOOT SAPS MEMBERS REGARDING GORDON DUBE

A' Avhasei Witness Rambuda: He will state that in January 2011 he was working Diepsloot as a Detective. There were three suspects who were arrested after they were involved in the shooting incident with the police. They recovered firearm which was booked into SAPS 13 and received exhibit number SAPS 13/31/2011. He was involved in the charging of the suspects and they were attending court at Atteridgeville.

After some few days he received a call from Captain Maluleke of the Hawks asking him to go to Ballistic Pretoria and collect the firearm as he had already made arrangement with them. He collected the firearm and handed it Captain Maluleke. Captain Maluleke told him that he has a case he is investigation against one of the suspects. He informed him that the firearm belongs to Zimbabwe. He typed a letter a letter on his computer acknowledging the firearm but he does not remember where he put the letter.

He will further state that Captain Maluleke told him that he had made an arrangement with the prosecutor at Atteridgeville to withdraw the case so that he could be able to transport the suspect and the firearm to Zimbabwe.

Isaac Dlamini: He will state that in January 2011 docket Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 was assigned to him for further investigation. The docket had three suspect arrested for possession of unlicensed firearm and ammunition. The names of the suspects were Menzi Dube, God Dube and Sidingumunzi Dumani. He received a call from "Cowboy" Maluleke of the Hawks to hand the Case dockets Diepsloot Cas 93/01/2011 to his office in Silverton. He said the docket had to be investigated together with other dockets wherein God Dube is a suspect. He further said that the firearm which is an exhibit in his docket was used to kill a senior officer in Zimbabwe. Captain Maluleke took the docket and gave them acknowledgement of receipt.

He will further state that Captain Cowboy in the presence of Constable Rambuda told him that he will facilitate the release of the suspect from prison and he will talk to the Prosecutor to withdraw the case. After sometimes seeing that the docket was under his name, he opened a duplicate and sent it to the prosecutor. The prosecutor decided to decline to prosecute and the duplicate docket was filed.

1173 Lean Meyer: He will state that he was investigating several cases wherein Godi Dube was a suspect. The case were as follows, Wierdabrug CAS 531/12/2010, Wierdabrug CAS 220/02/2010, Wierdabrug CAS 147/11/2010, Wierdabrug CAS 1022/12/2010, Wierdabrug CAS 310/10/2010 and Diepsloot 93/01/2011. He was informed by Captain Maluleke from the Hawks that suspect Alfred Godi Dube was also wanted in Zimbabwe. According to Maluleke he was also wanted for murder as per Bulawayo CR 438/09/2010. He will further state that he booked out suspect Godi Dube and handed him to Captain Maluleke. Captain Maluleke informed him that suspect Gordon Dube will be handed over to the Zimbabwean government through Immigration channels.

4 Sindy Daisy Dorcus Sombhane: She will state that during 2010 and 2011 she was based at Wierdabrug attached to Crime Intelligence unit. During 2010 she gave Constable Rikhotso a list of wanted suspects in Wierdebrug. She also met Captain Maluleke at Wierdebrug who told her that he is looking for a suspect known as Godi Dube. She contacted Constable Rikotso and informed him that Cptain Malukele was at Wierdabrug inquiring about Godi Dube. She gave him the contact numbers of Captain Maluleke.

She will further state that on the 11/01/2011 she saw the name of Godi Dube on the cell Register and decided to call Constable Rikotso. Constable Rikotso confirmed that he arrested Godi Dube the previous night (11/01/2011). She went to the cells and interviewed Godi Dube who said he would get a lawyer because the police assaulted him.

Specific reference to OB 276 to 279: The entries made from 04h10' of 06/11/2010 to 12h00 of the 08/11/2010 confirms that Captain M L Maluleke of the DPCI with force number 0622729518 arrested Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maqhabane Sibanda and Shepard Chuma.

SAPS 14: The cell register dated 2010/11/05 to 2010/11/08 indicates that the following suspects were charged and detained, Dumisani Witness Ndeya, Nelson Ndlovu, Maqhabane Sibanda, Shepard Chuma. The reason for detention of the suspects as per register is stated as 'illegal immigrants'. The entry was made by Sergeant Thomas Pixane Setage who also later confirmed this in a sworn statement.

The investigation at Alexandra Police Station uncovered the following:

OB entry 22/11/10: The entry made on 22/11/2010 shows the booking of Prichard Chuma by Captain Nkosi. However Nkosi wrote the name and contact numbers of Captain Maluleke as the person who is the Investigating Officer of the case.

OB entry 23/11/2010: The entry dated 23/08/2010 shows the booking out of Prichard Chuma by Warrant Officer Selepe.

The investigation at Silverton Police Station uncovered the following:

OB entry 23/11/12: Warrant Officer Selepe booked in Prichard Chuma at Silverton Police station with Bulawayo case number. Warrant Officer Selepe

OB entry 24/11/2012: Warrant officer Selepe booked out Chuma to Bait Bridge. However Captain Maluleke also signed, acknowledging the release of Prichard Chuma into his hands/custody.

The investigation at Pretoria Moot Police station uncovered the following:

OB entry 26/01/11: Warrant Officer Johannes Mpati Moatshi booked in Johnson Nyoni by the instruction of Captain Maluleke for Fraud.

OB entry 28/01/11: Captain Maluleke booked out Johnson Nyoni to Bait Bridge for Fraud.

SAPS 14: Captain Maluleke appended his signature on the entry and it shows that the release of Johnson Nyoni to Captain Maluleke was for extradition purpose.

The investigation at Wierdabrug Police Station uncovered the following:

OB entry 12/01/12: Gordon Dube, Andrew Dube, Dumani Stimusy were detained for possession of unlicensed firearm. The same firearm was found to belong to the murdered Zimbabwean Police Officer.

Body Receipts SAPS 216: They show that Gordon Dube, Andrew Dube and Dumani Stimusy were received from court on 14/01/2011 together but on 28/01/2011 Gordon Dube was not amongst the other suspects. Pretoria Prison records show that Dube Documents regarding Bongani Moyo's case: This case is separate from the events that led to the arrest and deportation of the Zimbabwean Nationals into the hands of Zimbabwean authority. However it is a clear case of return of favor by Zimbabwean authorities to South Africa. In terms of the documents retrieved, Bongani Moyo escaped from Boksburg prison on 2011/03/28, a month and half after South Africa deported illegally the Zimbabwean nationals who were wanted by Zimbabwean authorities. An amount of R50 000 rewards was also provided for any information that could lead to the arrest of Moyo. Captain Maluleke stated that his Informer told him that Moyo was on his way to cross the border in South Africa after being shot by Zimbabwean police. According to the formal statement of Captain Maluleke, he arrested Moyo on the 13/05/2011 after he was found in the vehicle that crossed the border into South Africa. The other information retrieved provides contrary account of what happened. In a letter routed to General Dramat he stated that he went to Zimbabwe and conducted an operation with Zimbabwean police at Moyo's home village on 11/05/2011. Moyo was subsequently shot at transported to the border with the help of Zimbabwean police
